This perhaps accounts for its persistence. When once it has secured a foothold it may be relied upon to yield an abundance of forage year after year with no attention except that it thrives best under cropping. In the spring it is fit for pasturage considerably earlier than other grasses, and five days' growth will give a good bite. Its blossoming season is the same as that of red clover, and they are frequently sown together by farmers who have learned the value of the combination. A Kentucky stock grower who relies upon it for his pastures once said relative to its capacity for sustaining itself when other grasses are dried up: "It will make more growth in one summer day than blue grass will make in a week." Such a commendation from the land of the famous blue grass pastures is surely a great tribute to its good qualities.

A farmer in northern Ohio has written enthusiastically of a piece of orchard grass on his own farm which seeded itself 26 years ago and which has been cut annually every June since. This season it stood higher than any rye in the vicinity and was so heavy that it lodged. For early soiling and long pasturage he considers it superior to any other grass, but he utters a caution about cutting it as soon as matured, for if allowed to get dead ripe it is of little account.

Like other drought resisting grasses it shows a disposition to grow in tussocks, but this may be prevented by thorough preparation of the ground before sowing and an abundance of seed uniformly distributed. Two bushels of seed to the acre are usually considered sufficient, or half that amount when sown with clover. It is said to be much less exhausting to the soil than timothy, which is so often grown with clover. It was introduced into England from Virginia in 1764, and is there so highly esteemed that it has taken rank as one of the most valuable forage plants produced in the "tight little island." The luxuriance of its aftermath makes it especially fine for pastures, and stock of all kinds relish it. Sheep, it is said, will leave all other grasses to feed upon it.—Farmer's Review.

CORN CUTTING KNIFE.

Blade Is Made from an Old Scythe and Inclosed with Two Pieces of Hard Wood.

For cutting corn the homemade knife, portrayed herewith, has been found very useful. The blade is cut from an old scythe, as shown by dotted lines. The blade is cut partly across, two feet, and a part hammered back eight inches, to use as a handle. It is then inclosed with two pieces of hickory or other hard wood, which may be held in place with wire bands.—Farm and Home.

HOME-MADE CORN KNIFE.

Stacking Fodder Out-of-Doors.

An Iowa correspondent wants to know whether we would advise stacking corn fodder out-of-doors. We certainly do not advise such a practice, if the idea is to stack the fodder in the same way that hay is usually stacked in the western states; that is, by building it up in ricks and leaving it exposed to the fall and winter storms. If fodder is cut when in proper condition, and left in the shocks until it is thoroughly cured, it can then be stacked under cover to very good advantage; but a far better practice would be to get a good shredder and run the fodder through it, and then you will have as nice feeding product as you would care to handle; besides in this way you save the expense of husking the corn by hand.—Prairie Farmer.

Turning Pigs Into Pasture.

Harvey Johnson, of Iowa, says: When our litters are of sufficient age to turn out we usually put two and sometimes three litters together in a pasture where there is a good warm and dry building and plenty of good grass. Near where the sows feed is a small inclosure with a low trough in it, and by a little persuasion and some tempting bits of food we expect to have the pigs feeding nicely at three to four weeks of age. The feed is increased as their capacity for handling it is increased, but we are careful to underfeed rather than overfeed—feeding no more at any time than they will eat clean. We allow them to run with the dams till they wean them, unless we wish to breed the sows again.

Keep the Colts Growing.

If the pasture is not what it should be the colts should have a feed of oats daily. A few bushels of oats fed to a well-bred yearling when the pasture gets old and the flies bad will be well invested. A great many horses are stunted their first winter, and a great many do not get a chance to make it up their second summer—their first summer away from their dams. Keep them growing — the buyer wants good-sized ones.—National Stockman.

PE-RU-NA AVERTS DANGER

In That Critical Time When a Girl Becomes a Woman.

MISS BESSIE KELLOG.

Miss Bessie Kellog, President of the Young Woman's Club, of Valley City, North Dakota, writes the following from First street, South, Valley City, North Dakota:

"Ever since I matured I suffered with severe monthly pains. The doctor did not seem to understand what the trouble was and the medicine he prescribed from time to time did not help me. He finally suggested that I have an operation. One of my friends who had been cured of a similar affliction through the use of Peruna, advised me to give it a trial first, and so I used it for three weeks faithfully. My pains diminished very soon and within two months I had none at all.

"This is six months ago, and during that time I have not had an ache nor pain. I give highest praise to Peruna. Every woman ought to use it, and I feel sure that it would bring perfect health."—BESSIE KELLOG.

The experience of Miss Bessie Kellog, of North Dakota, ought to be read by every girl in the land. It is a critical period in a woman's life when she ceases to be a girl and becomes a woman. Very few pass through this period without some trouble. The doctor is called and he generally advises an operation. Perhaps he will subject the patient to a long series of experiments with nervines and tonics. The reason he does not often make a cure is because he does not recognize the trouble.

In a large majority of the cases catarrh of the female organs is the cause. Peruna relieves these cases promptly because it cures the catarrh. Peruna is not a palliative or a sedative or a nervine or a stimulant. It is a specific for catarrh and cures catarrh wherever it may lurk in the system.

This girl was lucky enough to find Peruna at last. As she says, the doctors did not seem to understand what the trouble was and the medicine he prescribed from time to time did not help her. Peruna hit the mark at once and she is now recommending this wonderful remedy to all the other girls in the United States.

Thousands of the girls who look at her beautiful face and read her sincere testimonial, will be led to try Peruna in their times of trouble and critical periods. Peruna will not fail them. Every one of them will be glad and it is to be hoped that their enthusiasm will lead them to do as this girl did—proclaim the fact to the world so that others may read it and do likewise.

Mrs. Christopher Fliehmann, Amsterdam, N. Y., writes:

"I have been sick with catarrh of the stomach and pelvic organs for about five years, and had many a doctor, but none could help me. Some said I would never get over it. One day when I read your almanac I saw those who had been cured by Peruna; then I thought I would try it. I did, and found relief with the first bottle I took, and after two more bottles I was as well and strong as I was before."—Mrs. Christopher Fliehmann.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

WE SHIP DIRECT TO

Contractors and Consumers

LUMBER LATH SHINGLES

MOULDINGS, SASH, DOORS, Etc.,
AT WHOLESALE PRICES.

COMPLETE HOUSE BILLS. COMPLETE BARN BILLS.

Permission given to examine grades before payment. We ask only satisfactory guarantee that we will get our money when stock is found as bought. SEND IN YOUR LISTS FOR ESTIMATES.

JOHN E. BURNS LUMBER COMPANY,

Long Distance Phones: MONROE 211, MONROE 288, MONROE 290.

40 W. Chicago Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

BEST FOR THE BOWELS

Cascarets

CANDY CATHARTIC

10¢ 25¢ 50¢

ALL DRUGGISTS.

CANDY CATHARTIC — Cascarets taste good. Eat them like candy. They remove any bad taste in the mouth, leaving the breath sweet and perfumed. It is a pleasure to take them, and they are liked especially by children.

SWEETEN THE STOMACH — Cascarets sweeten the stomach by cleansing the mouth, throat and food channel. That means, they stop undigested food from souring in the stomach, prevent gas forming in the bowels, and kill disease germs of any kind that breed and feed in the entire system.

PURELY VEGETABLE — Cascarets are purely vegetable and contain no mercurial or other mineral poison. They consist of the latest discoveries in medicine, and form a combination of remedies unequaled to make the blood pure and rich and make clean skin and beautiful complexion.

LIVER TONIC — Cascarets tone the stomach and bowels and stir up the lazy liver. They do not merely soften the stools and cause their discharge, but strengthen the bowels and put them into lively, healthy condition, making their action natural.

MILD BUT SURE — Cascarets never grip nor gripe. They act quietly, positively and never cause any kind of uncomfortable feeling. Taken regularly they make the liver act regularly and naturally as it should. They keep the sewerage of the body properly moving and keep the system clean.

BOON FOR MOTHERS — Cascarets increase the flow of milk in nursing mothers. If the mother eats a tablet, it makes her milk mildly purgative and has a mild but certain effect on the baby. In this way they are the only safe laxative for the nursing infant.

CURE CONSTIPATION — Cascarets taken patiently, persistently, will cure any form of constipation, no matter how old or how often other remedies have failed. They are absolutely guaranteed to cure any case, or purchase money will be cheerfully refunded.

NEVER SOLD IN BULK — Cascarets cost 10c, 25c, 50c a box. Samples sent free for the asking. We publish no testimonials but sell Cascarets on their merit under absolute guarantee to cure. Buy and try a box to-day, or write us for free samples and booklet.

470 Address STERLING REMEDY CO., CHICAGO or NEW YORK.

$100 REWARD will be paid to any reader of this paper who will report to us any attempt of substitution, or sale of "something just as good" when Cascarets are called for, and furnish evidence upon which we can convict. All correspondence confidential.

READERS OF THIS PAPER DESIRING TO BUY ANYTHING ADVERTISED IN ITS COLUMNS SHOULD INSIST UPON HAVING WHAT THEY ASK FOR, REFUSING ALL SUBSTITUTES OR IMITATIONS.

RHEUMATISM Van Buren's Rheumatic Compound is the only positive cure. Past experience speaks for itself. Depot 88 S. California Ave., Chicago.

AGENT WANTED GENTLEMAN or LADY, only one in each town, to sell Tea at importer's PRICES. WRITE QUICKLY to HOME TEA COMPANY, 22 Pearl Street, NEW YORK CITY.

A. N. K.—C 1881

PILES ANAKESIS gives instant relief and POSITIVELY CURES PILES. For free sample address "ANAKESIS," Prudential building, New York.

SOZODONT Tooth Powder 25c

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

INSANITY DODGE.

Czolgosz Refused to Answer and His Counsel Enters Plea of "Not Guilty."

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Leon F. Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, was arraigned before Judge Edward K. Emery, in the County court, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon on the indictment for murder in the first degree in fatally shooting President McKinley in the Temple of Music at the Pan-American exposition on September 6. Again the stubborn prisoner refused to plead or even to utter a word or sound, and Hon. Loran L. Lewis, ex-Supreme Court Justice, entered a plea of not guilty. The accused will be tried in the Supreme Court next Monday morning.

Democratic Primaries.

The chairman of the Democratic County Committee has issued a call for primary meetings to be held on the 28th inst. to elect delegates to the county convention to be held in Oakland on the 30th inst. to nominate a county ticket.

Crepe Liberally Displayed.

All over town crepe is being displayed along with the American flag in mute testimonial of the grief which has affected every one. Flags float at half staff on the various flag poles in town.

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. Zolia Newcomb, Mrs. Milligan, Mrs. Emily Armstrong, Dr. Frank H. Mannakee, Mr. W. E. Wheeler, Mr. James Cochran, Mr. C. Lampie.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place five miles north of Oakland on or about August 25 two hogs, both barrows, crops off left ears and holes in righ ears.

Owner will please come forward, pay all costs and damages and take same away.

27 3t ISAAC A. PAUGH.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

Buy the famous Cinderella Double Heater Cook Stoves and Ranges at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, Md.

When you want a pleasant physic try the new remedy, Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are easy to take and pleasant in effect. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at drug stores.

Have you a sense of fullness in the region of your stomach after eating? If so you will be benefited by using Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They also cure belching and sour stomach. They regulate the bowels too. Price, 25 cents. Sold by all druggists.

Go to Eagle Store, Grantsville, for ladies' tailor-made suits, jackets and capes. 27 3t*

Chamberlain's Pain Balm applied to a cut, bruise, burn, scald or like instantly allay the pain and will heal the parts in less time than any other treatment. Unless the injury is very severe it will not leave a scar. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism, sprains, swellings and lameness. For sale by all druggists.

The laws of health require that the bowels move once each day and one of the penalties for violating this law is piles. Keep your bowels regular by taking a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets when necessary and you will never have that severe punishment inflicted upon you. Price, 25 cents. For sale by all druggists.

FOR SALE:—The Lutheran parson age, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

Estray Notice.

Estrayed, from the farm of the undersigned about May 25, a light red, white spotted, dehorned heifer, with slit in right ear. Reward will be paid for her return.

UPTON CUPPETT,
26 3t* Thaverville, Md.

Rough, Red Hands

made to look white as the driven snow and so soft to the touch as the skin of a baby—

LILY CREAM

imparts a velvety smoothness to the skin—dries instantly and is perfectly invisible—it is healing, soothing, protecting.

LOGAN DRUG COMPANY,
WHEELING, W. VA.
15 and 25 cents. At your Druggist.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, at the January Session in the year nineteen hundred of the General Asembly of Maryland, bills were passed proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State:

First.—By amending section 9 of Article 5, of the Constitution of the State.

Second.—By amending section 4 of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State.

Third.—By amending section 2 of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State, which said bills and amendments are in words following, to wit:

CHAPTER 185.

AN ACT to amend section nine, of Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, herein and as by law provided, it shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section nine of said Article.

SECTION 9. The State's Attorney shall perform such duties and receive such fees and commissions or salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, as are now or may hereafter be prescribed by law; and if any State's Attorney shall receive any other fee or reward than such as is or may be allowed by law, he shall, on conviction thereof, be removed from office; provided that the State's Attorney for Baltimore city shall receive an annual salary of forty-five hundred dollars, and shall have power to appoint one deputy, at an annual salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, and such other assistants at such annual salaries not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars each, as the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City may authorize and approve; all of said salaries to be paid out of the fees of the said State's Attorney's office, as has heretofore been practiced.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted, That the foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, shall be, at the next general election for members of the General Assembly, to be held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14, of the Constitution; and at said election the vote on said proposed amendment shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment" or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election one return shall be made to the Governor of the vote on said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Approved April 5, 1900.

CHAPTER 432.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this State.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and instead of section four of Article 3, of said Constitution.

SECTION 4. As soon as may be after the taking and publishing of the National Census of 1900, or after the enumeration of the population of this State, under the authority thereof, there shall be an apportionment of representation in the House of Delegates, to be made on the following basis, to wit: Each of the several counties of the State, having a population of eighteen thousand souls or less, shall be entitled to two delegates; and every county having a population of over eighteen thousand and less than twenty-eight thousand souls, shall be entitled to three delegates; and every county having a population of twenty-eight thousand and less than forty thousand souls, shall be entitled to four delegates; and every county having a population of forty thousand and less than fifty-five thousand souls, shall be entitled to five delegates; and every county having a population of fifty-five thousand souls and upwards, shall be entitled to six delegates and no more; and each of the four legislative districts of the City of Baltimore shall be entitled to the number of delegates to which the largest county shall or may be entitled under the aforegoing apportionment, and the General Assembly shall have the power to provide by law, from time to time, for altering and changing the boundaries of the existing legislative districts of the City of Baltimore, so as to make them as near as may be of equal population; but said district shall always consist of contiguous territory.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall, at the next election for members of the General Assembly of this State, to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14, of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after the said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 14, of the Constitution.

Approved April 7, 1900.

CHAPTER 469.

AN ACT to amend section two of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section two of Article 3 of said Constitution.

2. The City of Baltimore shall be divided into four legislative districts as near as may be of equal population and of contiguous territory, and each of said legislative districts of Baltimore City, as they may from time to time be laid out, in accordance with the provisions hereof, and each county in the State, shall be entitled to one Senator, who shall be elected by the qualified voters of the said legislative districts of Baltimore City, and of the counties of the State, respectively, and shall serve for four years from the date of his election, subject to the classification of Senators hereafter provided for.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall at the next election for members of the General Assembly of this State, to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Approved April 7, 1900.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, JOHN WALTER SMITH, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the provisions of section one of Article fourteen of the Constitution of the State, do hereby order and direct that a copy of said bills proposing said Constitutional Amendments be published in at least two newspapers in each county where so many may be published, and where not more than one may be published, then in that newspaper, and in three newspapers in the City of Baltimore, one of which shall be in the German language, once a week for at least three months preceding the next ensuing general election (which said general election will be held on Tuesday, the 5th day of November, nineteen hundred and one,) at which the said proposed amendments shall be submitted to the qualified voters of the State for adoption or rejection, so that each amendment shall be voted on separately.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of Maryland.

Done at the City of Annapolis on the 12th day of June, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and one.

[SEAL] JOHN WALTER SMITH,
Governor of Maryland.

By order of the Governor:
WILFRED BATEMAN,
Secretary of State.

In every town and village may be had the

Mica Axle Grease

that makes your horses glad.

ROAD PETITION.

This is to give notice that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new road beginning for the same at the south end of Garrett V. Moon's lane and running thence down Laurel Creek and through the lands of the Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company, James L. Harvey and J. B. Lipscomb and along the lines of said Lipscomb and Chas. Cooper and through the lands of the said Mining and Manufacturing Company to the town of Schell, a distance of about three miles.

J. L. HARVEY,
J. O. O'HAVIRE,
J. B. LIPSCOMB and others,
22¾5t* Petitioners.

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

Maryland's School of Technology. Four Courses of Instruction.

AGRICULTURAL MECHANICAL
SCIENTIFIC CLASSICAL

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified at once to enter upon life's work; graduates in Mechanical Engineering and Chemistry this year, all secured positions upon graduation. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—bath rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, $154.00 for scholastic year. Catalogue giving full particulars sent on application. Daily visit by physician to college.

Attention is called to the Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture. Particulars sent upon application.

Term commences September 23rd. Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER,
President M. A. C.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.

Money loaned on Mortgage.

Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.

Agent for the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.

Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, that the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

FRANCIS H. RAVENSCROFT,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 20th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1901.

R. A. RAVENSCROFT, Administrator,
Accident, Md.

EXECUTORS' NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, have obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters Testamentary on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber on or before the 15th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

W. W. FRAZEE,

Given under our hands this 10th day of September, 1901.

ELMIE FRAZEE,
OLIVER P. FRAZEE,
Executors,
Markleysburg, Pa.

EXECUTOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, Letters Testamentary on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

JACOB SHARTZER,

Given under my hand this 10th day of September, 1901.

LEONARD SHARTZER, Executor,
27 3* Accident, Md.

ADMINISTRATORS' NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the Subscribers, of Garrett county, Maryland, have obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Somerset county, Pennsylvania, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscribers, on or before the 15th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

HANSON WALTER,

Given under my hand this 9th day of September, 1901.

ELIZA JANE FAUCETT,
GEORGE HENRY WALTER,
Administrators,
27 3* Selbysport, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

The Garrett County Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:

DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MD.

Now Open for Business

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.

Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.

F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

THE

SECOND NATIONAL BANK

of CUMBERLAND, MD.

Designated United States Depository.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000
Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
John Sheridan, A. Hunter Boyd,
David W. Sloan.

Burlington Route

It costs no more to ride on this beautiful train than on any other.

Chicago-St. Paul Minneapolis Limited Express

It is electric lighted and heated by steam, carries a library-buffet-smoking car, a dining car à la carte and everything there is to make one comfortable.

Leaves CHICAGO 6.30 p. m. Daily

We sell through tickets, reserve sleeping car berths, furnish maps and time tables, and can, perhaps, be of service in other ways. Kindly write or call.

H. E. HELLER, District Passenger Agent, 632 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

CONSTIPATION CURED!

Nearly everyone suffers in a greater or less degree from this dreadful disease. It is dangerous to neglect the bowels, and often by doing so a foundation is laid for serious ailments.

Those suffering from Constipation suffer from slow Poison.

OUR NATIVE HERBS cures Constipation quietly and permanently.

No Pain, No Griping, No Binding effect afterwards. Its action is pleasant and sure.

200 DAYS' TREATMENT $1.00.

A CURE GUARANTEED OR THE MONEY BACK.

"When a girl I had Small Pox succeded by Typhoid Fever and Measels. I was left with Constipation and Sinking Spells. Sometimes I felt that I could not live. After having various physicians treat me with no benefit I bought a box of Our Native Herbs, which seems to be the only medicine that suits my case. I believe it saved my life." Mrs. M. MILLER, Crellin, Md.

No Case Too Stubborn for Our Native Herbs To Conquer.

THE ALONZO O. BLISS CO.,
SOLE PROPRIETORS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

A. C. BROOKE,
Local Agent. Mountain Lake Park, Md.

A box of Tablets or Powder mailed to any address upon receipt of $1.00.

Midget Harness Riveter.

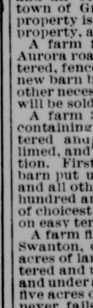
Complete repair shop in one tool. Will not wear out. Punches the hole, drives and clinches at one operation. Every horse owner, liveryman, teamster will buy on sight. Does the work of any $25 machine. Complete outfit with big bog of rivets will be sent for

ONLY 50 CENTS.

Agents Wanted.

HANDY ADJUSTABLE LIFTER. Handiest article ever invented for lifting hot pans, stove lids, etc. 15c, postpaid.

S. T. WILSON & CO.,
Box 103. Wilson, W. Va.



J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!

I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 20,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.

All trespassing will be prosecuted to the utmost extent of the law.

Call on or address:
C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.

Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.

Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

153⅜ acres coal land on Youghiogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale.

House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187⅛ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 26⅛ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 200 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ miles southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoroughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north of Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swauger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to

JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY, ARCHITECT,

Office 7 North Liberty St.

CUMBERLAND, MD.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
OAKLAND, MD

STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

Office in McComas's Building, Main St. Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET.

Particular attention given to Conveyancing, investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. fe14-1y

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD.

Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.

Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients. 45—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,

Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. '88 10 6

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.

Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.

Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.
Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 16-'99

H. W. McCOMAS M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.

Office opposite Garrett County Bank.
Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 9 p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.

Will visit regularly through Garrett county, Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 6 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER,
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.

Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by aneroid barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26t*

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate.
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.

Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats descriptions and estimates furnished.
40-1yr.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT MAY 19, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 19, 1901. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily		3.42 A. M
No. 3—Daily		7.35 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday		10.01 A. M
No. 55—Daily		4.52 P. M
No. 1—Daily		10.07 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 8—Daily		5.50 A. M
No. 2—Daily		6.52 A. M
No. 46—Express, daily		4.41 P. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun		5.12 P. M
No. 12—Daily		8.35 P. M
No. 4—Daily		12.37 A. M

F. D. UNDERWOOD, General Manager.
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT NOV 25, 1900.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	SOUTHWARD No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	NORTHWARD No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 00
3 43	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 31
4 06	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 09
4 16	8 05	Westernport	10 58	5 57
4 20	8 09	W. Va. C. Junc.	10 51	5 50
4 39	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 22
5 00	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	†5 00
5 45*	9 50* ar	Elk Garden	*9 10	*4 10
5 41†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	4 30
5 47	9 42	Bayard	9 29	4 25
5 59	9 54	Dobbin	9 19	4 15
6 02	9 58	Henry	9 15	4 11
6 27	10 27	Thomas	8 48	3 47
6 35	10 35 ar	Davis	8 05	3 05
6 31	10 34 lv	Coketon	8 41	3 40
6 50	11 01	Hendricks	8 10	3 10
7 02	11 04	Hambleton	8 07	3 07
7 05	11 07	Bretz	8 03	3 03
7 08	11 10	Parsons	8 00	3 00
7 43	11 45	Kerens	7 25	2 29
8 00†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 10	†2 15
	NOON			P. M.
8 36*	12 45† ar	Beverly	lv*7 20	†1 40
9 05*	1 10† ar	Huttonsville	lv *6 30	†1 15
M. P.				P. M.
	3 15* ar	Bealington	lv	*11 40
	P. M.			A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, Gen. Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agen

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1901. NUMBER 29.

NOBLEST OF THE NOBLE.

The Magnificent Eulogy to the Dead President Uttered by Judge Stake Last Thursday

At a Memorial Service Held in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran Church in Oakland—A General Suspension of Business in Deference to the Dead.

Last Thursday was observed as a legal holiday. The banks and public offices and most of the business houses were closed. In the afternoon a memorial service was held at St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church.

Judge Edward Stake, of Hagerstown, who made the principal address, spoke as follows:

A reverential respect for our dead separates man by all the length and breadth of creation from every other type of living creature. With the grief and gloom that so nearly strains to its utmost tension, the overflowing heart, that it seems ready to break with anguish, there comes assuagement in the far off echoes of the Divine response to the tender and loving emotions with which we commit our loved ones to their final resting places in the silent cities of the dead. Most beautifully has this idea been expressed by the devout and most reverential of our American poets:

Alas, the man who never sees
The stars shine through his cypress trees,
Who hopeless lays his dead away
Nor hopes to see the breaking day
Across the mournful marble play;
Who has not learned in hours of trial
The truth to flesh and sense unknown,
That life is ever lord of death
And love can never lose its own.

With what force there comes to us today in this connection over the fleeting centuries, the harkening words of Jacob of old, "Bury me with my fathers, in the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre, in the land of Canaan, there they buried Abraham and Sarah, his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebeckah, his wife, and there I buried Leah."

The memorial services which we pay to our dead in mere form or ceremonial is as old as the records of the human race. From the archaelogical evidences which come to our sight and senses in the upturned earth and long buried ruins of prehistoric dynasties, the broken columns and displaced sculpture from the cradles of the hnman race, the melodies of the more recent Greeks, or literature of the Romans, we learn that mortuary ceremonies accompany every stage of human existence and human progress. But while we have seemingly moved in a direct line from our ancestors as exhibited in mere externals, the culture of our Christian civilization carries with it a wiser sense and meaning in tributes to which we thus give expression to our relations, to our dead. We seek not like our Pagan forbears, with the smoke of sacrifices in temples built to mythological gods, or sweet smelling incense in pantheons erected to marble deities to appease the anger or propitiate the favor of offended rulers of the fates, but with broken spirits and contrite hearts we may learn to welcome death as the messenger of the inscrutable and unsearchable wisdom of the Great Ruler of Heaven and earth, who doeth all things well, and has taught our faith that the curse that came in with our first parents has become our greatest blessing, so that the poor, blind and crippled beggar who sits by the wayside uncomplaining, becomes greater than the mightiest conqueror by conquering the kingdom in his own heart.

Truly a great man has this day fallen in Israel, and we are, in common with a universal sentiment throughout this broad and Heaven-favored land, with its responses from foreign lands as well, assembled together to do homage to his greatness, revere his memory and so far as language can give expression to our sorrows for this untoward result, give expression to our bereavement and the country's loss. Let not the solemnity or the purity of this occasion be sullied by an ungenerous, a selfish or a vindictive thought. Rather let our hearts be attuned to the more ennobling office of an endeavor to reconcile this to our human understanding distressing dispensation of Providence, as one that only Divine wisdom can comprehend.

The dead, to whose remains and memory the ceremonies of this day are devoted, was not one with whose daily routine and social life we came in contact with. To us he was simply one who from humble and plain walks of life had devoted himself to the public welfare both in the tented field, where the wrinkled front of grim-visaged war met the patriots' gaze in dead array, or in the peaceful hall of legislation he stood like a modern Fitz James in support of his country's interest, until by an unmistakable and overwhelming choice of his fellow citizens he was called to be the exalted ruler of this great republic. To us he is the brave man, the patriotic man, the embodiment of the power, the dignity and permanency of our highest hopes and aspirations of the constitutional liberty of our people, and the refuge of the oppressed of all lands. It is in this sense, greater than that of fellow citizen, greater than that of personal friend, greater than that of brother or sister, greater than that of father and child, for these and all of these, honorable, worthy and loving as they may be, are swallowed up if need be in the imperishable and transcendent necessity of the commonwealth of men. The American commonwealth exists that men may enjoy or have the American born right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, with liberty of conscience to worship God after the dictates of their own hearts, for without these the living gift of God to man, with his moral and intellectual attributes would be unendurable. Occupying this constitutional right to rule by the suffrages of his fellow citizen, for the state is of God, his untimely taking off by unlawful force was a blow at organized government, and in the language of that most wonderful and unequaled of the human mind and human action, "Then you and I and all of us fell down and bloody treason flourished over all."

Mournful as is the occasion that brings us together, there is a pleasurable feeling in the contemplation of the life of the dead chieftian whom we this day seek to honor by the sincerity of our tributes. Without pretension, without the pride which sometimes attend elevation to high position, he has borne himself so meekly and pleasantly in his high office, and with such modesty and moderation that those whose convictions on matters of public policy differed from his own, are unable to see in his views ought else than sincerity of principle and high resolve of purpose. The new and intricate questions of governmental questions with which, as the executive of the government, has been presented for his consideration and determination, has been met with that singleness of purpose for the public weal as to inspire confidence in the final result and the conservation of the basic principles committed to later generations by the worthy founders of this free government. In everything that makes for material greatness the country as a whole under the four years of an administration in which he has had the direction, our people in their collective capacity has advanced to the front rank among the powers of the earth with their centuries of development, and its moral political powers so respected that its influence in the solving of the international questions for amelioration and lifting up of the population of the world, is recognized as a potent factor. While the country under his administration, in his expressed words, has become "alarmingly prosperous," he had led the way by which thoughtful persons are led to feel that the era is approaching, that one of the grand and grandest functions of this government will be in spreading the "gladsome light" of free constitutional government until its benign influences shall encircle the earth. It has sometimes, prior to the lamentable occurrence, suggested itself to my mind that the public mind has not sufficiently awakened to this great idea that the direction or trend of our governmental policy in far eastern affairs, under the great logic of events, is to find consummation in the spread of American liberty, American morality with a crown of religion with its American grand impulse of voluntary support and earnestness. In a retrospect over the Christian era, it seems a providential interference of imposing magnitude, that the discovery and settlement of this country was postponed until the fifteenth century and at a time when the intellect of Europe was awakening from the lethargy and interest of the middle ages. When men had begun to distrust the powers of church and state. Had it happened earlier, during the centuries when might alone made right, all the superstitions of medievial Europe with its hallowed abuses of church and state, might have been fastened upon us, and its blight and its withering influence incorporated upon our free institutions. Under the fostering care of the grand and mighty men of Revolutionary and colonial days, who wove strong and broad in men's minds the triumvirate of Heavenly gift, liberty, morality and religion, and it seems to me, that in the fullness of days after, it will not be the least of memories immortal to him we now lament, that he so directed and utilized these forces of our civilization that they will go ringing down the ages to the advantage of our now benighted lands. In every position or office to which he was called, in state and country, he was diligent and faithful, and was a recognized leader among his compeers and his name is indissolubly linked with great governmental policies, far-reaching in their effect. While some may have differed with him in the conception or wisdom of some of these there was none to detract from the integrity of his purpose or question the ability or energy which characterized his efforts.

There are other relations which our late President, along with all men and women of the land, it is the common lot to maintain. To the Supreme Author of all, to his family and household, to his community as a man and citizen, and to his friends and his friendships. From early manhood he has been a man of mark and distinction, and continuously in public position. His rise in gradations as classified by responsibility and burdens, was not meteor-like as a mere favorite child of fortune or by fortuitous chance. As State's attorney, as Congressman, as Governor of the great commonwealth with which the lines of his life connected him, and as President, the discharge of his official duties in each, and the correctness of his daily demeanor in each of the relations of which I have spoken, was presented to a discerning public.

Calumny has not suggested or attempted to connect itself with his fair name. Subjected at all periods of his public life, which was co-extensive with his manhood days, to the searchlight of the public press, and the rancor of partisan opinion, the nation now mourns him as a just and upright man. As a churchman he lived in conformity with the ordinances of the Master as revealed to him; in close association with devout and godly men, and as the lengthening shadows of evening fell across his pathway of life he sought communion with and peaceful recognition of the divine power. The tenderness of his family ties beggars description and were too sacred to be reduced to set forms of speech, but upon which the mind may dwell with sweetest contemplation; his closest friends and companions are his sincerest mourners, and his fellow citizens nearest his home contend in emulation to do honor to the correctness of his life and character. The world holds no gentler, worthier man.

We cannot recall the sleeping dust, much less can a spot be found where death is not. "He is dead" has been the epitaph from the beginning and will be until time shall be no more. The Master met it at the gate of the city called Nain, and in Gethsemane's garden there was a new sepulcher.

Sooner or later in the providence of God death comes to all. It may come in the spring time of life, when the sun light is glistening upon the path, and its warm beams kiss the joyous present, or it may come in the winter of age, when the snow lies heavy and chill upon the aged heart, nursing in its solitude the memories of the past. It may come in languishing and pain, or with the swiftness of the lightning stroke, but come when it will or how it will, be assured that its rounded circle is complete, for no man is immortal until his life work is accomplished.

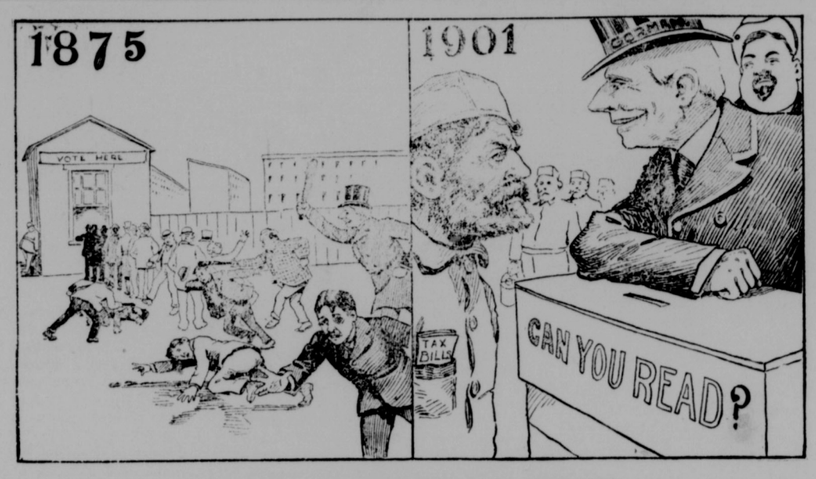
Thus saith the prophet: "The hand of the Lord was upon me, and set me down in the midst of the valley that was full of bones, and the Lord God saith unto these bones, behold, I will cause breath to enter into you and ye shall live."

In the trees so lately denuded of their leaves, but now clothed in the fullness of their foilage: in the fields so lately bare, but now arrayed in verdure green, and in the tiny flowers so lately denuded of their beauty, but now decked with radiant loveliness we see portrayed in living proof the glorious doctrine of the resurrection. Both prophecy and nature attest that life and death is the inexorable law of the universe.

The dead that bivouac in the earth shall live again. At the sound of the trumpet they shall rise again, and these bodies shall be clothed in immortal youth.

Short addresses were made by Messrs. Scott T. Jones, E. H. Sincell, Dr. E. H. Bartlett and Rev. Asbury Mick.

The music, with Dr. J. G. Robinson at the organ, was very impressive. The service throughout was very solemn and seemed as if the entire audience was standing by the open grave of a very near and dear friend.



THE SAME OLD GANG BUT NEW METHODS.

McKinley Memorial.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Sept. 24—At a mass meeting of Columbus citizens tonight the plan placing a McKinley memorial on the campus of the Ohio State University was unanimously adopted. The memorial is to take the form of a building to be known as the McKinley Industrial Educational building. At present it is proposed to spend $60,000 in its construction and contributions will be accepted from the entire State.

MOUNTAIN TRIOLETS.

IN VAIN I SEEK.

In vain I seek the woodland deeps
Where frolic nymphs and satyrs haunted;
Old piping Pan has gone for keeps—
In vain I seek the woodland deeps,
Or climb the rugged mountain steeps
In search of Fauni vaunted:—
In vain I seek the woodland deeps
Where frolic nymphs and satyrs haunted.

The age of song has passed away,
No myths remain nor fable:
For grasping greed has won the day—
The age of song has passed away—
And now the word is "Will it pay?"
Goes flashing through the cable:
The age of song has passed away,
No myths remain nor fable.

WHERE MOUNTAIN SLOPES.

Where mountain slopes go arching high
And kiss the vaulted blue:
In poppied fields I love to lie
Where mountain slopes go arching high
To gleaming castles in the sky,
A rare and radiant view—
Where mountain slopes go arching high
And kiss the vaulted blue.

Jackson Park, August, 1901. —T. L. L.

Rules Governing Rural Free Delivery.

"Order No. 875, July 26, 1900. First, that on and after August 1, 1900, the 'drop letter,' or one cent rate of postage, will not apply within rural free delivery limits. Two two cent per ounce rate will be exacted within such delivery upon all first-class matter except postal cards. Second, that the introduction of rural free delivery will not increase or otherwise modify the present rate of postage on second class matter. Third, that rural free delivery carriers will not bring to the office mail matter, collected by them, which may be delivered on their routes before completing their trips."

The remainder of the order is not of interest to the public.

As a route is to be established here on November 1, I think the above can be made an interesting item of news.

Very truly yours,
WM. W. SWEET, P. M.
Swanton, Sept. 6, 1901.

Fall term CENTRAL COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, Cumberland, Md., Winchester, Va., begins Sept. 2nd. Write for catalog and free lesson in Gregg Shorthand. Scholarship $45.00

FEATURES OF NEW BALLOT LAW.

Some Idea of Its Pernicious Character. Grouping is Prohibited.

Some idea of the pernicious character of the ballot law as adopted by the extra session of the Democratic Legislature can be formed by this explanation.

Under the new law the party emblem has been prohibited and the grouping of party nominees in parallel columns is destroyed. Under the designation of each office to be filled the names of the candidates are to be arranged alphabetically, according to their surname. The offices are separated, and under each office there is an alphabetical arrangement of the names of the candidates. These alphabetical groups under the designation of the respective offices are placed one under the other in one column, if possible. If the number of candidates for all the offices exceed 36, another column is added, so that there shall not be more than 36 names in any one column. These added columns are continuations of each other. If there is more than one column, the columns are so arranged that the same number of names shall be printed in each column. To illustrate this, if there are 40 names in all, there will be two columns of 20 names each. If there were 84 names, there would be three columns of 28 names each. There is also a provision which permits the voter to write the name of any candidate for any office, but whether spaces will be provided for this purpose is a question. The law does not say so. Then, again, if there were as many spaces as there are candidates, the uniformity of the ballot might be destroyed. The printing throughout the ballot must be uniform in size, style and appearance.

The sample ballot that the board of supervisors of elections are required to post four days before an election under the new law must be "of considerable magnified dimensions." There was no such provision under the old law. It will now be utterly impossible to obtain any knowledge of the size of the ballot or to obtain an accurate idea of its appearance until one enters an election booth. The greatest care must be exercised by the voter in marking his ballot, as it seems to be the studied purpose of the law to make voting difficult and to vitiate as many ballots as possible. The ballot must be marked with an indelible pencil provided for that purpose. Under the old law this provision was expressly stated to be "directory" and a ballot marked with any other instrument would have been valid.

The intentional omission of this provision of the old law seems to make it clear that a ballot marked with a lead pencil would be void. The most drastic change made in regard to marking the ballot is the sweeping one that if the voter makes any mark but a cross mark within the square upon the ballot or if he votes for more names than there are persons to be elected to any one office the entire ballot is thrown out. This provision must be carefully considered to be appreciated. Let the voter understand that if he does not make a complete cross mark each time he intends to make a cross mark, or if he attempts to mark the ballot by a single mark or small circle, or even by a cross mark that extends beyond the small square opposite the name he loses absolutely his right of suffrage and his ballot is cast aside. What a contrast to the old law. It is well to repeat the language of the old law: "If the voter has marked more names than there are persons to be elected to an office, or if for any reason it is impossible to determine the vote for any office to be filled, his ballot shall not be counted for such office."

There are other provisions of that law which safeguard in every way the right of the citizen to exercise the franchise. Every ballot was considered as it in fact is, the voice of a citizen in a country in which all citizens are equal. It cannot be emphasized too strongly that the voter must mark his ballot with an indelible pencil, that the mark he makes must be a cross mark, that the cross mark must be completely within the square placed opposite the name of the candidate, and that any mistake in any one of these particulars or putting one more cross mark for any one office more than the voter is entitled to put will destroy the entire ballot. If a mistake is made the voter should not attempt to correct it by erasure because a blurr upon the ballot will destroy the ballot. Each voter is entitled to a new ballot if he spoils the first ballot, and upon returning the spoiled ballot will receive another from the judge holding the ballots, and if he spoils the second ballot he can obtain a third, but no more. This section of the old law has not been altered and this fact should be remembered by the voter.

As before indicated, the voter will no longer receive any assistance in marking his ballot. The ballot clerks can only help the blind and those physically unable to mark a ballot. A man who can see and has the use of his hands must do the best he can without aid, although he is unable to read.

As there will not appear any instructions on the ballot informing the intelligent voter as to how many candidates he should vote for, it would be well to secure this information before entering the polling booth.

The law is rigid. The intention of the voter is ignored altogether. The provisions are made mandatory. A slight slip of the pencil, an oversight in putting one mark too many, may render the ballot void. There has been some difference of opinion as to the construction of some of the provisions but there is little room for it.

The law is clear and the method of voting most difficult.

WILL PAY THE EXTREME PENALTY.

Czolgosz, the Assassin of President McKinley, Will Be Electrocuted.

BUFFALO, Sept. 24.—At 4:26 this afternoon the jury which for two days has been trying Leon F. Czolgosz for the murder of President William McKinley on the 6th inst., in the Temple of Music at the Pan-American exposition, brought in a verdict of guilty. The jury was out but 36 minutes. The result, of course, was expected by Czolgosz himself, as well as everybody else in the United States.

Sentence cannot be pronounced under the statutes until two days elapse. The prisoner will then be transferred to Sing Sing or Auburn to await electrocution. Under the law this cannot take place until six weeks from the date of sentence.

Obituary.

Amos Wesley Savage was born at Sang Run, Md., on August 30, 1826, and died at his home in the same neighborhood on September 6, 1901, aged 75 years and 6 days.

He was the youngest son of Robinson and Sarah Savage, who were both noble Christian characters and preceded him years ago to the better land.

His father was a leading man in his neighborhood and served a number of years as magistrate and was also a school teacher in his time and was noted for honesty, integrity and general uprightness.

In character the son closely resembled the father. He was converted in early life and united with the Methodist Episcopal church, in which he was an active member and a faithful Sunday school worker for many years. He died the peaceful death of the righteous, and after the funeral services, which were conducted by his pastor, his body was laid to rest by the side of that of his recently departed wife, where they together await the dawning of that "Blessed Day."

He was the father of nine children; had 25 grandchildren and 7 great-grandchildren. May they all live so that they meet him in that Heavenly home.

D. A. FRIEND, Pastor.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Great Favorite.

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures make it a great favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children for colds, croup and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1901. NUMBER 29.

NOBLEST OF THE NOBLE.

The Magnificent Eulogy to the Dead President Uttered by Judge Stake Last Thursday

At a Memorial Service Held in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran Church in Oakland—A General Suspension of Business in Deference to the Dead.

Last Thursday was observed as a legal holiday. The banks and public offices and most of the business houses were closed. In the afternoon a memorial service was held at St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church.

Judge Edward Stake, of Hagerstown, who made the principal address, spoke as follows:

A reverential respect for our dead separates man by all the length and breadth of creation from every other type of living creature. With the grief and gloom that so nearly strains to its utmost tension, the overflowing heart, that it seems ready to break with anguish, there comes assuagement in the far off echoes of the Divine response to the tender and loving emotions with which we commit our loved ones to their final resting places in the silent cities of the dead. Most beautifully has this idea been expressed by the devout and most reverential of our American poets:

Alas, the man who never sees
The stars shine through his cypress trees,
Who hopeless lays his dead away
Nor hopes to see the breaking day
Across the mournful marble play;
Who has not learned in hours of trial
The truth to flesh and sense unknown,
That life is ever lord of death
And love can never lose its own.

With what force there comes to us today in this connection over the fleeting centuries, the harkening words of Jacob of old, "Bury me with my fathers, in the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre, in the land of Canaan, there they buried Abraham and Sarah, his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebeckah, his wife, and there I buried Leah."

The memorial services which we pay to our dead in mere form or ceremonial is as old as the records of the human race. From the archaelogical evidences which come to our sight and senses in the upturned earth and long buried ruins of prehistoric dynasties, the broken columns and displaced sculpture from the cradles of the human race, the melodies of the more recent Greeks, or literature of the Romans, we learn that mortuary ceremonies accompany every stage of human existence and human progress. But while we have seemingly moved in a direct line from our ancestors as exhibited in mere externals, the culture of our Christian civilization carries with it a wiser sense and meaning in tributes to which we thus give expression to our relations, to our dead. We seek not like our Pagan forbears, with the smoke of sacrifices in temples built to mythological gods, or sweet smelling incense in pantheons erected to marble deities to appease the anger or propitiate the favor of offended rulers of the fates, but with broken spirits and contrite hearts we may learn to welcome death as the messenger of the inscrutable and unsearchable wisdom of the Great Ruler of Heaven and earth, who doeth all things well, and has taught our faith that the curse that came in with our first parents has become our greatest blessing, so that the poor, blind and crippled beggar who sits by the wayside uncomplaining, becomes greater than the mightiest conqueror by conquering the kingdom in his own heart.

Truly a great man has this day fallen in Israel, and we are, in common with a universal sentiment throughout this broad and Heaven-favored land, with its responses from foreign lands as well, assembled together to do homage to his greatness, revere his memory and so far as language can give expression to our sorrows for this untoward result, give expression to our bereavement and the country's loss. Let not the solemnity or the purity of this occasion be sullied by an ungenerous, a selfish or a vindictive thought. Rather let our hearts be attuned to the more ennobling office of an endeavor to reconcile this to our human understanding distressing dispensation of Providence, as one that only Divine wisdom can comprehend.

The dead, to whose remains and memory the ceremonies of this day are devoted, was not one with whose daily routine and social life we came in contact with. To us he was simply one who from humble and plain walks of life had devoted himself to the public welfare both in the tented field, where the wrinkled front of grim-visaged war met the patriots' gaze in dead array, or in the peaceful hall of legislation he stood like a modern Fitz James in support of his country's interest, until by an unmistakable and overwhelming choice of his fellow citizens he was called to be the exalted ruler of this great republic. To us he is the brave man, the patriotic man, the embodiment of the power, the dignity and permanency of our highest hopes and aspirations of the constitutional liberty of our people, and the refuge of the oppressed of all lands. It is in this sense, greater than that of fellow citizen, greater than that of personal friend, greater than that of brother or sister, greater than that of father and child, for these and all of these, honorable, worthy and loving as they may be, are swallowed up if need be in the imperishable and transcendent necessity of the commonwealth of men. The American commonwealth exists that men may enjoy or have the American born right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, with liberty of conscience to worship God after the dictates of their own hearts, for without these the living gift of God to man, with his moral and intellectual attributes would be unendurable. Occupying this constitutional right to rule by the suffrages of his fellow citizen, for the state is of God, his untimely taking off by unlawful force was a blow at organized government, and in the language of that most wonderful and unequaled of the human mind and human action, "Then you and I and all of us fell down and bloody treason flourished over all."

Mournful as is the occasion that brings us together, there is a pleasurable feeling in the contemplation of the life of the dead chieftian whom we this day seek to honor by the sincerity of our tributes. Without pretension, without the pride which sometimes attend elevation to high position, he has borne himself so meekly and pleasantly in his high office, and with such modesty and moderation that those whose convictions on matters of public policy differed from his own, are unable to see in his views ought else than sincerity of principle and high resolve of purpose. The new and intricate questions of governmental questions with which, as the executive of the government, has been presented for his consideration and determination, has been met with that singleness of purpose for the public weal as to inspire confidence in the final result and the conservation of the basic principles committed to later generations by the worthy founders of this free government. In everything that makes for material greatness the country as a whole under the four years of an administration in which he has had the direction, our people in their collective capacity has advanced to the front rank among the powers of the earth with their centuries of development, and its moral political powers so respected that its influence in the solving of the international questions for amelioration and lifting up of the population of the world, is recognized as a potent factor. While the country under his administration, in his expressed words, has become "alarmingly prosperous," he had led the way by which thoughtful persons are led to feel that the era is approaching, that one of the grand and grandest functions of this government will be in spreading the "gladsome light" of free constitutional government until its benign influences shall encircle the earth. It has sometimes, prior to the lamentable occurrence, suggested itself to my mind that the public mind has not sufficiently awakened to this great idea that the direction or trend of our governmental policy in far eastern affairs, under the great logic of events, is to find consummation in the spread of American liberty, American morality with a crown of religion with its American grand impulse of voluntary support and earnestness. In a retrospect over the Christian era, it seems a providential interference of imposing magnitude, that the discovery and settlement of this country was postponed until the fifteenth century and at a time when the intellect of Europe was awakening from the lethargy and interest of the middle ages. When men had begun to distrust the powers of church and state. Had it happened earlier, during the centuries when might alone made right, all the superstitions of medievial Europe with its hallowed abuses of church and state, might have been fastened upon us, and its blight and its withering influence incorporated upon our free institutions. Under the fostering care of the grand and mighty men of Revolutionary and colonial days, who wove strong and broad in men's minds the triumvirate of Heavenly gift, liberty, morality and religion, and it seems to me, that in the fullness of days after, it will not be the least of memories immortal to him we now lament, that he so directed and utilized these forces of our civilization that they will go ringing down the ages to the advantage of our now benighted lands. In every position or office to which he was called, in state and country, he was diligent and faithful, and was a recognized leader among his compeers and his name is indissolubly linked with great governmental policies, far-reaching in their effect. While some may have differed with him in the conception or wisdom of some of these there was none to detract from the integrity of his purpose or question the ability or energy which characterized his efforts.

There are other relations which our late President, along with all men and women of the land, it is the common lot to maintain. To the Supreme Author of all, to his family and household, to his community as a man and citizen, and to his friends and his friendships. From early manhood he has been a man of mark and distinction, and continuously in public position. His rise in gradations as classified by responsibility and burdens, was not meteor-like as a mere favorite child of fortune or by fortuitous chance. As State's attorney, as Congressman, as Governor of the great commonwealth with which the lines of his life connected him, and as President, the discharge of his official duties in each, and the correctness of his daily demeanor in each of the relations of which I have spoken, was presented to a discerning public.

Calumny has not suggested or attempted to connect itself with his fair name. Subjected at all periods of his public life, which was co-extensive with his manhood days, to the searchlight of the public press, and the rancor of partisan opinion, the nation now mourns him as a just and upright man. As a churchman he lived in conformity with the ordinances of the Master as revealed to him; in close association with devout and godly men, and as the lengthening shadows of evening fell across his pathway of life he sought communion with and peaceful recognition of the divine power. The tenderness of his family ties beggars description and were too sacred to be reduced to set forms of speech, but upon which the mind may dwell with sweetest contemplation; his closest friends and companions are his sincerest mourners, and his fellow citizens nearest his home contend in emulation to do honor to the correctness of his life and character. The world holds no gentler, worthier man.

We cannot recall the sleeping dust, much less can a spot be found where death is not. "He is dead" has been the epitaph from the beginning and will be until time shall be no more. The Master met it at the gate of the city called Nain, and in Gethsemane's garden there was a new sepulcher.

Sooner or later in the providence of God death comes to all. It may come in the spring time of life, when the sun light is glistening upon the path, and its warm beams kiss the joyous present, or it may come in the winter of age, when the snow lies heavy and chill upon the aged heart, nursing in its solitude the memories of the past. It may come in languishing and pain, or with the swiftness of the lightning stroke, but come when it will or how it will, be assured that its rounded circle is complete, for no man is immortal until his life work is accomplished.

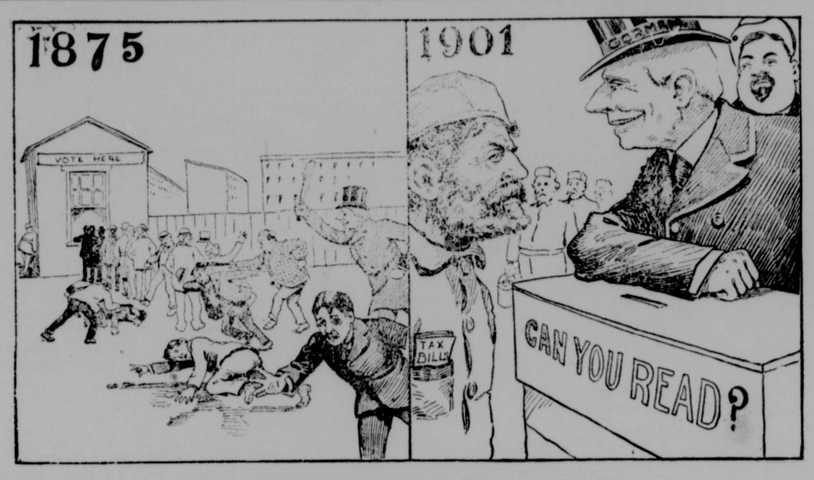
Thus saith the prophet: "The hand of the Lord was upon me, and set me down in the midst of the valley that was full of bones, and the Lord God saith unto these bones, behold, I will cause breath to enter into you and ye shall live."

In the trees so lately denuded of their leaves, but now clothed in the fullness of their foilage: in the fields so lately bare, but now arrayed in verdure green, and in the tiny flowers so lately denuded of their beauty, but now decked with radiant loveliness we see portrayed in living proof the glorious doctrine of the resurrection. Both prophecy and nature attest that life and death is the inexorable law of the universe.

The dead that bivouac in the earth shall live again. At the sound of the trumpet they shall rise again, and these bodies shall be clothed in immortal youth.

Short addresses were made by Messrs. Scott T. Jones, E. H. Sincell, Dr. E. H. Bartlett and Rev. Asbury Mick.

The music, with Dr. J. G. Robinson at the organ, was very impressive. The service throughout was very solemn and seemed as if the entire audience was standing by the open grave of a very near and dear friend.



THE SAME OLD GANG BUT NEW METHODS.

McKinley Memorial.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Sept. 24—At a mass meeting of Columbus citizens tonight the plan placing a McKinley memorial on the campus of the Ohio State University was unanimously adopted. The memorial is to take the form of a building to be known as the McKinley Industrial Educational building. At present it is proposed to spend $60,000 in its construction and contributions will be accepted from the entire State.

MOUNTAIN TRIOLETS.

IN VAIN I SEEK.

In vain I seek the woodland deeps
Where frolic nymphs and satyrs haunted;
Old piping Pan has gone for keeps—
In vain I seek the woodland deeps,
Or climb the rugged mountain steeps
In search of Fauni vaunted:—
In vain I seek the woodland deeps
Where frolic nymphs and satyrs haunted.

The age of song has passed away,
No myths remain nor fable:
For grasping greed has won the day—
The age of song has passed away—
And now the word is "Will it pay?"
Goes flashing through the cable:
The age of song has passed away,
No myths remain nor fable.

WHERE MOUNTAIN SLOPES.

Where mountain slopes go arching high
And kiss the vaulted blue:
In poppied fields I love to lie
Where mountain slopes go arching high
To gleaming castles in the sky,
A rare and radiant view—
Where mountain slopes go arching high
And kiss the vaulted blue.

Jackson Park, August, 1901. —T. L. L.

Rules Governing Rural Free Delivery.

"Order No. 875, July 26, 1900. First, that on and after August 1, 1900, the 'drop letter,' or one cent rate of postage, will not apply within rural free delivery limits. Two two cent per ounce rate will be exacted within such delivery upon all first-class matter except postal cards. Second, that the introduction of rural free delivery will not increase or otherwise modify the present rate of postage on second class matter. Third, that rural free delivery carriers will not bring to the office mail matter, collected by them, which may be delivered on their routes before completing their trips."

The remainder of the order is not of interest to the public.

As a route is to be established here on November 1, I think the above can be made an interesting item of news.

Very truly yours,
WM. W. SWEET, P. M.
Swanton, Sept. 6, 1901.

Fall term CENTRAL COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, Cumberland, Md., Winchester, Va., begins Sept. 2nd. Write for catalog and free lesson in Gregg Shorthand. Scholarship $45.00

FEATURES OF NEW BALLOT LAW.

Some Idea of Its Pernicious Character. Grouping is Prohibited.

Some idea of the pernicious character of the ballot law as adopted by the extra session of the Democratic Legislature can be formed by this explanation.

Under the new law the party emblem has been prohibited and the grouping of party nominees in parallel columns is destroyed. Under the designation of each office to be filled the names of the candidates are to be arranged alphabetically, according to their surname. The offices are separated, and under each office there is an alphabetical arrangement of the names of the candidates. These alphabetical groups under the designation of the respective offices are placed one under the other in one column, if possible. If the number of candidates for all the offices exceed 36, another column is added, so that there shall not be more than 36 names in any one column. These added columns are continuations of each other. If there is more than one column, the columns are so arranged that the same number of names shall be printed in each column. To illustrate this, if there are 40 names in all, there will be two columns of 20 names each. If there were 84 names, there would be three columns of 28 names each. There is also a provision which permits the voter to write the name of any candidate for any office, but whether spaces will be provided for this purpose is a question. The law does not say so. Then, again, if there were as many spaces as there are candidates, the uniformity of the ballot might be destroyed. The printing throughout the ballot must be uniform in size, style and appearance.

The sample ballot that the board of supervisors of elections are required to post four days before an election under the new law must be "of considerable magnified dimensions." There was no such provision under the old law. It will now be utterly impossible to obtain any knowledge of the size of the ballot or to obtain an accurate idea of its appearance until one enters an election booth. The greatest care must be exercised by the voter in marking his ballot, as it seems to be the studied purpose of the law to make voting difficult and to vitiate as many ballots as possible. The ballot must be marked with an indelible pencil provided for that purpose. Under the old law this provision was expressly stated to be "directory" and a ballot marked with any other instrument would have been valid.

The intentional omission of this provision of the old law seems to make it clear that a ballot marked with a lead pencil would be void. The most drastic change made in regard to marking the ballot is the sweeping one that if the voter makes any mark but a cross mark within the square upon the ballot or if he votes for more names than there are persons to be elected to any one office the entire ballot is thrown out. This provision must be carefully considered to be appreciated. Let the voter understand that if he does not make a complete cross mark each time he intends to make a cross mark, or if he attempts to mark the ballot by a single mark or small circle, or even by a cross mark that extends beyond the small square opposite the name he loses absolutely his right of suffrage and his ballot is cast aside. What a contrast to the old law. It is well to repeat the language of the old law: "If the voter has marked more names than there are persons to be elected to an office, or if for any reason it is impossible to determine the vote for any office to be filled, his ballot shall not be counted for such office."

There are other provisions of that law which safeguard in every way the right of the citizen to exercise the franchise. Every ballot was considered as it in fact is, the voice of a citizen in a country in which all citizens are equal. It cannot be emphasized too strongly that the voter must mark his ballot with an indelible pencil, that the mark he makes must be a cross mark, that the cross mark must be completely within the square placed opposite the name of the candidate, and that any mistake in any one of these particulars or putting one more cross mark for any one office more than the voter is entitled to put will destroy the entire ballot. If a mistake is made the voter should not attempt to correct it by erasure because a blurr upon the ballot will destroy the ballot. Each voter is entitled to a new ballot if he spoils the first ballot, and upon returning the spoiled ballot will receive another from the judge holding the ballots, and if he spoils the second ballot he can obtain a third, but no more. This section of the old law has not been altered and this fact should be remembered by the voter.

As before indicated, the voter will no longer receive any assistance in marking his ballot. The ballot clerks can only help the blind and those physically unable to mark a ballot. A man who can see and has the use of his hands must do the best he can without aid, although he is unable to read.

As there will not appear any instructions on the ballot informing the intelligent voter as to how many candidates he should vote for, it would be well to secure this information before entering the polling booth.

The law is rigid. The intention of the voter is ignored altogether. The provisions are made mandatory. A slight slip of the pencil, an oversight in putting one mark too many, may render the ballot void. There has been some difference of opinion as to the construction of some of the provisions but there is little room for it.

The law is clear and the method of voting most difficult.

WILL PAY THE EXTREME PENALTY.

Czolgosz, the Assassin of President McKinley, Will Be Electrocuted.

BUFFALO, Sept. 24.—At 4:26 this afternoon the jury which for two days has been trying Leon F. Czolgosz for the murder of President William McKinley on the 6th inst., in the Temple of Music at the Pan-American exposition, brought in a verdict of guilty. The jury was out but 36 minutes. The result, of course, was expected by Czolgosz himself, as well as everybody else in the United States.

Sentence cannot be pronounced under the statutes until two days elapse. The prisoner will then be transferred to Sing Sing or Auburn to await electrocution. Under the law this cannot take place until six weeks from the date of sentence.

Obituary.

Amos Wesley Savage was born at Sang Run, Md., on August 30, 1826, and died at his home in the same neighborhood on September 6, 1901, aged 75 years and 6 days.

He was the youngest son of Robinson and Sarah Savage, who were both noble Christian characters and preceded him years ago to the better land.

His father was a leading man in his neighborhood and served a number of years as magistrate and was also a school teacher in his time and was noted for honesty, integrity and general uprightness.

In character the son closely resembled the father. He was converted in early life and united with the Methodist Episcopal church, in which he was an active member and a faithful Sunday school worker for many years. He died the peaceful death of the righteous, and after the funeral services, which were conducted by his pastor, his body was laid to rest by the side of that of his recently departed wife, where they together await the dawning of that "Blessed Day."

He was the father of nine children; had 25 grandchildren and 7 great-grandchildren. May they all live so that they meet him in that Heavenly home.

D. A. FRIEND, Pastor.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Great Favorite.

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures make it a great favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children for colds, croup and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. h. SINCELL. Publisher.

OAKLAND, : GARRETT CO., MD.

LAWS OF HEREDITY

By AMELIA PAIN

THIS attack was the worst yet. He had dabbled in the subject, on and off, ever since his attainment to years of discretion (and indiscretions); the bookcase over his mantelpiece contained quite a number of works on Heredity, into which he had dipped and dived at odd moments in his usual unscholarly and characteristic manner; but of late he had really become tiresome on the subject.

He was one of those half-artistic, wholly erratic men whose business it apparently is to puzzle their fellow-creatures and defy classification. His pug-like face, his jerky manner, his unpardonable clothes, the cursedness of his hair, the atmosphere of this room of his, above everything his maddening theories, all tended to mark him out from the common herd without allotting him any definite place of his own, unless it were the general one of "crank."

Perhaps Loreton understood him as well as anyone because he had long ago given up the effort to define him, and, for the sake of his good points, bore with his peculiarities as a mother bears with the teasings of her first-born.

It was without a shade of surprise that he saw Orridge jump up to greet him now with the exclamation: "I've got another!"

"Have you?" was all that Loreton would say in the calmest of tones.

"Clear as day," continued Orridge, clapping to the old diary in which he had been reading, and passing long fingers through his hair, as was usual with him under excitement.

"Come on out," said Loreton, utterly unimpressed.

"Out be darned!" And Orridge threw himself into a chair before the fire. "I've been looking through my father's diaries again," he went on. "Fascinating work, I tell you. You know my weakness for savories?" Loreton nodded. "And my dislike to raw fruit?" Another nod. "Well, there it is. Listen to this." He reopened the diary, turned the yellow pages with nervous rapidity, and read out: "But this is the last picnic that I shall go to. The inclemency of the weather, the frivolity of the company and the character of the viands, consisting chiefly—as they will on these occasions—of raw fruit and cakes, to the exclusion of the more savory and civilized dishes that are alone worth eating * * * and so on. There you are. Another case firmly established."

"I suppose so," said Loreton, inwardly deploring the fact that he should have walked into the middle of one of Orridge's fits, as he termed these plunges into the hereditary question.

"That's the second discovery this week," continued Orridge, too deep in his subject to care how far outside of it the other might be sitting. "I showed you my Aunt Gregory's photograph, didn't I?"

"Yes," lied Loreton, suavely.

Orridge took up the photograph from the mantelpiece, where it figured among many others—not of the order usually to be counted on in a young man's den, but all representing types of the elderly relative in varying degrees of severity and repellance. "See that mouth?" he said. And that chin? Mine—line for line. That's where I get my temper from. But I'll root her out yet."

"Pity you didn't inherit one of her good points, if any," suggested Loreton.

"That's just the devil of it," snapped Orridge. "We can't choose. It's horrible. Don't you see the horror of it? And the crying necessity for combating this awful thing? We think of ourselves, each of us, as a great, independent unit. We think that this, that and the other quality which goes to the making up of our personalities is ours, our very own, evolved by our own distinctive individuality. And behold, we need only look skin-deep into the matter to find that we are nothing, more nor less, than a disgusting hash of relatives and ancestors, within and without! The without, of course, we can't help; we recognize that we have the nose of a tippling grandfather, the eyelid of a sanctimonious uncle, the teeth of an aunt, the figure of a convict ancestor; but that's unalterable. It's revolting and humiliating, but it must be borne. But the other thing, the within—that, I say, need not and should not be borne. What's to prevent me from stamping out my grandfather's untruthfulness, or my mother's timidity, or my Aunt Gregory's temper?" He hurled the photograph violently across the room. "And I will, too. You'll see. By dint of careful research into the family annals, and hard work at myself, I shall end by becoming the perfect, independent human being, instead of the bundle of rotten inheritances that I am now."

It was soon after 11 that Loreton rose to go. He had tried to induce Orridge to come away with him on his projected travels, which were to end with a walking tour in Switzerland—but in vain.

On his return, after eight months, he repaired one day to Orridge's rooms and found him in. Orridge was looking peculiarly bright for him.

"Well, I am pleased to see you, old chap," he said, beginning to pass his hand through his hair, but checking himself abruptly. "This is excellent. You look fit enough."

"I'm all right," said Loreton; "and how are you?"

"Grand." And they settled to a talk, in which Orridge soon showed the reason for his obvious good humor. "I've rooted them all out," he was saying, to Loreton's silent despair, "aunts, uncles—the whole boiling of 'em. Yes, you may look at me, old chap; it isn't likely you'll ever see another man who could stand up and say: 'I am myself and none other.' I have vanquished Heredity in single combat, and have made of myself the man I want to be instead of the man that others would have made me."

"I congratulate you," drawled Loreton, disgusted to find the subject still uppermost.

"It's been awful hard work," continued Orridge, discouraged. "Look at this." And he held out a large glazed notebook, on which was written: "The Orridge Family; a Study in Heredity." "I'm going to have that privately printed some day."

"Are you?" said Loreton, examining the pages desultorily. "You're sure, of course, that it's of some use?"

"It's been no end of use to me in my own case as it is," said Orridge, but I have still one case to investigate."

"One what?"

"One case—an Australian uncle, who arrives in England on Monday. Of course, I shall try and see as much of him as I can. Soon put my finger on any points of resemblance, if they exist. I'll get him here to lunch Tuesday or Wednesday. You come, too, will you? You might be a help to me afterwards, if you can manage to be observant for once."

Loreton accepted this flattering invitation, and turned up on the Wednesday. Uncle Samuel Orridge was a round, middle-aged man of considerable presence, outwardly as different from his nephew as is the Albert hall from the leaning tower. Indeed, he was not unlike the Albert hall in figure and general coloring. But he was clearly determined to make himself pleasant and to dash any preconceptions as to his colonialness. Loreton was amazed at the good nature with which he received and answered the shower of personal questions put to him by his nephew, without even knowing the excuse for them.

But the catechism so far resulted in nothing that could add one line to that awful glazed notebook.

NOTES ON THE LAWS OF HEREDITY.

Orridge, however, prided himself on thoroughness in this work of his; and Loreton guessed his motives when he heard him arranging further meetings. He went so far as to ask Uncle Sam to stay with him for a week.

Loreton left them carefully alone till the day after the old gentleman's departure, when he went to Orridge's rooms to hear results. Orridge was radiant. "Couldn't trace myself anywhere," he said, rubbing his hands together. "The good old chap is as unlike me in every respect as one human being can be to another. I may now consider myself finished—completely emancipated. Shake hands, old man. Do you know," he went on, "I liked Uncle Sam? He's as clever as he can stick for one thing."

"Don't be too modest," interrupted Loreton.

"Juggins! His cleverness does not happen to be in my line, that's all."

"What line is it in, may I ask?"

"Oh, business and all that."

"He wouldn't think much of your work, then?"

"Never breathed a word of it to him, of course. Would have spoilt everything. As it was—"

Halter had come in with two letters and a small parcel on a salver. Orridge tossed aside the letters, obvious bills, and opened the parcel. It contained a book and a note from Uncle Samuel. He wrote to thank Orridge for his kind hospitality, and then went on:

"It might perhaps interest or amuse you to run your eye through the small book that I send herewith. I did not mention it in our recent intercourse, as we old men grow weary of provoking the laughter of you young ones. But it is on a subject which has interested me for many years past; and I may some day get it privately printed for—"

"What the devil is it?" Orridge broke off.

Loreton picked up the book, a glazed notebook, and read out: "Notes on the Laws of Heredity, as Instanced in the Orridge Family."

Yes, it was the best laugh that had been vouchsafed to Loreton in all his 34 years; but it nearly cost him a friend. Aunt Gregory had triumphed for a space.—Black and White.

The sunniest and best room in the house is not too good for the child.

DO NOT WANT TO BE MEN.

Reasons Given by Some Young Women for Preferring Their Own Sex.

A writer in the National Review sets forth some curious and amasing results secured by asking several hundred schoolgirls the following questions: "Which would you rather be, a man or a woman, and why?" There is a striking difference between the answers of the children in Germany, in England and in the United States; also between the answers of the little girls of New England and of Indiana. Apparently the farther west one comes the higher is the estimation in which womanhood is held, says the Chicago Tribune.

In Indiana only 14 per cent. wished they were men, and in New England 15 per cent. In England 34 per cent. wished to be men, urging that men had a better time, more glory, and more money. In Germany most of the girls were not allowed to answer, but those who did so took the sober view that "it is wicked to wish to be a man." In Germany there were none who expressed a belief in the superiority of women. In England there were four per cent.; in New England, 14 per cent., and in Indiana 34 per cent. Evidently the women of Indiana are of superfine material.

The reasons of the 85 or 86 per cent. who were true to their sex are interesting if not alarming to the masculine mind. A large percentage, especially in New England, said they would rather be women because women are better than men. Twenty per cent. of the Indiana maidens were glad they were not men because men's lives were so dull and commonplace. In general, the American girl seems to be convinced that "it is more important to be a woman than a man," and is determined to get her "share of the world" in spite of the men who own it. One says she would rather be a woman because she cannot be anything else, and she means to be "as good as a man, anyway." One is reminded frequently of Mrs. Poyser by the replies of the Indiana girls, of which these are delightful examples:

"Women are more industrious than men are."

"Women have good chances in life; they can be in any profession; or, if they do not want to be, they can marry and do nothing."

"I would rather be a woman, because they suffer more than men, and it is blessed to suffer."

"I was born a girl, and I shall have to be a woman, so there is no use in crying over spilt milk."

"A man can work harder, and a woman has more sense. If I wanted to be a man it would be no use, and men swear and spit on the floor, so I have not lost much."

"I would rather be a woman, as they have better chances in life as teachers in public schools."

"I would rather be a woman any day; men get drunk and steal, and they can't work or make children's clothes or do anything useful."

Evidently there is a hard time coming for American men when these frank-spoken Hoosier maidens grow to maturity. Their almost unanimous verdict on the comparative merits of men and women ought to cause the lords of creation to take a humbler estimate of themselves.

OKLAHOMA FARMERS

As a Rule Are Possessed of Much Intelligence and Are Industrious and Progressive.

A characteristic of Oklahoma is the high grade of intelligence of its farming population. This is easily accounted for. The man who has moved from the place where his ancestors have lived for many generations has widened his mental vision. He may not be richer in material wealth, but he is richer in experience, writes Congressman D. T. Flynn, in Success. The average Oklahoma farmer has moved twice. There is nothing of the backwoodsman about him, nor of the settled, satisfied drone of the older states. In fact, there is no difference in intelligence between a farming and a city population. A majority of Oklahomans have been in more affluent and influential circumstances; the consequence is that present occupation or condition argues nothing as to their intelligence or education. That is a matter of circumstances. They have "gone to the wall" somewhere during the depressed condition of the country up to four years ago, and, rather than persist any longer in the unequal struggle, have "thrown up the sponge," so to speak, and come out here where there are fewer distinctions, where everybody is an old citizen after six months, and where every mature man can vote and run for office. This newness, this unsettled condition, it is, that induces that extra activity, noticeable between the country and the town. Coming from everywhere, Oklahomans have world-wide interests. They receive and write more letters, and take and read more papers. They come to town oftener. Each is, in himself, a rural delivery. He is heir to all improvements. There are no old wagons, buggies or farm implements. A man who does not like equality with a vengeance need not come to Oklahoma. The "is," and not the "has been," counts. Reputation acquired elsewhere counts for nothing, if, when put to the test, it is found wanting. There are no maimed or crippled people in Oklahoma. The territory carries no burden of the indigent, and only a slight one of the unfortunate.

Novel Employment for Firemen.

On a recent Sunday the fire department of Berlin was called upon to disperse four different swarms of bees which had taken up quarters in the streets.—N. Y. Sun.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

There are 6,000 miles of pipe line in the United States, conveying 300,000,000 gallons yearly.

The average value of all the mules in the country last year was ten dollars a head more than the average value of horses.

It is said that automobiles have so cheapened the cost of harvesting grain in the immense California fields that wheat can be raised there at less actual cost than in the Argentine Republic.

Apropos of the fact that the white house has just been painted again, it is stated that the mansion has never been scraped, and that far underneath the additions of a century there is the original coat of paint.

English builders of locomotives are regaining much of the trade that at one time seemed in danger of passing into American hands. Natal has just entered into contracts with leading firms for 75 locomotives, 600 freight and 54 passenger cars.

The rapid expansion of the Australian shipping trade continues undiminished. In New South Wales it was larger in 1900 than in any previous year. The total number of vessels entered and cleared was 7,032, against 6,409 in 1899. Of these 6,308 were under the British flag and 724 under those of other countries.

"Dead sea fruit" actually exists, and not in metaphor only. A recent traveler in the Sahara took a photograph in the desert within a few miles of the oasis of Biskra, and his picture shows a group of "dead sea fruit" or "apples of Sodom," as they are sometimes called. The fruit grows upon the ground on a straggling stalk and is about the size of an orange, golden colored, with bright green stripes, the skin being smooth, like that of a melon. It is a strange irony of nature that the fruit, which is so beautiful to look at, should be a deadly poison.

It is officially estimated that there are 13,000,000 acres of virginal forest lands in Cuba. This is nearly one-half of the total area. The improvement of transportation facilities will bring some of this to market. It will include mahogany, ebony, granadilla, majauga, cedar, walnut, lignum vitae, oak and pine. There are more than 30 species of palm, some of which have special uses. But timber cutting and sawing are for the specialist who "knows a tree" and has had experience in "making sawdust." It is an unsafe industry for the uninitiated.

WORTH MORE THAN SILVER.

Colorado's Fields of Alfalfa Are of Greater Value Than Her Most Productive Mines.

Great as is the wealth of the state of Colorado in silver she has a far more valuable product in the royal purple alfalfa that supplies fodder for the innumerable herds that roam the plains and feed in the valleys. Last year the value of the alfalfa crop was placed at $10,000,000, yet that does not represent its contributory worth, says the Chicago Chronicle.

In 1862 the introduction of this grass into the state solved the problem of forage, which up to that time had puzzled the pioneers, who had not been able to raise successfully any other form of forage. Alfalfa made possible the great stock growing industry of the state. Last year the aggregate number of horses, cattle, hogs and sheep, according to the assessors' returns, was 4,000,000, valued at $45,000,000. Excepting the range sheep and cattle and some horses in the cities alfalfa formed the greatest part of the food of all these animals. Thus dairying, a new but rapidly developing industry, depends on alfalfa.

The great grain farms and potato ranches used this product as well. Alfalfa is peerless as a soil renovator and enricher. Its long roots, penetrating to a depth below the surface that other plants cannot reach, gather the needed elements, and, decaying, liberate them for the benefit of future crops.

The Colorado farmer has learned that rotating crops of wheat and alfalfa make the average yield of wheat in Colorado 25 bushels to the acre, while the average for the whole country is less than 14 bushels. The same rotation has produced the famous Greeley potato, as inimitable in its way as the Rocky Ford melon.

The Colorado stock farmer has discovered that cattle may be fattened at home without sending them to the corn states and that alfalfa produces beef, not tallow. He has discovered that pigs turned into the alfalfa patch during the summer are ready for market in the fall, and that "alfalfa mutton" brings the top price in the east. The small rancher knows that his chickens, geese, ducks and Belgian hares are finer for the alfalfa that forms part of their daily food, and that his alfalfa honey equals, if it does not excel, the delicious white sage honey of California.

Andree's Limit.

Now that so much interest is being shown in polar exploration it may be interesting to remember that Andree, the unfortunate explorer who attempted to reach the pole by means of a ballooon, set a limit, which has just elapsed, beyond which his return might not be expected. He said: "If you have no news of me by the end of July, 1901, you may give me up for dead."—Boston Herald.

Dodging Poor Wine in London.

The prices asked for wine at big hotels are so monstrously high and the wine offered is so often bad that this fact alone accounts for an increasing demand for whisky as a dinner beverage.—London Lancet.

A GLOWING REPORT.

An Indiana Man Compares Western Canada with the United States—What Mr. Frank Fisher, a Prominent Dunkard, Has to Say After a Trip Through Canada.

The Department of the Interior at Ottawa has just received from Mr E. T. Holmes, the Agent of the Government stationed at Indianapolis Indiana, the following letter, which requires no comment. It is only necessary to state that Mr. F. Fisher, the writer of the letter, is one of the most prominent of the Dunkards and a man upon whose word the utmost reliance can be placed. His home is at Mexico, Indiana, and he will be pleased to substantiate verbally or in any other way all that he says in his letter.

Anyone desiring information apply to nearest Canadian Agent, whose addresses are here given:

M. V. McInnes, 2 Avenue Theater Block, Detroit, Mich.
James Grieve, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.
J. S. Crawford, 214 West Ninth street, Kansas City, Mo.
Benjamin Davies, 154½ East Third street, St. Paul, Minn.
T. O. Currie, Room 12, B. Callahan's block, 293 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.
C. J. Broughton, 927 Monadnock building, Chicago, Ill.
W. V. Bennett, 801 New York Life building, Omaha, Neb.
W. H. Rogers, Watertown, S. D.
N. Bartholomew, 306 Fifth street, Des Moines, Ia.
J. H. M. Parker, 520 Chamber of Commerce, Duluth, Minn.
E. T. Holmes, Room 6, Big Four building, Indianapolis, Ind.
Joseph Young, 51½ State street, Columbus, O.

To my many friends:

I am pleased to make a report to you of the pleasant visit my wife and I had in Western Canada.

We visited the territories of Alberta, Assiniboia, and Saskatchewan, and found them far surpassing our imagination, but little did I expect to find such rich, loamy soil, so much of it, and so uniform in its level prairie lay. I do think the soil of Canada as a rule equals if not excels the finest prairie farm lands of Indiana. These lands are immense in their richness, and when once the sod is rotted and pulverized, it is as pliable and as easily cultivated as Indiana sandy soil.

Western Canada, from my point of view, offers as fine opportunities for mixed farming as any place in my knowledge. The long, sunshiny days, together with the rich soil, produce very fine wheat, oats, barley, flax and other cereal products. There is scarcely any attempt to raise corn, except early varieties for table use. The season is too short to depend upon maturing field corn. From the standpoint of getting this land ready for the plow, I must say that I never saw such a vast extent, practically all ready, so all that one has to do is to hitch up the plow and go to work. This is not the case with all the Canadian land, however; some of it has quite a bit of timber, much of it may be called brush land, and some of it has lovely forest groves, dotted here and there, thereby covering a hundred and sixty acres.

I have no doubt but that this country excels as a grazing or ranching country, because they have such rich grass, having an abundance of rain to keep it fresh. They also have plenty of water streams, and as a rule water may be reached at a depth of from 20 to 40 feet. From this you see there can be plenty of hay mown for winter feeding, and I have had reliable farmers to tell me that their stock will feed on hay alone, and be ready for market in the spring. Upon inquiring about the expense of raising a steer, a farmer replied that he did not consider it would cost any more than $4.00 or $6.00 to develop a three-year-old steer.

I truly think Canada offers a fine opening for a young man or a man who is renting land in Indiana. One hundred and sixty acres of good black land will cost you only $10.00 at the time you enter it, and by plowing and cultivating five acres each year for three years, gives you one hundred and sixty acres of good land for $10.00. This land can be bought from the Railroad Companies, private corporations or the Government for $3.00 to $4.00 per acre.

From a financial standpoint, I believe that for a series of years (five), a young man can make $10.00 in Canada, whereas he would only make $1.00 here, and I feel sure that I spent more money to get my eighty acre farm in White County, Indiana, cultivated, than it would cost me to cultivate eight hundred acres in Canada. This may seem a strong view to take of the matter, but when you take into consideration the clearing, ditching, fencing and the expensive breaking in of the stumps, and then compare the expense to that of land needing only the breaking, you will conclude that it is not such a wild or exaggerated statement as you might at first think.

I enjoyed the balmy, breezy atmosphere, which was bracing and refreshing, and the cool nights which made it so pleasant for sleep.

On making inquiries regarding the winters in this country I learned that the people never suffer from the cold, as the weather is dry and invigorating, and in a great many places, farmers and herders allow their stock to run outside the year round.

One great advantage to the settlers in Western Canada is the free creameries established by the Government, and run exclusively in the interest of the farmer.

I visited Thomas Daley, a farmer near Edmonton, Alberta, who showed me oats he had raised, some of which took the first prize at the Paris Exposition last year. The same yielded 110 bushels to the acre in 1899.

Yours truly,
FRANK FISHER.

Mexico, Ind.

VOLUNTEER TRACK-WALKER.

Queer Character Who Thinks He Is an Indispensable Employe of the Southern Pacific.

"Did you ever hear of the S. P.'s track walker between Deming and Yuma?" asked an S. P. conductor of "Ling and Pin." "He is a queer character," continued the conductor when he had received a negative reply, "and passengers often ask who he is, because of the frequency of his being seen on the road and his strange appearance. I have seen him many times at different points on the road and have heard that he is a locoed individual who thinks that he is employed as a sort of inspector of way, or track walker, by the Southern Pacific company and that he has to walk continually over the road from Deming to Yuma and back, and he sometimes gets as far down as El Paso, but I had never an opportunity to speak to him until a few days ago. I then asked him several questions regarding his past life and his imaginary job.

"He is a tall, slim man, and wears his hair, which is streaked with gray, long, and his face is never clean. But he is a harmless old fellow, and everybody humors him; in fact, the people along the route which he has been traveling continually since 1882 feed him and give him cast-off clothing. He told me that his name was James C. Drumgold, and that he was 50 years old. He said he came down from California to accept his present job from the Southern Pacific, and that he had a brother living in that state. He said he also had two sisters living in New York. He seems to be well educated and writes an excellent hand. His lunacy does not manifest itself in his conversation, but his appearance betrays it, and the fact that he travels afoot over that long, dry stretch of railroad track through the summer and winter and has been doing so for 19 years, proves that he is mentally unbalanced.

"Trainmen have asked him to ride, but he says he could not attend to his duties if he rode. I believe that if he should find something wrong with the track he would flag any train that might be approching the dangerous spot, and thus prevent a wreck, but if such a case has ever happened I have never heard of it. The railroad men all know him, and he is known by several different nicknames, but very few people know his right name."

Queen of the Table.

The waitress slammed an order of about a spoonful of dried-up mashed potatoes before the customer with a defiant air.

"I like the sample," weakly remarked the patron as he cleaned up the small part of the once luscious roots at one mouthful.

"That was your order; you asked for potatoes," snapped the waitress as her eyes narrowed and her lips assumed the shape of a straight line.

"When do you dig potatoes?" returned the subdued man in an effort to become friendly.

"I dig potatoes from 11 a. m. to two p. m.," said the queen of the table as she nervously fingered a cup which was not "working." "And once more nobody but the cheapskates kick."

The patron gulped his coffee and beat a retreat.—Cleveland Leader.

Letting Him Down Easy.

"That was a pretty harsh thing you said about me on the witness stand."

"What?"

"Why, when they asked you about my reputation for truth and veracity, you said I hadn't any."

"Yes; that has troubled me a good deal since then, but, honestly, old man, I wanted to let you down easy, so I lied about it."

"I should think you did."

"But you ought not to complain. Suppose I told them what your reputation in that line actually is!"—Chicago Post.

John's Opinion.

Mrs. Howes—For mercy's sake, John, what have you been doing in the back yard all the evening?

Mr. Howes—You see, dear, it was so much more interesting to hear what the servants said about you and your mother than to listen to what you and your mother had to say about the servants that I staid a good deal longer than I meant to.—Boston Transcript.

Elements of Greatness.

It is said that a great broker once told his son that only two things were necessary to make a great financier. "And what are those, papa?" the son asked. "Honesty and sagacity." "But what do you consider the mark of honesty to be?" "Always to keep your word." "And the mark of sagacity?" "Never to give your word."—Chicago Chronicle.

Ask Your Dealer for Allen's Foot-Ease,

A powder to shake into your shoes. It rests the feet. Cures Swollen, Sore, Hot, Callous, Aching, Sweating feet and Ingrowing Nails, Corns, Bunions. Allen's Foot-Ease makes new or tight shoes easy. Sold by all druggists and shoe stores, 25c. Sample mailed FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N.Y.

How He Knew.

"Oh, you cruel boy, to take those eggs out of the nest! Think of the poor mother bird when she comes—" "The mother bird's dead, miss." "How do you know that?" "I see it in your hat!"—Punch.

Piso's Cure cannot be too highly spoken of as a cough cure.—J. W. O'Brien, 322 Third Ave., N., Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 6, 1900.

No Time Lost.

Hawkins—I tell you what, Sellers reached the top in a hurry.

Robbins—Yes, he must have made pretty good time, for he has been blowing ever since he got there.—Smart Set.

Hoxsie's Croup Cure

The life saver of children. No opium. 50 cts.

You can find almost any kind of a boy, except the one whose sympathies in a fight between a cat and dog are with the cat.—Atchison Globe.

Half an hour is all the time required to dye with PUTNAM FADELESS DYES.

Discovered There Were Others.

He (sadly)—I can remember when you used to say I was all the world to you.

She—Perhaps; but I've studied astronomy since!—Puck.

RHEUMATISM Van Buren's Rheumatic Compound is the only positive cure. Past experience speaks for itself. Depot 88 S. California Ave., Chicago.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

A LITTLE WORN-OUT SHOE.

How Tom Burton Was Brought to His Senses and Was Induced to Give Up His Rum.

Yes! Tom Burton really stopped drinking—not for a day, or a week, or a month—but for ever! It is not worth while to tell how he began. The story would be too long and too sad, and we thrive better in sunshine than in shadw. But how he stopped; ah! that is worth knowing about!

It grew out of Annie Harwood's friendliness. Mamma thought Annie was altogether too friendly, and perhaps mamma was right, for it seemed to be impossible to make five-year-old Annie understand the first thing about conventionalities, and she was just as apt to accost a total stranger without the least excuse for doing so as she was to talk about the weather to her doll when "playing lady."

Mamma tried to explain that this was not customary; but Annie stoutly maintained that it ought to be.

"You tell me to love everybody," she urged, "and I can't love people and never speak to them," a bit of logic that mamma found unanswerable, but hoped that time would teach her little daughter when to speak and when to keep silence. In the meantime Annie's favorite amusement was sauntering about, with her dolly in her arms, nodding "good mornings" or "good afternoons" to any face that pleased her fancy.

Tom Burton was laying a new pavement in front of Mr. Harwood's house.

TOOK A LONG DRINK.

Tom was a skilled mechanic, capable of earning high wages, and his work had been in great demand; but the times grew more frequent when his mind was clouded and his hands unsteady, until now no one would trust him in a responsible position, and he was obliged, when inclined to exert himself at all, to take the work and pay of a laborer.

It was the noon hour, and, comfortably reclining in the shade of a large tree, Tom was partaking of his luncheon. One would scarcely say eating it, for the food was very meager; his bottle was full, though, so Tom was fairly content.

He had just taken a specially long draught and was smacking his lips over it, when he was startled by a childish voice saying: "How do you do?"

Tom, hastily hiding his bottle, said: "Very well, thank you," and began nibbling a bit of bread before he realized that his visitor was a very small girl nursing a doll, and looking at him with friendly, not critical eyes.

Tom waited a few minutes for her to go away, but she showed no inclination to do so, and he grew impatient for the rest of his rum. He must have been, unconsciously, a trifle ashamed of himself, for he carried on a mental argument while looking at Annie's sweet face.

"She won't know what it is," he said to himself; "I'm just wasting time sitting here waiting. She doesn't intend to go away."

Evidently the argument was not perfectly satisfactory, for he waited awhile longer. It was no use; Annie did not go away; so he reached stealthily round for his bottle, tried to cover its length with his hands, and took a long drink.

"What's that?" said Annie, promptly.

"Something to drink," answered Tom, with a faint flush.

"Is it dood?" was the next question.

"Ye-yes," replied Tom, with an effort, and a deeper flush.

"I'm firsty," suggested Annie, mildly.

"You'd better go home and ask your mamma for a cup of milk or water," said Tom, gruffly. He was fairly crimson now.

"I don't like milk, and I'm not firsty for water," exclaimed Annie, looking longingly at the bottle.

Tom did not take the hint, so Annie tried again:

"You said it was dood, didn't you?"

"Yes, but not for little girls," answered Tom.

"Why?" persisted Annie.

"Never mind why," said Tom, draining the bottle.

Disappointed and confused, Annie dropped her eyes. As she did so they rested on her pretty new shoes. Instantly the busy little mind flitted to a new subject.

"I've dot new shoes," she ventured.

"So I see," said Tom, much relieved by the turn conversation had taken.

"My papa buys me new shoes. He works hard every day; that's the way he dets me new shoes." Then, after a moment's contemplation of her feet: "You dot any little girls?"

"Yes," answered Tom, smiling. "One just about your size, and a dear little girl she is, too."

"What's her name?"

"Katie."

"Tatie dot new shoes, too?"

"No, she hasn't," the answer given with a falling countenance.

"Why?" was the next pitiless question.

Tom did not answer, and his inquisitor gave him a loophole for escape. "Perhaps her old ones are not worn out yet; perhaps they haven't any holes in them;" and then: "Have they?"

"Yes, they have," admitted Tom; "they're pretty much all holes."

Annie studied over the problem with her little brows in a pucker. A little girl with worn-out shoes and no one to replace them! What could it mean?

Suddenly a bright idea struck her, and with a smile of self-satisfaction she said: "Perhaps she's not as sweet a little dirl as I am?"

"Indeed she is, little miss!" cried Tom, indignantly.

"Then why don't you det her new shoes?" persisted Annie, not the least abashed.

Dared he answer that question even to himself? Could he ever again endure his own presence if he looked himself in the face now, and truthfully explained why little Katie's feet were on the ground, and her dress in tatters? In shame and silence he covered his face with his hands; but his merciless little questioner was not satisfied, and standing there before him with a grave and thoughtful little face, was fast answering the query for herself.

"Don't you work every day but Sundays, as my papa does? Is that why you don't det poor Tatie new shoes? I wish she tould live at our house! You tan't be a good papa at all!"

"I'm not!" said Tom, fiercely, springing to his feet; "I'm not a good one! Do you want to know why I don't get Katie new shoes? That's way!" he almost shouted, raising the bottle high over his head, "that's way!" and he flung it far into the street, where it broke into a hundred pieces. "And now," he went on rapidly, "there is no reason, and, God helping me, there never shall be again!"

And there never was.—Mothers and Daughters.

ALCOHOLISM AND HABIT.

Prof. Madden, of Milwaukee, Calls Attention to a Point Forgotten by Investigators.

"There is one important consideration," says Prof. Madden, of Milwaukee medical college, in a recent lecture, "to which attention should be called which seems to have escaped the notice of all investigators. . . . that is, the effects of alcohol upon the alcohol habitue must, of necessity, be very different from its effects upon a non-user. It would be manifestly absurd to take a man habituated to the daily use of four or five ounces for months or years and make him the subject for the study of the effects of two or three ounces of alcohol upon the human organism. Habitual use of any narcotic is known to produce a tolerance for that narcotic, making it possible for the habitue to take several times the lethal dose to a novice, with safety. The man who smokes 15 or 20 strong cigars a day without serious consequences would surely have been fatally poisoned had he smoked half that many on the day of his initiation into the smoking habit. If anyone doubts this let him recall the illness which resulted from his first smoke of, perhaps, a small part of a cigar. One-half a grain of morphine has been known to kill; but a recent victim of cancer of the tongue took 90 grains by the stomach, or between 60 and 70 grains hypodermically on each day for some time before his death. Certainly, then, anyone who habitually takes alcohol in any quantity is not a fit subject for experiment, and all experiments performed upon him would be absolutely valueless for determining the effects of alcohol upon the system. It is quite probable that many of the negative results obtained were such because of this fact, for there is no room to doubt that the immunity conferred upon cell protoplasm by long-continued contact with narcotic poisons protects it from breaking down, even though considerable quantities of the poison may be ingested."—Literary Digest.

GLEANINGS.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has issued an order prohibiting card playing of any description on trains, and conductors are instructed to see that the order is enforced.

One hundred cases of liquor, confiscated from "blind tigers," was destroyed by order of the court at Newport, Ark., on August 1. Newport is the home of Mrs. Mildred A. Dorsey, president of the state W. C. T. U., and the above practical result of an aroused temperance sentiment is due, in a great measure, to her earnest efforts.

Heretofore a plebiscite on prohibition has been taken every parliamentary election in New Zealand. To carry the vote would mean prohibition, and the majority against prohibition has been decreased every election. The liquor people are afraid to risk another vote three years from now, so they are advocating a plebiscite in favor of not taking a vote for six or ten years.

The Methodist Ministers' association of Denver, Col., has appointed a committee to petition the city council to pass an ordinance which will put restaurants that sell liquor under the same restrictions as saloons, and to petition the governor to remove John T. Boetem as police commissioner of Denver. The objection urged against Boetem is that he is attorney for a brewing company.

DISCOVERY OF OXYGEN.

This Name Perpetuates an Error Said to Have Been Made by Noted Chemist.

It was 127 years on the 1st of August since Joseph Priestley discovered oxygen. He called it dephlogisticated air. Scheele, who separated it about the same time, empyreal air; while Condorcet, more happily than either, suggested vital air. Lavoisier named it oxygen—literally the acid maker—and in so doing perpetuated an error, says London Express.

It is not oxygen that is the essential element in the formation of acids, but hydrogen, so called because it helps to form water. The early chemists would have hit the mark better if they had interchanged the designations; for oxygen constitutes the great bulk of water, and hydrogen is a constituent of all acids. What's in a name in this case is a chemical misrepresentation. Priestley little knew how wide was the range of the element he had found. Oxygen forms one-fifth of the atmosphere, eight-ninths of the waters, and, taking altogether, one-half of all the materials of the globe, so far as they are known. As carbon is the basis of all the organic substance of the world, so oxygen, the supporter of life and combustion, represents its living energies.

THE BROWN PELICAN.

Like His White Brother the Bird Is Likely to Be Exterminated in Florida.

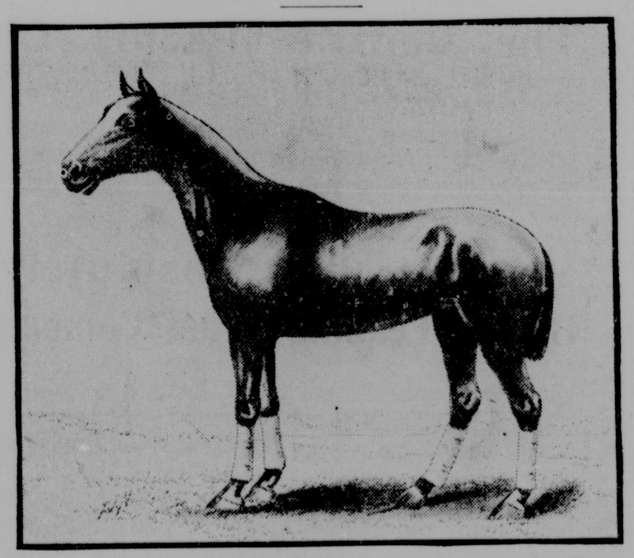
Bird Lore has a beautifully illustrated article on Pelican island, in the Indian river, and the editor invokes the aid of the Jacksonville Times-Union in the effort to save this harmless and picturesque bird from the extermination that has already overtaken his white brother of our coast. It is pointed out that the brown pelican of Florida has now only one rookery, which is so convenient to the reckless gunners that slaughter during the helpless period of incubation is doing its appointed work.

The legislature would gladly add another good law to our statute book, but has this availed to save the egret, the paroquet, or the pink curlew? Until the people themselves sternly repress such cruelty it will continue in defiance of law, and it is better not to tempt defiance and encourage the spirit of lawlessness. The Floridian instinctively revolts against any appearance of inhospitality. Too many are interested in seeking every pastime for those who care nothing for our future. We fear the pelican must go the way of the flamingo.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

This young man, whose engagement to the second daughter of Senator and Mrs. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, has just been announced, is the greatest matrimonial catch in the United States. He is a young man of sterling habits and rare integrity, devoted to religious and social settlement work and every method of Christian endeavor. He is a graduate of Brown university and other seats of learning, and enjoys the confidence of all who have ever had the fortune to come in contact with him. He is, in fact, a typical young American, unspoilt by riches and the flatteries of sycophants.

YANKEE, THE WINNER OF THE FUTURITY.



The richest American turf stake, the Futurity, was won on August 31, at Sheepshead Bay, by Yankee, the royal son of Hanover, and one of the finest-bred horses ever known. In gross the race was worth $46,910, of which amount $36,910 went to the winner. Without much urging the noble horse established a new record—1:09 1-5. Yankee won from what was perhaps the highest-class field which ever ran for a great stake, having opposed to him 18 of the finest animals in the country. Yankee is the property of Mr. Madden, who bought him last year for $20,000.

Japanese Legend of the Peach.

Almost all fruits and flowers have their legend. One about the peach comes from Japan and tells how a poor, pious old couple were searching for food by the roadside. The woman found a peach, which she would not eat of, though starving, till she could share it with her husband. He cut it exactly in half, when an infant leaped forth. It was one of the gods who had, he said, accidentally fallen out of the peach orchard of heaven while playing. He told them to plant the stone of the peach, and it brought them happiness, friends and wealth.

New York's Roof Dwellings.

On the roofs of some of the high buildings in New York little houses are erected in which dwell those connected with the care-taking of the structures. Families are reared there and all the business of life goes on as unconcerned as with those who dwell at a lower level.

DISTANCE JUDGING.

Success in Estimating Accurately a Given Space Is Very Rare.

A familiar example of the vagueness of our mental ideas on the dimensions of familiar objects is the trick by which a number of people are induced to measure off upon the wall what they consider to be the height of a top hat. Success in this feat is rare, says the London Globe, and the estimation in yards or miles of distances in the open air is no less difficult, though often considerably more useful. Generally, of course, it is the level surface or one filled with monotonous features many times repeated which is most underestimated, while diversification seems to impress the mind with a greater notion of extent. Even so, the usual tendency is greatly to underestimate distances of more than a quarter of a mile, while the differences between the guesswork computations of various members of the same party are often extraordinary. In our ordinary life we have rarely need for ascertaining in actual yards the distance of objects under observation, and our faculty of estimation is not developed much further when we have once left the stage behind at which all the objects in a room, for instance, appear to the infant to be equally within its grasp. The difficulty of judging distance is much increased over an undulatory or hilly surface, whether it is desired to find out the actual superficial measurement or the "air line," as the Germans term it, for rifle shooting in sport or war. In this last application the training of the faculty is extremely important, and in actual fact often extremely imperfect.

DEATH IN MOSQUITOES.

Scientific Investigation Shows the Insects to Be a Serious Menace to Human Life.

The study of sanitation in certain important particulars has become in the last few years a study of the mosquito.

The mosquito is born and grows to full size under water. From eggs almost microscopic in size it becomes first a little wriggling larva, then passes through a chrysalis or pupa stage, finally developing into the winged insect with which we are sadly familiar. In the larva and pupa stages the mosquito, although living in the water, breathes air, and hence spends nearly all of its time at or near the surface. The eggs are laid by the female on the surface of the water.

It would be inferred from this that stagnant ponds are the principal breeding places of mosquitoes. This is the fact, but they are not by any means the only breeding places. Pools or tanks of water of any kind are equally suitable for the purpose. In some places mosquitoes have been found breeding in broken bottles which were placed on the top of a stone wall. They have been known to multiply in the flower vases on the tables in houses. Rain-filled hollows in trees, hollow stumps, and any similar natural receptacle for rain water, as well as closed sewers, old wells and cisterns, give the mosquito a chance to multiply by millions.

Coming as they do naturally from swamps, the adult mosquitoes were long ago associated with malaria, a disease now known to be caused by a swamp parasite. Careful experiments have at length proved that malaria is usually due to the presence of mosquitoes. In fact, the blame for this disagreeable disease is laid at the door of the mosquito by most scientific men to-day.

As far back as 1881 a connection was noticed between flights of mosquitoes in tropical countries and yellow fever. Through the experiments now being undertaken by the United States government in Cuba, and through a variety of previous observations by private investigators, it has been almost conclusively demonstrated that the mosquito is the principal if not the only means of the dissemination of this dread plague. Two lives recently sacrificed in Cuba to the investigation of the subject have furnished the last proofs of the fact.

A third disease, much feared in certain regions, is now known to be chargeable to the mosquito. It is an affection of the skin and glands known as elephantiasis, and is most horrible and disfiguring. It is caused by parasites brought and introduced by mosquitoes.

It will be seen, therefore, says the Chicago Inter Ocean, that the loss of untold numbers of lives is directly chargeable to the mosquito. Hence its extermination has become a matter of vital importance to humanity in many districts. Of recent years thousands of experiments have been undertaken to find methods for exterminating the noxious insect. Of all the remedies suggested the best seems to be to stop the breeding by making all breeding places untenable.

The introduction of certain varieties of fishes and various chemicals into stagnant ponds and pools has been successfully tried, but the most useful method yet developed is to cover the surface of all breeding places with a film of kerosene or petroleum. As mosquitoes, in their early stages, are obliged to come to the surface to breathe, and as a touch of petroleum is fatal to them, this method has been found to be absolutely efficacious.

Now that it is known that the mosquito is more than a mere annoyance—is, in fact, a deadly foe—there is every reason why its extermination should be a matter of public policy. With the method of prevention known, malaria and yellow fever should become as infrequent as smallpox has been since vaccination became general.

An Elder Brother.

Mr. Bellenden Ker was wont to say that it was astonishing how far back two long lives set end to end could take you; and, as a case in point, used to relate the following incident which had occurred in a will case in which he had been engaged. A witness, a very old man, was asked if he had any brother or sisters. He gave the amazing reply that he had had one brother who had died "a hundred and fifty years ago." A murmur of incredulity traversed the whole court, from the bench downward, which was changed to something like stupefaction when documentary evidence was brought in proof of the old man's words. His father had married at the age of 49 and had had a son, who died the same year. He married again at the age of 75, and had another son, the witness, who was 94 when he gave his evidence.—Cornhill Magazine.

A Scotchman's Idea of Peace.

After this fashion does a Scotch farmer rebuke his sons for a recent fight:

"'Ye hae been fechtin' again, ye blakes,' thundered their father. 'Mind ye, if this happens again I will break every bone in your bodies. I will have you know that I am a man of peace!'"—S. R. Crockett, in New Lippincott.

Books on the French Revolution.

Two thousand of the 30,000 books on the French revolution which have been presented to the Bibliotheque Nationale by the British museum will be kept there. The remaining 28,000 will be sent to the Bibliotheque Sevigne.—Bookman.

SOLITARY EATING HARMFUL.

Health Authority Says That Companionable Conversation Is Essential to Digestion.

At a time like the present, when the marrying age of the average man of the middle classes is being more and more postponed, the physical ills of bachelordom come increasingly under the notice of the medical man. It is not good for man or woman to live alone. Indeed, it has been well said that for solitude to be successful a man must be either angel or devil. This refers, perhaps mainly to the moral aspects of isolation, and with these we have now no concern, says the London Lancet.

There are certain physical ills, however, which are not the least among the disadvantages of loneliness. Of these there is many a clerk in London, many a young barrister, rising, perhaps, but not yet far enough risen, many a business man or journalist who will say that one of the most trying features of his unmarried life is to have to eat alone. And a premature dyspepsia is the only thing that ever takes him to his medical man. There are some few can dine alone and not eat too fast, nor too much, nor too little. With the majority it is different. The average man puts his novel or his paper before him and thinks that he will lengthen out the meal with due deliberation by reading a little with, and more between, the courses. He will just employ his mind enough to help, and too little to interfere with, digestion. In fact, he will provide that gentle mental accompaniment which with happier people conversation gives to a meal.

This is your solitary's excellent idea. In reality he becomes engrossed in what he is reading till suddenly finding his chop cold he demolishes it in a few mouthfuls; or else he finds that he is hungry and paying no attention to the book, which he flings aside, he rushes through the food as fast as possible, to plunge into his armchair and literature afterwards. In either case the lonely man must digest at a disadvantage. For due and easy nutrition food should be slowly taken and the mind should not be intensely exercised during the process. Everyone knows that violent bodily exercise is bad just after a meal, and mental exertion is equally so.

Wise people do not even argue during or just after dinner, and observation of after-dinner speeches will convince anyone that most speakers neither endure themselves nor excite in their hearers any severe intellectual effort.

In fact, the experience of countless generations, from the red Indian of the woods to the white-shirted diners of a modern party, has perpetuated the lesson that a man should not eat alone, nor think much at this time, but should talk and be talked to while he feeds. Most people do not think much when they talk, and talking is a natural accompaniment of eating and drinking.

How does it fare with the many solitary women of to-day? No better, we know, than with the men, but differently. Alone or not a man may generally be trusted at any rate to take food enough. (We suppose of course that he can get it.) With a woman it is different. She is more emotional, more imaginative, and less inclined to realize the gross necessities of existence. Therefore, the woman doomed to dine alone as often as not does not dine at all. She gets dyspepsia because her digestion has not sufficient practice; a man gets it because his functions practice it too often in the wrong way.

Worst of all, perhaps, is the case of the solitary cook. In the myriads of small flats in London there are thousands of women "doing" for their solitary masters or mistresses. These women, whose main occupation is to prepare food for others, find it impossible to enjoy, or even to take, food themselves. As confectioners are said to give their apprentices a free run of the stock of the shop for the first few days, knowing that it will effectually cure appetite afterwards, so the women who are always occupied with buying and preparing food grow unable to use it for themselves.

Fruit Custard.

A delicious fruit custard may be made by boiling one quart of milk in a double boiler; beat two eggs very light and stir into them four tablespoonfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful of flour; add to this a little cold milk, then stir it gradually into the boiling milk, stirring until it thickens, set it away to cool; when cool, flavor with vanilla. Have ready in sauce dishes strawberries or sliced oranges or any fruit in season, and pour the custard over it. This is a very simple and palatable desert.—Good Literature.

Frosted Currants.

Pick five even bunches and dip them, one at a time, into a mixture of frothed white of egg and a very little cold water. Drain them until nearly dry, and roll in pulverized sugar. Repeat the dip in the sugar once or twice, and lay them upon white paper to dry. These make a fine garnish for jellies or charlottes, or heaped on a dish with other fruits. —Ladies' World, New York.

French Doughnuts.

Melt one teaspoonful of butter in two cupfuls of sweet milk. Add two cupfuls of sugar, a little salt, and four well-beaten eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder in half a cupful of flour and mix with the other ingredients; then add sufficient flour to make a soft dough; fry in hot lard.—Housekeeper.

THE REPUBLICAN.

ENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1901.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET

For Comptroller of the Treasury:
HERMAN S. PLATT,
Of Baltimore City.

For Clerk of the Court of Appeals:
THOMAS PARRAN,
Of Calvert County.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY TICKET.

For State Senator:
ROBERT A. RAVENSCROFT,
Of District No. 5.

For House of Delegates:
PATRICK E. FINZEL,
Of District No. 9.
CHARLES A. ASHBY,
Of District No. 14.

For Sheriff:
WILLIAM A. MAFFETT,
Of District No. 6.

For Treasurer:
JAMES W. WHITE,
Of District No. 14.

For County Commissioners:
TAYLOR FRIEND,
Of District No. 2.
JACOB STUMP,
Of District No. 4.

For Register of Wills:
EDWIN E. FRIEND,
Of District No. 7.

For County Surveyor:
FRANKLIN P. GREEN,
Of District No. 11.

Thoughts at the Grave in Canton.

The death of a great man is not the end of his earthly life. Indeed, it is but the ushering in of a great volume to which his previous career was the preface. Of all the countless myriads of men who have lived and died since time began, only the memory of a few survive. Millions who wrought well have been forgotten, but they left their influence of their time, contributing to the uplifting of humanity. And those who work on earth was made better through their inspiration passed on the benefaction to their successors. It is the influence of good lives that has moved humanity upward and is still moving it on an ascending plane. Each generation, century or age inheriting the achievements of all its predecessors adds its contribution to the ever-growing fund and passes it on. If it be suggested that the lives and works of those who have been most conspicuous in the annals of crime are also remembered, that they, like the noblest patterns of the race, live on in their malign influence ages after their mortal part has "mingled with the elements," let the fact be recalled that good comes out of evil. "From seeming evil still producing good, and better thence in infinite progression"—that is the province of the Ruler of the Universe, that is what has been going on in all the centuries past, and that is what must continue to go on.

Although only the memory of a few survive, it is the survival of the fittest, whether the record be an inapiration to good living or a warning against evil doing.

The influence upon mankind of such a life as William McKinley lived will be wider, higher and more enduring than volumes of sermons. Indeed, it has already been the theme of thousands of the most eloquent and moving discourses that have ever come from the American pulpit. It will inspire other thousands of preachers in our own and in foreign lands. It will go into the literature, the hearts and the lives of the people. The records of the race afford no nobler example of Christian fortitude than that which marked the close of his great career. But grand as was the ending, it was in perfect harmony with the whole story of his life. No man who knew William McKinley as a private citizen, a soldier, a Congressman or President was surprised when the story of his glorious death was told.

In his last public address, delivered in Buffalo but a few hours before the awful tragedy, the President exhibited such friendliness toward all nations as could only have resulted from the infusion of the Christian spirit, the golden rule, into practical statesmanship. It was a plea for co-operation in promoting progress and prosperity throughout the world. It was the holding out of a friendly hand toward every member of the family of nations by the Chief Magistrate of the great republic whose advancement under his administration had excited the amazement of all of them. While that address was being read and commented upon in Europe, the assassin came upon the scene. And while the friendly, generous sentiments of that address were warming the hearts of Europe's statesmen and business men toward President McKinley on his dying bed, the world heard the beautiful story of the Christian statesman's triumphant death. Yes, death we call it; but there is no death, no cessation of nations. As a patriot, statesman and Christian, William McKinley will still speak to the people. And the greatest of his achievements in statecraft will not surpass in benificence the example of his fortitude in death. His political aphorisms will be remembered for point and pungency, but his last words, "It is God's way; His will be done," will be recalled in the hard places of life and will be helpful to many a sad soul in the closing scene.

MR. GOLDSBOROUGH, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Maryland, has been unable to obtain from the Democratic authorities of the State copies of the census made under the act passed at the late extra session of the Legislature. Commenting upon this fact the Baltimore Herald says: "The authorized cost of the last Democratic State census was $40,000, but it exceeded this legal limit; and there is every reason to assume that the next Legislature, if it be Democratic, will be asked to authorize several thousands more, in the form of a deficiency bill, to make the difference between the actual amount absorbed by Democratic political workers and the original extravagant grant for a useless and partisan purpose. In all conscience, it might have been considered certain that every reputable citizen of Maryland would be granted the right to read this expensive campaign document for Democratic purposes. It might have been thought only honest that those who helped to pay the expenses of the machine Democrats in their latest attempt to corrupt the ballot list should be allowed to examine the result of the much needed census.

Making Adverse Sentiment.

Mr. Charles J. Bonaparte, counsel for the Republican State Central Committee in its proposed litigation over the portion of the State census report relating to the registration of voters, is quoted as saying that if the proposed proceedings do not secure access to the census lists they will undoubtedly be interesting to the public. That such a proceeding should interest the public is evidence of the fact that the Democratic managers are the worst sort of political bunglers, or they are relying on trickery to win the coming election.

To an outsider it would appear that the Democratic bosses have lost no opportunity to arouse an adverse public sentiment. The crusade in search of unpopularity was begun early last year. As a first step, the extra session was resorted to. The election law passed at that session undoubtedly deprived the Democratic managers of a great many Democratic votes. Independents were offended by the brazenness and uselessness of the proceedings, and dyed-in-the-wool Democrats were turned away by the disfranchisement of Democratic illiterates who had kept the faith well and had done yeoman service to the party. The census enumeration was clearly unnecessary and disgusted tax payers in general, but one ground was left for its defense. It might be used as a means of purging registration lists of fraudulent names. Now the Democratic managers have cut themselves off from that defense and are making ammunition for their Republican opponents.

Marylanders love fair play. They are tired of political false pretenses. The excuse for the registration inquiry by State census enumerators was that the information may be used in purging registration lists. Now, the Democrats in control of this information are making it impossible that the information shall be used for such a purpose. Registration is at hand. If the lists are to be of any use at all they must be used at the time of registration or prior thereto. It is a matter of common experience that the way to keep the registration lists honest is to have them watched by contending political parties. The more completely all the facts regarding voters are in the hands of these parties, the more difficult is it to have registration frauds perpetrated. Yet records taken at the expense of Republicans and Democrats alike which, it is said, throw a flood of light on registration matters, are hidden away from both parties. For it must be presumed that if State officials are conscientious they will not permit the Democratic organization to have access to public records which are denied to Republicans. Governor Smith will scarcely care to convict himself of a piece of petty trickery by admitting that the Democratic organization is using the information collected by State census enumerators while it is withheld from Republican workers. How, then, can he explain why this information was collected and paid for by the people's money and then made no use of?

All this must be brought forcibly before the public by the proceedings now being started by the Republicans. The Democratic leaders must be convicted before the voters of Maryland of shameless trickery or a wasting of public funds. In either case, the result must drive away much-needed votes.—Baltimore News.

Communicated.

To the Editor of The Republican.

It is gratifying to note the order prevailing along our line now. True we hear an occasional shot from a sharpshooter, but they are so far in the thicket that the smoke of the powder they are burning and wasting is invisible and their missils harmless. So general is the harmony that but one point of importance presents itself to my mind. As we expect to elect the full Republican ticket in November, let us brush away a few faults that have long been lying at the door of nearly every voter in the county. It has been the custom of the majority of us after electing senators and delegates to represent us in our State assemblies to sit down and wait and watch the newspaper reports for some important legislation, and the result is we are still waiting. I mean the majority. The minority, consisting of business men in the different lines of trade and professions, have one or more times in the history of our county taken the proper steps to secure legislation favorable to their several callings and interests by consulting each other, formulating and having bills drawn up and endorsed by persons interested in their lines of business and trade, putting up the money, appointing committees consisting of the most shrewd tactitions favorable to their schemes who went boldly to the jungle and bearded the lion in his den and tenaciously held on until the end they sought was accomplished. It was so in the early history of our county when the establishing of the county seat was the important question at issue. The majority stood still. Some dreamed and some wrangled, but the enterprising few of that day who were awake, alert and watchful, some of whom I remember were Messrs. D. E. Offutt, John Daily, Dr. E. H. Bartlett and I think R. T. West and A. A. Perry, three of whom have since passed to the realm beyond but were then fully alive to the future interest of those who now enjoy the benefits of their enterprising spirits, and for the benefit of those who were too young to remember I will further say after the act to establish the county seat at Oakland had become a law the county commissioners refused to levy money to build the court house and jail, but after a lengthy persistence two of the former gentlemen, Messrs. Offutt and Daily, appeared before the court and demanded that a bill of mandamus be granted compelling the commissioners to make the necessary levy, which was done, and I must not forget to credit the B. & O. R. R. Co. with the free passes to the members of the committee which bore and accompanied the former sacred trust to the State Capital. And thus it must continue to be with all who will have efficient laws to meet the demand, morally, religiously and commercially.

It is not the business, strictly speaking, of our representatives in either branch to formulate bills; neither should they act upon their own responsibility to have laws enacted, however beneficial they might be, without some hint at least of their approval by the majority. The miners and railroad men have taken such measures with success, but how many farmers, mechanics and laborers who constitute the majority? Not one in Garrett county to my knowledge.

Gentlemen, if you want legislation in your favor follow the example of those old pioneers. Draw or have drawn up bills containing the laws you would have repealed, enacted or reenacted, appoint your delegates, go down in your jeans and bring up the cash for expenses and be sure it's enough to pay all expenses to the State Capital and return and two weeks' board at the best hotels. Get as many endorsers on your bill or petition as possible. This is the way and the only way to get what you want.

One more point and I'm done. Bear in mind, you who will, that the only and most successful lawyers, doctors, school teachers, public speakers and men in other professions are those who have had the most practical experience, and this same rule applies as forcibly to our representatives in either State or National assemblies. Now let us send in a sheet on the fifth of November without a blur, blot or blemish, whole and clean, and we will live to rejoice for so doing. It is worth trying.

Firmly relying in the intelligence of everyone who may read this to understand and act upon these suggestions, I am

Yours truly,
S. E. FLOWERS, SR.

Mt. Lake Park, Sept. 24.

Death of An Aged Colored Woman.

"Aunt" Sally Duncan, an aged colored woman, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Walker, in Oakland on last Wednesday. Her funeral took place on Friday. Her age was not known, but presumably she was about 75 years old. She was buried from the A. M. E. church, the interment being made in the cemetery here. Prior to the war she was a slave and belonged to the Fairfax family of near Terra Alta.

Let it Alone.

Scott's Emulsion is not a good medicine for fat folks. We have never tried giving it to a real fat person. We don't dare. You see Scott's Emulsion builds new flesh. Fat people don't want it. Strong people don't need it.

But if you are thin Scott's Emulsion is the medicine for you. It doesn't tire you out. There is no strain. The work is all natural and easy. You just take the medicine and that's all there is to it.

The next thing you know you feel better—you eat better—and you weigh more. It is a quiet worker.

Send for free sample.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 409 Pearl St., N. Y.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

Oil in Golden California

The Rich Fields Uncovered Rival Those of Russia.

INVESTORS REAPING A HARVEST

The old days of Titusville and Oil City, where fortunes were made in a night, are completely outdone by the magnificent oil fields now being uncovered and developed in Southern California. Thousands of investors all over America are already beginning to reap thair harvest in dividends.

The Central Pacific Oil Company

At Los Angeles, California, controls the cream of the nine different fields. Two million have already been used in purchasing twenty-five hundred acres of magnificent oil territory in these sections. The company is one of the most progressive now operating on the Pacific Coast. This company offer

Your Purchase Absolutely Guaranteed By the Leading Trust Company of California

The Continental Building and Loan Association of San Francisco, Cal., (capital $12,000,000) one of the oldest and strongest financial institutions in the Golden State, after having thoroughly investigated our proposition, have agreed to guarantee the holders of Central Pacific Oil Stock six per cent. interest per annum for eight years, while every indication points to a profit many times that amount. If you want some of the first 100,000 shares send your orders to the Secretary of the Company, A. Samuel Parks, or through Wells, Fargo & Co. express, or to the depository of the Company, the Broadway Bank and Trust Company, Los Angeles, or direct to Central Pacific Oil Company.

Money Back if You Wan tIt.

Purchasers of the first hundred thousand shares of this stock will have the option of returning same to the Company at the expiration of 1 year from the date of purchase and receive the full amount of cash paid for the same with interest at 6 per cent. per annum less any dividends paid on said stock, provided 60 days' notice be given the Company of such intention.

CENTRAL PACIFIC OIL CO.,

Offices, 611, 615 and 617 Laughlin Building, Los Angeles, California.

NOTICE OF REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 18, 1901.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 33, Chapter 262 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland, 1896, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respective Election Districts of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on Tuesday, October 1st,

Tuesday, October 8th,
and on
Tuesday, October 15th,
for revision only.

(No one can Register after Tuesday, Oct. 8.)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing, possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts, and for the purpose of performing all other duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland and Chapter 262 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1896.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the store room of Chas. S. May in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at Ed. Schlossnagle's Saddlery Shop in the town of Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in O'Hanley's Hall in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Thomas Garvey's house in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

The Officers of Registration for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Nathan C. Browning in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Corrigan property, Third and Alder streets, in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the old Hoye place on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration for the Ninth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the shop of Samuel Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the building owned by Dr. J. W. Laughlin in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the shop of H. A. Groves in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in the town of Kitzmillersville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the Opera House Building in the town of Oakland.

DANIEL E. BECKMAN,
L. H. FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 1 of Garrett county.

WILLIAM WELCH,
WALTER W. SAVAGE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 2 of Garrett county.

JAMES H. BEVANS,
C. C. DURST,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 3 of Garrett county.

ERVAN FAZENBAKER,
JAMES H. REYNOLDS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 4 of Garrett county.

JOHN H. GATTERMAN,
ASA B. FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 5 of Garrett county.

HARRISON SINES,
REUBEN M. ENLOW,
Officers of Registration for Election District N , 6 of Garrett county.

JOSEPH H. SMITHMAN,
LINCOLN CALLIS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 7 of Garrett county.

JOHN H. HARVEY,
GEORGE D. STAHL,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 8 of Garrett county.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
DANIEL B. LAYMAN,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 9 of Garrett county.

ARLA SOLLARS,
C. L. PAUGH,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 10 of Garrett county.

WALTER WARNICK,
JOHN MERRILL,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 11 of Garrett county.

JAMES BOWSER,
GEORGE W. ENGLE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 12 of Garrett county.

L. C. HAMILL,
W. S. PEW,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 13 of Garrett county.

WADE H. HINEBAUGH,
SIMON MYERS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 14 of Garrett county.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President,
FRANK WELCH,
A. G. STURGISS,
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk. 28—5t.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

Arthur Miller, of Gormania, was in town Monday.

Mr. William C. Kidd, of Baltimore, is in Oakland this week.

DIXON & KELSO will pay 70c cash, or 75c, ½ cash, for potatoes.

Mr. Syril Gear, of Cumberland, spent Sunday in Oakland the guest of Mr. Stuart Hamill.

Druggist Joseph E. Harned spent a day or two in Baltimore last week on business.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davis have moved from Water street to their new house on Third street extended.

Mr. John T. Sincell spent parts of last and this week in Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York on business.

Robert Felty, Esq., of Connellsville, Pa., was in Oakland on business a day or two this week.

Mr. Robert McCandish, of Piedmont, spent Tuesday evening here the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Sliger on Liberty street.

It is always best to run from the fellow who begins his story with a laugh and tells you it's the funniest thing you ever heard.

If you are usually a busy man and want to loaf in peace do not let anybody see you or the whole town will come to keep you company

Mrs. Bowie Johnson, Mrs. M. A. Yost, Misses Jennie Johnson and Mollie Peddicord left yesterday morning for Buffalo to attend the exposition.

Miss Emily Stickley, who resides with her grandfather, Mr. Pat Turley, near town, had the misfortune one day last week to fall from her wheel, which she was riding from Mt. Lake, and dislocate her right wrist.

Among the Accident people who were here at court Monday and Tuesday were Messrs. Geo. F. Ault, J. L. Frush, W. H. Speicher. Will Glotfelty, Dr. Webster Ravenscroft and William Garringer.

On Monday afternoon the "New England Bloomer Girl" baseball club crossed bats with the local team or "Terriers" at Jack Oak Park, the latter winning in a score of 14 to 7. A large number of people witnessed the game.

One of the largest coal transactions in Harrison county, W. Va., has just been concluded by R. C. Dunnington and O. S. McKinney, of Fairmont. The tract sold contains seven thousand acres and involves over two hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. Oliver N. Miller, of near Gormania, was in town Monday. He has purchased a farm near Bayard and will move thereon this week. Mr. Miller will have the weekly visits of THE REPUBLICAN at his new home, he having become one of our cash-in-advance subscribers.

Dr. Green, of the Deer Park Hotel, who was there taken ill with typhoid fever several weeks ago and brought to the McComas Sanitarium in Oakland for treatment, is recovering quite rapidly. His condition is such that he is now able to take short walks out doors, very much to the gratification of his friends.

An observing farmer is responsible for the following: If you pass a farm and see a large barn and a small house you may know that the man is boss; when you see a fine house and a small barn you may understand that the woman has things her own way, and when there is a good barn and a nice house you may take it for granted that the man and woman are equal and work together in harmony.

The charter for the Garrett Water and Light Company, which corporation was formed some weeks ago by local parties for the purpose of building and operating a water works system and electric light plant at Mountain Lake Park and Loch Lynn Heights, has been received and stock is now being subscribed. The successful operation of the combined systems is almost assured and is meeting with encouragement on every hand.

Walter Smith, a young man living near Addison, Pa., was seriously injured on Monday. He was shocking buckwheat in a field near his home and had taken his shot gun with him to shoot pigeons. He loaded the gun with buck shot and placed it on a shock of the buckwheat. He had gone but a short distance when the gun fell on the ground and was discharged, the entire load entering the young man's hip and side. His recovery is hardly expected.

Daniel Schlosnagle, of Addison, Pa., met with a fatal accident while cutting timber one day last week. As he did not come to dinner at the usual time his wife went in search of him and was horrified to find him pinned to the ground by a large limb which had caught him as the tree fell. He was not dead when his wife found him, but was suffering much pain and appealingly asked to have the limb removed but as it was a very large limb, Mrs. Schlosnagle could do nothing with it. After several attempts to remove the limb she went for help, but when she returned with assistance her husband was dead.

The autumn bride is one sort of ring candidate.

Wells are going dry in Oakland on account of the prolonged drouth.

Rev. J. H. Enlow, of Rowlesburg, W. Va., was an Oakland visitor on Monday.

Miss Stella Andrews, of Cumberland, was visiting her parents near Oakland a couple of days last week.

Mrs. E. E. Flowers and children are visiting in and near Terra Alta this week.

A special issue of postage stamps commendatory of the life of President McKinley is under contemplation.

Mr. James A. Sincell spent Sunday last in Eglon, West Va., the guest of Mr and Mrs. Louis Bush.

Mrs. Jos. M. Conneway, of District No. 8, who suffered a severe illness of typhoid fever, was in Oakland a day or two this week.

Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Sincell are in Baltimore this week. They may visit Buffalo and Niagara Falls before their return to Oakland.

Harry Flowers, of Mountain Lake Park, has entered this office as an apprentice in the "art preservative of arts."

The law making it a misdemeanor to beat a board bill is a good one. It would be a good idea to include non-paying newspaper subscribers.

Miss Anna McQuay, of Mountain Lake Park, left yesterday morning for Baltimore, where she will take a course in music at the Peabody Institute.

It is said that turkeys will be rather expensive this fall as they are not so numerous as usual. The exceedingly wet weather of the early summer was fatal to the young birds and thousands of them died from its effects.

Have you a sense of fullness in the region of your stomach after eating? If so you will be benefited by using Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They also cure belching and sour stomach. They regulate the bowels too. Price, 25 cents. Sold by all druggists.

The man who can do just one thing and does it is greater than he who can do a dozen things and does not. Fortune is very like individuals in some respects. If we are persistent she sometimes gives us all we ask just to be rid of our importuning

Howard W. Smouse and wife, of Fairmont, who spent a few weeks at Mountain Lake Park where Mrs. Smouse was recuperating after an attack of typhoid fever, left on Tuesday for their home, driving overland to their destination.

Engine No. 1300, drawing train No. 12, on Thursday night last broke one of the under slides supporting the piston rod when nearing Oakland. Here the disabled portions of the machine were disconnected and after an hour's delay the train went on east.

The West Virginia Central & Pittsburg Railway will sell Excursion Tickets from all stations on its line to ELKINS, W. Va., on Oct. 2, 3 and 4, good for return trip until October 5th, 1901, inclusive, at ONE FARE for round trip. ACCOUNT of Fair and Races to be held at ELKINS.

It is announced that Rev. S. K. Arbuthnot, who gained great prominence as Chaplain of the 1st Volunteer Regiment of West Virginia in the late war with Spain, and who has resided at Parkersburg for a year past, will take a regular pastorate charge at the approaching session of the West Virginia Conference of the M. E. church.

The work on the new Catholic church is being pushed along pretty lively now. A new foreman has been put in charge. A shed has been erected in the street under which the stone cutters work and are thus protected from the weather. The lines of the building are coning out prominently and when completed the structure will be quite an ornament to the community.

An exchange tells of a robust liar who is growing stouter every day in that direction. He let loose a story of a man who tried to kill a chinch bug. He fed him poison, cracked him in the doors and froze him in ice. The bug always came up smiling a fiendish smile and looking at the man with a sardonic eye. Finally he carried the bug to a foundry and dropped it into a ladle of melted iron. Fifteen years afterward his wife broke a skillet she had been using for some years and that chinch bug dropped out and asked the nearest road to a cornfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Turner, of Honolulu, H. I., after having visited the Buffalo exposition, New York, Baltimore and other eastern cities, arrived here Sunday afternoon and will remain some time as the guests of Mr. John A. Grant and daughters. Mrs. Turner is remembered by many of Oakland's citizens as Miss Lillie A. Brown, who for many years taught in the public and also subscription schools of town. She is remembered especially by the editor as a thorough instructor in all branches of learning and is indeed the only teacher who did impress him, with the aid of a ruler, with the necessity of thoroughly knowing his lessons. Mrs. Turner has many warm friends in Oakland who have been pleased to meet her again.

Words of Praise.

"T. Jay," the versatile Oakland correspondent of the Cumberland News, has the following to say of two gentlemen well known in Garrett county and indeed in all sections of the country for the work they are doing and have done in the past:

"Some twelve or more years ago Louis A. Rudisill organized the Topeka chautauqua at Topeka, Kansas. Among the lecturers secured by Mr. Rudisill was Dr. W. L. Davidson, and these two men, who are now doing so much for Mountain Lake Park, met in this way at Topeka, Kansas, about twelve years ago, Rudisill as superintendent of the chautauqua and Davidson as lecturer. Some ten years ago Rev. W. M. Frysinger, of Pennsylvania, organized in a very modest way the Mountain Chautauqua. Its growth was very slow in the beginning, and when a superintendent was needed the services of Dr. W. L. Davidson were secured. Of him and his work I have spoken in this column and I need not repeat here. As the years passed Mountain Lake Park association prospered and needed a manager. Mr. Rudisill was recommended by Bishops Vincent and Ninde and Rev. Dr. C. P. Masden. Mr. Rudisill was on his way to Epworth Heights, Ohio, to preach at the camp meeting service at that place and stopped at the Park to look over the situation, and before he left his services were engaged. In this way these two notable chautauqua workers were thrown together and have been working harmoniously together ever since. Mr. Rudisill is a member of the Central Pennsylvania conference and at the last annual session of that body was taken from the supernumerary list and made effective and was then appointed by the bishop as manager of Mountain Lake Park. He is the only preacher who has been similarly appointed and he was the recipient of numerous congratulations in consequence. Mr. Rudisill is a hustler, and as manager of the Park has been very successful. He has seen the Park under his management increase from seventy cottages to a pretty municipality containing two hundred and fifty cottages. The Dennett and Mountain Lake Park, two of the largest hotels here, have been built under his administration.

"A new auditorium seating six thousand people was planned and built under the immediate direction of Mr. Rudisill. It is said by some lecturers that the acoustics of this auditorium are better than those of any large auditorium in this country. Mr. Rudisill has had tempting offers from Chautauqua Beach and a large real estate firm in Washington, D. C., and also from other places, but he is in love with his work here and has no thought of leaving the Park. The past in many respects has been the greatest season in the history of the Park, but Mr. Rudisill and Dr. Davidson are already planning greater things for next year. Nearly all the summer visitors have departed and the park is settling down for the winter. Those who expect to remain here all the winter are filling their coal houses and laying in other supplies to make themselves comfortable during the long period which must elapse before campmeeting songs are again heard all over this lovely park.

Judge Jeremiah Wilson Dead.

Judge Jeremiah Wilson, chief counsel for Admiral Schley, died of acute indigestion at his apartments in Washington at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning very suddenly. On Monday he was apparently in good health and was active in the conduct of the Schley case before the court of inquiry.

Judge Wilson was well and favorably known in Oakland, having a beautiful summer home here, which he purchased a number of years ago, when he and the late Judge Patrick Hamill were warm friends.

Estrayed.

From the farm of the undersigned, on August 10, 1901, one white improved Chester sow. Reward will be paid for her return.

CONRAD SCHMALE,
29 3t* Accident, Md.

Improvements at the Station.

The interior walls of the Baltimore and Ohio station in Oakland have been repainted and the woodwork, seats, etc., given a coat of hard oil, all of which adds materially to the appearance of the building.

Money to Loan.

$4,000 to loan on first mortgage in n sums to suit upon town property or nearby farms.

EDWARD H. SINCELL.

Church Services.

Services will be held in St. Mark's Lutheran church Sunday morning and evening. A cordial welcome to all.

GEO. I. UHLER,
Pastor.

NEW FALL MILLINERY.

OPENING
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY,
October 1st and 2nd.

MRS. M. L. SCOTT,
Baltimore Store.

Died.

THOMPSON—At the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Winters, one mile back of Loch Lynn Heights, their married daughter, Mary S. Thompson, aged 21 years, died after an illness of five months, on Thursday of last week. The funeral occurred on Friday, services being conducted by Rev. Geo. I. Uhler, of Oakland. A husband and two small children survive her.

SNYDER.—At his home near Accident, on Sunday afternoon, after a prolonged illness incident to advanced age, Frederick Snyder, aged nearly 80 years. The deceased leaves a number of children, among them being Messrs. Adam and Frederick Snyder, Mrs. J. L. Richter and Mrs. F. C. Ries, of Accident.

WARNICK.—Mrs. Andrew J. Warnick, of Chestnut Grove, near Bloomington, died on Tuesday of last week at 5 o'clock. She was afflicted with an incurable disease and was ill for several weeks. The remains were interred in the Barnard burying ground on Thursday afternoon.

WARNICK.—'Squire Andrew J. Warnick, of District No. 4, who was extremely ill at the time of the death of his wife, which is published above, died on Friday last and was buried on Sunday. He was quite aged and was a member of one of the oldest families in Garrett county.

HENDRICKSON.—Katie E., aged 2 years, 10 months and 26 days, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zach. Hendrickson, of Eglon, W. Va., died Wednesday of last week and was buried on Friday. Rev. Geo. I. Uhler, of Oakland, conducted the funeral services.

RAVENSCROFT.—The infant son, aged 3 months, of Dr. and Mrs. Webster Ravenscroft, of Accident, died on Friday night last of cholera infantum, after an illness of only a few hours.

Directors and Examiners Appointed.

At a meeting held on September 17 the School Board selected the following gentlemen to serve as a board of directors for the High School: The County Examiner, the Principal of High School, Oakland; Prof. U. G. Palmer, Hutton; Col. A. G. Sturgiss, Oakland; Dr. G. C. Keller, Grantsville; John McCullough, Friendsville; Dr. J. W. Laughlin, Deer Park, and Charles Hilleary, District No. 8.

These gentlemen are to serve without pay. From among the directors were selected the County Examiner, the Principal of High School and Prof. Palmer as a board of examiners who shall examine all appicants for admission into the High School. Branches to be examined in for admission may be obtained from the examiner.

Said High School will open with the public schools, and the examination will be held in the Oakland public school building Saturday, Oct. 26, but all applicants will be admitted into the public school at Oakland any time during the week.

He Owes His Life to the Foreughthot of a Companion.

While on a camping trip in Webster county, Mr. S. I. Stump, of Normantown, W. Va., had a severe attack of bloody flux. He says, "I firmly believe I owe my life to the forethought of one of the company who had taken along a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy." Moral.—Procure a bottle of this remedy before leaving home. It cannot be obtained when on a hunting, fishing or prospecting trip. Neither can it be obtained while on board the cars or steamship, and at such times and places it is most likely to be needed. The safe way is to have it with you. Thousands of travelers never leave home on a journey without it. For sale by all druggists.

Married.

HOFFMAN — LASHORN.—Mr. Howard Hoffman, of this place, and Miss Sallie Lashorn, of South Cumberland, were quietly married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. David Reed, in the above named city Tuesday evening last at 8.30 o'clock by Rev. Edgar S. Sutherland. Only a few immediate friends of the family were present.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the lands of the undersigned, lying in District No. 12 of Garrett county, either for the purpose of hunting, fishing or passing through the same armed with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

SILAS C. BEACHY,
C. C. BEACHY,
JONAS C. BEACHY,
297* MRS. JOHN BRENNEMAN.

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. Ernest Janson, Mrs. E. B. Burgwin, Mrs. Allen Sparrow, Miss Ellen Brown, Miss Emma L. Rogers, Jno. Hayes, Bryan Healy, Lat Ensey, Dan Cowan, N. R. Butler, Frank Kelley, C. A. Wilt, James Small, Walter Spriggs, Jno. Malek, J. H. Lowe, W. E. Reid.

Estray Notice.

Estrayed from the Meadow Mountain range about July 1st, two black heifers, one red heifer, one red steer and one black steer, all 2 years old, and have round holes in each ear size of No. 12 gauge shot gun. One black heifer will be fresh this month. Any information leading to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.

FRANK O. GLOTFELTY,
28 4* McHenry, Md.

In Memoriam.

Our entire community was greatly shocked when the sad news was spread of the death of Effa C. Beckman, wife of Richard W. Beckman, who died at her home near Beckman Tuesday, August 20.

The deceased was 28 years, 11 months and 20 days old. She was a consistent member of the Lutheran church for nine years and performed her part well. She was a kindly lady, always ready to lend a helping hand. Those who knew her are deeply grieved at her death which saddened so many people, for in the death of a good woman communities suffer as do the immediate families concerned.

She leaves a sorrowing husband and two small children and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Her remains were laid to rest in the Methodist graveyard near Beckman, where a large concourse of people followed her to her last resting place. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Howard, of Bloomington.

Yes, she is dead! No sleep so beautiful and calm; so free from trace of pain; so fair to look upon. She seemed a creature fresh from the hand of God and waiting for the breath of life—not one who had lived and suffered death. Well may we exclaim with the poet—

"I know thou art gone to the land of thy rest,
Then why should my soul be so sad;
I know thou art gone where the weary blest
And the mourner looks up and is glad.
Where love has put off in the land of its birth
The stain it had gathered in this,
And hope the dear one that gladened the earth
Lies asleep in the bosom of bliss.

A FRIEND.

Estray Notice.

Estrayed from the Warren pasture fields near town on Sunday night, Sept. 22, one brindle cow with several large white spots, two years old, and but three tits. Any person knowing whereabouts of same please notify

MRS. R. A. ORCUTT.

Special Rates to Buffalo Pan-American Exposition, Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Excursion tickets from Oakland, Md., to Buffalo and return via Pittsburg account Pan-American Exposition now on sale at ticket offices Baltimore & Ohio Railroad:

TEN DAY TICKETS—On sale daily, $13.35.

FIFTEEN DAY TICKETS—On sale daily, $16.80.

SEASON TICKETS—On sale daily, good returning until Nov. 30th, 1901, $19.20.

For full details, time of trains, etc., call on Agent Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. til nov 1

CONNELL & CRANE

Have brought to Oakland the choicest line of

Fine Millinery Goods

to be procured from eastern cities. They have with them MISS RECK, whose work and service so delighted their customers last winter.

Opening days

Thursday, Friday, Oct. 3, 4.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE

CALIFORNIA, COLORADO AND UTAH.

Special low Summer Excursion Rates to all points. Personally conducted Pullman Tourist Sleeping Cars.

Personally conducted tour to San Francisco, Cal., account General Convention Episcopal Cuhrch. Tickets on sale Sept. 22nd to 27th. Good returning until Nov. 5th, with stop-over privileges.

Quickest and best line to

OKLAHOMA AND INDIAN TERRITORY.

Only line with Double Daily Through Service. Dining Cars and Free Reclining Chair Cars. Fastest train service to the famous

BEAUMONT, TEXAS, OIL FIELDS.

Through sleeping car from Chicago without change and through sleeping car reservations from Cincinnati via Memphis, Tenn., to

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

Special Homeseekers' Excursions to all points South, West and North West.

For FREE descriptive matter and full particulars regarding above, address

E. A. RICHTER,
Traveling Passenger Agent.
812 Park Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

APPOINTMENT OF Judges and Clerks of Election.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 7, 1901.

The Board of Supervisors of Election for Garrett county, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Judges and Clerks of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland for the year 1897, hereby give notice of the names and postoffice address of each person so selected as Judges and Clerks and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Elections intends each of said person to represent, respectively.

The law makes it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be preferred to them in writing against any person so selected and to remove any such person whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable to discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

Peter J. Lohr, Democrat, Judge of Election, Beckman; John L. Fitzwater, Republican, Judge of Election, Beckman; Patrick Hamill, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Thayerville; Alfred B. Mason, Republican, Clerk of Election, Beckman.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

Augustine Friend, Democrat, Judge of Election, Friendsville; A. M. Chisholm, Republican, Judge of Election, Friendsville; D. A. Turney, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Friendsville; George W. Sterling, Republican, Clerk of Election, Krug.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

W. H. Kaufman, Democrat, Judge of Election, Grantsville; Sam'l J. Beachy, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville; John Custer, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Grantsville; Frank J. Foulk, Republican, Clerk of Election, Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

Peter Fitzwilliams, Sr., Democrat, Judge of Election, Bloomington; Jesse Harris, Republican, Judge of Election, Bloomington; Stephen F. Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Floyd; Floyd Duckworth, Republican, Clerk of Election, Westernport.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

Valentine Kahl, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; Tarleton O. Collier, Republican, Judge of Election, Cove; S. K. Schlossnagle, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Accident; Chauncey Bittinger, Republican, Clerk of Election, Cove.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

Lewis Kahl, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; John Sines, Republican, Judge of Election, Sines; William A. DeWitt, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Hoyes; Thomas P. Savage, Republican, Clerk of Election, Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

William Broderick, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; John Close, Republican, Judge of Election, Mountain Lake Park; Richard F. Bartlett, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; William P. DeBerry, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

Election District Number Eight Ryan's Glade.

Samuel Miller, Democrat, Judge of Election, Sunnyside; John H. Sanders, Republican, Judge of Election, Gortner; John A. Hughes, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; Warner T. Harvey, Republican, Clerk of Election, Gormania, W. Va.

Election District Number Nine—Johnsons.

Floyd Crow, Democrat, Judge of Election, Finzel; William Finzel, Republican, Judge of Election, Finzel; M. H. McKenzie, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Finzel; Richard McKenzie, Republican, Clerk of Election, Frostburg.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

Joseph Lashorn, Democrat, Judge of Election, Deer Park; J. B. Shockey, Republican, Judge of Election, Deer Park; Michael J. Garrett, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Deer Park; W. W. Thrasher, Republican, Clerk of Election, Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven The Elbow.

Peter F. Michael, Democrat, Judge of Election, Barton; Simon W. Green, Republican, Judge of Election, Lonaconing; Patrick S. Fazenbaker, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Barton; Johnson Broadwater, Republican, Clerk of Election, Merrill.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

Aaron Pritts, Democrat, Judge of Election, Beckman; James P. Wiley, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville; J. Turner Lohr, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bittinger; Elias Orendorf, Jr., Republican, Clerk of Election, Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

William H. Pool, Democrat, Judge of Election, Blaine, W. Va.; James H. Wilson, Republican, Judge of Election, Blaine, W. Va.; Cleaver Pool, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Blaine, W. Va.; George W. Kitzmiller, Republican, Clerk of Election, Blaine, W. Va.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

E. M. Spedden, Democrat, Judge of Election, Crellin; John A. Sowers, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland; Jeremiah O. Browning, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; Samuel Lawton, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

C. E. ELLITHORP, Pres.,
FRANK WELCH,
A. G. STURGISS,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett County, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Treasury Department.

OFFICE OF
THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., August 20, 1901.

Whereas, by satisfactory evidence presented to the undersigned, it has been made to appear that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, has complied with all the provisions of the Statutes of the United States, required to be complied with before an association shall be authorized to commence the business of banking.

Now therefore I, Charles G. Dawes, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, is authorized to commence the business of Banking as provided in Section Fifty-one hundred and sixty-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

SEAL — In testimony whereof witness my hand and Seal of office this twentieth day of August, 1901.

(Signed) CHARLES G. DAWES,
oct 31 Comptroller of the Currency.

No. 5943.

BLANCA'S ANSWER

By CLARK McFARLANE

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

THE place was among the rolling mesas of the Santa Ynez, not far from where Point Concepcion looks out into the sea, and the time was 40 years ago, when Spanish cattle dotted every valley from Monterey to San Diego, and many a low mesa was crowned by the group of adobe buildings that marked the abiding place of a Spanish don whose open-hearted hospitality and unimpeachable honor were his pride, and whose leagues of land and herds of cattle were his wealth.

"Not to-day, Juan," the Spanish girl was saying languidly.

"When, then?" asked the eager young Spaniard, as he clutched more tightly at the hand he held and looked searchingly up into Blanca's eyes.

But Blanca's eyes refused to be searched and wandered away down the hillside to where the cattle—her father's and Juan's—were grazing.

"To-morrow, Blanca? Will you say to-morrow?"

"Yes; to-morrow and to-morrow and to-morrow."

"And you mean, never, never, never," Juan ejaculated, angrily, as he sprang to his feet. "Each day I come and plead with you, and each day you repulse me with a cold disregard—whether studied or real, I cannot tell—that is maddening. I will come no more until you send—perhaps not even then."

"Depend upon it, sir, I will not send till I have more need than now," she answered, hotly; then added, with a fine irony, "perhaps not even then."

Juan had a bad temper and was not much given to patience with anyone; but the flash of his eye was nothing to Blanca. He might flash them if he liked, or he might not; it was all the same to her. At least, she sometimes tried to persuade herself it was. She almost succeeded in feeling that way now as she strolled homeward along the mesa's brow.

The sun had set and a blaze of glorious coloring flamed above the jagged outlines of the mountains for a few minutes, growing fainter and fainter until when Blanca gained the clump of olive trees at the foot of the path leading up to the house, darkness had fallen.

Hearing voices, she lingered a moment, not from desire to pry into other people's affairs, but because the warm, perfume-laden air sweeping gently up from the flowering pastures, bathing her cheeks so delicately, and the low hum of voices beating upon her ears so musically, fascinated her. How long she remained in this dreamy state she did not know. Suddenly she became aware that the meaning of the words spoken not far away was creeping into her mind. What was that they were saying?

"I tell you it is so. I heard the clink when he got on his horse and I saw the leather strap that holds the bag."

"But he is gone now."

"Gone, yes; but not far. Not five miles yet, and I know the way through the pass well. We can be on the road ahead of him before he goes half as far again."

"And then?"

"And then, you fool! Why, what have you there in your belt?"

The other laughed a mean, cowardly laugh, and Blanca heard them walk on in the darkness. The first speaker was Dominguez, a Mexican vaquero in the employ of Juan and her father, and the other voice Blanca recognized as that of a French sheep herder named Celestin. Could it be that Dominguez was plotting against the traveler who, late in the afternoon, had come to the house, craving their hospitality for an hour or two, while he rested his horse, and whom she had seen ride away not an hour ago?

The Mexican had long borne a shady reputation, and Juan, had he been as wise as he was brave, would have discharged him long ago. More than one affair of the road had been traced almost to his door, and now, to all appearances, he was plotting robbery and murder, his intended victim being his employer's guest who was to fall almost within their gates.

Blanca had but a single thought. The stranger must be saved. Her father was away, and Juan must do it. His arm was strong, his courage undoubted, his own sense of honor would lash him to the highest effort to prevent such a stain upon the good name of the rancho; and if he needed a spur, why Blanca's commands could furnish it. She hurried into the house.

"Here, Pedro; run quickly and call Juan. I want him instantly."

There was no mistaking his sister's tone, and the boy was off like a shot. Suddenly Blanca remembered the words with which Juan had parted from her. Under the stress of the moment she had forgotten that she and Juan were no longer friends, much less lovers.

"Stay, Pedro! Come back!" But Pedro was gone beyond recall. Blanca was vexed. She bit her nails and stamped her foot.

"I did not think I would call him so soon; I wish I had not—but no—he must come. I had to call him."

Pedro's step was at the door, his hand was on the knob; he stood before her, and alone. His cheeks were flushed; his eyes blazed.

"Blanca!" he almost shrieked. "He says he will not come till he is ready; perhaps not even then. Infame! To send such a mesage to my sister!" And he shook his small fist at an imaginary Juan with an earnestness and audacity that would have made Blanca smile at another time.

"He will not come—then the stranger may die." She flung herself in tears upon the couch. A moment of restless weeping and she rose again. Her hair was unbound, and the long black tresses draped over two lustrous eyes that flamed like jet black ornaments set in cheeks of ruby.

"Then I will go and ask him. On my knees I will plead for him to listen. Let it not be said that a daughter of Spain because of her pride, allowed one who had been her father's guest to die without an effort to save him."

Throwing a mantilla over her head, she started; but before the door was reached it opened to admit Juan. His heart, too, had triumphed over his pride. He could not remain away when she whom he loved had called.

"Blanca, I am here," he said, quietly.

Blanca made no attempt to conceal her joy at seeing him, and told in quick, nervous words what she had overheard. Juan grasped the situation instantly.

"Quick, Pedro; call Antonio and Carlos! They are at the corral now with the horses."

Blanca brushed back her hair and smiled, and Juan, prompt in love as in war, would have folded her in his arms, but with a gesture only slightly repellant she waved him off. He stood an instant looking into eyes that half contradicted the motion of the hand, decided that the present was not a time to be impetuous and sprang through the door to meet the horsemen.

"Juan!" she called after his retreating form.

"Yes, Blanca."

"You will be careful?"

"Yes."

"And come to me when you return?"

"Yes, Blanca; yes."

The hoofbeats of the horses as they swept down the hillside kept time to the beating of Blanca's heart.

Half an hour after Dominguez and his accomplice stole through the pass Juan, Antonio and Carlos were riding rapidly over the same ground. A little later the traveler was startled to see three mounted men in front of him. The four came together and held a brief consultation, after which a single horseman galloped forward.

Dominguez, lying behind a log at the roadside, heard him coming.

"Celestin, he comes; perform your part."

Celestin cast himself headlong in the dust of the road. The galloping horse came on, saw the body in the road, snorted and stood still. Celestin uttered a low moan. The horse reared and attempted to bolt.

"Oh, good stranger, help me."

"Are you hurt?"

"Oh, much, sir. My horse has thrown me. Dismount and give assistance."

The rider urged his horse as near the prostrate form as he dared, and bent forward as if to dismount, at the same time looking warily around. The stooping form of Dominguez crept round to the rear, and when the horseman dismounted on one side he came up on the other. As the horseman bent over the form of the shamming man he heard the catlike tread of Dominguez drawing closer. Instantly he released his hold upon the horse's bridle, and it sprang back quickly, revealing the Mexican leaning forward with uplifted knife. Quick as a flash the heel of the supposed traveler was on the throat of the prostrate sheepherder, and his left hand grasped the dagger arm of the astounded Mexican at the wrist.

"Juan de Torres!" shrieked the would-be assassin, trembling as if he had seen a ghost.

"Yes, Demonio; it is I. Surrender!"

Dominguez looked into Juan's pistol barrel for one nerve-withering instant; then his knife slipped from his fingers and he stood with downcast eyes, a thoroughly cowed man.

Juan discharged his pistol in air. From somewhere up the road came an answering shot and the hurrying hoofs of horses.

In the small hours of the morning the traveler went on his journey unscathed, while Juan rode homeward, followed by Antonio and Carlos, bringing the sullen captives, who knew full well what justice would be meted out to them.

Blanca was waiting to greet Juan. She met him by the clump of olive trees just as dawn was breaking. He threw his cloak about her and she took his arm. They strolled back along the crest of the mesa to a promontory jutting out over the valley. An ocean of mist lay beneath them. A flotilla of clouds sailed just above. The mountains towered behind, and over their crumbling ridges the scarlet herald of coming day was lurking.

Blanca was not indifferent now. Admiration, that quickener of woman's heart, had waked the slumbering passion in her breast, and when Juan saw the crimson light of dawn reflected in her eyes and blushing on her cheeks he asked again:

"Blanca, will you say, to-morrow?"

Blanca turned to the east, watched while the full-orbed glory of the sun burst above the battlemented heights of the Santa Ynez, then placed two white palms in Juan's and answered:

"To-day, to-morrow and forever."

Ownership of Bodies.

It has been decided by a court in Maine that a body belongs to the owner of the lot in which it is interred, and not to a parent, husband, wife or other relative who may wish to have it removed.—N. Y. Sun.

Why He Wept.

First Office Boy—Wot's Chimmy crying fer?

Second Office Boy—His grandmudder's dead and going ter be buried on a holiday!—Puck.

NEW GRAVITY WHEEL.

Its Inventor Thinks It Constitutes the Solution of the Secret of Perpetual Motion.

An improved automatic or self-acting gravity wheel is the modest title of an invention by Mr. Herbert Rose, of Australia, which has recently been patented all over the world, and which, if the claims of its inventor are realized, promises to supersede steam as a motive power.

The invention relates to the construction of a gravity wheel, with concentric rings, secured to arms radiating from the center. These arms or weights act as balance and driving levers and are so nicely arranged—those on the downward grade being two-thirds heavier than those on the upward grade in action—that a natural falling of the weights on the former grade insures perpetual motion.

ROSE GRAVITY WHEEL.
(Apparently It Is Capable of "Going On Forever.")

A cessation of the driving force can only be effected by preventing the weights from falling, and this is done by a very simple contrivance in the form of a spring which acts on all the weights simultaneously. Taking a wheel 40 feet in diameter and three feet wide, it is estimated that it will carry 1,050 weights and that the driving power will be equal to 1,443¾ tons from the center of the wheel. The cost of construction is about one-sixth the cost of machinery for steam power, and it is also claimed that the new motive power will reduce the working expenses 95 per cent.

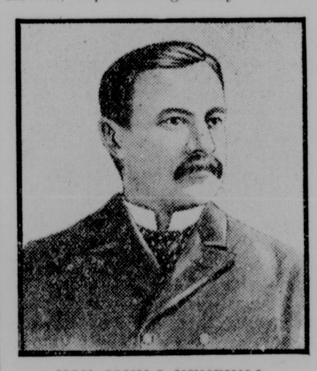
The working model, says the New York Herald, has been subjected to continuous tests, as it is apparently capable, like the brook, of "going on forever," which, of course, is what is expected of an invention claiming to constitute a solution of the secret of perpetual motion

JOHN J. HEMPHILL.

Ex-Congressman's Return to Active Politics Stirs the Democracy of South Carolina.

The return of John J. Hemphill to active South Carolina politics is attracting very widespread attention in the democratic party. When Tillman rose to power in South Carolina in 1890 Mr. Hemphill, who was then the representative in congress of the Fifth congressional district of the state, was one of the victims of the alliance and the reform movement, controlled and led by the senior senator. There is little question that he would have obtained national recognition as a party leader.

It was thought by the friends of Mr. Hemphill that between Senator McLaurin, representing many views in



HON. JOHN J. HEMPHILL.
(South Carolina Statesman Who Wants to Be a Senator.)

national affairs which are repugnant to the democracy, and Congressman A. C. Latimer, who is a typical representative of radical Bryanism in politics, Mr. Hemphill would have more than an ordinarily good chance just at this time to appeal to a large conservative element in the party. He has taken up his place in the quiet campaign which is being waged from county seat to county seat by the opponents of Senator McLaurin, and it seems to be now a foregone conclusion that he will be one of the chief features in the senatorial race in South Carolina next summer.

Alleged Sorcerers Burned.

Hanan, a village on the borders of Anatolia, was the scene of a horrible tragedy recently. There had been an epidemic in the district, and as its ravages ever became greater the villagers finally felt satisfied that it was the work of sorcerers. After a thorough investigation they arrested a man named Aslan and his sister, and openly charged them with being the direct cause of the disease. The two prisoners avowed their innocence, but the mob insisted that they had been heard using incantations and other evil spells, and that their sole object in doing so was to invoke an epidemic. Without delay sentence was pronounced. Aslan was burned alive on an improvised scaffold and his sister was mercilessly tortured with red-hot irons.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON.

Tells the Story of His Business Career to a Reporter.

His First Week's Pay Was One Dollar, and the Earning of It He Recalls as His Greatest Happiness.

"Something about me, outside yachting?" questioned Sir Thomas Johnstone Lipton, sinking back into the soft cushion of the forward deck house of the Erin.

"A great many will fancy that is like giving Hamlet with the principal character left out, will they not? I am sure they must think of me as a man whose life is bound up in challengers and racers; perhaps they will not be interested in its other side." He paused doubtfully. The visitor, a correspondent of the Philadelphia North American, hastened to assure the Irish knight that the reverse of the last statement was the truth.

"I was born in 1851," he said, "the year that saw the birth of the America's cup, and my birthplace was Glasgow, Scotland. My father and mother had come there some years before from the north of Ireland, and my father had started as a dealer in provisions in a small way. I was one of three children, but my brother and sister never reached adult age, dying when quite young.

"Up to the age of 14 I attended school, and when I was old enough I helped my father at odd hours. Then I wanted to do something for the family, and induced my parents to allow me to leave school and become a messenger for another shopkeeper."

He paused here as if thinking of something; then: "I do not know and I cannot conceive of any greater happiness than I experienced at the end of my first week's work. My hours were long and my work hard for so young a chap, but all that was forgotten when my master handed me one dollar as my week's wage.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON.
(Famous British Merchant and Owner of Yacht Shamrock.)

I ran with it home and gave it to my mother.

"I had other ambitions for my family as I grew older, and they were in a great measure realized, but I do not remember that any of them ever gave me half the pleasure or half the pride I felt over my first week's earnings.

"I remained with the merchant for a comparatively short time, and did this more because I could attend night class than anything else. I appreciated then the advantages of a good education as I do now, and every spare hour I had I spent in study.

"Besides, I already had begun to look about me, and I realized that in this country, over in America, there were opportunities for young men, and I wanted to try them.

"I came to America at the age of 18, and I was a steerage passenger. I had very little money—only enough to get me across and then to take me to Charleston, S. C. There, in looking about me for an opportunity for work, I heard of the rice fields and after a time I secured a position with the owner of one of them. I was not a laborer, as has been stated, but more of an accountant, and later an assistant manager. I worked hard, and after several years, when nearing my majority, I returned home with money in my pockets sufficient to engage in the provision business, as my father had done before me."

"Sir Thomas," interrupted the visitor, "how about the advertising at that time?"

A chuckle prefaced the anwer. "Oh! that was begun soon after I started in business.

"I tried hundreds of schemes. One of these was by placing cleverly drawn cartoons in my windows touching upon popular events or of a humorous character. One of these, I recall now, was a picture representing two men, one very stout and the other very thin. The lean man had a legend: 'I'm going to Lipton's;' the stout man was supposed to be saying: 'I am just coming from Lipton's.'

"Another was sending a drove of hogs through the streets with signs saying they were intended for Lipton. It attracted attention but was never repeated. The authorities thought that was a little too much."

Progress in South Carolina.

Prosperity is encouragingly progressive in South Carolina. Twenty years ago that state had 18 cotton mills, with 95,550 spindles—small mills, most of them. To-day there are within her borders 136 mills, containing 2,249,709 spindles and 63,612 looms.

MINE MULES ABOVE GROUND.

Immured for Years in Underground Passages They Are Dazzled by Daylight.

At the time of the recent strike of the mine firemen in the anthracite coal fields hundreds of mules from the various mines were brought to the surface. Most of the animals had not seen daylight for many years, and some of them had quite forgotten all they ever knew about pure air, green grass, and blue sky, says the Philadelphia Press.

It was a pathetic as well as an amusing sight to see these animals turned loose to graze in the fields. The daylight dazed them, and it was with difficulty that they could be forced from the cage and driven to the fields, and there their antics were pitifully humorous. Crowds lined the fences each day.

The mules, free from the driver and the whip, stood for a long time seemingly afraid to move. To them the soft springy ground, so different from the ties and rails and rocks of the mines, was insecure. The air, the grass, the space, the unbounded room to move, bewildered them. They walked slowly and with hoofs tapping the ground many times before a step was attempted, and it was hours and sometimes days before they gained sufficient confidence to run and tumble and roll. But when they realized that the strange surroundings were harmless and actually enjoyable, they reveled in their new-found freedom, heehawed, kicked up their heels, and gamboled very much in the manner of the schoolboy set free after a long and arduous school term.

The grass was the greatest mystery to them. Instinct doubtless told them it was good to eat, smelled inviting, but it was so strange, so new that it was long before they gained courage to nibble and to eat it.

Air and light made many of the mules study for hours before they knew that the novel world into which they had been raised was not a thing of mystery, and that they felt better by breathing and could see better after the novelty had worn off than they ever could see in the dark and narrow passages of the mines.

The extent of the fields, too, was a source of great wonderment to them. Here they did not knock their heads against the roof, for there was no roof; nor graze their sides against the rib, for there was no rib; only space above and about them, unlimited, incomprehensible space, a new, strange thing, with which most of them had to get acquainted by degrees.

Those who had enjoyed the freedom for a day, as they met the newcomers, bumped into them, to see them lose their balance on the yielding ground, rolled under their noses, kicked up their heels, and played with them much as a boy swimmer will play with a younger one.

In the days which the strike lasted most of the mules experienced new sensations which they may never repeat, for they were hustled after their brief freedom down into the dark depths and narrow iron-paved passages where their only light is the faint flicker of the miner's lamp, their air the gas and smoke-stained heaviness of the mine, their food the hay and oats which taste little like the green, fresh grass, and their gamboling confined to the narrow space of a five-foot stall.

GOOD WORDS FOR NEW BREAD.

Fresh Loaves Not So Injurious to the Digestion as Is Generally Supposed.

A writer in the London Lancet disputes the commonly received opinion regarding the injuriousness of new bread. He says stale bread, when broken between the teeth, resolves itself into gritty particles, which, if they were not softened with saliva, would be next to impossible to swallow, consequently man thoroughly masticates stale bread and in doing so impregnates it with saliva, which partially digests and adapts it to the absorptive action further on in the alimentary tract.

But new bread, being soft and plastic, is more apt to be swallowed without mastication, or, in other words, bolted. It is in this act, he thinks, that the injury exists and not in the character of the bread. Hot rolls would be just as digestible as stale ones if they were properly masticated. He refers in this connection to the dog as a teacher of an important physiological lesson. This animal bolts meat, but eats bread, because the mouth parts are able to do little toward the digestion of meat beyond reducing it to a convenient form for swallowing. He, however, seems to overlook the fact that the dog's teeth are illy constructed for chewing, and that this is most likely the reason for his expeditious disposal of meat.

Another curious fact which he calls attention to is that stale bread is not more dry than new. This is shown by submitting stale bread for a short time to a high temperature. Under such conditions it becomes soft and plastic, regaining its newness, and this despite the fact that some moisture must be driven off in the operation. He thinks this is explainable on the supposition that in new bread there is free water present, but that in stale bread, while it is still there, it is in a state of true chemical combination. In general, he concludes, it is a sound physiological plan to thoroughly masticate every morsel of food before swallowing it.

Not to Be Caught.

Sponger—What is that expression? Between the "what" of a dilemma?

Kraft—No, you don't! You want me to say "horns," and you think that'll remind me to ask you to have one.—Philadelphia Record.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

The United States produced as much borax as the rest of the world combined.

Switzerland exported last year 3,086,777 silver watches, 2,366,426 nickel and 800,258 gold watches.

Utah has more than doubled its manufacturing plants since 1890, the number increasing from 530 to 1,400.

Oil has been struck at Constantinople in the house of a Jew. An English company is going to develop the wells.

Among retail dealers it is said that the demand for meerschaum pipes and holders has greatly decreased in the last few years. French briar has supplanted it in popularity.

M. Flammarion, the French astronomer, declares that the study of astronomy is conducive to logevity, since it calms the human passions. He points out that the French Astronomical society, composed of about 2,500 members, possess one member who is 105 years old, a dozen who are over 90 and a very large percentage of octogenarians.

E. A. Martel, the French explorer of caverns, whose discoveries underground have attracted much attention, reports that he has found in the department of Hautes Alpes a cavity in the form of a "natural well" whose depth exceeds that of any other known. He has sounded it to the depth of about 1,027 feet, but the actual bottom has not been reached.

Washington is the principal lumber state in the union. It has an estimated two hundred billion feet of merchantable timber, an amount that would allow of cutting at the present rate for 100 years before its exhaustion. But the same wasteful methods prevail there which have denuded some of the older states of their timber, and there is the same lack of provision for the future.

DISCONTENT IN ICELAND.

Islanders Want Larger Measure of Self-Government Than They Possess.

Even Denmark is having trouble with her dependencies. The latest murmur of discontent comes from Iceland, where the inhabitants are asking a greater measure of home rule, says a recent dispatch. The only compromise Denmark offers is that a new councilor be granted the Icelanders, who shall have a seat in the Danish parliament or rigsdag. This is supposed to be what the Danish government means by "a moderate extension of home rule." But this is just what the Icelanders do not want, as they think that it would mean a gradual lessening of the power of their own althing.

According to the constitution granted Iceland during the visit of the king of Denmark to the island in 1874 it is stipulated that Iceland shall be "an inalienable part of the Danish kingdom." This has been interpreted by successive governments and parliaments to mean that Iceland is a mere department or stifte and not a separate state, entirely independent of the Danish parliament, though under the same king as Denmark. Since the adoption of the constitution, the Danish interpretation of which does not satisfy the claims of Iceland to autonomy, no efforts of the Icelanders to obtain increased administrative powers have been conceded.

A committee of the althing is now in Copenhagen for the purpose of getting the king to intercede in their behalf and free the althing from its dependence on the Danish ministry and parliament, and have Iceland only to do with the king himself or his representative in Reykjavik.

In Copenhagen it is said that the spirit of independence of the Icelanders is enhanced at this moment from the fact that its people wish to be freed from the Danish tariff which prevails there and under which various Danish monopolies are flourishing, and that should this be done English commodities would completely drive the Danish from the island and the English would soon obtain control of all Icelandic industries.

Making Laws During the Night.

There is a very marked difference in the working methods of the United States congress and the British parliament which strike the visitor from one country to the other. Some of the things that seem peculiar to the American are the absence of clerks in the British assembly and the practice of members in wearing hats during the session. Some recent proposals that the hour of convening the British parliament be changed call attention to the striking difference between the working methods of that body and our own congress. Parliamentary sessions begin late and last far into the night. The parliamentary hours, indeed, have undergone a good many changes and it is only 12 years since a radical change was made in them—the house meeting at three instead of four, and adjourning, nominally, at 12 instead of at some hour in the morning.—Chicago Chronicle.

Slightly Negative.

Uncle Ephraim's rusty hat droops humbly over his black and wrinkled forehead; his coat pockets are sagging away from his coat; one knee is covered with a blue patch, the other one with a white one sewed on with black thread; his shoes are full of holes, and it would puzzle anyone to declare the original color of any article of his apparel. He pulls off the drooping hat as he looks over my garden fence, and gives me a smile that makes me feel better for an hour. "Miss Alice," he asks, cheerfully, "you don't know nobody that wantster hire nobody to do nothin' fer 'em dis mawnin', does you?"—Harper's Magazine.

HORSE-POWER PUMP.

The Device Here Described May Seem Complicated, But in Reality It Is Simple.

The plans herewith shown are of a homemade contrivance for pumping water with a farm horse. An upright shaft, a, supports a large cog wheel, b, which fits into a smaller gear wheel, c, with cogs outside of rim. The wheel, c, is attached to shaft, d. On the opposite end of shaft, d, is another wheel, e, which is keyed fast. There are different holes in wheel, e, to make different length strokes of pump rod, f. The wheel, e, turns as a cog into the wheel on the end of plunger, f, on the force pump, g. There is a joint in f; the part above the joint being a pitman, the part below a sucker rod. Pump g stands in reservoir, h, dug and walled up as a cistern.

HOME-MADE PUMP POWER.

In the center of this reservoir is a tubular well pipe. The well is pumped by windmill and the windmill may be detached and this horse power attached to the windmill pump rods. Any length of hose may be attached to the pump spout and convey water wherever required. A lever, k, is attached to shaft, a, as shown, with whiffletree to attach a horse. A derrick post is shown at l, and made firm by braces, m. The support, n, is for the upright shaft, a, and support to oo. The windmill pump and rods are not shown.—J. A. Sheffield, in Farm and Home.

WAR AGAINST INSECTS.

Unless It Be Waged Continuously There Is Danger That the Pests Will Ruin Us.

Dr. L. O. Howard, entomologist of the department of agriculture, has just made public some startling statements of the property losses caused by insects. He believes they aggregate over $300,000,000 a year. Other agricultural experts have made higher estimates, and in years of unusual insect activity the total loss has been doubtless much greater. The Rocky mountain locust, or western grasshopper, for example, in 1874 ate up $100,000,000 worth of the growing crops of Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska. The chinch-bug alone, according to Prof. Webster, has eaten $330,000,000 worth of corn and wheat in the western states since 1850—an average appetite of $7,000,000 a year.

As for the mosquito, apart from the losses believed to be due to its "pernicious activity" in the spread of yellow fever and malaria, it is an immense depreciator of real-estate values. A New Jersey newspaper recently estimated that its extermination in that one state alone would add to its real-estate valuation not less than $100,000,000.

It certainly would pay to wage a continuous war of extermination against all these insects.—N. Y. World.

Care of Dairy Utensils.

The ordinary cleansing that is given to pails, cans, strainers and other dairy utensils takes out only a portion of bacteria. Just to the extent that carelessness prevails in this part of the dairy work, just to that extent will these utensils contain a larger number of organisms. The kind of utensils has considerable to do with the ease with which they are cleaned. Wooden pails are to be avoided. Tinware is now so generally used that but little need be said as to the other kinds of vessels, but much of the tinware now on the market is so imperfectly constructed as to shelter germ life. The sharp reentering angles to be noted in pails, and the open seams in the sides, are harbors of refuge for the bacillus in its fight for existence. —H. L. Russell, in Farmers' Review.

Crushed Shells for Poultry.

Oyster and clam shells are easily broken when heated in a stove. They do not answer as well when ground as when pounded, the rough, irregular pieces being preferred. The small shells on the seashore are now collected and sold for poultry, and as they need no preparation, being in excellent form for use, they are used by a large number of poultrymen. Where shells cannot be obtained pounded bones, old mortar, burned limestone, chalk or wall plaster may be used.

The Value of Breeding.

The real dairy farmer demands of every calf that he intends to rear that it be "well born." He is wise enough to understand the value of heredity. He proposes to give the calf, male or female, all the advantage that comes from being well born. He does this because it is to his own advantage. This is not saying that every calf that is well born will turn out a profitable animal.

OYSTER SHELL ROADS.

They Are Quite Popular in New Jersey, Although Their Whiteness Dazzles the Eyes.

Driving, cycling and automobiling tourists who return from their outings on the South Jersey pikes this summer are unusually enthusiastic in their praises of these shell roads, writes the Philadelphia Press.

The process of constructing these roads is of special interest because of its simplicity. There is no expense of digging out the roadbed and filling it first with large stones and then with a smoother top dressing as in the construction of a macadamized road. The shells are simply unloaded from the boats (which bring them in great quantities from near-by oyster fields to Buena Vista wharf), and are then carted out along the roads until a hollow is found, or any spot that needs repairing, and are then unceremoniously dumped and left without any process of pounding or smoothing, until broken up and leveled off by the passing carriages and farm wagons.

In constructing a shell road from the beginning, load after load of the oyster shells are dumped in an irregular bank all along the center of the roadway; then with a road scraper a bank of earth is thrown up along the edge to keep the shells from scattering. This leaves a narrow, smooth space over which the scraper has passed along the edge of the bank of shells; and as this is used for driving as long as the weather is dry it would seem that the bank of sharp shells would never be driven into smooth, white firmness. But wait until there is a heavy storm, and the smooth road at the side becomes a mass of heavy mud and sand, then the rough shell bank is gladly mounted, and although it is decidedly rough at first, the heavy country driving and carting of farming produce soon crushes the shells and forces them into the rain soaked soil beneath. A second or third banking of the shells (scattering them further over the sides of the roadbed each time), with this process repeated, forms a roadbed that is hard and firm to the depth of a foot or more and beautifully smooth and white.

When these shell roads extend along great stretches of pines, with even rows of cedar and fir trees lining the roadway (as they do throughout many parts of New Jersey), one is reminded of the palmline drives so alluringly pictured in views of "our new possessions."

BEANS IN THE FIELD.

A System of Stacking That Will Prevent Injury to the Crop and Keep It Dry.

Beans are a crop that has to be stacked up in the field to dry before housing in the barn or granary. The small, high stacks as ordinarily made, however, are in danger of being blown over by the wind, and in greater danger of absorbing moisture from the earth. The best way by which this can be avoided is to use the combined foundation and support presented in the illustration. Fig. 1 shows a long stake driven firmly into the ground, near the grown crop, and cross boards nailed to either side a short distance above the surface, with support slats on top of these. Beans piled up about the central stake are proof then against any wind, while no moisture can injure the bottom. Lastly, if a bit of cloth is thrown over the top and tied in place, as suggested in Fig. 2, the crop will be quite safe, whatever the weather is. Peas can also be harvested with complete success in the same manner.—Fred O. Sibley, in Ohio Farmer.

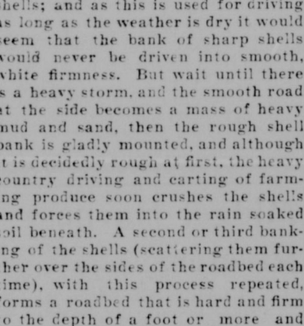

FIG. 1 FIG. 2

STACK FOR FIELD BEANS.

Prevention of Clover Bloat.

Clover bloat can always be prevented by keeping the cattle off the clover while it is wet with rain or dew, says Prairie Farmer. The usual cause of death when an animal is bloated is congestion of the lungs from pressure of the stomach against them. The flesh of such animal should be darker in color from the stoppage of blood in the small vessels than the flesh of an animal butchered, but I do not believe it would poison anyone to eat the flesh of such animals. The best remedy for clover bloat is to make an opening in the upper part of the left flank with a pocketknife and thrust the fingers into the opening. Then the gas will escape at the sides of the finger. Or use some hollow tube to put into the opening.

Some Corn Crop Figures.

The official crop report on corn is variously interpreted. The statistician of the Chicago Daily Trade Bulletin deduces an estimate of 1,241,000,000 bushels; the statistician of the New York produce exchange, 1,393,000,000 bushels, and the Cincinnati Price Current, 1,385,000,000 bushels. Other estimates range as low as 1,100,000,000 bushels. Take your choice; but it may be well to remember a pretty good supply of old corn, a decreased exportation and less feeding, when about to sacrifice stock to save corn for the market.—National Stockman.

GRAIN FOR THE COWS.

A Profitable Feeding System Which Is Gaining in Favor Among Progressive Dairymen.

The time will soon come when many a dairyman will be asking himself whether it will pay to feed grain to his cows while they are in the pasture. Some will not be worried about the question at all, having already decided that it is folly to give cows grain when they have grass, and being very sure that grandfather never thought of such a thing. In fact, they are a little doubtful whether it pays to feed grain in the winter, and they usually do not give milk more than seven months in the year, anyway. During these seven months they are mostly on grass till they begin to dry up, and after that, of course, it will not pay to feed out good grain. These are the men who say farming does not pay, and that there is no profit in keeping cows, which is very likely to be true, as these cows seldom yield more than 2,000 pounds a year. There is another class who will not be a moment in doubt about it. They will feed grain both summer and winter, excepting during about a month when the cows go dry before calving, and possibly will give a little bran each day then. During the eleven months that they are in milk they expect each cow to produce at least 6,000 pounds of milk, which will be rich in butter fat, for a fat cow gives fat milk more surely than she has fat calves. They will get more income from one cow than the other class do from three, excepting possibly the manure from one well-fed cow is worth about as much as that from three that are poorly fed. It will be less work to handle it, even as it is less work to take care of one cow than three. Those who are in doubt about grain feeding have only to decide which class they prefer to belong to. For ourselves we have no doubt. We knew that when we fed grain to them every day in the year, if we did not get more milk from each cow in June than those who trusted to pasture alone we got more in the fall, and our cows were in milk three or four months longer and smooth, and when we wanted to fatten one that had grown old we could do it with but a little increase in the grain feed, as she began to dry off, and the beef was better than that of a cow that had been kept in poorer condition, having the fat better mixed with the lean meat.—American Cultivator.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Farmers Will Hereafter Receive Them Wherever Free Delivery Has Been Established.

Prof. Moore's dream of carrying his daily weather forecasts to the farmers of the country in the traveling post offices of the rural free delivery system is about to be realized. Very soon after the free delivery system was put in operation Prof. Moore saw that it could be utilized to furnish farmers with the same information about the weather that the residents of cities enjoy through reading their morning newspapers. He took up his idea with Postmaster General Smith and the postmaster general discussed it with Superintendent Machen, of the free delivery service. After weeks of investigation and preparation it has been decided to install the service. The rural carriers will distribute regular forecast cards, which undertake to tell what the weather will be for the succeeding 24 hours, and in addition their wagons will be fitted with apparatus that will permit of the display of flag signals such as fly from half a dozen prominent buildings in Chicago. Farmers can tell by merely looking out for the wagon as it travels along the country roads what the forecast is by observing the flags, but they will also have the simple and more satisfactory card which states in plain terms what the observers believe. It is a significant fact that the farmers of the country have been demanding that this service be extended to them. —Chicago Daily Sun.

MILK PAIL SUPPORT.

Handy Frame for Holding the Pail Safely Between the Knees of the Operator.

The little illustration shows a frame for holding a milk pail between the knees of the operator while milking. It consists of two hoops or straps of iron, a a, fastened together by means of a long strip in the form of a U, with the ends curved outward and downward so as to fit over the knees. It can be made of any desired size so as to accommodate the size of the pail.—William Einsel, in Orange Judd Farmer.

MILK PAIL SUPPORT.

That the dairy pays one man and does not pay another on an adjoining farm is evidence that the fault is in the man. One could have no better place to go to school than to strive to locate the cause of the success of the one and the failure of the other.

He Was Irish.

It happened at one of the Baltimore police stations. The prisoner, a long-haired hobo son of Erin, lounged against the bar of justice. The justice glared at him over his spectacles.

"What's his name?" he inquired of the lieutenant.

"Michael O'Hara, squire; charged with being drunk on the street."

"Um. Foreign born," mused the justice. "Sprechen sie Englischen, O'Hara?"

The prisoner straightened up in his soleless shoes, and, with the dignity of generations of kings, said:

"Squire, it's an American citizen I am from me birth, being born in Oirlwyland. I want me case thried by an American judge, an' not be a foreign dago, with a spache that a Christian can't understand."

"Oh, you're Irish. I thought your name had a German sound," said the squire, more humbly. "Case dismissed, lieutenant."—Baltimore Herald.

On the Verge of Collapse.

"I say, boss, have pity on me," said the tramp, accosting a gentleman on the street; "let me have a dollar, will yer, I haven't drawn anything but a sober breath for a week."—Yonkers Statesman.

'Twas Ever Thus.

"Oh, yes, he adores me. I've known it for a fortnight."

"Then what's bothering you?"

"What's bothering me? Why, I've got to wait for him to find it out!"—Brooklyn Life.

In a Class All Alone.

He—What kind of a woman is that beautiful Mrs. Swift?

She—Well, with one exception, she makes every man she meets sorry that he isn't her husband.

"And the one exception?"

"Oh, he's sorry that he is." — Chicago Daily News.

Fish Dies from Sunstroke.

The hot spell which has visited Europe, and which still hangs over Sweden, has been felt by the fish, writes a correspondent from Malmo. When the temperature was at its highest a number of dead fish were observed floating about near Ronneaa. The fishermen say that the water was too hot for the fish. They state as the fish approach the surface of the water they become more and more sluggish, and lose the power of motion, until, coming directly under the sun's rays, they roll over dead—sunstruck, in fact.—Detroit Free Press.

Two Views of It.

Much depends upon whether the point of view is feminine or masculine.

"Will she have him?" he idly asked as they noticed the devoted couple on the beach.

"Can she get him?" was her more pointed query.—Chicago Post.

If every poor man were a philanthropist, the rich ones would not be needed.—Puck.

Query.—Was the first statesman a hypocrite or the first hypocrite a statesman?—Puck.

It isn't that we are anxious to die rich, but a good many of us would like to live rich right up to the last minute.—Puck.

Sue—"She has designs on him." Belle—"Since when?" Sue—"Oh, ever since he consented to wear a necktie that she embroidered."—Philadelphia Record.

"Why do those men step so high and so softly? Are they egg dancers?" "No, my dear. That's the new Brooklyn bridge walk."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Brother Bob—"Jack Wrounds is a regular all-around 'good fellow.'" His Sister—"Gracious! I never suspected he was as bad as that."—Philadelphia Press.

Not Complimentary to Medicine.—Doctor—"Brain fag, overworked, you should have called me in sooner." Wife—"While he had any sense left, he wouldn't have a doctor."—Moonshine.

"You don't visit Miss Hoitytoity any more." "Haven't seen her for six months." "And don't you get word from her?" "Hardly. The last I got was 'No, sir.'"—Philadelphia Times.

Jones—"Hello, Timmid, what's the matter with you? I never heard you stammer so before." Timmid—"No; It's a habit I've recently contracted. I've been trying to propose to a girl for the last month or so."—Philadelphia Record.

Schemer. — Dick—"Everybody's remarking how soft you are on that wealthy Miss Wilfel. What are your chances with her?" Jack—"Very promising. She likes me pretty well, and I'm doing my best now to get her parents dead-set against me."—Philadelphia Press.

A METHODIST BISHOP GIVES PE-RU-NA GREAT CREDIT.

BISHOP GRANT, OF INDIANAPOLIS.

Writes His Recommendation for the Famous Catarrh Remedy, Pe-ru-na.

The day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication. This remains true to-day of most proprietary medicines. But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low station that none hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The following letters from pastors who use Peruna speak for themselves:

Rev. E. G. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of Greensboro, Ga., writes:

"My little boy had been suffering for some time with catarrh of the lower bowels. Other remedies had failed, but after taking two bottles of Peruna the trouble almost entirely disappeared. For this special malady I consider it well nigh a specific."—Rev. E. G. Smith.

Rev. A. S. Vaughn, Eureka Springs, Ark., says: "I had been prostrated by congestive chills and was almost dead; as soon as able to be about, I commenced the use of Peruna. I took five bottles; my strength returned rapidly and I am now enjoying my usual health."—Rev. A. S. Vaughn.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Bishop A. Grant, of Indianapolis, Ind., writes the following letter:

Indianapolis, Indiana.
3349 N. Pennsylvania Street.
Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:
Gentlemen—"I have been using Peruna for catarrh and can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone who wants a good medicine."—A. Grant.

Prominent members of the clergy are giving Peruna their unqualified endorsement. These men find Peruna especially adapted to preserve them from catarrh of the vocal organs which has always been the bane of public speakers, and general catarrhal debility incident to the sedentary life of the clergyman. Among the recent utterances of noted clergymen on the curative virtues of Peruna is the above one from Bishop Grant.

WE SHIP DIRECT TO

Contractors and Consumers

LUMBER LATH SHINGLES

MOULDINGS, SASH, DOORS, Etc.,
AT WHOLESALE PRICES.

COMPLETE HOUSE BILLS. COMPLETE BARN BILLS.

Permission given to examine grades before payment. We ask only satisfactory guarantee that we will get our money when stock is found as bought. SEND IN YOUR LISTS FOR ESTIMATES.

JOHN E. BURNS LUMBER COMPANY,

Long Distance Phones: MONROE 211, MONROE 288, MONROE 290.

40 W. Chicago Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

SOZODONT insures your Teeth 25¢

At all Stores, or by mail for the price. HALL & RUCKEL, New York.

ABSOLUTE SECURITY.

Genuine

Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Must Bear Signature of

Brent Good

See Fac-Simile Wrapper Below.

Very small and as easy to take as sugar.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

FOR HEADACHE.
FOR DIZZINESS.
FOR BILIOUSNESS.
FOR TORPID LIVER.
FOR CONSTIPATION.
FOR SALLOW SKIN.
FOR THE COMPLEXION

Price 25 Cents | Purely Vegetable. | GENUINE MUST HAVE SIGNATURE. Brent Good

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

IN WET WEATHER A WISE MAN WEARS TOWER'S FISH BRAND OILED WATERPROOF CLOTHING

BLACK OR YELLOW

WILL KEEP YOU DRY NOTHING ELSE WILL

TAKE NO SUBSTITUTES · CATALOGUES FREE · SHOWING FULL LINE OF GARMENTS AND HATS

A. J. TOWER CO., BOSTON, MASS. 46

RAG DOLLS

To any little girl who will send us 10 cents, together with the names and addresses of (3) little friends, we will send, postpaid, one of our CRY BABY DOLLS.

ART FABRIC MILLS, Department C. C. 40 White Street, NEW YORK.

WANTED GENTLEMAN or LADY AGENT, only one in each town, to SELL TEA at importer's prices. WRITE QUICKLY to HOME TEA CO., 22 Pearl Street, New York.

STARK TREES best by Test—77 YEARS. LARGEST Nursery. FRUIT BOOK free. We PAY CASH WANT MORE SALESMEN Weekly STARK BROS, Louisiana, Mo.; Dansville, N. Y.; Etc

PENSIONS on age, disability and Widowhood; P. I. or any U. S. Service. LAWS FREE. A. W. McCORMICK & SONS, Cincinnati, O.; Washington, D. C.

A. N. K.—C 1882

OPIUM WHISKY and other drug habits cured. We want the worst cases. Book and references FREE. Dr. B. M. WOOLLEY, Box 3, Atlanta, Ga.

BEFORE.

A CASE OF BAD BOWELS

Are you happy? Not if your liver and bowels don't work. Happiness depends on the bowels. Every time you eat, you put into your body not only good material for repairs and fuel, but a mass of useless stuff that has to be removed promptly or it will clog your machinery, poison your blood, throw your liver out of gear, and make you act mean to those you love. Your stomach is sour, your skin yellow, your breath offensive, and you hate yourself and all mankind. Winter or summer it's all the same, when you are unclean inside, you are unhappy and so is everybody near you. The cure is pleasant, quick, easy, cheap, never fails. Cascarets, the world's greatest bowel cleaner and liver tonic. Cascarets are guaranteed to cure constipation, lazy liver, bad blood, bad breath, sour stomach, biliousness, and all summer and winter bowel troubles. Don't be unhappy—buy a box today. All druggists, 10c, 25c, 50c. Write for health booklet and free sample. Address Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago or New York.

AFTER.

CURED BY Cascarets CANDY CATHARTIC

BUSINESS LOCALS.

Car load feed and flour just arrived at Eagle Store, Grantsville.

Naylor still has some fertilizer for wheat on hand. 28 3*

WHEAT FERTILIZER at Dixon & Kelso's cheap. Will take good potatoes at 75c bushel. 28 2*

FOR SALE—One eight year old dark bay horse. 1250 pounds. Will work in all harness. H. CRUTZBURG.

You can buy men's, boys' and children's clothing cheaper at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, than any place in town. 27 8*

FOR SALE.—$125 cash, horse, phaeton and harness complete; attractive outfit: gentle family horse. Apply to Dr. J. S. Stone, Mt. Lake Park. 1*

Take your produce to N. Broadwater, who pays always the highest price.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

If you want a bargain in a nice family surrey or carriage you can get it at A. D. Naylor's. Closing them out for this season. Special low price and good terms. 28 3*

Buy the famous Cinderella Double Heater Cook Stoves and Ranges at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, Md.

When you want a pleasant physic try the new remedy, Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are easy to take and pleasant in effect. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at drug stores.

N. Broadwater, Grantsville, has just returned from the city with the largest and most complete line of goods ever brought to town.

Go to Eagle Store, Grantsville, for ladies' tailor-made suits, jackets and capes. 27 8t*

Chamberlain's Pain Balm applied to a cut, bruise, burn, scald or like instantly allay the pain and will heal the parts in less time than any other treatment. Unless the injury is very severe it will not leave a scar. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism, sprains, swellings and lameness. For sale by all druggists.

The laws of health require that the bowels move once each day and one of the penalties for violating this law is piles. Keep your bowels regular by taking a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets when necessary and you will never have that severe punishment inflicted upon you. Price, 25 cents. For sale by all druggists.

FOR SALE:—The Lutheran parson age, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

Dr. D. O. McKinley will be at McHenry September 30; Sines P. O., October 1 to 4 p. m. on 2nd; Oct. 3 at Mrs. Ellen Lohr's, near Crellin; at J. P. Lipscomb's, near Kearney, Oct. 4 to 3 p. m. on 5th; at Mrs. Wm. Rodeheaver's, near Thayerville, Oct. 7; at Hoyes, Oct. 8; at Friendsville, Oct. 9 and 10. Teeth extracted without pain. 28 3

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Thirty Years of Suffering.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Halloway, of French Camp, Miss. "I had spent so much time and money and suffered so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effects of the diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor, could not even travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer I have. For sale by all druggists.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place five miles north of Oakland on or about August 25 two hogs, both barrows, crops off left ears and holes in righ ears.

Owner will please come forward, pay all costs and damages and take same away.

27 3t ISAAC A. PAUGH.

What it Cures

COUGHS, BRONCHITIS, RAWNESS,
COLDS, LOSS OF VOICE, SORENESS
HOARSENESS, LARYNGITIS, TICKLING.

PINE AND TERPIN COUGH SYRUP

Is the new remedy that is astounding the medical world with the rapidity and permanency of its cures—it never fails—one dose relieves while a few more cures—price, 25 cents a bottle.

LOGAN DRUG COMPANY,
At all Druggists. WHEELING, W. VA.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, at the January Session in the year nineteen hundred of the General Asembly of Maryland, bills were passed proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State:

First.—By amending section 9 of Article 5, of the Constitution of the State.

Second.—By amending section 4 of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State.

Third.—By amending section 2 of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State, which said bills and amendments are in words following, to wit:

CHAPTER 185.

AN ACT to amend section nine, of Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, herein and as by law provided, it shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section nine of said Article.

SECTION 9. The State's Attorney shall perform such duties and receive such fees and commissions or salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, as are now or may hereafter be prescribed by law; and if any State's Attorney shall receive any other fee or reward than such as is or may be allowed by law, he shall, on conviction thereof, be removed from office; provided that the State's Attorney for Baltimore city shall receive an annual salary of forty-five hundred dollars, and shall have power to appoint one deputy, at an annual salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, and such other assistants at such annual salaries not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars each, as the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City may authorize and approve; all of said salaries to be paid out of the fees of the said State's Attorney's office, as has heretofore been practiced.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted, That the foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, shall be, at the next general election for members of the General Assembly, to be held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14, of the Constitution; and at said election the vote on said proposed amendment shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment" or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election one return shall be made to the Governor of the vote on said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Approved April 5, 1900.

CHAPTER 432.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this State.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and instead of section four of Article 3, of said Constitution.

SECTION 4. As soon as may be after the taking and publishing of the National Census of 1900, or after the enumeration of the population of this State, under the authority thereof, there shall be an apportionment of representation in the House of Delegates, to be made on the following basis, to wit: Each of the several counties of the State, having a population of eighteen thousand souls or less, shall be entitled to two delegates; and every county having a population of over eighteen thousand and less than twenty-eight thousand souls, shall be entitled to three delegates; and every county having a population of twenty-eight thousand and less than forty thousand souls, shall be entitled to four delegates; and every county having a population of forty thousand and less than fifty-five thousand souls, shall be entitled to five delegates; and every county having a population of fifty-five thousand souls and upwards, shall be entitled to six delegates and no more; and each of the four legislative districts of the City of Baltimore shall be entitled to the number of delegates to which the largest county shall or may be entitled under the aforegoing apportionment, and the General Assembly shall have the power to provide by law, from time to time, for altering and changing the boundaries of the existing legislative districts of the City of Baltimore, so as to make them as near as may be of equal population; but said district shall always consist of contiguous territory.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, shall, at the next election for members of the General Assembly of this State, to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14, of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 14, of the Constitution.

Approved April 7, 1900.

CHAPTER 469.

AN ACT to amend section two of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section two of Article 3 of said Constitution.

2. The City of Baltimore shall be divided into four legislative districts as near as may be of equal population and of contiguous territory, and each of said legislative districts of Baltimore City, as they may from time to time be laid out, in accordance with the provisions hereof, and each county in the State, shall be entitled to one Senator, who shall be elected by the qualified voters of the said legislative districts of Baltimore City, and of the counties of the State, respectively, and shall serve for four years from the date of his election, subject to the classification of Senators hereafter provided for.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall at the next election for members of the General Assembly of this State, to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Approved April 7, 1900.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, JOHN WALTER SMITH, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the provisions of section one of Article fourteen of the Constitution of the State, do hereby order and direct that a copy of said bills proposing said Constitutional Amendments be published in at least two newspapers in each county where so many may be published, and where not more than one may be published, then in that newspaper, and in three newspapers in the City of Baltimore, one of which shall be in the German language, once a week for at least three months preceding the next ensuing general election (which said general election will be held on Tuesday, the 5th day of November, nineteen hundred and one,) at which the said proposed amendments shall be submitted to the qualified voters of the State for adoption or rejection, so that each amendment shall be voted on separately.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of Maryland.

Done at the City of Annapolis on the 12th day of June, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and one.

[SEAL] JOHN WALTER SMITH,
Governor of Maryland.

By order of the Governor:
WILFRED BATEMAN,
Secretary of State.

Some Reasons

Why You Should Insist on Having

EUREKA HARNESS OIL

Unequaled by any other.
Renders hard leather soft.
Especially prepared.
Keeps out water.
A heavy bodied oil.

HARNESS

An excellent preservative.
Reduces cost of your harness.
Never burns the leather; its
Efficiency is increased.
Secures best service.
Stitches kept from breaking.

OIL

Is sold in all
Localities

Manufactured by
Standard Oil Company.

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

Maryland's School of Technology. Four Courses of Instruction.

AGRICULTURAL MECHANICAL
SCIENTIFIC CLASSICAL

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified at once to enter upon life's work; graduates in Mechanical Engineering and Chemistry this year, all secured positions upon graduation. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—bath rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, $154.00 for scholastic year. Catalogue giving full particulars sent on application. Daily visit by physician to college.

Attention is called to the Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture. Particulars sent upon application.

Term commences September 23rd. Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER,
President M. A. C.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.

Money loaned on Mortgage.

Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.

Agent for the Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.

☞ Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, that the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

FRANCIS H. RAVENSCROFT,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 20th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1901.

R. A. RAVENSCROFT, Administrator,
Accident, Md.

EXECUTORS' NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, have obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters Testamentary on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber on or before the 15th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

W. W. FRAZEE,

Given under our hands this 10th day of September, 1901.

ELMIE FRAZEE,
OLIVER P. FRAZEE,
Executors,
Markleysburg, Pa.

EXECUTOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, Letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

JACOB SHARTZER,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 10th day of September, 1901.

LEONARD SHARTZER, Executor,
27 3* Accident, Md.

ADMINISTRATORS' NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the Subscribers, of Garrett county, Maryland, have obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Somerset county, Pennsylvania, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscribers, on or before the 15th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

HANSON WALTER,

Given under my hand this 9th day of September, 1901.

ELIZA JANE FAUCETT,
GEORGE HENRY WALTER,
Administrators,
27 3* Selbysport, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

[JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

I HAVE PURCHASED

THE OAKLAND COAL YARD

of Mr. D. L. Conneway and will continue the business. I will keep constantly on hand a large supply of

HARD AND SOFT

COAL,

KINDLING WOOD, Etc.

All orders will receive prompt attention. Leave orders with the weighmaster or at my residence, the Giessman Hotel.

35-2 GEO. GIESSMAN

The Garrett County Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:

DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MD.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.

Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.

F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

THE

SECOND NATIONAL BANK

of CUMBERLAND, MD.

Designated United States Depository.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000
Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
John Sheridan, A. Hunter Boyd,
David W. Sloan.

Burlington Route

It costs no more to ride on this beautiful train than on any other.

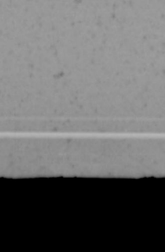
Chicago-St.Paul Minneapolis Limited Express

It is electric lighted and heated by steam, carries a library-buffet-smoking car, a dining car à la carte and everything there is to make one comfortable.

Leaves CHICAGO 6.30 p. m. Daily

We sell through tickets, reserve sleeping car berths, furnish maps and time tables, and can, perhaps, be of service in other ways. Kindly write or call.

H. E. HELLER, District Passenger Agent,
632 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.



CONSTIPATION CURED!

Nearly everyone suffers in a greater or less degree from this dreadful disease. It is dangerous to neglect the bowels, and often by doing so a foundation is laid for serious ailments.

Those suffering from Constipation suffer from slow Poison.

OUR NATIVE HERBS

cures Constipation quietly and permanently.

No Pain, No Griping, No Binding effect afterwards. Its action is pleasant and sure.

200 DAYS' TREATMENT $1.00.

A CURE GUARANTEED OR THE MONEY BACK.

"When a girl I had Small Pox succeded by Typhoid Fever and Measels. I was left with Constipation and Sinking Spells. Sometimes I felt that I could not live. After having various physicians treat me with no benefit I bought a box of Our Native Herbs, which seems to be the only medicine that suits my case. I believe it saved my life." Mrs. M. MILLER, Crellin, Md.

No Case Too Stubborn for Our Native Herbs To Conquer.

THE ALONZO O. BLISS CO.,
SOLE PROPRIETORS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

A. C. BROOKE,
Local Agent. Mountain Lake Park, Md.

A box of Tablets or Powder mailed to any address upon receipt of $1.00.

Midget Harness Riveter.

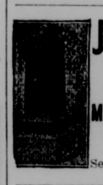
Complete repair shop in one tool. Will not wear out. Punches the hole, drives and clinches at one operation. Every horse owner, liveryman, teamster will buy on sight. Does the work of any $25 machine. Complete outfit with big bog of rivets will be sent for

ONLY 50 CENTS.

Agents Wanted.

HANDY ADJUSTABLE LIFTER. Handiest article ever invented for lifting hot pans, stove lids, etc. 15c, postpaid.

S. T. WILSON & CO.,
Box 103. Wilson, W. Va.



J. B. WILLIAMS CO.

FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!

I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 20,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.

All trespassing will be prosecuted to the ullest extent of the law.

Call on or address:

C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.

Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.

Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

133⅓ acres coal land on Youghiogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale. House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187⅓ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 26⅓ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 200 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ miles southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoroughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north of Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swanger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to

JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY, ARCHITECT,

Office 7 North Liberty St.

CUMBERLAND, MD.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
OAKLAND, MD.

STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

Office in McComas's Building, Main St. Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET.

Particular attention given to Conveyancing, investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. 1e14-1y

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD.

Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.

Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients. 45—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,

Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. '88 10y

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
OAKLAND, MD.

Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
OAKLAND, MD.

Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,

Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.

Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.

Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 16-'99

H. W. McCOMAS M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.

Office opposite Garrett County Bank. Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.

Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.

Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate

P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 5 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER,
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.

Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by aneroid barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26t*

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate.
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.

Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats descriptions and estimates furnished. 40-1yr.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT MAY 19, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 19, 1901. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily	3.42	A. M
No. 3—Daily	7.35	A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday	10.01	A. M
No. 55—Daily	4.52	P. M
No. 1—Daily	10.07	P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 8—Daily	5.50	A. M
No. 2—Daily	6.52	A. M
No. 46—Express, daily	4.41	P. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun	5.12	P. M
No. 12—Daily	8.35	P. M
No. 4—Daily	12.37	A. M

F. D. UNDERWOOD, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT NOV 25, 1900.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	SOUTHWARD No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	NORTHWARD No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15†	7 00 lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	7 00
3 43	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 31
4 06	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 08
4 16	8 05	Westernport	10 58	5 57
4 20	8 09	W. Va. C. Junc.	10 51	5 50
4 39	8 38	Shaw	10 28	5 22
5 00	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	†5 00
5 15*	9 50* ar	Elk Garden	*9 10	*4 10
5 41†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	4 30
5 47	9 42	Bayard	9 29	4 25
5 59	9 54	Dobbin	9 19	4 15
6 02	9 58	Henry	9 15	4 11
6 27	10 27	Thomas	8 48	3 47
6 55	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 05
6 31	10 34 lv	Coketon	8 41	3 40
6 59	11 01	Hendricks	8 10	3 10
7 02	11 04	Hambleton	8 07	3 07
7 05	11 07	Bretz	8 03	3 03
7 08	11 10	Parsons	8 00	3 00
7 43	11 45	Kerens	7 25	2 29
8 00†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 10	†2 15
	NOON
8 36*	12 45† ar	Beverly	lv*7 20	†1 40
9 05*	1 10† ar	Huttonsville	lv *6 30	†1 15
P. M.				P. M.
	3 15* ar	Bealington	lv	*11 40
	P. M.			A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, Gen. Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agen

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1901. NUMBER 30.

GOLDENROD IN ITS GLORY.

Covers and Beautifies Mountain and Meadow.

Some years ago there was a hot controversy all over the country over the question of a national flower or plant for the United States. It was pointed out that the rose stood for England all the world over, as the thistle for Scotland, the shamrock for Ireland, and various other flowers for other nations, and it was held that the United States should also have a representative flower. But the controversy was so hot and so prolonged that finally the contestants wore themselves out and had to give it up without accomplishing anything except to call general attention to the goldenrod, which had previously bloomed in its own assertive way all over the fields and on the mountains, covering them with a golden glory that fairly dazzled the eyes in many places without any especial or general appreciation. The advocates of the goldenrod as the national flower pointed out what a distinctively American plant it was, with its hardiness, independence and withal its grace and beauty. People began to study it, to gather it to decorate their houses and their persons, and it really began to have a sort of national vogue, although it did not receive official recognition.

This is the season when the goldenrod is at the height of its glory, and there is no more beautiful sight than a field full of this brilliant plant It grows all over the northern part of the country, and reaches a luxuriant development in Maryland. One of the claims for it as the national flower was that it was more distinctively an American plant than almost any other that grows in this country, and it is far more common here than in any other part of the world. There are but two or three species native to Europe, and these are rare, while out of the hundred species that are known, about ninety-five are indigenous to American soil. It has, however, been known for a long time, and received its Latin name of Solidago, it is believed from Linnaeus. The one common British variety, solidago virgaurea, had at one time a great reputation as a vulnerary, or remedy for external wounds, and it was no doubt this reputed property that gained its name from the Latin 'solidare," to unite. The leaves of this and the American odorous goldenrod, or solidago odora, have been used as a substitute for tea, being mildly astringent and tonic. Most of the species of goldenrod have their leaves with notched or toothed edges, the varieties lanceolata and odora being perhaps the most common with smooth edged leaves. The leaves of the lanceolata are narrower than those of the odora, and the latter have more of a crinkled nature, by which they may be recognized besides by the shell. Both of these varieties may be found in the open fields, together with the canadensis, the latter, probably being the most common of all varieties. Goldenrod is beautiful when growing anywhere, but it improves greatly under cultivation, like a great many other plants which grow wild and weedy. If they have good soil and plenty of room to develop, the sprays become compact and regular instead of straggly, and with good feeding and care it may be made a very handsome plant, indeed, and is especially suitable for decorative purposes. In England the American varieties are extensively cultivated, especially in wild gardens. Goldenrod does not bloom in the spring or early summer, although some of the earlier specimens may begin to show themselves in the latter part of July. A few others may bloom in August, but September is the great month for the goldenrod blossom, for then all of the species are in full flower.

It Happend in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C.R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take abottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." The remedy owes its great popularity and extensive sale in a large measure to the personal recommendations of people who have been cured by its use. It is for sale by All dealers.

For sprains, swellings and lameness there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Try it. For sale by all dealers.

MOUNTAIN TRIOLETS.

RARE OCTOBER.

TO MISS N. H.

In autumn tints of gold and brown
Cometh rare October.
Jewelled month with royal gown
In autumn tints of gold and brown,
Poets sing thy fair renown—
Though some be ashen sober.
In autumn tints of gold and brown
Cometh rare October.

Flinging wide the rarest treasures
With a lavish open hand;
She the queen of purest pleasures
Flinging wide the rarest treasures
Heaping high in golden measures,
All the wealth at her command:
Flinging wide the rarest treasures
With a lavish open hand.

Through the purple mists enshrining
Stepping lightly to her throne—
All her glory full divining,
Through the purple mists enshrining,
Heart and soul in rare combining
Mingles with her own:
Through the purple mists enshrining
Stepping lightly to her throne.

August, 1901. —T. L. I.

NEW YORK ROADS.

Suggestions to Employ Convicts in Preparing Material.

The chief question concerning good roads at the present time is the financial one, says the New York Tribune in a recent editorial. How much money can be raised for them? There is no longer a question as to the desirability of building them. No rational man now opposes them. The farmer who uses them in the laborious task of making a living from the soil the year round is as eager for them as is the rich man from the city, who uses them only for pleasure for a few weeks or months in the summer. There is no difficulty either in getting enough money locally. Towns and couties are ready with their appropriations. The only drawback is that the state is not ready to do its full share in duplicating the local appropriations, and so the progress of the work seems to depend upon the rate at which the state can follow the lead of the counties. In connection with this phase of the case a suggestion made by Mr. Bond, the engineer, is of practical interest. He would have the state acquire a trap rock quarry in Rockland county and set the convicts of Sing Sing prison to working it This would provide roadmaking material at a considerable lower price to the state than that which is now paid for it, and the state could thus do its share toward road building at a decided advantage, for there seems to be no good reason why the state's contribution to the fund should not be in material at market rates as well as in cash. The scheme has of course these obvious elements in its favor: That trap rock is one of the very best road metals in the world; that the convicts would thus be provided with one of the best kinds of labor for their well being; that the quarry would be close to the prison, and that being on a bluff directly above the river the product of the quarry could be transported to many other parts of the state at a minimum of cost.

DEER PARK.

Miss Ella Laughlin is visiting Bayard friends.

Miss Julia Hayes, of Kingwood, W. Va., is visiting her sister, Mrs. John Elliott.

Mrs. J. B. Friend, of Swanton, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. George Sunday.

W. E. Beeghley, of Oakland, has accepted a position in W. C. Jones' store.

Miss Katharyn Lohm is visiting in Grafton.

Miss Georgia Hoye, of Mountain Lake Park, is visiting relatives and friends in town.

Asa Colson, of Baltimore, was the guest of Miss Josephine Griffin Sunday.

Mrs. T. W. Taylor has returned from a visit to Terra Alta friends.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Lohm are attending the Buffalo Exposition.

Miss Estella George, who has been spending some weeks with her grandparents, Rev. and Mrs. W. E. George, has returned to her home in Barton.

Mrs. Sarah McKenzie and Mrs. S. A. Dawson are visiting friends in Keyser, Cumberland and Rawlings.

A. H. Laughlin, of Flemington, W. Va., has purchased the property lately occupied by the S. C. Hoye family.

Misses Prudence and Nannie Rhodeheaver have returned from a pleasant visit to Short Run friends.

Mrs. Margaret Baldwin, of Mountain Lake Park, and Miss Anita Baldwin, of Washington, D. C., are the guests of Mrs. Edward Grimm.

Miss Josephine Hoye, of Sang Run, is the guest of Miss Ella Hoye.

Misses Pearl and Percy George, of Swanton, were visiting Deer Park friends Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Elliott, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Elliott for several days, have returned to their home in Terra Alta.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Garrett have moved from High street to the Turnbull cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Laughlin, who have been visiting Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Laughlin, have returned to their home in Flemington, W. Va.

Rev. Nolan, a traveling Baptist minister, preached in the Union church Sunday morning.

Rev. Coole, a former minister of this district, was calling on Deer Park friends several days last week.

F. A. Wheeler, of Oakland, was in town Monday.

Rev. J. S. Harvey delivered an excellent sermon in the M. E. church Sunday evening, which was highly appreciated by all present. Rev. Harvey is well liked by the Deer Park people, who are all hoping he will be returned to this work this coming conference year.

The social given by the Junior League in Laughlin's Hall Monday evening was a decided success. About sixty people were present. The amusements were games, tableaus, tug of war, etc. B. Long and May Browning won the cake in the comic cake walk. The costumes worn by those taking part were wonderful and laughable. Refreshments were served at 9 o'clock and at 10 all went home, after having spent a most delightful evening.

The Junior League meets in the M. E. church Sunday afternoons at 2.30. A cordial invitation is extended to the parents and friends to attend the League meetings.

Paul Ellsworth, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. John Elliott, died on Wednesday, September 4, and was buried the following Thursday, aged one year and four days.

Alma Pauline, the little twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Elliott, died Friday, September 27, and was buried the following Sunday, aged one year and fourteen days.

The funerals of these children took place from the M. E. church and the sermons were preached by the pastor, Rev. J. S. Harvey, whose words were affecting and comforting. The sympathy of the community is with the bereaved parents and family.

"The golden gates were open and heavenly seraphs smiled,
And with their tuneful harpstrings welcomed the little child.
They chanted high and holy: 'A child hath entered in,
And safe from all temptations, a soul is saved from sin.'

They led him through the golden street, on to the King of Kings,
And a glory fell upon him from the rushing of their wings:
The Saviour smiled upon him, as none on earth had smiled,
And Heaven's great glory shone 'round the little earth-born child.

On earth they missed the little one; they sighed and wept and sighed,
And wondered if another such as their's had died.
Oh, had they seen through high gates the welcome to him given,
They never would have wished their child back from his home in heaven.

—M. A.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Grantsville, Md., on or about the middle of July last, 5 head of sheep, 4 yearlings and one older, 4 being ewes and one a weather. Four of said sheep having crops off left ear and slit in right ear; one with left ear cropped off.

The owner or owners are hereby notified to come forward, prove property, pay costs and take them away.

Dated Oct. 1, 1901.

CHRISTIAN M. LIVENGOOD,
30 Grantsville, Md.

BOSSES—"Mind us and let the people go to Hades."

PEOPLE—"It was an extraordinary session, indeed, but you will hear from us in November."

Hicks' Weather for October.

A Mars period of disturbances central any time in October is sufficient cause for apprehending heavy, autumnal storms. Such a period is central on October 2nd, extending beyond the middle of the month. A regular storm period, extend from the 1st to the 6th.

We will scarcely have recovered from heavy equinoctial storms late in September, when renewed storm conditions will begin to appear in the western parts of the country. Between the 2nd and the 6th these conditions will grow into cloudiness, and rain and snow will touch many parts of the country in their transition from west to east about Wednesday the 2nd to Saturday the 5th. As change to warmer comes immediately in front of active storm areas, so change to colder may be counted on, even before the western edge of rain and snow have quite passed any locality.

From the 8th to the 10th anti-storm conditions will give place to more storms of rain and snow. The 9th is the central day of this reactionary period. The Moon is on the celestial equator on that day, greatly increasing the probability of warm October rains and thunder southward, but turning to early snow squalls later in northern sides of the country. Look for change to rising barometer and colder after the storms central on the 9th.

A glance at the storm chart shows that a very unusual combination of disturbing causes bears on the regular storm period which is central on the 15, covering the 13th to the 18th. The Mercury period, the autumnal equinox, the Mars period and the Jupiter disturbance are all seen to extend their influences into this part of October. The conjunction of Moon with the Sun on the 12th will precipitate the change to warmer with falling barometer at the very outset of this regular Vulcan period, and returning storms of rain and snow will pass across the country about Monday the 14th to Thursday the 17th. At the crisis of these storms it will be best to look for some early winter. Snow and sleet are more than probable in northern sections, with high northwesterly gales and an October cold wave.

The 20th to 21st are central days of a reactionary time of autumnal disturbances. A perceptible change to warmer will be noted in the west about the 19th; this change will be followed by falling barometer and cloudiness and October rains, fringed in the north by sleet and snow, will traverse the country from west to east during the 20th to 22nd.

Some of the heaviest storms of the month may certainly be counted on during the Vulcan storm period central on the 26th.

Watch all agricultural and maritime interests at this time. Cold wave will follow.

24,899,421 Methodists.

A report submitted to the International Ecumenical Conference of the Methodist church shows that there are 44,899,421 adherents of the Methodist faith. In the western section there are 6,437,361 actual church members and in the eastern 1,221,824. The total value of the church property throughout the world is £60,000,000. There are 89,087 churches and 48,334 ministers. The estimated increase in adherents of the Methodist faith in the last decade is 2,536,938.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

TAR AND FEATHERS

Was the Proposed Dose for One of Oakland's Fly Young Men.

Thursday night last several men, whose identity was successfully hidden under masks, caught Will Thrasher, a young married man who recently separated from his wife, and were in the act of giving him a lasting coat of tar and feathers when the gag placed in the victim's mouth was forced out by him and the yell that followed brought the night policeman to his rescue, whereupon the men intent upon applying the out-of-ordinary garb dispersed in all directions.

The man had been at Deer Park and returned to Oakland on train No. 7, at 3 o'clock and was caught by the crowd of masked men at a point on Railroad street opposite the Glades Hotel grounds.

It is said that another man whose relations with his wife are somewhat strained, has received warning that unless he conducts himself in a more orderly manner, that he will be the next to receive attention.

HOYES HUN.

David Loraw was at Crellin last Saturday.

C. C. Wilhelm has bought a new team of horses. He is a hustler and full of business.

Ed. Roths is moving to West Virginia.

A. Knabb was here on business.

There will be services at Pine Grove church Thursday evening.

Miss Cora Friend will visit her sister in West Virginia.

Fred. Rodeheaver was calling on relatives at Hoop-pole Sunday.

Mr. C. B. Green and wife returned from a week's visit to Weston, West Va.

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. Frank Fries, Mrs. Ella Frease, Miss Ellen Brown, Miss Sallie Deveny, Miss Katherine Coughlehan, Miss Laura Northcroft, Miss Ethel Shaffer, Miss Maggie Whitehair, H. L. Werner, B. F. Coulehan, Frank Custer (2), C. B. Crump, Frank Fries (2), A. J. Graham, John E. Jenkins, Harry F. Lynch, T. O. Miller, C. E. Michael, J. C. Michael, Estrueim Miller, C. Rashie, John S. Sims, Israel Spiker, George Thomas, George Thompson, colored.

Taken to Baltimore.

Edward Raley, of Bittinger, who fell from a cherry tree last spring and received injuries which resulted in paralysis of his limbs, and Mrs. Wm. Garringer, of Accident, who is suffering with a mental and nervous disorder, were taken to Baltimore yesterday morning by Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft, where they will be placed in a hospital for treatment. The afflicted man and woman were both brought to Oakland by their relatives early yesterday and left here at 6 o'clock a. m.

New Counterfeit in Circulation.

The treasury department has issued a warning that a new counterfeit five dollar silver certificate is in circulation. It is of the series of 1899, check letter B, plate number 37, and bears the portrait of the Indian Chief "Onepapa." The counterfeit is printed from photoetched plates of fair workmanship on good quality paper, bearing lines in imitation of the silk fiber of the genuine.

Happily Wedded.

Last night at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Orcutt, on Water street, was solemnized a very pretty autumn wedding, the contracting parties being their daughter Miss Effie and Mr. Fred. C. Allen, of Grafton, W. Va.

The parlor was very tastefully decorated with autumn leaves, flowers, etc., and at 9 o'clock the wedding couple, preceded by Miss May Fulmer and Mr. P. E. Kimmell as attendants, marched in, where the nuptial knot was tied by Rev. J. M. Davis, of the M. E. church.

Only a few invited friends besides the relatives of the bride and groom were present.

Immediately after the ceremony the guests partook of a sumptuous wedding feast, to which, it is needless to say, all did justice. At the same time the Oaklaud Concert Band arrived and lent enchantment to the occasion by several pretty selections.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen departed on train No. 1 for Grafton, where they will reside, Mr. Allen being employed as an express messenger on the fourth division of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

The many friends of the happy couple unite in wishing them a very pleasant voyage over the matrimonial sea.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The "Unterrified" Meet, Resolve, Nominate a Ticket and Adjourn.

The Democracy—or strictly speaking one wing of the Democracy—of Garrett county met in convention at the court house in Oakland Monday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock for the purpose of nominating a county ticket to be voted for next month.

Ex-Senator Browning was elected chairman of the convention and Mr. Edwin L. Mitchell was made its secretary. Upon assuming the chair Mr. Browning spoke of the dissentions now existing in the ranks of the party and expressed a wish that all prejudice be forgotten and the badly decimated ranks of the party be again filled.

A committee on resolutions, credentials and permanent organization was named and this committee retired, who after an absence of a few minutes returned recommending the seating of all delegates present, the adoption of rules governing the deliberations and the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the late Democratic platform and pledge our united support to same.

Resolved, To give our support to the present organization and the return of the Hon. A. P. Gorman to the United States Senate.

Resolved, That we greviously deplore the assassination of the late President McKinley.

Before the above resolutions were adopted, however, Mr. C. M. Miller, of Swanton, arose and spoke quite feelingly of the assassination of President McKinley, and offered the following as a supplemental report of the committee, which was adopted:

In harmony with the prevailing spirit of a chastened republic, the Democracy of Garrett county, in convention assembled, declares its sorrow at the untimely death of his Excellency William McKinley, President of the United States, at Buffalo, N. Y., September 14, 1901, as the result of a wound needlessly and remorselessly inflicted by an assassin on the 6th day of the same month. Deploring this national calamity and anarchistic menace to life, law and government, we announce our unrestricted confidence in the late Chief Magistrate as a statesman, patriot and christian gentleman of scholarly polish.

Nominations were then declared open when the following names were presented and the ticket nominated:

State Senator—John W. McCulloh, of District No. 2.

Members of the House of Delegates —W. R. Offutt, of District No. 14; Dr. G. C. Keller, of District No. 3.

County Commissioners — Floyd Crowe, of District No. 9; Chas. Whitmore, of District No. 14.

Sheriff—Edmund Jamison, of District No. 14.

Treasurer—Dr. E. H. Bartlett, of District No. 7.

Register of Wills—Thomas E. Flanigan, of District No. 14.

Surveyor—Edwin L. Mitchell, of District No. 14.

Every district of the county was represented at the convention and as it was quite a task to secure candidates to go on the ticket the gathering in this respect was harmonious, on the surface at least.

After the nominations had been made the convention adjourned.

Had Not Known of McKinley's Death.

George Hoyle, a sawyer in the Droney lumber camp, 14 miles southwest of this place, spent Sunday in Meyersdale. The camp is far isolated from communication with the outside world, and out of a camp of 60 men he was the first to learn of the assassination and death of the President, and that was when he reached Meyersdale Saturday evening. He carried the sad intelligence to the men at camp on Monday morning.—Meyersdale Republican.

Two Boys Badly Burned by An Explosion of Powder

Saturday last two boys named respectively Grant King and Gilbert Enlow, of near Sang Run, this county, were playing in a building on the farm of Mr. Truman W. Casteel, which lies at Sang Run, in which was stored a can containing some ten or twelve pounds of blasting powder. The powder in some manner became ignited and exploded. The force of the explosion drove the end of the building out and threw the boys against the door, setting their clothing on fire and burning them very seriously. One of the boys retained his presence of mind and as soon as he could rolled outside the building into a pool of water and extinguished the fire. The other one, however, ran toward the dwelling house with his clothes in flames. He was met by Mr. Casteel who succeeded in putting the fire out, but not until he was almost denuded. Dr. Ravenscroft has been attending the injured youths and has hopes for their recovery.

A Chase for Millions

By GISELLE D'UNGER

THE editorial rooms of the Daily Pencilings presented a scene of activity. Men of brains and energy contributed their best efforts to gain the favor of the public, and were amply rewarded by the encomiums passed upon the broad platform established some 20 years. Vigorous and concise were the summaries of volumes of statistics, reducing them to a condensation that practically benefited the the reader.

Two young men were holding a conversation in a remote corner where the desks were not so thickly placed. One was tall and of a serious manner, while the other was a typical Bohemian, careless, happy-go-lucky, artistic, clever and a dare devil as to adventure in assignments. He was discussing the latest sensation, the reported engagement of a prominent social woman to a titled grandee.

"Blake, all women are conquered by the glitter of gold. It's a case of 'if yo' ain't got no money, you needn't come round.' Grace Ward knows which side her bread's buttered on," he remarked in a contemptuous tone.

"You are all wrong, Johnson," returned Blake, wincing under the other's careless words. "Miss Ward was not dazzled by the glitter of gold. Opportunity is like a diamond in the rough; it is spurned by man in its crude state, but coveted when it illuminates the jeweled gates of Happiness and Content in the land of Successful Attainment. Miss Ward appreciates opportunity, and, furthermore, the nobleman has intellectuality and manhood to recommend him."

"Where did Miss Ward live before the Fairbanks took her up?" queried Johnson.

"She came from Kings Kettle, near Ladybank, Fifeshire, Scotland, when quite young—but the time flies, Johnson, and I must finish this," was the reply of Blake.

"All right, Ned. I must be going, too. That last edition of yesterday lacked a romance; I am going out to find one—in the slums."

Frank Johnson nodded to the older man, buttoned his ulster against the winter blasts and stepped off, whistling softly the latest popular air.

"One man hit in that quarter once, I believe—accounts for the precise knowledge of her former home. Well! she's a beauty and Lord Alfred will have no cause to sigh over a good figure-head for his household. That's hardly fair to the lady—but the way the dear Four Hundred tighten their grasp upon a poverty-stricken nobleman with a bedimmed title reminds me of nothing more than the Laocoon. I declare, young, innocent girls are trained, taught to this exchange of their charming youth for the palsied hand of age, and its attendant serpentine coils of a title, a decayed ruin of a chateau or castle, and they submit so tenderly. It is beyond me, for these proud, fearless American girls endure tortures known only to themselves."

Thus ran the thoughts of Johnson as he marched along the thoroughfare, but he was no nearer to solving the mystery than before. Meanwhile Ned Blake was not so mindful of "copy" as he had intimated to Johnson. Memory had reminded him of the days when the letters of Grace Ward had flown to him like a flock of tiny blue-birds breathing love and affection and a happy future. Now all was changed. A misunderstanding, coldness, silence, the advent of Lord Alfred Bruce, importunities of friends and—the engagement.

"Johnson is a bright, breezy fellow," reflected Blake, as he leaned his weary head against the chair, "and as sharp as a steel trap. He would make an excellent correspondent of an exploring expedition, as he enjoys adventure. I'll speak to Henderson about him. He is too contemptuous of the follies and foibles of humanity to succeed here. He spoils a good story by having a sympathetic or antagonistic chord relative to it. By Jove! I must get out of here and have some air and quiet."

Blake had been working at a terrible pace for months and he was even now straining every nerve to accomplish more than was expected of him, through the feverish restless striving from thoughts of himself. Work was the panacea. What mattered it if he did lie awake night after night conscious of gradual loss of strength for the day's labor, if at the close of the conflict for sleep he fell into a comatose state, neither awake nor sleeping, wherein a delicious, restful languor predominated, granting him floating visions of the woman he loved.

Upon his brow he felt the gentle touch of her cool fingers; he heard her murmur words of pity and tenderness, in low, sweet tones, and for a few moments his soul seemed to leave the body and float with hers, as did Francesca and Paola, through space.

It was worth the hard grind of the wearisome day to welcome night, the cold struggle and once more this delicious and dreamy languor. Surely Paradise could confer no more exquisite sensation than was granted him in this hour of the early dawn. As the sun's rays flashed through the room and the discordant sounds of early traffic broke rudely on this reverie, he arose unrefreshed, depressed in spirits, feverishly anxious to take up the duties of the day.

With a sigh of relief, Ned Blake, managing editor, pushed the copy from him, arranged his desk, locked it carefully, summoned a boy and delivered certain instructions. He left the room and in a few moments was on the street where the lights danced and flickered like will o' the wisps under the influence of a raw, east wind.

On the way to Chickering hall, Blake encountered a crowd. On inquiry he learned of a collision between the cable and a private carriage, and from that description his heart knew that it was Grace Ward who was injured. He beckoned a passing hansom and drove to her home, regardless of all except that he loved her more dearly than ever.

At last he saw her, pale and wan, but—was he dreaming?—a delicate blush mantled her cheek as she held out her hands to him.

"My darling—my darling! I thought I had lost you!" he murmured, as he fell on his knees at her side.

"No, Ned, it was a narrow escape. Fortunately, Lord Alfred was driving near and he averted the most serious consequences," she replied, nervously.

"Lord Alfred! Grace, is he ever to be near you?" the agitated lover ejaculated, while the color flashed into his pale face.

"Ned!"

That was all, but the tone of reproach cut him like a whip.

"My darling girl, it is rumored everywhere that you are engaged to marry him, but I could not believe it. You would not sell yourself for a title and the paltry gold he controls?" he asked in a bitter tone.

"Ned! you are unjust to me now as always. Lord Alfred has been very kind, he is a connection of my family and he is arranging to restore certain estates to me that have been in litigation for years. Indeed, Ned, I fear you will be shocked to hear that I am Lady Grace Ward instead of— Oh, Ned! don't look so horror-stricken," she added, roguishly. "It is a small affair, anyway. The title goes with the estates."

"Where are the estates, may I ask?" he freezingly inquired.

"In Fifeshire, Scotland, you know my birth-place. You are not angry with me because of this stroke of good fortune, are you Ned?" She looked at him keenly as if to read his soul.

"Oh, no, I congratulate you, but it seems all a dream. Naturally you will go abroad and look after your affairs. In that case, you are free—in any case, I may say, as I have no desire to hold you to—"

"Ned! Ned!" the girl interrupted him, in a beseeching tone, but his unreasonable overtaxed system refused to recognize it.

"I am no fortune-hunter, Grace, but your opportunities are greater, and you must marry befitting your station."

"Ned Blake! I am ashamed of you—an American gentleman discussing station and caste in this age and in this country. That is as absurd as your unreasonable jealousy over Lord Alfred. He is not young—more like a father to me, but you assumed that I was like most of the women, dazzled by gold and splendor. There are some exceptions, Ned Blake," retorted the new thoroughly angered girl. "You men credit us with intelligence, and at the slightest deviation from the line of your interpretation of us, from your point of view—lo! we are not angelic, seraphic, but individual. Dear me! Why are you all so illogical? We have been waiting for certain conditions to prevail that we may marry. Poverty was our bug-bear; you have been half-killing yourself to swell your bank account to respectable proportions, as you term it, that we may not be followed by that silent subtle serpent of life that stealthily follows from place to place, seeking to poison one in some vital spot—that bug-bear poverty. Now we—or I at least"—she hastily corrected herself—"have a sufficiency. Fortune or fate brings us together once more, and when I have the pleasure of telling you of our—my good fortune, you talk of 'station.'"

During this impetuous speech, Blake had time to think that he was not quite the hero of this little tragedy; the heroine had the middle of the stage.

"Grace, I beg your pardon," said he, gently. "True, true, every word you say, but there is a sequel. I have been successful—the mines have panned out well, and those stocks have gone whirling up, scattering dividends like snowflakes, and I have been longing to come to you and tell you of it. You must confess that when Mme. Grundy asserts that one of Beauty's daughters is to make a sacrifice to Croesus or the nobility—that is the same thing—a poor devil of a newspaper man feels his chances are nil."

"The newspaper man is supposed to be possessed of average intelligence, I have always understood." Grace said this in a bitter manner, her indignation being still great.

"Certainly, but in this chase for millions, the spirit of the age, the man with the greatest number carries off the prize. But, forgive me, and take me back to your loving little heart. Thank Heaven for the accident and no serious results except to my heart. In your good Scotch—'a man's a man for a' that, a' that,' dear, and we will let by-gones be by-gones."

He drew her to him in a quick embrace, and as she hid her flushing face in his coat, she whispered:

"How about the settlement of the estates, Ned?"

"We will start at once. Henderson gave me leave of absence for a year. I am pretty much run down, as you see—"

"Poor boy!"

"So we will be married at once—"

"Oh, no! my trousseau!"

"Hang the trousseau! we can get it on the other side."

"How imperious we are, all of a sudden."

"A slave is never imperious to his queen, my darling."—Radford Review.

The average yearly damage to French crops by hail is £1,420,000.

A BEAUTIFUL ANIMAL.

Discovery of a Beautiful Mountain Sheep in the Wilds of the Klondike.

Gold is not the only treasure which has been discovered in the Klondike, for a new species of mountain sheep was recently found there, and, according to Mr. William T. Hornaday, director of the New York zoological garden, "it may justly be regarded as the handsomest and most striking in color markings of all known species of the genus ovis."

Mr. Henry W. Brown, of Dawson City, presented the skin and skull of one of these sheep to the provincial museum in Victoria, B. C., and there Mr. Hornaday saw them during his recent trip through British Columbia. Mr. Brown had supposed that the specimen was one of the so-called Stone's black sheep, but Mr. Hornaday, whose attention was directed to it by Mr. John Fannin, curator of the provincial museum, saw at once that it represented a species absolutely new to science. Without further delay the sheep was named in honor of Mr. Fannin, who is a well-known authority on the animal life of the northwest, and in all future works the species will be known as ovis fannini.

KLONDIKE MOUNTAIN SHEEP.
(Remarkably Beautiful Animal Discovered in the Frozen North.)

The new sheep, which is also locally known as the saddle-backed and piebald sheep, is of a brownish gray color over the entire body, except on the head, neck, breast, abdomen, inside of forelegs and a small patch above the tail, where it is snowy white.

"The points of difference between ovis fannini and all other species of American ovidae are conspicuous," says Mr. Hornaday, "and it is remarkable that an animal so large and handsome and so strangely marked that its separate identity must be recognizable at a considerable distance should remain in North America undiscovered, and even unheard of, until the closing year of the nineteenth century. It is strange, indeed, that for so many years it has escaped the vigilant eyes of the Hudson Bay Fur company and its army of hunters and trappers."

ORIGIN OF OUR ARMY.

It Was Created and Articles of War Adopted by the Continental Congress in 1775.

In the month of June, 1775, the continental congress, in session at Philadelphia, passed three important resolutions, writes Gen. Francis V. Greene, in Scribner's. The first adopted and took over as a continental army the force of New England troops which, under the lead of Massachusetts, had assembled at Boston soon after the battles of Lexington and Concord; the second appointed George Washington

GEN. FRANCIS V. GREENE.
(His Success as an Author as Great as His Military Fame.)

"general and commander-in-chief of all the continental forces, raised or to be raised, for the defense of American liberty;" the third adopted "rules and regulations for the government of the army"—the articles of war, which, modified and amended from time to time, still govern the army and form the basis of the military law.

This was the origin of the American army. In the intervening 126 years nearly 5,000,000 men have worn its uniform; it has conducted with success five great wars, covering a period of 17 years, and numerous minor campaigns against Indians and Philippino insurgents; it has been the chief instrument in restoring order and inaugurating civil government after the war with Mexico and the war with Spain; from its ranks have come 11 of the 24 presidents of the United States and many hundreds of men occupying the highest civil offices, governors of states, senators and representatives in congress, cabinet ministers, ambassadors and judges of the most important courts.

For a people who have never sought war and have only resorted to it when reluctantly forced to do so, the army has filled a large place in our history.

CROWD THE SCHOOLS

Filipinos, Old and Young, Are Very Eager to Learn.

Prof. Atkinson, Head of the Educational System for the Islands, Speaks Hopefully of the Future of His Work.

Considerable interest is manifested by the press in the report of Fred W. Atkinson, superintendent of public instruction in the Philippines, which has just reached Washington. It appears from this report that an effort is being made to displace Spanish with English in the schools, and, eventually, no doubt, throughout the islands. Says the Philadelphia Ledger:

"The most interesting part of the report . . . is the announcement that English has been adopted as the medium of instruction in the training of Filipino teachers, and that during the year English will displace Spanish in the schools. Spanish was the official language during the old regime, but even then it was used by a very small proportion of the inhabitants, who speak various Philippine dialects. There are many difficulties in the way of a sudden transition from Spanish to English, but under the gradual process of educating the youth the change will probably be made easily and naturally."

Another interesting part of the report tells about the selection of teachers. To quote again from the same paper:

"The Philippine school law authorized the appointment from the United States of 1,000 school teachers, and of these 781 have been selected. Of the 487 soldiers who applied for positions, 79 passed the examinations, and have exchanged the bayonet for the pen. The school-teachers chosen seem generally to be of an unusually high grade, both in character and ability. The 781 were sifted from among over 8,000 applicants, who filed strong testimonials from trustworthy sources, and care was taken to select those who had given evidence of equipment and teaching ability, rather than those who applied because they had nothing else to do. In many instances ambitious young men have entered upon the work, who were filling moost acceptable positions as teachers at home.

FREDERICK W. ATKINSON.
(Superintendent of Public Instruction for the Philippines.)

"The educational system in the archipelago consists of 18 divisions, each with a division superintendent. One high school in each division will be established next year, and teachers' institutes will soon be held in all the provinces."

The Filipinos, old and young, are very eager to learn, and they crowd the schoolrooms until sometimes one teacher has 100 or even 200 scholars.

The question of religious instruction was soon settled. Says the report:

"Upon receipt of an official copy of act No. 74 of the Philippine commission, which forbids any religious instruction by the teacher, a comprehensive order was issued forbidding the practice of religious devotions or their employment as means of punishment, the discontinuance of all teaching of the cathechism or religious doctrine, and the removal from the schoolhouse of all books containing such matter, and the removal from schoolrooms of crucifixes, religious emblems, sacred pictures, placards, etc. These orders were complied with. There was no protest from either parents or teachers, and, as above stated, no diminution in the attendance, the school year closing with the largest attendance in the history of these public schools. To many of the teachers the change was apparently welcome.

The people are so eager to learn that Superintendent Atkinson thinks "it will not be necessary to resort to compulsory education;" and he adds the interesting remark that "Tagalo children, both male and female, are the most precocious I have even seen, very bright and studious and exceedingly well behaved."

Germans with Irish Brogue.

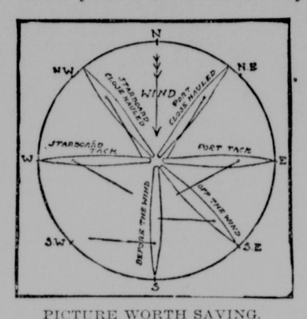
Of late years many German boys go to Ireland to learn the language and acquire at the same time the Irish middle-class opinion of England, which they cherish and propagate on their return to their native land. Perhaps, says the Outlook, that is one of the sources of German dislike for the Englishman. Another thing that the German boy acquires in Ireland is a rich and varied brogue, and one of the most amusing things one hears in Germany is the waiter who speaks German-Irish-English. A music hall comedian who could adequately imitate this combination, as I have frequently heard it, would certainly make his fortune. Next to this in ludicrousness is the cockney English of many porters and waiters—learned, I have no doubt, within the sound of Bow Bells.

POSITION OF YACHTS.

Diagram Which Shows at a Glance Every Method or Direction a Yacht Can Sail In.

Here is a little picture, taken from the New York Herald, which you ought to cut out and paste in your hat in case you wish to understand the coming yacht races and are not quite sure in your own mind as to the meaning of nautical terms. It shows at a glance every position that a yacht can sail in.

It will be seen that there is only one direction in which a yacht cannot sail, and that is against the wind. The manner in which yachts go to windward is by "tacking," and in going from one point to another in this way



PICTURE WORTH SAVING.
(It Shows Every Position That a Yacht Can Sail In.)

they cover more than twice the actual distance required. Thus in a dead heat to a windward mark ten miles away a yacht sails about 20 miles.

The angles of these tacks are at about 90 degrees to each other, so that the yacht sails at an angle of about 45 degrees to the wind.

One quarter of the circle shows the place where no yacht can sail without tacking. On any other point within the circle the yacht can sail indefinitely without tacking.

When a yacht is sailing as near the wind as she will go she is said to be "close hauled." She is then sailing at an angle of about 45 degrees from the direction of the wind.

When a yacht is said to be on a port tack she is leaning over to starboard.

When a yacht is close hauled her boom is down in as close as it will go. When she is making a broad reach with the wind on the beam the boom is eased off until it is at an angle of about 45 degrees from the line of the keel.

When she is running before the wind the boom is at right angles to the direction of the wind and to the line of the keel. This little diagram will enable anybody to understand the exact position of the yachts with relation to the wind.

MAKES THE HAIR GROW.

Reports from England State That Oxygen, Locally Applied, Is a Cure for Baldness.

The use of gas to make the hair grow is one of the latest medical discoveries. The gas employed is oxygen. A large cap fits tightly round the head and is supplied with oxygen from a bag which is slung over the patient's shoulders. It is worn for a few hours every day, and even in cases of absolute baldness is said to produce a more or less luxuriant crop of hair.

The discovery was made at the oxygen hospital, Fitzroy square, London, an institution of which Princess Louise is patron. The gas is used for the cure of quite a number of diseases. A woman was undergoing the oxygen cure for skin diseases, and one of her arms had for many days been placed in a light air-tight box filled with the gas. It was soon noticed that on that part of the arm that was unaffected by the disease the growth of hair was much stimulated, and this naturally suggested oxygen as a cure for baldness.

OXYGEN CAP AND BAG.
(Used in Europe to Make the Hair Grow on Bald Heads.)

The first experiment was made upon a woman who had completely lost her hair, and it was found that after a few weeks' treatment there was quite a strong growth.

The gas has also been found beneficial for weak eyes, and is used in a similar manner, a hollow flexible cup being placed over the upper part of the face. This is connected by means of an india rubber tube to a small gas bag and is worn day after day until a cure is effected.

But by far the greatest service that oxygen is to perform is in the cure of consumption. The patients inhale the gas for ten hours every day and find almost immediate relief. The germs of the disease cannot exist in oxygen alone, though in common air they multiply rapidly. This is, at present, the only weak point of the system, for it is found that in practice the patient loses during the night almost all the benefit that he has derived from the oxygen during the day.

TENETS OF ANARCHY

Expounded by Emma Goldman in a Recent Speech.

Remarks That Prompted Murderous Assault on President McKinley—Delivered on May 6, at Cleveland, O.

An address delivered in Cleveland, O., on May 6 by Emma Goldman, the anarchist, is believed to be largely responsible for the attempt on the life of President McKinley.

Miss Goldman spoke there twice on that date, and a copy of her address was found in the pocket of Leon Czolgosz when searched by the Buffalo police. In the audience on that occasion was the man who tried to kill the president, and his associates now recall that he was one of the most enthusiastic in his applause of the utterances of Miss Goldman.

In the course of her address on May 6 Miss Goldman first outlined the principles of anarchy and detailed the methods whereby she hoped to accomplish the ends of anarchy. Her talk was full of forceful passages, and some cases more notable for their strength than their elegance.

"Men under the present state of society," she said, "are mere products of circumstances. Under the galling yoke of government, ecclesiasticism, and a bond of custom and prejudice, it is impossible for the individual to work out his own career as he could wish. Anarchism aims at a new and complete freedom. It strives to bring about the freedom which is not only the freedom from within, but a freedom from without, which will prevent any man from having a desire to interfere in any way with the liberty of his neighbor.

"Vanderbilt says: 'I am a free man within myself, but the others be damned.' This is not the freedom we are striving for. We merely desire complete individual liberty, and this can never be obtained as long as there is an existing government.

"We do not favor the socialistic idea of converting men and women into mere producing machines under the eye of a paternal government. We go to the opposite extreme and demand the fullest and most complete liberty for each and every person to work out his own salvation upon any line that he pleases. The degrading notions of men and women as machines is far from our ideals of life.

MISS EMMA GOLDMAN.
(Her Speech Prompted Czolgosz to Assault the President.)

"Anarchism has nothing to do with future governments or economic arrangements. We do not favor any particular settlement in this line, but merely ask to do away with the present evils. The future will provide these arrangements after our work has been done. Anarchism deals merely with social relations, and not with economic arrangement."

The speaker then deprecated the idea that all anarchists were in favor of violence or bomb throwing. She declared that nothing was further from the principles they support. She went on, however, into a detailed explanation of the different crimes committed by anarchists lately, declaring that the motive was good in each case, and that these acts were merely a matter of temperament.

Some men were so constituted, she said, that they were unable to stand idly by and see the wrong that was being endured by their fellow mortals. She herself did not believe in these methods, but she did not think they should be condemned in view of the high and noble motives which prompted their perpetration. She continued: "Some believe we should first obtain by force and let the intelligence and education come afterwards."

Miss Goldman did not hesitate to put forward a number of sentiments far more radical and sensational than any ever publicly advanced there. During Miss Goldman's lecture a strong detail of police was in the hall to keep her from uttering sentiments which were regarded as too radical. This accounts for the fact that the speaker did not give free rein to her thoughts on this occasion. By reason of anarchistic uprisings elsewhere it was thought best by the city officials to curb the utterances of the woman.

China's Christian Population.

The total number of Christians in China, according to the Catholic Champion, is 700,000, of whom more than 500,000 are Roman Catholics. At the present time the foreign missionaries number some 3,000 men, half of these being Roman Catholics, and 1,600 women, 900 being Roman Catholic sisters. The increase in the numbers, both of the foreign missionaries and the native Christians, has been very rapid of late.

Annual Pay of Governors.

The highest salary paid to governors is $10,000 by New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Oregon and Vermont pay only $1,500.

CRAZY SUMMER FAD.

Lovers' Initials Tattooed on Pretty Maidens' Arms.

Some Employ an Old Sailor to Do the Work, Others Turn the Job Over to the Genial Rays of the Sun.

[Special New York Letter.]

THE old sailor in the little shop in the Bowery looked up from his work mending the union jack. A young woman dressed in a fluffy summer gown had darkened the doorway. The tar knew what she wanted before she spoke. He tossed the folds of the flag from off his lap revealing a timber leg—a good old-fashioned wooden stump—not one of the new-fangled affairs made of cork and springs and calculated to deceive. That he was a salt of the old school was indicated by his look and actions. His very manner brought visions of the sea and the fading outlines of white sails against the horizon of blue.

The shop was a mere hole in the wall. There was a chair or two inside and the bench on which the old sailorman sat. A few sharp-pointed needles were in a cushion on a low table, and arranged in a semicircle about them were a half dozen sticks of India ink. These alone would have told the occupation of the sailor. If not, the decorations on the walls, which consisted of pictures of human limbs covered with various fantastic designs, would have made it all clear. But if one were especially dull the sign over the door would have removed all doubt, for it read:

LATEST FAD OF GOTHAM'S SMART SET.

ARTISTIC TATTOOING.
Work for Women
A SPECIALTY.

The young woman smiled as she handed the old man a card. It bore the address of one of the most popular women in New York and Newport society. She had sent many patrons to this artist of the India ink. Hundreds of pretty maidens in the smart set bear evidences of his art.

"Yes, yes," he said, as he read the inscription. "And what design do you want?"

"I want initials," replied the maiden, and just the suspicion of a blush mounted to her cheek, made brown

TATTOOED BY THE SUN.

by the sea breeze and the sun at Newprt.

"Oh, ho," said the salt. "And they will be—?"

She picked up the card she had brought from the table and wrote on the back three letters. The sailor made an entry in a little grimy book.

"Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock," he said, and the appointment was made.

The young woman smiled, started toward the door, then turned and asked: "Oh, will it hurt much?"

The old sailor shifted his wooden leg, shrugged his shoulders and grinned, but made no reply.

The young lady was but one of a score or more a week that visit the little shop on the Bowery. To be sure there are tattooers who have put out their signs at Newport, but they are not the old genius on the Bowery. His fame has spread among those who follow the fads. The tattooing of the arms of young women of society was very popular a few years ago. Then it dropped out of vogue. But this season it has been taken up again with renewed favor by the Newport set, and Newport after all, you know, leads the fashion.

Formerly it was the proper thing to have a star, a rose, or some fanciful design tattooed upon one's arm. Now, to be perfectly correct, it must be initials. And these mean something. They must be the initials of the young lady's fiance. That means constancy, indeed, for what young lady would have indelibly stamped upon her arm the initials of a man she did not fully intend to marry? It is taken as a foregone conclusion, therefore, when a pretty girl has the first letters of a young man's name on her arm that young man will be her partner for life. It is more binding than the most ironclad contract that the shrewdest lawyer could evolve. It goes without saying that in order to be fully effective the young man in the case has the initials of his sweetheart also pricked in his arm.

But while the old sailor's customers are numerous not all the young people who visit him have initials placed upon their arms. Many of them will not take the chances of Newport engagements. Instead, they carry out the fad by resorting to the old style, and order some small and neat design.

The romance, however, of the interchange of lovers' initials is too charming to be lost. So within the last few weeks a subterfuge has been adopted that has proved quite popular among those who are not quite sure of their minds in a matrimonial way. This new method was invented by a chaperon at Newport and she has received the blessings of all the young men and women who desire to keep in the center of the social whirl. It is very simple and by following the directions the most timid debutant may stand in the same row with her stronger-minded sisters and display on her promenades on the beach a bared arm bearing the initials of the young man who has posed as her escort for the season. Of course, it is not exactly the real thing. It is like a flash of light compared to the sun, or a paste diamond to a genuine gem, but for a summer substitute it will do very well.

The imitation tattoo has also this advantage: it can be made much larger and therefore much more sensational. The receipt for making it is this:

The initials desired to be reproduced are cut out of court plaster and pasted on the arm. Then the candidate sits on the beach with her arm exposed for several days. All except the part covered by the court-plaster is tanned a dark brown and when the strips are removed the initials appear in a lighter shade. This method is a very good one, indeed, for a summer resort. If the young lady—as young ladies sometimes do—should happen to quarrel with her escort, or for other reason should desire to make a change, the sun will soon help her out of her difficulty as far as his initials are concerned and tan the letters as brown as the remainder of her arm.

As a substitute for the India ink proposition the sun initials are a success. But the old man on the Bowery continues to be in demand, which is a very good argument for the stability of the young women in New York society. While the tattoo marks are indelible, the young ladies who affect them are careful to have them placed on the side next the body and well up toward the shoulder so that they will not mar the beauties of a shapely arm displayed at social functions. Moreover, the designs are always produced in miniature and it is in this particular that the work of the old sailor excels. His etchings—that is the proper word for them—are works of art; not the clumsy article produced on the man who serves before the mast. His prices, too, correspond with his skill. For a small design no bigger than the tip of one's little finger he has been known to charge $100. But the smart set must have a fetich. So while it lasts the old sailorman in the Bowery is doing quite well.

FREDERICK BOYD STEVENSON.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

TEACHING THE COLT.

Gist of a Farmer's Interesting Address Before a Large Meeting in New England.

If a horse gets his front foot fast, even on an obstruction only a foot high, he always pulls back and will keep at it until loose or exhausted, but does not go ahead. If he gets his hind leg fast he goes ahead; if he gets half way through a narrow passage he will struggle for hours, but not back out. This is the law of his nature.

The center of the body is the pivotal point of action. This is why he pulls back on the halter. We should know what we want him to do and begin at the right end. A horse is controlled by his habits and does nothing but what we teach him. He never forgets a lesson, good or bad, and habit, not cussedness, is responsible for all troubles. The trainer must know himself what he wants the horse to do and teach properly, if a good horse is wanted.

The first lesson should begin at one hour or one day after birth, and should make him respect the superior strength of man. Catch him with one arm around his neck and the other hold of his tail so he cannot get away, run ahead or kick you. Bring the hand in contact with all parts of his body and from both sides. Be gentle, and when done press a little sugar between his lips. In two days he will follow you all over. By this means you have gained his confidence. The hogs, hens, dogs and sheep come for food when called; why not the horsees?

CART FOR COLT BREAKING.

At ten days put on the halter. No trouble to do this. But if you begin to pull on the strap he obeys natural law and begins to run back. A clothesline should be put around his body in front of the hips, and the end be put through the halter ring, so both strap and rope are held at once. A pull on the rope will land him nearly on top of you. Would not put under his tail or any part where harness would come later. Give sugar after each lesson.

Do not teach tricks, but useful lessons. The colt should be weaned at five months. Separate him from his dam and put him in a box stall. The best food is sweet, warm skimmed cow's milk, about one quart per day, with a little sugar, grain and a little hay with oats. Do not feed so as to distend the stomach, and do not feed first day until night. Put milk in pan and bring lips in contact with it and he will soon learn to drink.

Construct a cart with shafts 14 feet long. Put a crossbar across the shafts quite a distance from the wheels. Put a well-trained horse in the shafts. Four colts can be trained at once, two on each side. A jockey stick attached to end of shaft extends in front of them and a snap on it is snapped into halter ring. Straps from halter ring go back to crossbar for tugs and short straps connect the halter rings. When the cart starts they hang back and the crossbar strikes the heels and they soon learn to walk and trot.

With the word whoa, pull up the mare and every colt gets a kink in the neck from the jockey stick; a few lessons are all that are needed. Drive through mudholes, over bridges and raise umbrellas. The old horse holds them to their place, and in a few days they are well trained.

Never break a horse. A good collar, properly fitted, never makes a horse sore, and sweat pads are not only useless, but harmful. Most collars are too large, and the draft is either too low or too high. There should be but little if any motion or twist when the horse is moving. A sloping shoulder requires a close fit to sides of neck; most collars are too broad at bottom, and hames will not bring it up. All collars are fitted over the same block and a new one is round, but an old one flat.

The horse does his work from the shoulder, and should have his own collar. A new collar should be put in water over night and kept on the horse all the next day while he is working. It will give and stretch until it is a perfect fit. If the horse is in good flesh, buy a collar which will only allow four fingers between it and the breast. You can let out a hole at first. A horse is not worth a cent to us, except when he is in motion. Knees and toes should be straight and in line with shoulder—for anything out of line interferes with the gait.—Farm and Home.

Modern System of Irrigation.

Irrigation is conducted upon an economical and unique system in the San Joaquin valley in California. The streams in the mountains are used to run the electric machinery at a powerhouse, and the electricity thus generated is transmitted to the fields below, where it is applied to an electric motor operating a centrifugal pump which lifts the underflow from the stream to the surface and distributes it over the surrounding land as required. The farmer turns on his motor and the water flows. When he has enough he shuts it off and prevents useless waste.

SUNSHINE FOR HOGS.

Points to Be Considered in the Construction and Inside Arrangement of Pens.

Why is it that the nature of the hog has been so misunderstood? He does not thrive on filth, his pen and his food should be clean, and there is one other point that has been too often lost sight of, his pen should not be dark and dismal. The hog likes sunlight. The Maryland experiment station says that the hog is an animal to which sunshine is just as essential as it is to the corn plant. Neither corn nor pork can be successfully produced without plenty of sunshine. In this latitude and farther north this sunshine in winter will have to be brought into the pens through glass, but farther south, under normal conditions, it is only necessary to face the pen to the south; allow the sun's rays to reach the back of the pen on the beds and give good shelter and protect from the north and west winds. In constructing the hog pen for the station, the following points have been observed: (1) It is faced to the south so as to permit the rays of the sun to shine upon the beds of the pigs at the extreme rear end of the pen in the winter season and also to give shade in that portion in summer. (2) The lattice construction between the pens at the ends and rear admit of a free circulation of air in warm weather. (3) The location of the manure pit in the center and below the level of the sleeping and feeding floors, with all the drainage below it, aids materially in maintaining a proper sanitary condition. (4) Swinging gates close the pigs into their beds while the manure is being loaded. (5) The manure pit is concreted, which enables the saving of all liquid increment which, with the pig, amounts to 51 per cent. of the total manure value. (6) Feed bins are placed in front of each pen, which facilitates feeding and enables keeping different feeds for each pen if desired. Some of these requirements may seem pretty nice for swine according to the old ideas, but they are correct and important to success in raising the best pork.

DOOR FOR HOG-HOUSE.

Constructed So That It Will Always Be Closed by Action of the Hogs Themselves.

The advantage of having a door to a hog house that will always be closed will be readily seen. The cut shows a door that has been in service for years and found entirely satisfactory. It is made of one-inch boards and 2½ feet square. It is hinged at the top (a) and made to swing both ways, out and in. At the bottom, two by fours (B) are spiked on and rounded off at the bottom edge. A pin (C) inserted in the frame will hold the door shut when desired, and a post (D) with a row of holes at varying heights in which to insert a pin will allow the door to swing open only so far. This will allow the passage of only the little pigs if it is wished to keep the larger hogs in the house. The heavy two by fours at the bottom of the door will keep the door closed. The hogs will soon learn to operate the door.—J. L. Irwin, in Ohio Farmer.

DOOR FOR HOG HOUSE.

HELP THE HOGS ALONG.

Alfalfa is a well-liked forage crop for hogs in the west. It will be popular in the east when it is better understood.

It is too dangerous to take the risk of driving fat hogs this time of year. You can save time and trouble by using a wagon.

Hogs are filthy generally because they are compelled to be so. No animal will keep itself cleaner than a hog will if given a chance.

Ring the hogs if it is actually necessary, but do it as humanely as possible. Get the best rings and the best appliances and do it just right.

Shade is an absolute necessity for the comfort of hogs in the heat of summer. It is as important to furnish shade for them as it is food.

Never get so busy as to neglect your hogs. A stroll through the fields every few days might bring to your notice some disease or irregularity that might be costly if neglected.

Don't hesitate to ask your neighbor how he manages his hogs if he makes more of a success in this line of business than you do. He'll be glad to tell you if he is a gentleman, and you may get some pointers in this way that would take you years to find out.—Prairie Farmer.

Food Affects the Wool.

Deep pastures or lowlands are not conducive to the health of sheep, as they prefer upland pastures and a great variety of grasses. It is known that the quality of the food and the pasture has more influence on the wool than does climate. Fat sheep produce heavier and coarser fleeces than do those that are poorer in flesh. That the food is an important factor in affecting the quality of wool is shown by the fact that when fine wool sheep have been taken from the east to the west the fineness is not always retained, although the sheep will gradually become larger and the fleeces heavier.

CATARRH OF KIDNEYS

Quickly Develops Into Bright's Disease.

(PE-RU-NA CURES CATARRH WHEREVER LOCATED.)

John Herziger, son of Alderman Herziger, of Neenah, Wis., and Vice President of the Neenah Young Men's Club, writes in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, the following:

"After suffering for two years with kidney trouble I received relief and a cure from using your wonderful medicine, Peruna.

"For months I was unable to work on account of a severe pain in my back, and when I was able to do anything I was in pain and distressed most of the time.

"Hearing so much of the good results people had obtained through the use of Peruna I determined to give it a trial and it was a lucky day for me when I did so. I am well now and it only took a few bottles of Peruna."—John Herziger, 307 Commercial street, Neenah, Wis.

Two years suffering with catarrh of the kidneys, unable to work on account of the severe pain; could find no relief from medicine; gave Peruna a trial and was promptly cured—such was the experience of John Herziger, of Wisconsin.

This experience has been repeated many times. Not only in Wisconsin but in every state in the Union. It was indeed a lucky day for this young man when his attention was called to Peruna. What would have been the result had he continued suffering on and fooling away precious time with other remedies, no man can tell. But it is almost certain that it would have ended in incurable Bright's disease of the kidneys, which sooner or later would have proved fatal.

Peruna is a sure cure for incipient Bright's disease of the kidneys. Taken in the early stages of this disease, it cures permanently. Bright's disease always begins with catarrh of the kidneys. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Congressman Bankhead's Statement.

Congressman J. H. Bankhead, of Alabama, one of the most influential members of the House of Representatives, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., gives his indorsement to the great catarrh remedy, Peruna, in the following words:

"Your Peruna is one of the best medicines I ever tried, and no family should be without your remarkable remedy. As a tonic and a catarrh cure I know of nothing better."—J. H. Bankhead.

Samuel R. Sprecher, Junior Beadle Court Angelina No. 3422 I. O. O. F., 205 High St., Los Angeles, Cal., writes:

"I came here a few years ago suffering with catarrh of the kidneys, in search of health. I thought that the climate would cure me but found that I was mistaken, but what the climate could not do Peruna could and did do. Seven weeks' trial convinced me that I had the right medicine and I was then a well man. I know of at least twenty friends and members of the lodge to which I belong who have been cured of catarrh, bladder and kidney trouble through the use of Peruna and it has a host of friends in this city."—Samuel R. Sprecher.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

WE SHIP DIRECT TO

Contractors and Consumers

LUMBER LATH SHINGLES

MOULDINGS, SASH, DOORS, Etc.,
AT WHOLESALE PRICES.

COMPLETE HOUSE BILLS. COMPLETE BARN BILLS.

Permission given to examine grades before payment. We ask only satisfactory guarantee that we will get our money when stock is found as bought. SEND IN YOUR LISTS FOR ESTIMATES.

JOHN E. BURNS LUMBER COMPANY,

Long Distance Phones:
MONROE 211,
MONROE 288,
MONROE 290.

40 W. Chicago Ave.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

MIRACLES OF TODAY

The Wonderful Stories of Two People Saved from Horrible Death

It probably never occurred before that two people horribly afflicted in entirely different ways, and living far apart, were miraculously rescued from the very jaws of death, by the same means, and almost at the same time. The stories of George Herniman, of Buffalo, and Mrs. George W. Sharp, of Washington, Kan., read like the wonders of Divine interference. Let them tell their experience in their own plain, truthful language:

Buffalo, N. Y., June 14—(Special).—I write to tell you how much Cascarets Candy Cathartic have done for me in the past year, and you may send any or all of the people of Western New York to me and use my name as strongly as you wish, for I know that they have saved my life. I had an injury to my spine and the spinal cord was hurt, and of course was paralyzed from the hips down. The doctors could not move my bowels, saying that that they would never move again, and one of the doctors—my own cousin—an army surgeon, said a syringe could not be used on account of the large bone being broken and bad; and they also said that I could not live six months, if that long. Well, thanks to God and your candy cathartic Cascarets, I sit here four years later in my wheel chair and write this to you. I can walk for five minutes on crutches, and say that your Cascarets have saved my life, and, with old Mother Nature's help, are curing me. I have used one 10c. box a week for two and one-half years. But my case is one in 100,000 to recover at all; and I had the best of doctors, too, all saying the same thing—no hope. But we fooled them all this time.
—George W. Herniman, 63 Boyd St., Buffalo, N.Y.

Washington, Kan., June 1—(Special).—I had constipation of the worst nature for years. Medicine had no effect upon my stomach, and my stomach was in such a condition from purgatives that I could not take food. I was taken to a hospital and my bowels were operated upon for constipation. I did not get any better going through that terrible operation. My bowels were dead—no action at all—and the doctors gave me up. I could not eat anything but stale bread and water, literally starving to death. Lost over 100 pounds and was a living skeleton. After trying everything else I gave Cascarets a trial, not thinking they would help me. But they did right away. I commenced to eat and sleep, and from that on I could get out of bed and then got so I could go out riding—something I had not done for over three years. Now I do all my work. My friends just marvel; they say they never saw such a miracle. I tell them Cascarets did it, and they all want them. I weighed 60 pounds when I commenced taking Cascarets and now I weigh 170.
—Mrs. George W. Sharp.

No one should wait until such a terrible affliction comes upon him or her, but use Cascarets always to keep the bowels and internal organs gently and naturally active. All druggists sell Cascarets, the sweet, aromatic, never-griping candy cathartic, 10c., 25c., 50c. a box.

If you want to try before you buy, FREE FOR THE ASKING: a sample of CASCARETS and the famous health booklet.

Address STERLING REMEDY CO., Chicago and New York. 473

NO HELP NO PAY! If you have eczema of skin or scalp, we will mail you a box of KALIALE; if it helps you send us 25c; if it don't it costs you nothing. KALIALE MFG. CO., Clayton, Mich.

STARK TREES best by Test—77 YEARS. LARGEST Nursery. FRUIT BOOK free. We WANT MORE SALESMEN PAY CASH Weekly STARK BROS, Louisiana, Mo.; Dansville, N. Y.; Etc

Finest TEA Grown 45 cts. per lb. Special Price to Agents. Write HOME TEA COMPANY, 32 Pearl St., New York City.

RAG DOLLS To any little girl who will send us 10 cents, together with the names and addresses of 20 little friends, we will send, postpaid, one of our CRY BABY DOLLS. ART FABRIC MILLS, Department C. C. 40 White Street, NEW YORK.

SOZODONT for the TEETH 25c

A. N. K.—C 1883

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1901.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET

For Comptroller of the Treasury:
HERMAN S. PLATT,
Of Baltimore City.

For Clerk of the Court of Appeals:
THOMAS PARRAN,
Of Calvert County.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY TICKET.

For State Senator:
ROBERT A. RAVENSCROFT,
Of District No. 5.

For House of Delegates:
PATRICK E. FINZEL,
Of District No. 9.
CHARLES A. ASHBY,
Of District No. 14.

For Sheriff:
WILLIAM A. MAFFETT,
Of District No. 6.

For Treasurer:
JAMES W. WHITE,
Of District No. 14.

For County Commissioners:
TAYLOR FRIEND,
Of District No. 2.
JACOB STUMP,
Of District No. 4.

For Register of Wills:
EDWIN E. FRIEND,
Of District No. 7.

For County Surveyor:
FRANKLIN P. GREEN,
Of District No. 11.

THE young stump speakers are now practicing in secret and selecting the size of shirt collar adapted to campaigning in Maryland.

THE ambition of our genial friend Whitmore to become a candidate on the Democratic ticket has been attained. His election, however, is a future consideration.

YELLOW journals are coming in for numerous lambastings in connection with President McKinley's assassination. But the most effective rebuke which can be administered is not to read them.

DEMOCRATIC managers are said to be worrying over the large number of illiterates in the party. Jackson and the liberty tree have always been a valuable guide to the intelligence of that party.

THE Democratic extra session cost nearly $150,000. Result: If you are unable to read you can't vote. In order to disfranchise a few thousand niggers half as many white people were also disfranchised.

THE discovery of a feeling of apathy among the voters of Maryland will be followed in November by the further discovery that the indifference is largely confined to Democrats who cannot swallow their respective tickets.

SIX of the candidates on the Democratic ticket reside in or near Oakland. Our city and immediate community should not become puffed up, however, over this compliment, as the chances for the election of any of the candidates named are necessarily small.

THE voters of Garrett county, should the Democrats be successful at the election next month, will be called upon to contribute their share to a "deficiency" for taking the State census which was made expressly for the benefit of the Democratic politicians of the State.

IF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S administration continues to grow in popular favor at the same rate which has marked its beginning, he will be able, when his term of office is ended, to add another volume to his history and call it "The Winning of the North, South and East, as Well as the West."

WHAT is sauce for the Democratic goose is not sauce for the Republican gander, according the Gorman-Smith doctrine. It was all right for the Democrats to spend $40,000 of public funds to acquire a list of the "registered voters not found in precincts" and the "male adults not registered," but it is all wrong for the Republicans to desire access to these lists. Now, we are quite sure, if the positions of the two parties were reversed, there would be a great hue and cry of "politics in it" from Democratic sources.

MR. GORMAN'S whip was in evidence at the Democratic convention held in Oakland Monday. One or two of the "insurgents" participated in the deliberations of that august assembly, but as a rule they were conspicuous by their absence. The lash was either worn out or not applied with as willing a hand as was desired by the big boss.

THE publication or utterance of anarchistic sentiments, the inciting or counseling of murderous and unlawful acts, should be prohibited under penalty of death, imprisonment or banishment from the country, as the gravity of the case might demand. In addition to this, we need more drastic laws and a more rigid enforcement of existing laws against the admission of all whose blood, whose birth, whose teachings, whose practices, would degrade the social status of the country or menace the integrity and perpetuity of free institutions.

The hope of the world must not be disappointed through the powerlessness of the republic to protect its officials and citizens in their lives, their homes, their liberties and their property. Despots and monarchs can protect themselves by armed legions, by arbitrary exercise of power, by suppression of free publication and free speech and by the ruthless destruction of even those who counsel together for the amelioration of most grievous wrongs.

If our civilization is to stand, our Presidents must be safe in the midst of the common people. They must be safe through the encouragement and not by the suppression of legitimate public discussion. They must be safe through the inflexible enforcement of the laws which the people make for themselves.

The Partisan State Census.

The notoriously partisan conception of their duties, entertained by Mr. Buchanan Schley and others, charged with the work of taking the State census, as provided for by an act of the General Assembly, passed at the special session, is clearly shown by the refusal of the official mentioned to place the information obtained by the enumerators at the disposal of citizens who ask for it. As the count was made at the expense of the taxpayers ostensibly in the interest of truth and the common good, it was to be supposed that every responsible Marylander would have free and unobstructed access to the data collected, and that the fullest opportunity would be offered for testing the accuracy of the schedules. But those who entertained such a belief merely showed that they are impracticable dreamers and know nothing about the fine points in politics.

Behind the avowed purpose to correct the alleged inequalities of the Federal census was concealed the intent to obtain statistical material for purely partisan purposes—material which might be used to manipulate elections and carry districts; information of a character that would not be accessible to the opposition and which could be used to overcome adverse majorities at the polls. The state was saddled with an expenditure of thousands of dollars professedly to rectify mistakes which had in the basis of representation as fixed by the Federal enumerators, but in reality to supply the Democratic campaign managers with matter available for practicing trickery at the polls. This is the true inwardness of the state census, as revealed by Col. Buchanan Schley's refusal to furnish copies of certain date at the request of reputable residents, who have an unquestioned right to statements obtained by the use of the public funds and presumably in conformity with a general law.

Technicalities may enable Superintendent Schley and his fellow plotters against the welfare of the state to retain illegally in their possession data which are the property of the people, having been paid for with their money; but the subversion of the spirit of the law is none the less flagrant on that account, nor does the underlying motive which prompts concealment appear more creditable.

A Precious Document.

The Hon. Lloyd Wilkinson, Letter-Writer-in-Chief to the Democratic Campaign Committee, has again buckled down to work. In a column-long address issued to the "Democratic Voters of Maryland," published last week's Democrat, the Hon. Murray Vandiver signs his name to the following appeal:

"Keep the State in safe Democratic hands and rely upon a Democratic administration for the inauguration and conduct of all needed measures of enlightened progress and reform."

The Democratic party coming fresh from its extra session triumphs, with its Governor and chief men laughing in their sleeves at the inability of the Republicans to get hold of the census returns so useful in registration work, in the midst of a perfect saturnalia of partisanship in the Police Department, with the very recent picture before them of the leading Democrats in Baltimore disgorging public moneys after many years, with a disorganized municipal government and the pleasing prospect of a return to power of Mr. Gorman, appealing to the people of the State to trust to them for the "inauguration and conduct of all needed measures of enlightened progress and reform" is "coming it" just a little too strong.

It is true that there is a saving word in the exhortation. It will be found that Mr. Vandiver only promises the "needed measures." As long as he and Senator Gorman and Governor Smith, with Col. Buchanan Schley and the three or four others who pass on all matters for the whole Democratic party, can be the judges of what is "needed," they should not be afraid of having any false promises to rise up and greet them after the Legislature meets. Mr. Gorman is doubtless "needed," as is a repetition of the actions of the most corrupt Legislature in the last twenty years—that of the session of 1900. Election laws disfranchising thousands of citizens are "needed," if there is no other way to keep the Democratic party in power; so are $40,000 census acts for the use of the Democratic Campaign Committee and gerrymandering bills. No other police law is "needed." This is good enough to suit any one of their number, even though it was passed and is being administered in obedience to the following, taken from the Democratic platform of August 2, 1899:

"We favor a non-partisan administration of the Police Department of Baltimore and of such a thorough and careful revision of the laws in relation thereto as will emancipate the force from partisan control or intimidation."

The Hon. Murray Vandiver will do well to remember that other things are needed besides campaign vaporings. Votes are needed.

Let It Be From the Union, By the Union, For the Union.

The memorial in lasting stone or enduring bronze, that is to be erected in Canton to our late President, will be a greater success and the more speedily erected if the moyements on its behalf are nationalized as much as possible.

It is to be the tribute of this great nation in the truest sense in that it is to be erected by the contributions of all the people, but when all the people desire, as they must certainly do, on this sad occasion, to cast in their mite or million, opportunity in some systematic way should be afforded them.

It seems to us best to have the governors of the states, ex-officio, form into a committee, each becoming the head of the McKinley memorial fund in his state, and each acting for all in that state. In this way the greatest scope, together with greatest system can be given the work and the people in every section of the land and of every walk of life, will be enabled to take a state as well as personal interest in its success.

There is no mistaking the earnestness of the popular heart in its loving tribute to our great dead, but in so great a work, great heads and strong arms must direct the heart.

Maryland called for the first day of supplication for our President's recovery; it would be well for her also to take initiative steps in this movement by the Union for a fitting lasting tribute to the Union's dead.

GRANTSVILLE.

The County Commissioners met in special session at Grantsville Wednesday to ratify the report of the viewers relocating the New Germany road. After a careful survey of the old road and inspection of the new route they decided to furnish means to do the work. This is not only a necessity but a public economy as the county is likely to avoid litigation by this wise action of the commissioners. Some agreement or arrangement will likely be made and a precedent set to govern such cases in the future.

The duties of the County Commissioners are difficult, delicate and important. This board has been fair, faithful, frugal and intelligent and deserve the approbation of their fellow citizens..

With the nomination of the Democratic county ticket the canvass opens. So far as we know and can learn every man on either ticket is a gentleman and a worthy citizen. No personal issues can or will be tolerated. Party lines will be drawn on the living issues of the hour. Every district will be thoroughly canvassed by the Republican organization, meetings held in every district. Senator Ravenscroft, the head of the ticket, will lead the canvass. With his knowledge and experience every interest and issue will be thoroughly discussed.

Much enthusiasm exists throughout the county. The young men are interested and aroused. Clubs are being formed in every district, brass bands, glee clubs and all the paraphanalia of a red hot fight will be seen and heard.

Look out for the largest majority for the Republican ticket ever given in Garrett county.

Special Rates to Buffalo Pan-American Exposition, Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Excursion tickets from Oakland, Md., to Buffalo and return via Pittsburg account Pan-American Exposition now on sale at ticket offices Baltimore & Ohio Railroad:

TEN DAY TICKETS—On sale daily, $13.35.

FIFTEEN DAY TICKETS—On sale daily, $16.80.

SEASON TICKETS—On sale daily, good returning until Nov. 30th, 1901, $19.20.

For full details, time of trains, etc., call on Agent Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. til nov 1

You Can Lead a Horse to water but you can't make him drink.

You can make him eat salt. You can stuff food into his stomach but you can't make him use it.

Scott's Emulsion can make you use it. How? By making you hungry, of course. Scott's Emulsion makes a thin body hungry all over. Thought a thin body was naturally hungry didn't you? Well it isn't. A thin body is asleep—not working—gone on a strike. It doesn't try to use it's food.

Scott's Emulsion wakes it up—puts it to work again making new flesh. That's the way to get fat.

Send for free sample.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 409 Pearl St., N. Y.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

Oil in Golden California

The Rich Fields Uncovered Rival Those of Russia.

INVESTORS REAPING A HARVEST

The old days of Titusville and Oil City, where fortunes were made in a night, are completely outdone by the magnificent oil fields now being uncovered and developed in Southern California. Thousands of investors all over America are already beginning to reap thair harvest in dividends.

The Central Pacific Oil Company

At Los Angeles, California, controls the cream of the nine different fields. Two million have already been used in purchasing twenty-five hundred acres of magnificent oil territory in these sections. The company is one of the most progressive now operating on the Pacific Coast. This company offer

Your Purchase Absolutely Guaranteed By the Leading Trust Company of California

The Continental Building and Loan Association of San Francisco, Cal., (capital $12,000,000) one of the oldest and strongest financial institutions in the Golden State, after having thoroughly investigated our proposition, have agreed to guarantee the holders of Central Pacific Oil Stock six per cent. interest per annum for eight years, while every indication points to a profit many times that amount. If you want some of the first 100,000 shares send your orders to the Secretary of the Company, A. Samuel Parks, or through Wells, Fargo & Co. express, or to the depository of the Company, the Broadway Bank and Trust Company, Los Angeles, or direct to Central Pacific Oil Company.

Money Back if You Want It.

Purchasers of the first hundred thousand shares of this stock will have the option of returning same to the Company at the expiration of 1 year from the date of purchase and receive the full amount of cash paid for the same with interest at 6 per cent. per annum less any dividends paid on said stock, provided 60 days' notice be given the Company of such intention.

CENTRAL PACIFIC OIL CO.,

Offices, 611, 615 and 617 Laughlin Building, Los Angeles, California.

NOTICE OF REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 18, 1901.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 33, Chapter 202 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland, 1896, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respective Election Districts of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on Tuesday, October 1st,

Tuesday, October 8th,
and on
Tuesday, October 15th,
for revision only.

(No one can Register after Tuesday, Oct. 8.)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing, possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts, and for the purpose of performing all other duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland and Chapter 202 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1896.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the store room of Chas. S. May in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at Ed. Schlossnagle's Saddlery Shop in the town of Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in O'Hanley's Hall in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Thomas Garvey's house in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

The Officers of Registration for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Nathan C. Browning in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Corrigan property, Third and Alder streets, in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the old Hoye place on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration for the Ninth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the shop of Samuel Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the building owned by Dr. J. W. Laughlin in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the shop of H. A. Groves in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in the town of Kitzmillersville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the Opera House Building in the town of Oakland.

DANIEL E. BECKMAN,
L. H. FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 1 of Garrett county.

WILLIAM WELCH,
WALTER W. SAVAGE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 2 of Garrett county.

JAMES H. BEVANS,
C. C. DURST,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 3 of Garrett county.

ERVAN FAZENBAKER,
JAMES H. REYNOLDS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 4 of Garrett county.

JOHN H. GATTERMAN,
ASA B. FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 5 of Garrett county.

HARRISON SINES,
REUBEN M. ENLOW,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 6 of Garrett county.

JOSEPH H. SMITHMAN,
LINCOLN CALLIS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 7 of Garrett county.

JOHN H. HARVEY,
GEORGE D. STAHL,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 8 of Garrett county.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
DANIEL B. LAYMAN,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 9 of Garrett county.

ARLA SOLLARS,
C. L. PAUGH,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 10 of Garrett county.

WALTER WARNICK,
JOHN MERRILL,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 11 of Garrett county.

JAMES BOWSER,
GEORGE W. ENGLE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 12 of Garrett county.

L. C. HAMILL,
W. S. PEW,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 13 of Garrett county.

WADE H. HINEBAUGH,
SIMON MYERS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 14 of Garrett county.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President,
FRANK WELCH,
A. G. STURGISS,
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk. 28—5t.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

DIXON & KELSO will pay 70c cash, or 75c, ½ cash, for potatoes.

Mrs. Kate T. Crane, of the Ladies' Bazaar, has returned from a business trip to the eastern cities.

Miss Laura Matthews, who was east in the interest of the Baltimore Store, has returned to Oakland.

Hon. P. E. Finzel arrived in Oakland this morning from Washington and will remain here several days.

Miss Lillie Hagans, of Morgantown, is in Oakland and will spend the present month as the guest of Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell.

Merchant D. M. Dixon, of Oakland, accompanied by Assemblyman Merritt Wilson left for Buffalo Saturday night.

Mr. John H. Barlow and sister Miss Mary have moved to Parkersburg, W. Va., where Mr. Barlow will continue the cigar making business.

Mr. Floyd Crowe, the Democratic nominee for County Commissioner, is among the new subscribers to THE REPUBLICAN this week.

"The man who sneers at his neighbors," says the Accident Philopopher, "would probably be very much surprised to know what his neighbors think of him."

Clerk to the County Commissioners A. G. Ross and Deputy Sheriff Silas O. Wiley left on Saturday afternoon for Buffalo, N. Y., where they will spend this week visiting the Pan-American Exposition.

The West Virginia Central & Pittsburg Railway will sell Excursion Tickets from all stations on its line to ELKINS, W. Va., on Oct. 2, 3 and 4, good for return trip until October 5th, 1901, inclusive, at ONE FARE for round trip. ACCOUNT of Fair and Races to be held at ELKINS.

County Commissioner E. W. Kelso, in company with Commissioners Geary and Stephens, inspected the new road leading from Grantsville to New Germany on Tuesday of this week. The Commissioners agreed to furnish the means with which to build the road.

The West Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will convene to-day at Fairmont. Rev. R. B. Ward, former pastor of the Oakland church, is secretary of the conference. Rev. Asberry Mick, the present pastor of the church here, preached his farewell sermon Sunday night.

Gen. Charles H. Grosvenor, of Athens, Ohio, the distinguished Ohio congressman, passed through this city yesterday evening being enroute from Washington to his home. Gen. Grosvenor will take an active part in the Ohio political campaign in the interest of the Republican party.

Capt. and Mrs. Matthew Markland have as their guest at their residence in Oakland Mr. J. A. Howells, of Jefferson, Ohio. Mr. Howells is a veteran newspaper man and has been connected with the Ashtabula Sentinel for over half a century. He made this office a fraternal visit Tuesday morning.

Ex-Sheriff Charles Wegman, of Grantsville, who has been on the police force of Baltimore City until quite recently, has resigned his office and is at home settling up the estate of his recently deceased father. Mr. Wegman will not return to Baltimore, but expects to be employed at Grantsville.

Judge and Mrs. David W. Sloan and family, who spent the summer at the Phillips house on the Mountain Lake Park road, left Oakland Tuesday morning for Frostburg, whither they journeyed overland via Grantsville. After a stop at Frostburg over night they went on to Cumberland. George D. White accompanied the Judge and his family and will return to-day with the team.

M. Maroney & Son advertise in another column to-day the sale of horses, carriages and other vehicles, whips, robes, farming implements, etc. The property to be sold comprises the entire outfit of two well equipped livery stables. The sale will take place at the Green street stable of the firm in Oakland on Saturday, Oct. 19th. Much of the property to be sold is quite valuable and many bargains may be secured.

The celebrated Bloomer Girls' base ball team was scheduled to play a game of ball at Oakland, Md., last Monday. Wonder if the Oakland boys were as slow as the the Meyersdale boys—unable to catch on that the so-called bloomer girls were not girls at all, but boys dressed and padded to represent girls. The Meyersdale young men could not tell the artificial from the real, but they excuse themselves on the ground that the average Meyersdale girl is also largely made up of cotton and other padding material, and that all human beings look much alike to them when largely made up of such material. But we car hardly accept such an excuse, for we can hardly believe that the Meyersdale girls have degenerated like that. At any rate we know by experience that Meyersdale used to have girls some years ago that were the real article.—Salisbury Star.

Messrs. Charles and Howard Robinson, of Baltimore, are the guests of relatives in Oakland.

WANTED—A woman to do cooking and general housework. Apply N. S. Heindel, REPUBLICAN building.

Daniel Miller, of Washington, arrived in Oakland last Thursday to spend a few days with his sisters.

Lemuel L. Savage, Esq., of Sang Run, was a visitor to Oakland Monday and made this office a brief call.

Col. and Mrs. A. G. Sturgiss and two daughters left yesterday morning for a week's visit to the Pan-American Exposition.

Mrs. Alice Tasker has shipped her household goods and left Oakland for Manassas, Va., where she expects to make her future home.

LOST—Black leather pocket instrument case containing surgical instruments. Finder will be rewarded by returning same to Dr. I. D. Newman, Oakland, Md. 30 3*

It is rumored that a new plant of the Enterprise Tanning Company will be established next spring at a point somewhere on the West Virginia Central Railway extension.

Come and see the largest and best assortment of gloves and mittens ever carried in stock in Swanton. Also a full line of underwear, as well as shoes for everybody. Bring along your cash and produce and get credit for the balance. Wm. W. Sweet, Agt.

Hon. W. R. Getty has been appointed notary public at Grantsville by Governor John Walter Smith. The services of a notary at Grantsville will be required on account of the location of the new bank at that place.

Mr. Wm. L. Shaffer, of near Deer Park, was in Oakland on Friday last and had posters printed at this office announcing the sale at public auction of all his personal property, which will take place Oct. 29. Mr. Shaffer recently sold his farm near the above named place.

Rev. S. M. Engle, at present pastor of the Presbyterian church at Westernport, and who served the congregation of the Garrett Memorial church at Oakland faithfully for several years, has accepted a call to preach at Parsons. He will move to the latter place from Westernport within a week or two.

O. W. Boyer, Esq., who spent some months at Beckman, Md., settling up an estate for a relative, has returned to his home in Salisbury. Although in his 77th year he does six days' work at his trade as a carpenter each week and says he feels good on it. He is as agile as most men at 45 or 50 years of age. Besides his work he frequently walks down to town Sundays to worship in the M. E. church of which he is a devoted member.—Meyersdale Commercial.

Manager Charles Headley, who has been at Oakland for the season, returned to Grafton Sunday evening and has taken personal charge of the Grafton House. Mr. Headley experienced a very successful season as manager of the Oakland Hotel the past summer, and has leased that big hotel for another season. Extensive repairs and improvements will be made in the building by the B. & O. company.—Grafton Sentinel.

As soon as the public schools in the county are opened literary and debating societies will be organized in a number of them. These organizations are deservedly popular all over the country and they develop men and women into ready thinkers and speakers. Their value in broadening the minds of the rising generation has been recognized in other sections and here in Garrett county it would be well to have a debating society in every school.

Many a man who would be ashamed to strike a brute beast with a bludgeon has no shame in making a bludgeon of his tongue to strike human beings in the tender places of their being—their social sensibilities and their self esteem. Cruelty in its gross and outward forms we have in good measure suppressed, but the refined cruelty of the bitter word, the unloving censure, the abusive harrangue, is not yet extinct. Let us be careful of men's inner skin as of their outer.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Turner, of Honolulu, H. I., who were the guests of Mr. John A. Grant and family in Oakland for a few days last week, left on Friday morning for St. Louis, Mo., where they will visit friends prior to continuing their journey to their home. Mr. Turner carries from Oakland a very favorable impression of the town and the community generally. He is engaged at Honolulu in a manufacturing enterprise and sees here the necessity of a number of factories.

Cows Killed by the Cars.

Monday night of this week four valuable Jersey cows, the property of John Whorrel, living on the Capt. Gordon farm adjoining Mountain Lake Park, broke from the enclosure in which they were pasturing and wandered to the railroad track. At the Frick crossing a train caught them and killed them instantly. The loss sustained by Mr. Whorrel is placed by him at $75.

AN ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE.

An Appeal for Manhood and the Manhood Suffrage.

To the People of Maryland:

Immediately after the adjournment of the extra session of the Maryland Legislature the Republican Senators and Delegates held a meeting in the south wing of the State Library and formulated the following address "to the people of Maryland:"

"The Republican members of the General Assembly believe that it is their duty to address you a brief review of the extraordinary session that has just closed. We are led to adopt this unusual course by the belief that unless the power of the autocratic and unscrupulous coterie that has possession of our State government is promptly rebuked and checked there is grave danger that our election laws will be further mutilated and the machinery of the government again employed as an agency of extortion and corruption. The hand of the political boss is visible in every act of the desperate play, from its inception to its culmination. The extra session idea had its birth as a result of a political deal that was to put one man in the United States Senate by stripping 50,000 citizens of their constitutional and sovereign right to vote and to give to another man the control of the construction of the sewerage system of Baltimore city that will cost $20,000,000 before it is completed. These two men had complete control of a sufficient number of Democratic members of the two branches of the Legislature to secure the passage of any law they deemed necessary to advance their personal ambition.

SESSION BEGAN WITH FRAUD.

"When the Senate met on the day set by the Governor, the secretary declared a quorum present when only 13 Senators were in the chamber, and concealed the fact by omitting from the journal the names of those present. The 13 Democratic Senators present knowingly participated in this in violation of an express provision of the Constitution, which requires the presence of 14 Senators, and attempted to organize and legislate. In so doing they were advised and directed by their chiefs. Such party discipline is dangerous and such domination intolerable.

"The new election law renders it impossible for the citizens who cannot read to vote, and is so cunningly drawn that it will be difficult for the educated to avoid having their ballots thrown out. Any mark upon the ballot other than an 'X' within the voting square, however innocently made, will render the ballot void. Furthermore, an error in voting for a candidate for a single office, where there are a large number to be filled, will prevent the remainder of the ballot from being counted. Under the act of 1896 it was made the duty of the judges of election to learn from the ballot, if possible, the intention of the voter, and the ballot was counted to the extent to wnich such intention could be ascertained. The old law tried to make the exercise of the citizen's right to vote easy; the new law makes it as difficult as possible. It can be predicted with confidence that disputes will arise in every polling place throughout the State on election day. We ask you to compare this condition with the peaceful and orderly elections to which we have become accustomed since 1896, and the results of which have never been questioned by either party, althongh each in turn has been successful and defeated. We offered amendments to correct the defects in the law, but they fell on deaf ears.

REVOLUTIONARY RULING.

"The President of the Senate, in violation of its rules and precedents, declared a motion for the previous question in order, and for the first time in the history of the Senate debate was cut off. The time-respected custom of permitting a full and unrestricted discussion of questions was swept aside and a most important check upon hasty and ill-considered legislation destroyed. In the House of Delegates the previous question was constantly used to prevent amendments and discussion, and was moved when the election bill was on its final passage so as to permit but one Republican speech.

"The sewerage bill was reported by the chairman of the committee without a meeting of the committee being held, and the election was certified to be correct by Democratic members of the Engrossing Committee without the Republican members being offered an opportunity to examine and compare it. The men who brought about the call for the extraordinary session against the wishes of the people and solely for party expediency had trained their representatives in the Legislature to believe that it was right to gain a party advantage at the expense of the dearest rights of the people.

THE COSTLY STATE CENSUS.

"We earnestly and consistently favored a verification of the census and were ready to aid in every effort to have the same placed above suspicion. We advocated leaving the whole matter to the discretion of the Governor, and that he be given full power to satisfy himself of the correctness of the census, even if an entirely new enumeration of the population of the State was necessary. We believe that the Governor would have found that this could have been accomplished without extra expense to the State. The act of Congress authorizing the taking of the Twelfth Census provides as follows: 'Whenever it shall appear that any portion of the enumeration and census provided for in this act has been negligently or improperly taken, and is by reason thereof incomplete or erroneous, the director of the census may cause such incomplete and unsatisfactory enumeration and census to be amended or made anew, under such methods as may, in his discretion, be practicable.' The only publication of the census mentioned in this law is the volumes referred to in Section 7, and the director is allowed until July 1, 1902, to make. These volumes have not yet gone to the printer. The census bulletins are merely tentative, and invite criticism. The returns made to Congress last December were merely for Congressional apportionment and were not final for any other purpose. In December, 1801, President Jefferson, in a message to Congress, after the census had been returned to it, substituted a corrected return for Maryland. We were not shown that the Governor had made the slightest effort to secure from the Federal Government what the law requires it to give, nor was the Democratic majority willing to authorize him to make an effort to get it, on terms which he himself might dictate, before incurring such an expense, so bent were they on party spoils.

SESSION FOR PERSONAL ADVANTAGE.

"The session was called simply to prop the political fortunes of a few men, who masquerade as the Democratic party, and the people are expected to pay the heavy bill contracted by them in the name of the State for this purpose. You are expected to help intrench them against yourselves, though you have but recently repudiated them. Those who misgoverned the State prior to 1895 are again in power. The fear of the independent vote has made them desperate. If the parties can be made more uneven by disfranchising 50,000 freemen, they think they need not fear defeat. It is for you to consider and reflect. The work of the session is only the beginning. Their plans will be disclosed gradually so as not to alarm you. Unless you rise in your might and crush this attack upon the suffrage in its incipiency, it will be construed as a license to wipe out what remains of our elections a by-word.

OPPOSED TO FEDERAL INTERFERENCE.

"This is a fight to the finish before the people of Maryland for manhood and manhood suffrage; we believe the people can meet the issue and wisely solve it without aid from any outside source, and are, therefore, opposed to any Federal interference. Although the disfranchisement of citizens is in violation of the Constitution of our State, and comes within the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, we favor leaving the entire question to the people of Maryland, and pledge our efforts to that end."

S. A. WILLIAMS,
WASH. WILKINSON,
JAS. H. BAKER,
C. L. MARSH,
H. C. DODSON,
J. DE B. WALBACH, G.,
JOS. W. WOOLFINGER,
GEO. B. MERRICK,
JAS. D. FELDMEYER,
J. B. CRITCHFIELD,
WILLIAM CLOSE,
AZANIAH KENDALL,
W. E. WARD,
H. C. DISHAROON,
J. FRANK KREMS,
BYRON PHELPS,
OLIVER D. SIMMONS,
J. B. CONTEE,
LEWIS PUTZEL,
ROBERT M. MESSICK,
L. E. P. DENNIS,
R. A. RAVENSCROFT,
GEO. T. C. GRAY,
D. E. DICK,
CHARLES B. BRIGGS,
P. E. FINZEL,
MERRITT WILSON,
S. S. LANCASTER,
A. L. FRENZEL,
JOSEPH RADCLIFFE,
CHARLES P. NORRIS,
WALTER W. DRYDEN,
M. DITTY,
E. EARL GRAEFF,
SAMUEL L. GIBSON,
CLAY D. PERKINS.

Life of William McKinley.

Mr. George B. Dunham, clerk in the office of the Preston Lumber and Coal Company at this place, fills in his spare moments from business taking orders for a beautfully illustrated and handsomely bound volume entitled the "Life of William McKinley." The book is of more than ordinary interest and is found by Mr. Dunham to be a great seller. He has already secured some thirty subscribers to the work. It should find a place in the library of every American citizen. The price is $1.50 and $2 per volume, according to binding.

Garrett Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Prayer meeting and song service Sunday evening, October 6, 1901, at 7.30 o'clock. All are cordially invited to attend.

Union Veteran Legion Encampment—Gettysburg, Pa., October 9-11—Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

One fare for the Round Trip to the famous Battlefield. Tickets on sale October 6,7,8,9 and 10, good to return until October 15th, inclusive. Apply Ticket Agents Baltimore & Ohio R. R. for full information.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the land of the undersigned lying in District No. 2 of Garrett county either for the purpose of fishing, hunting or passing through the same with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. C. W. FRIEND.

Church Notice.

Services in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church Sunday morning and evening. Services at Deer Park, 2.30 p. m. A cordial welcome to all.

GEO. I. UHLER, Pastor.

Came Near Dying

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely I went to sleep and did not awake for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of this remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say, 'God bless you and the splendid medicine you make.' 'This remedy is for sale by all dealers.

When you cannot sleep for coughing it is hardly necessary that any one should tell you that you need a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to allay the irritation of the throat, and make sleep possible. It is good. Try it. For sale by all dealers.

Public Sale

—OF—

LIVE STOCK,

CARRIAGES, Etc.

The undersigned will offer at public auction at their stables on Green street, opposite the City Roller Mills, Oakland, Md., on

Saturday, Oct. 19th,

beginning at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., the following personal property, comprising the entire stock and fixtures of two first-class livery stables:

Twenty-two head of Horses, among them being a number of fast trotters and several finely matched teams, 2 Carriages, 3 Surreys, 3 Traps, 6 Buggies, 2 Phætons, 5 Runabouts, 10 sets double Carriage and Coach Harness, 10 sets Single2 Harness, sets Team Harness, 1 Brown Farm Wagon, 1 Harrow, 1 Plow, lot of Robes and Whips, lot Collars, Curry Combs and Brushes, lot Log Chains, lot Single Trees, 1 Horse Rake, 7 Ladies' Saddles, 4 Men's Saddles, lot of Poles and Shafts, several Suits Coachmen's Liveries and many other things.

TERMS OF SALE—On sums of $5 or over a credit of six months will be given, purchasers to execute their notes with security satisfactory to the undersigned and to bear interest from day of sale. Sums under $5 cash.

M. MARONEY & SON.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL. Publisher.

OAKLAND, : GARRETT CO., MD.

The Boy and the Man

By J. M. JONES

THE Boy came at 7:30 p. m. and stayed.

I did not want him. I knew that the moment might come when his presence would be positively obnoxious, yet I could not get rid of him. He was well-meaning (in so far as he could be said to have a meaning), light-haired, long-legged.

He sat on the sofa, and put himself into 32 distinct attitudes, not one of which was graceful. I could not exactly tell him to go, and anything short of that he disregarded.

He wore a pink-striped waistcoat and a blue tie.

He did not admire me; his idol was in short frocks and fuzzy hair. Other boys worship the seasoned belle, but his taste in enslavers was the only peculiar thing about him. I never cared for the very young attached to me; and the very young despairing for another is even worse.

He did not even talk of Her. I wished he had. I could have sympathized to the best in my power. Presumably I was too antique in his estimation (I was 27) to take an interest in such things. He talked of love to make up for his silence on the nearer subject. I listened and wearied, and took out the fancy work I kept for the Boy, and never finished.

He spoke with the superior air of one instructing the ignorant. I was, I am afraid, absent-minded, and he languished after awhile.

I offered him sweets and insulted him into a ruby blush.

After that he stared sadly at me, as if he had come for no other purpost than to feast his eyes for one last time on my adored features.

He was very like the immortal Toots.

At last the conversation got upon its legs, and, in a rickety fashion, managed to keep moving.

The marriage question (not the improper marriage question) seemed to interest him greatly. He did not ask for my advice, but merely soliloquized at some length. He mentioned the desirability of early marriages; the impossibility of asking a girl to share ten shillings a week; the expense of bringing up a young family; there was the education of the sons and the portion for the daughters.

"You would not educate them?" I inquired, smothering an incipient laugh.

He thought he would let them choose between an education and an income. "Besides, they might marry."

"To be sure," I assented. "And there might be grandchildren."

A puzzled look came across the Boy's face; he had not thought of the grandchildren.

"O, that would be all right," he said, after a short silence.

"A man is only responsible for his own family. Directly responsible, of course." Here I threaded a needle. "But there is no harm in looking at things from all sides."

However, we had plunged too far into futurity even for the Boy; he took another bypath from the same thoroughfare.

"I think it very wrong for people to throw obstacles in the way of marriage," he remarked, solemnly.

"But on the other side," then said I, "it would never do to encourage the thing too much; if the couple quarreled they would lay the blame of the position on you."

This was evidently a new idea; he pondered on it some time.

The Man came in, sat down, and waited.

"People might sometimes interfere unintentionally," the Boy said, reflectively.

"They might," I agreed — I hope not grimly.

The Man looked at the clock and fidgeted.

"Is that the right time?" he asked.

"Two minutes slow," said the Boy.

"Thanks," said the Man. "I have to catch the 8:55 train."

My needle would not thread. Then I said: "So soon!" and "When do you return?"

"I don't know," he answered. "It depends."

"Don't get fever at the Rock,' said the Boy, paternally. "I have known such lots of fellows to go off like you, and they never come back."

"I hope this will be an exception," I said. (O, would no one take the Boy away and bury him?)

"Thank you," said the Man.

The Boy got up—was he going?

He merely looked at the photograph over the mantel piece and sat down again.

"That is a nice-looking girl," he remarked. "Some people think appearance everything. Now I notice carefully how a girl acts to everybody, and learn her all round, then make up my mind."

"Does it take long?" I inquired, (with polite interest, I hope; how I longed to stick my crewel-needle into him).

"Is——" (the Boy's mind had wandered).

"To learn her all round?"

"Not very long. Of course, it depends—"

The Man who had been staring at the ceiling began to hunt savagely through a six months' old magazine.

(Ting—ting—ting — ting — ting — ting—ting—ting.)

I wished he would go—the Boy, I mean; O! I wished. Could one be diplomatic?

"I wonder," I said, "I wonder could you post a letter for me?"

"With great pleasure," said the Boy. "For the country?"

"Yes, for the country."

(O! my evil star!)

"O! that is all right," he said. "I need not run with it." Then in an explanatory tone. "You see the next post out is to-morrow morning. Any time till ten will do."

My heart sank. The Man, who had looked up hopefully, turned to the frontispiece once more.

If he would—would but absorb the conversation, there might still be a chance. Yet if the Boy found himself too well entertained he might stay forever. But the Man was by this time in such a state of nervous irritability as to be incapable of conversation.

His very boots expressed the desire to summarily eject the Boy. How I wish he had!

"Our friend is suffering already from homesickness," said that wretched superfluity.

I laughed the tears into mine eyes, and pricked myself badly.

"Have you seen that sketch?" said the Man at length, handing me the paper. Something on the page, written in pencil, interested me considerably.

"What is that?" asked the Boy, condescendingly.

"Harper's," said the Man.

"Have they changed their cover, then?" he inquired; "it will get mixed with Pearson's."

"It is Pearson's," said the Man; "I made a mistake. What do you think of it?" he turned to me.

"It seems a bit startling," said the Boy.

I looked up, and my eyes met the Man's.

"Have you a pencil?" I asked courageously. "I should like to mark this."

There was one in his hand. I wrote a tiny note in the margin; only one word, in fact.

"I always annotate books," approved the Boy.

The Man took the magazine and looked at the page; he looked happier than he had been since his entrance.

HE MERELY LOOKED AT THE PHOTOGRAPH OVER THE MANTEL.

"Thank you," he said so fervently, that he aroused the Boy's curiosity.

"May I look?" he asked. "Unless it is poetry."

"It is poetry," said the Man; "the nicest verse I have ever seen."

He looked regretfully at the clock and at the Boy and me. "I am afraid I must—"

"Must you?" said the Boy, cheerfully; "that's the best of living on the spot, we need never hurry away."

"Have you oiled your door lock?" asked the Man. "It was very stiff when I last tried it?"

I put down my work. "I must see what I can do," I said; I felt happy enough to laugh. If the Boy would only stay on the sofa he might come again and stay ten hours.

He jumped up. "I'll help him to lever the door open," he said. "... wants stronger hands than yours; I can post that letter besides."

"It's on the hall-table," I told him.

"O, that's all right, I can get it when I go out," he said. "Good-by."

He politely waited till his senior had had his innings.

"Till I return, then," said the Man.

"I thought you did not know if you were returning," said the Boy.

"I have made up my mind," he replied. "Good-by."

They were in the hall. The door opened again, and there was the Man.

"I had to," he said, breathlessly, after the first two seconds. "Confound that fellow. Don't mind, dear; they are to last me a long time."

"Mind!"

"Look here, you'll lose your train," said the Boy, opening the door.

The Man had managed to get a good deal out of four seconds, but all the same he swore, and it is odd how it relieved my feelings.

When their steps sounded down the path, I went to the window and raised it; as they passed the Man tried to look round the Boy, who was between us, but dodged him unsuccessfully. I watched them growing smaller and smalier with the lamps until they were out of sight, then I tore out the page of a magazine, and carrying it upstairs locked it into the trinket-box, where it is still.

The Boy was a nice boy, and I could not find it possible to hate him even though he spoiled the Evening of my life.

I think of it now that he is stout and fatherly, and in my heart is amusement, exasperation, and something far more bitter.

Because the Man never came back. Rock-fever killed him.—Black and White.

PRAYS INSTEAD OF SCOLDING.

Drunkard John Dick Yields to the New and Wiser Treatment of His Wife.

There were terrible times at John Dick's when he came home drunk. Perhaps it would not have been quite so bad, but his wife had such a hasty temper that she never saw him come home intoxicated, but she called him all the bad names and wished him all the bad luck she could think of.

Of course, it doesn't do one bit of good to say a thing to a drunken man, for he is not in his right mind and cannot understand. It is always better to wait until he is sober, and then talk gently to him if you have to talk at all.

But Mrs. Dick would never believe this. She pounced on him at once, making him still crazier by her unkind words, and as a result, a terrible quarrel would ensue, when Mrs. Dick would sometimes so far forget all decency as to curse and swear equal to her husband. Sometimes Dick would turn his wife and children into the street, and they would have to beg a night's shelter in at some of the neighbors.

There was one Christian neighbor to whom Mrs. Dick told all her troubles.

One day, after going over them all for nearly the tenth time, she said: "Now, what would you do, Mrs. Dane, if your husband came home drunk and cursed you black and blue?"

"Dear me! I am not certain," sighed Mrs. Dane. "I should feel as if nobody

ANNIE WAS BY HIS SIDE.

but Jesus could help me; I think I should go right up into my room, kneel down beside my bed, tell Jesus all about it, and ask Him to help me control my temper."

No, Mrs. Dick had never prayed in her life, and she looked a little foolish as she picked up her baby and returned to her home.

While she was getting supper the mere thought of what John would say if he came home and found her praying made her laugh aloud.

But the more she thought of it the more she wondered if Jesus would help her.

She had heard preached in a little chapel she once attended in childhood that every prayer was answered if only offered in faith, believing.

But how could she believe anything would ever help John Dick to come home always a sober man! and he was growing worse, too; so that he was coming home drunk two or three times a week now, instead of just on Saturday nights.

Food and clothing were growing scarce as saloonkeepers got more and more of John's money. Mrs. Dick had hard work to get along. To pray might be better than scolding. She would try it. So the next time when John came staggering into the house, she slipped up into her room and knelt down beside her bed.

It was only a short time before the husband missed his wife's tongue, and, turning to one of his boys, asked where his mother was.

"Upstairs," was the frightened reply.

"I—I'll—hic—bring 'er—hic—down. Teach 'er to run—hic—upstairs—hic—when her—hic—husband comes," and here followed terrible curses as he slowly mounted the steps.

When he reached the room door it was partly open and he beheld his wife on her knees, and heard a tearful voice saying: "Dear Jesus, nobody can help us but you. Please help my husband to come home sober, and please help me to not get mad and lose my temper—" but John Dick did not wait to hear more. Cold chills crept up and down his back, his legs trembled under him, and a strange awe nearly sobered him.

Creeping downstairs he entered the kitchen where his children were, and sitting down in a chair by the stove, said: "O, my God, your mother is going to die; she is praying!"

But soon Mrs. Dick came downstairs and began setting the table, with a peaceful look, though her face was very pale and she started at every movement made by her husband as if she feared his tongue or hand would be raised against her, but his eyes seemed to avoid her. When supper was ready, he stumbled to his place and began to eat, but after a few mouthfuls broke down and gasped out: "I can't bear to have you praying for such a devil as I am, Annie. What's come over you, anyhow? I'd ten times rather have you scold, for I know I deserve that."

"I have found that scolding does no good. It is only Jesus can help you," she said, gently.

"Don't, don't! You're killing me," groaned the man, and he laid his bleared, blonted face down upon his arms and sobbed aloud.

Annie was by his side in an instant, with both arms about his neck, her cheek close to his.

"I have been a miserable husband to you, Annie, all my life long," he groaned.

"And I have been a miserable wife," she replied.

"You are an angel. I heard you praying for me," he sobbed.

"And you are my husband—more precious than anything else in the world. If you could only overcome your love of strong drink, how happy we would be. Just ask Jesus to help you, John, and I know He will."

"I think He has heard you, Annie," he said, taking her hands between his own trembling ones. "I think you will have no more trouble with me;" and she didn't.

Everybody said the change in John Dick was a miracle, but his wife told her Christian neighbor that it was Jesus, and she only regretted she had not gone to Him years before.—Mrs. A. E. C. Maskell, in National Advocate

THE DRUG FIEND.

There Is Danger That He Will Become as Common as the Slave of Intoxicating Drink.

The sight of a drunkard reeling and staggering in the streets has become almost so common that in the hearts of many it neither excites curiosity nor pity. If the already vast army of drug fiends should continue to increase with the rapidity with which it has increased during the last few years, it will be only a question of time when the morphine, opium and cocaine devotees will outnumber by far the present number of drunkards. There is no one, except those who have taken the pains to study this subject carefully, who has any idea of the appalling extent to which these drugs are already being used. It has been estimated that in one of our largest American cities there are 60,000 abject slaves of the morphine habit. An eminent eastern medical authority, who has had perhaps better opportunity to study this subject than any living physician, estimates that ten per cent. of physicians are themselves more or less addicted to some of these habit-forming drugs. The very fact that each issue of some of our popular magazines contains nearly a dozen advertisements of various remedies or institutions purporting to cure drug habits, is alone a strong indication that there are plenty of victims to patronize the same. Such a condition cannot exist without certain definite causes.

As the first cause of this alarming tendency, may be mentioned the high tension under which modern society is existing, and the failure of individuals to properly support such a pressure by using the simple, natural and nutritious dietary of our forefathers.

Second, the modern invalid either refuses or is unable to endure pain, no matter how persistently he has sown for the same. He has no patience to await the slower process of relieving the pain by rational and natural methods. He craves and demands immediate relief, well knowing that the physician is carrying about with him alleviative drugs, and that if he is unwilling to promptly administer them some other physician will be secured who will do so. Worst of all, the patient soon discovers some method whereby the drug can be secured without the expense of consulting the physician at all, and proceeds to an unwise self-administration of the dangerous article.

There are, undoubtedly, a large class of individuals who have inherited such a neurotic temperament that they acquire this habit with a readiness that is certainly surprising, and yet these are identically the class of individuals in whom a slight cold, an attack of the "grippe," or even some ordinary indiscretion in diet or some unusual exposure will develop speedily what seems to be an unbearable pain and other nervous symptoms, which the delusive influence of morphine can apparently spirit away in a very satisfactory manner. At the same time, the patient little realizes that each dose of this drug leaves the nervous system a little more sensitive and susceptible to pain, and thus he paves for himself the way to a living death, a slavery which only those who have experienced can properly describe.—David Paulson, M. D., in Union Signal.

ITEMS.

Some parents who set intoxicating liquors upon their table wonder where their children learned to become drunkards.—National Advocate.

A vigorous crusade against liquor joints is in progress at Mount Vernon, Ill. Three local dealers have been fined $200 and costs for selling liquor on Sunday, the maximum fine under the law.

Chief O'Neill, of Chicago, has renewed the order that there must be no smoking on the public streets while officers are in uniform. Those officers violating the order will be suspended and fined by the trial Board.

In a recent case where proceedings were instituted to revoke the liquor tax certificate of a New York saloonkeeper for selling on Sunday, the first appellate court handed down a decision that the defendant had utterly failed to show facts constituting his place a hotel, and that the service of a sandwich with a drink is not serving a meal in good faith, but a mere pretext to evade the law.

BIG RAILROAD IMPROVEMENT.

A unique excursion was recently arranged by the Union Pacific Railroad company. About sixty newspaper men, representing the leading journals of the country, were invited to take a trip on the Wyoming division, "The Overland Route," for the purpose of viewing the stupendous engineering achievements recently made on that line.

The train was made up of two private cars, three Pullman palace sleepers, a dining car, drawn by one of the new compound engines, with an observation car—constructed on the same plan as a trolley car—ahead of the engine.

One hundred and fifty-eight and four-tenths miles of new track laid, reducing the mileage between Omaha and Ogden by 30.47 miles, and reducing gradients which varied from 45.4 to 97.68 feet to the mile to a maximum of 43.3 feet, and curves from 6 to 4 degrees, while a great deal of bad curvature has been eliminated entirely.

A mountain removed and lost into a chasm; huge holes bored hundreds of feet through solid granite, an underground river encountered and overcome; an army of men, with all sorts of mechanical aids, engaged in the work for nearly a year; the great Union Pacific track between Omaha and Ogden made shorter, heavy grades eliminated, and the business of the great Overland route flowing through a new channel, without the slightest interruption.

Millions of money have been spent to reduce the grades and shorten the distance. This reduction is the result of straightening unnecessary curves, and the construction of several cutoffs between Buford and Bear river, Utah.

The curvature saved is about one-half, the grading about the same, while the angles are reduced nearly two-thirds. The superiority of these changes is apparent to the practical railroad engineer. It is also apparent to the operating department in the reduction in operating expenses, and to the traveler in the increased speed the trains can make.

The new line runs due west from Buford, avoiding the high hills and eighty-foot grade from Cheyenne, and piercing through cuts and the big tunnel, crosses the Black Hills at a grade of less than one-half (43.3 feet) over mountain altitudes.

From a constructive standpoint the line is remarkable for the amount of material required in the construction of immense embankments and the building of large tunnels through solid rock. The construction of the new line between Buford and Laramie alone has involved the excavation of 3,00,000 cubic yards of material, one-third of which (exclusive of the tunnel excavation) has been solid rock, of something over 160,000 cubic yards per mile.

Too much credit for this work cannot be given to Horace G. Burt, president of the Union Pacific railroad, and his assistants.

The excursion was replete with many interesting incidents, and the splendid hospitality of the Union Pacific officials was a revelation. The newspaper men evinced their appreciation in many ways, particularly in a resolution of thanks to the Union Pacific officials, General Passenger Agent Lomax, and Messrs. Darlow, Park and Griffin.

The Modern Elopement.

"Are you sure there will be no hitch in our elopement?" anxiously asked the beautiful maid.

"How could there be a hitch," assured the ardent lover, "when we are going in an automobile?"—Chicago Daily News.

Australian Mail's Record Trip.

The most important mail that has left Australia in years for London recently made a record-breaking trip. The mail consisted of 347 sacks and contained many documents for the British parliament. At Sidney it was put on board the steamer Ventura, a steamship sailing under the American flag and built only last year for the Oceanic Steamship company at the Cramps shipyard in Philadelphia. The trip across the Pacific occupied just 21 days, the former time having been 26 days. From San Francisco the mail was hurried east on special fast trains on the Southern Pacific (Ogden line), Union Pacific, and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroads, but arrived in Chicago too late to connect with the fast mail train of the Lake Shore and New York Central, which is a 24-hour train from Chicago to New York. A special train was made up and attached to one of the fastest engines on the Lake Shore line. The regular train was overtaken at Toledo, and the hour and a half lost time was made up. At Buffalo the regular train was made into two sections by the New York Central with the mail cars, including the Australian mail, in the first section. New York was reached three minutes ahead of schedule time. At New York the mail was delivered to the Campania and that vessel left on regular time. Barring accidents or unusual delays it will be delivered in England in several days shorter time than ever before.

Life's Stupendous Problems.

Smith—What makes so many people crazy to get into society?

Brown—Well, what makes so many other people crazy to keep them out?—Detroit Free Press.

Wisconsin Farm Lands.

The best of farm lands can be obtained now in Marinette County, Wisconsin, on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, at a low price and on very favorable terms. Wisconsin is noted for its fine crops, excellent markets and healthful climate. Why rent a farm when you can buy one much cheaper than you can rent and in a few years it will be your own property. For particulars address F. A. Miller, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, Chicago.

Half the world is engaged in "jollying" the other half.—Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

When you pray for victory don't fail to shell the woods.—Atchison Globe.

Human nature is a man's excuse for acting like a hog.—Chicago Daily News.

"I thought you said she moved in the best circles." "Well, doesn't she?" "Hardly. I saw her last night riding in the merry-go-round."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

"How is this?" inquired the commissary officer. "You have listed boots with the breadstuffs here." "That's all right," said the helper, "those supplies are for a polar expedition."—Baltimore American.

Too Quick for Her.—Flattehouse—"I managed to get ahead of our servant girl this morning." Diggins—"How was that?" Flattehouse—"Discharged her before she had time to leave."—Town and Country.

"You heard about Dangley's mining venture, didn't you?" "No; how did it pan out?" "Oh, he looks on it as a joke—says he struck nothing but a humorous vein."—Indianapolis News.

Wickwise—"That story about a man getting a pension for complete baldness is true." Scadley—"How do you know?" Wickwise—"As there was no hair at all how could it be false?"—Philadelphia Times.

"Sis will be down in a minute," said her little brother. "I'm so glad!" replied Mr. De Trop. "She wasn't at home the last time I called." "Oh, yes, she was, but she wouldn't come down." "How do you know she'll come down this time, then?" "'Cause I told her you was another fellow."—Philadelphia Record.

Mrs. Cawler—"O! Mrs. Woodby, you must take in Seilem & Co.'s millinery opening. They've got the loveliest bonnets there for five dollars up." Little Willie Woodby—"But ma always gets her things for one dollar down an'—" Mrs. Woodby (feverishly) "Run away and play, Willie."—Philadelphia Record.

None There.

Tired of the long-winded oratory of the attorney for the defense, the judge interrupted him.

"Mr. Sharke," he said, "may I ask you a question?"

"Certainly, your honor. What is it?"

"Language," said the judge, "we are told, is given to conceal thought, or words to that effect. Inasmuch as you don't seem to have any thought to conceal, I would like to know why you are talking."—Chicago Tribune.

Big Forgery of Railroad Tickets.

As a result of the arrest, on August 15, of a ticket broker's concern at St. Louis, charged with swindling a customer, a gigantic railroad ticket counterfeiting scheme was uncovered. After the arrest of the brokers their office was ransacked and an immense number of tickets and passes found. It was almost impossible to place an estimate on the value of the tickets recovered, but it is stated by railroad authorities that $50,000 would be a conservative figure. It is believed that many of the tickets and passes were forged.

At Buffalo a number of ticket scalpers have already been lodged in jail on account of fraudulent manipulation and forgery of railroad tickets. These instances are so numerous the public should take pains to see that their tickets are purchased only at the authorized offices of transportation lines. This avoids all complication and trouble to the passenger and assures him that the railroad tickets purchased are valid and will be honored as printed.—Exchange.

Good Man—"My boy, don't you know that every cigarette is a nail in your coffin?" Boy—"No, mister, 'cause I don't need any coffin. When I die I'm going to be cremated."—Philadelphia Record.

Check Cold and Bronchitis with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. Pike's Toothache Drops Cure in one minute.

"Here's a telegram for you; 75 cents charges." "That's too much. I got one last week for a quarter."—Indianapolis News.

I do not believe Piso's Cure for Consumption has an equal for coughs and colds.—John F. Boyer, Trinity Springs, Ind., Feb. 15, 1900.

Brute!

Husband—I am ruined!

Wife—How could you! And before I got my fall clothes!—Judge!

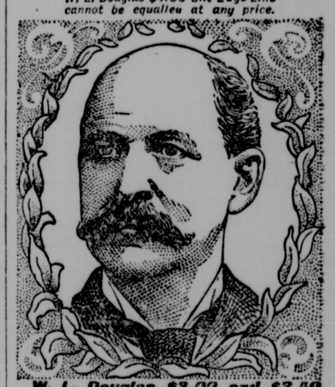
To Prevent Diphtheria
Use Hoxsie's Croup Cure. No nausea. 50cts.

"Your boy is a speaking likeness of you." "I don't agree with you. He's more of a howling likeness of his mother."—Town and Country.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES are the brightest, fastest and easiest to use.

Sozodont
Tooth Powder
The best that Money and Experience can produce. 25c
At all stores, or by mail for the price. Sample of Sozodont by mail for the postage, 3 cents.
HALL & RUCKEL, New York

$3.00 W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES $3.50
UNION MADE.
For More Than a Quarter of a Century
The reputation of W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes for style, comfort and wear has excelled all other makes sold at these prices. This excellent reputation has been won by merit alone. W. L. Douglas shoes have to give better satisfaction than other $3.00 and $3.50 shoes because his reputation for the best $3.00 and $3.50 shoes must be maintained. The standard has always been placed so high that the wearer receives more value for his money in the W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than he can get elsewhere.
W. L. Douglas sells more $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than any other two manufacturers.
W. L. Douglas $4.00 Gilt Edge Line cannot be equalled at any price.



W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes are made of the same high grade leathers used in $5 and $6 shoes and are just as good.
Sold by the best shoe dealers everywhere.
Insist upon having W. L. Douglas shoes with name and price stamped on bottom.
How to Order by Mail.—If W. L. Douglas shoes are not sold in your town, send order direct to factory. Shoes sent anywhere on receipt of price and 25 cts. additional for carriage. My custom department will make you a pair that will equal $5 and $6 custom made shoes, in style, fit and wear. Take measurements of foot as shown on model; state style desired; size and width usually worn; plain or cap toe; heavy, medium or light soles. A fit guaranteed. Try a pair.

Fast Color Eyelets used.
Catalog free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

MORE THAN HALF A CENTURY OF EXPERIENCE AND OUR GUARANTEE ARE BACK OF EVERY WATERPROOF OILED SLICKER OR COAT BEARING THIS TRADE MARK
TOWER'S FISH BRAND

ON SALE EVERYWHERE. BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. CATALOGUES FREE SHOWING FULL LINE OF GARMENTS AND HATS.
A. J. TOWER CO., BOSTON, MASS. U.S.A.

PILES ANAKESIS gives instant relief and POSITIVELY CURES PILES. For free sample address "ANAKESIS," Tribune building, New York.

RHEUMATISM Van Buren's Rheumatic Compound is the only positive cure. Past experience speaks for itself. Depot 58 S. California Ave., Chicago.

WOMAN AND HOME

BUSY WOMEN STUDENTS.

How Poor Undergraduates Manage to Make Both Ends Meet at American Colleges.

Miss Alice Fallows is the author of an article in the Century, which is entitled "Working One's Way Through Women's Colleges."

Just within the entrance of the gymnasium at Smith college is a small square room which looks like a booth at a church fair. The bulletin-boards on its walls are covered with blue prints, copies of Gibson pictures, painted frames, college flags, bright-colored class banners, pincushions, pillow-covers and a score of other fancy articles which seem the pastime of an idle hour. In reality, each one represents the serious investment of a girl who is working her way. The Smith college calendar hanging in a corner took one girl half through the term. The picture-frame opposite paid the incidental expenses of another for a year, while the jolly pair of football players, constructed out of tissue-paper and pecans, sitting on the window-sill made the temporary fortune of their inventor. A day after she had slipped in and put them there they became the college fad, and for weeks she could not turn them out fast enough to fill her orders. Then suddenly their popularity waned; no one wanted them; and now, faded and covered with dust, the two favorites of a past hour sit neglected in their corner, a pathetic warning of the inconstancy of college demand.

CATCHING FROGS FOR THE LABORATORY.

Like Smith students, college girls everywhere try these picturesque methods of making money. The pretty trifles which they sell might seem to a poet the spontaneous expression of the feminine instinct for grace and beauty, but they illustrate rather a poverty of financial opportunities. A college man in his effort to support himself is limited only by his capacity. He can break stones in the road or publish a paper, as his talent provides. He is free to enter any trade or business in the town, or invent a new one if he pleases. He may wander where he will along economic highways and byways. No one thinks of putting an obstacle in his way.

But when a girl, out of the fullness of her desire, determines to work her way through college, she must first rid herself of the notion that she can copy her college brother. Otherwise she will meet with disappointment, for long ago Mrs. Grundy set a distinction between labor fitting for men and for women, and our colleges for girls still respect it. During undergraduate days, at least, they believe in an emphasis of the woman womanly. The self-supporting girl, therefore, finds before many an industry open to her college brother a sign on which custom or the college president has written the uncompromising words: "No Admittance." She can neither weed lawns nor dig gardens, clean furnaces nor shovel snow. The girl who should turn grocery clerk or who became a component part of a baker's or butcher's or hotel-keeper's staff in her college town would be a focus for the puzzled attention of the whole faculty, while a student dairymaid, fruiterer, or butter-merchant within the confines of the college would raise a storm of protest from Maine to California. Yet college men in similar positions meet only praise and commendation.

Doubtless some of the occupations in the diminished list for girls declared official by college censors will seem trivial enough to the masculine student-merchant who sells milk by the thousand quarts and butter by countless pounds. Nevertheless, the college girl invests as much energy and strength and originality in her tasks as the college man in his. If she earns as much money as he, her effort must be almost doubled. Few girls, under the circumstances, have the physical exuberance necessary to meet the strain of entire self-support. They must stop short at self-help. But the attitude of a woman's college is strongly paternal. Though restrictions are laid on the student who works her way, scholarships and loans, as far as they go, are the compensations, and, when these are exhausted, a protective care and watchfulness which seldom fall to the lot of the college man.

Painted Pantry Shelves.

A couple of coats of white enamel paint on the shelves of the pantry does away with the necessity for shelf papers and the result is much more satisfactory.

THE WOMAN OF POISE.

Her Restfulness Is Not the Result of Accident But of Self-Education Along Right Lines.

The woman of poise is restful to those with whom she comes in contact. To the woman aspiring to this enviable state of mental equilibrium, of controlled power, I would say: First, remember to be saving of your nervous force. Do not dissipate your strength upon meaningless movements of hands, feet, eyes or head. Let each motion have a purpose, and expend no more strength upon it than it calls for. Learn to relax and keep the body in that state except so far as some member of it is called upon for action. Do not give a strong grasp where a light touch will do the work. Learn to be like an elastic band, which stretches no more than is required, and the strain removed returns at once to its normal condition. Second, it is trite to say: "Don't worry," so I shall modify the advice and make it possible to follow by saying: "Don't worry unnecessarily." With most women worry becomes a habit, and habits are hard to break, this one particularly. But it can be done. Sit down some day and think how few impending calamities ever get beyond the potential stage. Worry if you must, but do not begin before it is time. Life's tangles have a way of straightening out when we come close to them. Third, talk much or little, as is natural for you, but be sure that when you speak you say something. Endeavor to put individuality, which is a very different thing from eccentricity, into your remarks.

Let your speech, even though it be about trifles, have pith and point. In conversation, as in most things, it is well to have a goal. The mention of a goal suggests a word about what is perhaps, aside from nerves, the greatest enemy to poise. This is aimlessness. Too many women are aimless in their talk, aimless in their actions, aimless in their lives. Thus they fritter away the forces which, if concentrated, would result in that useful and harmoniously beautiful product of civilization, the highest type of woman—the woman of poise.—Ina Brevoort Roberts, in Woman's Home Companion.

LOVER'S CLEVER TRICK.

How He Changed the Color of a Rose and Surprised His Innocent Best Girl.

It was a lover who lately discovered this trick. When he was not with his ladylove he was studying chemistry and experimenting, and one day recently he found an easy method of changing the natural colors of flowers.

He was in the habit of presenting his sweetheart with bouquets of beautiful roses, which grew in his garden, and a few hours after he had made the discovery he took her half a dozen of the choicest white roses and told her that she could learn through them whether he was really in love with her or not.

"If you and I are destined for each other," he said, "these white roses will become crimson within five or six hours from now. Gradually but surely they will change color and you may regard the change not only as an indication that the flowers are delighted to be worn by you, but also as an infallible sign that happiness is assured to us in the future."

CHANGING COLOR OF A ROSE.

Sure enough, says the New York Herald, before the eyes of the wondering maiden the roses changed color and were crimson at sunset that evening. Marvelous indeed the change seemed to her, for how could she know that the roses were originally red and that her lover had simply bleached them white by holding them for some time over a pan filled with smoking sulphur before he handed them to her?

SYMPATHY SEEKERS.

They Are Uncomfortable People, a Burden to Themselves and Their Intimate Friends.

Sympathy is a soothing balm for hurts of soul or body, a precious cordial for human ills, but, like other cordials, one must be careful not to grow too dependent upon it, and become weakly, unable to bear any hurt without its aid. There are many sorrows that bring naturally and graciously their share of condolence and tender ministering, but there are other wounds and heartaches which no hand but that of the Divine Healer should be allowed to touch, no eye but His to penetrate.

Yet there are persons so morbid in their craving for pity that every woe must be revealed. The want of harmony in the home, the defection of friends, the faults of husband, wife, brother or sister—nothing is too sacred or too private to be uncovered for sympathy. The habit grows with indulgence until every skeleton in the closet, every bickering at the dinner-table, every disappointment and unhappiness, is made the property of the neighborhood.—Wellspring.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

According to English law, game includes hares, pheasants, partridges, grouse, black game, ptarmigan and bustard.

The pope has been given presents to the value of £6,000,000 in various jubilees. His income is reckoned at £405,000 a year.

Of London's water supply 55 gallons out of every 100 come from the Thames, 25 from the Lea and 20 from springs and wells and ponds.

Malaga grapes no longer come from Malaga, where the vines have all been killed by blight. They are grown in other parts of Spain.

The French Lifeboat society has a record only second to the English. It has saved in 30 years 12,358 lives, from 1,104 vessels. It has 96 boat stations, and 500 rescue posts.

In Germany people are moving into towns as rapidly as in England. The percentage of persons living in cities of over 100,000 has risen from 7.4 per cent. in 1882 to 16.14 per cent. in 1900.

Three hundred British families have three sons serving in the army; 176, four sons; 142, five sons; 72, six sons; 20, seven sons; 2, eight sons, and one has nine and one ten sons in the service.

The record strawberry was grown in England. It weighed seven and one-half ounces. The record apple, grown in British Columbia last year, weighed one pound seven and one-half ounces.

The river Euphrates flowed through the city of Babylon, and on each side of its banks the walls of the city were carried up to a height as great as at any other point, so that even during a siege the city was as formidably defended on the river as on the land side.

STARTED THE HORSE.

Reliable Method of a Hobo Who Imparted It for a Little Coin of the Realm.

Out in Brownstown a prosperous farmer unwittingly made an investment in a balky horse. When this "critter" balked he had the staying qualities of a tap root to a white oak tree. Nothing that did not mean permanent injury would move him. One day after the balker had been showing more amiability than usual, the farmer tried to drive him to Sand Hill, the chief incentive being a possible chance for a trade, going or coming, relates the Detroit Free Press.

Four miles from home the horse concluded he had done enough, stopped, lowered his ears and cast eyes back at his owner. Coaxing and whipping both failed, and the farmer was venting his feelings in strong language to a knot of acquaintances, when a tramp harvest hand joined the council of war.

"Say, boss," he volunteered, "I kin start that skate. Bet yer five I kin have him goin' plenty inside of a quarter of an hour."

"Without permanently injuring him? I don't want no fires built under him or log chain round his neck, nor nothin' of the sort."

The wager was made with this understanding. The hobo ran back over the path by which he had come and in a brief time appeared with a tin pail. "Git in and take the lines," he shouted. "I'll start 'im and you must do the rest."

The farmer mounted the seat, the horse looked back scornfully and the tramp placed the pail under him.

"All ready!" shouted the operator, and jerked the lid from the pail. Yellow jackets came as thick as shot from the big end of the nest in the pail. The tramp ran like a quarter horse, the balker got away as though shot out of a gun, the farmer swung his hat about him with one hand, while he hung onto the reins with the other, was in the air as much as he was on the seat, was getting the deadly "zip, zip, zip" all over his anatomy, shouted "whoa" at every jump and at the first curve shot through the top of a scrub oak into a brush heap, from which he had to dig his way out like a crab. He had to be led home, and there the horse was found trying to climb into the hayloft.

The tramp was in the next township with all the money, and now the farmer simply carries a covered tin pail with him when he drives the balker. To show it is to insure a mile in less than three minutes.

Only Professionals Wanted.

Gradually the small army of lecturers, virtuosos, singers and after-dinner entertainers who were wont each summer to invade Newport has grown smaller, and this year a recitation or a recital after dinner has been the exception. When any entertainment is provided now it is of the vaudeville order, and professionals are employed. Previously the singers and reciters were semiprofessionals, semiamateurs, and many of them went to Newport with letters or relied upon their friends in society there to give them a proper introduction. It became something of a nuisance, and hostesses found that after dinner anything but the roughest vaudeville put guests to sleep or made them fidgety or cross.—N. Y. Sun.

Dry Fare.

Hungry Horace—Kind lady, can't ye gimme somepin ter eat? I ain't ate nothin' sence day before yesterday.

Kind Lady—And what did you eat then?

"Nothin' but de market report in an old paper."—Baltimore American.

Identical.

Mr. Pitt—It is odd that the lecturer's motto and the highwayman's motto are the same.

Mr. Penn—What is their motto?

"Stand and deliver."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

DANGER IN CHILD DREAMS.

Death and Disaster Have Frequently Resulted from Terrible Nightmares.

"There is more danger in child dreams than one would suppose," said a well-known physician, reports the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and really but few persons understand how close to death the child is when passing through one of these fearful frights of the night. Nightmares frequently kill grown persons and these horrible dreams which come to the child life are of the same kind. This is why I have always bitterly opposed telling children horrible tales. There is nothing to be gained by it. The average child cannot be frightened into doing the right thing. If a child is inclined to do the wrong thing a horrible tale will not keep him from doing it. On the contrary, horrible results may follow the horrible impression which the child gathers from the story told. Bad dreams, a night of nervousness and tumbling and rolling and broken sleep will follow.

"But there is an even greater danger in the possible death of the child from shock. Deaths on this account may not be common among children, but a good per cent. of the persons who are found dead in bed after having retired at night apparently in good health die from this cause. It is called heart failure, and this is what it really is. But the question of what causes the heart to fail in its action is given but little thought. Now, in many of these cases shock—pure shock—caused by some horrible dream is responsible for the death of the person. He may have dreamed that he was shot through the heart, or through some other vital organ of the body, and may die before he can arouse himself from his slumber. Generally the prompt awakening will save the person, but under other circumstances the person will die before he can come into possession of his faculties.

"Children are very much shocked by bad dreams. They sometimes find themselves pursued by a wild animal, and they dream that they are unable to run, and wake up in a most horrible condition mentally and physically. But probably the most dangerous form of child dream is the thought, very common among sleeping children, that they are experiencing a long fall. They generally wake up before they strike the bottom of the place into which they are falling and the heart resumes its normal action. These dreams are very dangerous, and it is a wonder to me that more children are not killed. They get awfully close to death's door, and the waking is generally a fortunate thing."

POPULAR DRESS FABRICS.

Those That Are Favored by the Fashionables for Skirts and Bodices.

Taffeta again takes its place as a favorite lining for skirts and bodices. The rustling effect of this weave of silk became so universal that ultra-fashionable women eschewed it on that account, electing for soft-clinging, noiseless silk or satin—the firm well-wearing American surahs being greatly favored. These silks certainly last much longer than taffetas, but taffeta soyeuse is pronounced more reliable than any weave of the kind yet produced, owing to the new sort of leaves the voracious little silkworms devour before they begin to weave their small, wonderful white shrouds of silk about them. It is the gentle swish of these fabrics that most women like, proclaiming the silk lining as the wearer walks, and imparting a certain attractive elegance to the simplest gown or costume. This faint frou-frou is never, however, to be confounded with the terrible rattle that so many cheap silk linings produce. Their wearers seem to imagine that it has the effect of a rich taffeta, but never was greater mistake made. The sound is as offensive and objectionable to many ears as if the rattler of the skirt blew a penny trumpet or rang a dinner bell, says the New York Post.

The tucking of fabrics of every description has become a fine art. Rows of perfectly laid tucks on a gown are one of the most economical ways of trimming it. None the less is it desirable from a decorative point of view, and it is really wonderful how many chic and charming changes have been produced on waists, jackets, skirts and toilets entire by this simple yet effective means. The fashion has lost not a shade in popularity, either here or abroad. There are wide, medium, narrow and mere welt tucks, separate or in combination; tucks horizontal, vertical, diagonal, with or without rows of insertion between; in short, the mode is still put to uses infinite, and as a simple form of decoration it cannot be surpassed. It is now employed on gowns appropriate to wearers of every age, from the infant in arms to the grandmother in caps and spectacles—if caps, by the way, were not condemned in these days to total obscurity, and lorgnettes substituted for "specs" by youthfully attired "grandmammas."

A Long Descent.

A curious deed is on file in Northumberland county, Pa. It bears date of October 9, 1793. In a series of whereases it traces the ownership of the land conveyed from the Creator of the earth, who "by parole and liverey of seizin did enteoff the parents of mankind, to-wit, Adam and Eve, of all that certain tract of land called and known in the planetary system of the earth" down through the ages to the maker of the deed.—N. Y. Sun.

FUNNY FOLKS

Irresistible.

"I wonder if the men in this car call themselves gentlemen!" exclaimed the indignant little girl standing up in the aisle.

"My dear child," spoke the gray-haired man in the seat nearest her, "almost any one of us would give his seat to an aged woman, or even a younger one with a baby in her arms, but—"

"Well, can't you see I'm carrying a doll?" she asked, with flashing eyes.

She got the seat.—Chicago Tribune.

A Study in Vanity.

They were talking of the vanity of women, and one of the few ladies present undertook a defense.

"Of course," she continued, "I admit that all women are vain. The men are not. But, by the way," she suddenly broke off, "the necktie of the handsomest man in the room is up under his ear."

She had worked it. Every man present put his hand up to his neck. —Tit-Bits.

A Sneeze of Betrayal.

Tombs Angel—And how, my man, do you come to be here?

Prisoner—Owin' to a cold in the head, mam.

Tombs Angel—A cold in the head? Why—

Prisoner—You see, it was this way; I had a bad cold in the head, and as I entered the man's room I had to sneeze and the man woke up and caught me.—N. Y. Times.

She Had a Reason.

She—If you could have one wish, George, what would it be?

He—It would be that—that—that—oh, if I only dared tell you what it would be.

She—Oh, please go on. Do tell me.

He—I dare not; but, oh, if only I could!

She—Well, why don't you? What do you suppose I brought the wishing subject up for?—The King.

How They Get Even.

In the country they're sweetly sojourning.
The mother and children four,
At the farm with "dear cousin Henry,"
For six or eight weeks or more.
'Tis thus that the folk of the city
Pay visits all summer (what cheek!),
Because "Consin Henry," last winter,
Came to see them and staid 'most a week.
—Philadelphia Bulletin.

READY FOR THE QUESTION.

George—Amelia, I have a question—Amelia (hurriedly)—Then pop it, George, quickly.—King.

The Fatal Drawback.

I love the country dearly—with its long, green, restful miles;
But, oh, I'd hate to live where I would get behind on styles.
—Detroit Free Press.

Money in Gardening.

"No money in gardening, eh? I have a friend who has made $20,000 out of a garden in one year."

"Absurd! Why, he couldn't have made that amount on a thousand-acre farm."

"Of course not, but, you see, this garden I'm talking about is a roof garden."—Richmond Dispatch.

Amiability.

"Sympathy," remarked the man who gets sour, "doesn't do the slightest good in the world."

"Then why did you listen to it?"

"Oh, there is no use of being ill-natured. It always seems to please the person who is extending it."—Washington Star.

It Would Seem So.

Rubberton—May I inquire what your business is, stranger?

Stranger (haughtily)—Sir, I'm a gentleman.

Rubberton—Well, I reckon that's a good business, stranger, but you're not the only man that's failed at it. —Chicago Daily News.

One Perfect Boy.

"I never heard of but one perfect boy," said Johnny, pensively, as he sat in the corner doing penance.

"And who was that?" asked mamma.

"Papa—when he was little," was the answer.

And silence reigned for the space of five minutes.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

An Unsisterly Fling.

"She is pretty," said the young woman, "but she is so obviously made up."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne, "I can't help wondering how she got back from Europe without having duty collected on her as a work of art."—Washington Star.

Effect and Cause.

Myer—Swiggs is a born optimist. He takes a rosy view of everything.

Gyer—Oh, that rosy view is merely a reflection from his nose.—Chicago Daily News.

As to Voting Machines.

"Looking for a good voting machine, are they?" asked the tramp. "Well, why don't they take Hungry Bill?"

"But you don't understand," he was told. "It's a machine they want—a voting machine."

"Well that's just what Bill is," he replied. "Votes as reg'lar and as fast as anybody could ask. I've knowed him, when properly greased with the coin, to vote 18 times at one election." —Chicago Post.

Insult Added to Injury.

When folk come home who've been to watch old Ocean's grand and stormy play,
Let them forbear to borrow cash from folk who couldn't get away.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

AT THE PICNIC.

Mr. Snorlkins—Oh, Miss Mabel, why do you eat so many chocolates? You'll spoil all your beautiful teeth!

The Kidlet (her demon brother)—Take yer front ones out, sis, the rest don't matter!—Ally Sloper.

Hauteur.

The man of wealth may distance all the crowd
And number thousands under his employ;
But he will never come to be as proud
In manner as his brand-new office boy.
—Washington Star.

Lots of Them Willing.

"They seem to be making a lot of fuss over this girl who traveled 2,500 miles to marry," she remarked.

"Isn't it unusual?" he asked.

"It may be unusual, but there is nothing extraordinary about it," she answered. "Why, I know girls who would travel twice as far for the same purpose, if assured of success at the end of the journey."—Chicago Post.

Why Minnie Was Pleased.

Little three-year-old Minnie one day having done something strictly against orders, her mother said: "Minnie, I don't know what I had really better do to you."

Drawing a long breath of relief the little miss said: "I'm awful glad you don't, mamma," and marched off, taking it for granted that the matter was settled.—Tit-Bits.

Unreasonable.

"I really don't know what to do," said the vivacious woman. "It is very difficult to please the world."

"What is the difficulty?" asked her husband.

"People are so unreasonable in their comments. If you tell all you hear, they say you are a gossip, and if you don't they say you are stupid and commonplace."—Washington Star.

Bread.

"I ask you for bread," exclaimed the mendicant, bitterly, "and you give me hygienic bread!"

My conscience smote me at this.

"Poor fellow!" said I. "I'll see if I can't find you a stone!"

Never, to my dying day, shall I forget the look of gratitude he gave me.—Detroit Free Press.

On His Guard.

I'm glad Amanda warned me 'fore I went to town—
Because the sharpers have the business down so fine—
That people there are buyin' artificial ice
That I'll be durned if I could tell from genuine.
—Indianapolis News.

THE CANDID FRIEND.

Ethel—And how do you like my new hat, dear? I flatter myself I look quite pretty in it.

Maud—O yes, you do.

Ethel—You think it suits me, then?

Maud—No; that you flatter yourself. —King.

Out Five.

He came to borrow five, and I
Was out. It's just a sin!
I wouldn't have been out if I
Had only not been in.
—Philadelphia Press.

Resented the Suggestion.

Mabel—You've been wanting some slippers, Amy, and here's your chance. A "gigantic slipper sale" is advertised in the papers.

Amy—You had better get a pair yourself. I don't wear gigantic slippers.—Tit-Bits.

Estray Notice.

This is to give notice that I have taken up as an estray a white ram, with 2 slits in left ear and swallow fork and under bit in right ear. The owner will please come forward, prove property, pay all costs and damages and take same away. The said animal can be found at my farm, 4 miles south of Deer Park,

30 3* CHAS. L. MOON.

Estrayed.

From the farm of the undersigned, on August 10, 1901, one white improved Chester sow. Reward will be paid for her return.

CONRAD SCHMALE,
29 3t* Accident, Md.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

Car load feed and flour just arrived at Eagle Store, Grantsville.

Naylor still has some fertilizer for wheat on hand. 28 3*

FOR SALE—One eight year old dark bay horse. 1250 pounds. Will work in all harness. H. CRUTZBURG.

You can buy men's, boys' and children's clothing cheaper at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, than any place in town. 27 8*

Take your produce to N. Broadwater, who pays always the highest price.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

If you want a bargain in a nice family surrey or carriage you can get it at A. D. Naylor's. Closing them out for this season. Special low price and good terms. 28 3*

Buy the famous Cinderella Double Heater Cook Stoves and Ranges at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, Md.

N. Broadwater, Grantsville, has just returned from the city with the largest and most complete line of goods ever brought to town.

Go to Eagle Store, Grantsville, for ladies' tailor-made suits, jackets and capes. 27 8t*

FOR SALE:—The Lutheran parsonage, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

Dr. D. O. McKinley will be at McHenry September 30; Sines P. O., October 1 to 4 p. m. on 2nd; Oct. 3 at Mrs. Ellen Lohr's, near Crellin; at J. P. Lipscomb's, near Kearney, Oct. 4 to 3 p. m. on 5th; at Mrs. Wm. Rodeheaver's, near Thayerville, Oct. 7; at Hoyes, Oct. 8; at Friendsville, Oct. 9 and 10. Teeth extracted without pain. 28 3

Appointment of Judge of Election to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 25, 1901.

Francis Garlitz, appointed Democratic Judge of Election by this board at a meeting held Sept. 7, 1901, for Election District No. 3, is found to be disqualified to serve as such, and in his place and stead W. H. Kaufman is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President.

Appointment of Judge of Election to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 30, 1901.

Floyd Crow, appointed Democratic Judge of Election by this board at a meeting held Sept. 7, 1901, for Election District No. 9, is found to be disqualified to serve as such, and in his place and stead Jeremiah McKenzie is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President.

ORDER NISI.

George W. Wilson vs. Joseph B. Wilson.

No. 1364 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County.

Ordered, this 1st day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and one, by the Circuit Court for Allegany county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by James W. Wilson, committee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 2nd day of November, 1901; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Oakland, Md., once a week for three successive weeks before the 2nd day of November, 1901.

The report states the amount of sale to be $80.00.

True copy—test: R. M. LUMAN, Clerk.
R. M. LUMAN, Clerk.

Examiners' Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the following proposed new county road to be located is to run, viz: Beginning for the same at the south end of Garrett V. Moon's lane and running thence down Laurel creek and through the lands of the Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company, James L. Harvey and J. B. Lipscomb and along the lines of said Lipscomb and Charles Cooper and through the lands of the said Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company to the town of Schell, a distance of three miles, and examine whether the proposed new road should be located, will meet on the 11th day of November, 1901, for such purpose and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said proposed new county road to be made, and, if so, to locate the same, and perform their duty in the premises.

J. H. WILSON,
JOHN W. HARVEY,
ANDREW J. LEE,
Examiner.

CONNELL & CRANE

Have brought to Oakland the choicest line of

Fine Millinery Goods

to be procured from eastern cities. They have with them MISS RECK, whose work and service so delighted their customers last winter.

Opening days

Thursday, Friday, Oct. 3, 4.

APPOINTMENT OF Judges and Clerks of Election.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 7, 1901.

The Board of Supervisors of Election for Garrett county, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Judges and Clerks of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland for the year 1897, hereby give notice of the names and postoffice address of each person so selected as Judges and Clerks and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Elections intends each of said person to represent, respectively.

The law makes it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be preferred to them in writing against any person so selected and to remove any such person whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable to discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

Peter J. Lohr, Democrat, Judge of Election, Beckman; John L. Fitzwater, Republican, Judge of Election, Beckman; Patrick Hamill, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Thayerville; Alfred B. Mason, Republican, Clerk of Election, Beckman.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

Augustine Friend, Democrat, Judge of Election, Friendsville; A. M. Chisholm, Republican, Judge of Election, Friendsville; D. A. Turney, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Friendsville; George W. Sterling, Republican, Clerk of Election, Krug.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

W. H. Kaufman, Democrat, Judge of Election, Grantsville; Sam'l J. Beachy, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville; John Custer, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Grantsville; Frank J. Foulk, Republican, Clerk of Election, Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

Peter Fitzwilliams, Sr., Democrat, Judge of Election, Bloomington; Jesse Harris, Republican, Judge of Election, Bloomington; Stephen F. Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Floyd; Floyd Duckworth, Republican, Clerk of Election, Westernport.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

Valentine Kahl, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; Tarleton O. Collier, Republican, Judge of Election, Cove; S. K. Schlossnagle, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Accident; Chauncey Bittinger, Republican, Clerk of Election, Cove.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

Lewis Kahl, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; John Sines, Republican, Judge of Election, Sines; William A. DeWitt, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Hoyes; Thomas P. Savage, Republican, Clerk of Election, Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

William Broderick, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; John Close, Republican, Judge of Election, Mountain Lake Park; Richard F. Bartlett, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; William P. DeBerry, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

Election District Number Eight Ryan's Glade.

Samuel Miller, Democrat, Judge of Election, Sunnyside; John H. Sanders, Republican, Judge of Election, Gortner; John A. Hughes, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; Warner T. Harvey, Republican, Clerk of Election, Gormania, W. Va.

Election District Number Nine—Johnsons.

Floyd Crow, Democrat, Judge of Election, Finzel; William Finzel, Republican, Judge of Election, Finzel; M. H. McKenzie, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Finzel; Richard McKenzie, Republican, Clerk of Election, Frostburg.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

Joseph Lashorn, Democrat, Judge of Election, Deer Park; J. B. Shockey, Republican, Judge of Election, Deer Park; Michael J. Garrett, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Deer Park; W. W. Thrasher, Republican, Clerk of Election, Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven The Elbow.

Peter F. Michael, Democrat, Judge of Election, Barton; Simon W. Green, Republican, Judge of Election, Lonaconing; Patrick S. Fazenbaker, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Barton; Johnson Broadwater, Republican, Clerk of Election, Merrill.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

Aaron Pritts, Democrat, Judge of Election, Beckman; James P. Wiley, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville; J. Turner Lohr, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bittinger; Elias Orendorf, Jr., Republican, Clerk of Election, Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

William H. Pool, Democrat, Judge of Election, Blaine, W. Va.; James H. Wilson, Republican, Judge of Election, Blaine, W. Va.; Cleaver Pool, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Blaine, W. Va.; George W. Kitzmiller, Republican, Clerk of Election, Blaine, W. Va.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

E. M. Spedden, Democrat, Judge of Election, Crellin; John A. Sowers, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland; Jeremiah O. Browning, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; Samuel Lawton, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

C. E. ELLITHORP, Pres.,
FRANK WELCH,
A. G. STURGISS,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett County, Md.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Treasury Department.

OFFICE OF THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., August 20, 1901.

Whereas, by satisfactory evidence presented to the undersigned, it has been made to appear that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, has complied with all the provisions of the Statutes of the United States, required to be complied with before an association shall be authorized to commence the business of banking.

Now therefore I, Charles G. Dawes, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, is authorized to commence the business of Banking as provided in Section Fifty-one hundred and sixty-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

SEAL

In testimony whereof witness my hand and Seal of office this twentieth day of August, 1901.

(Signed) CHARLES G. DAWES,
oct 31 Comptroller of the Currency.

No. 5943.

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

Maryland's School of Technology. Four Courses of Instruction.

AGRICULTURAL — MECHANICAL
SCIENTIFIC — CLASSICAL

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified at once to enter upon life's work; graduates in Mechanical Engineering and Chemistry this year, all secured positions upon graduation. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—bath rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, $154.00 for scholastic year. Catalogue giving full particulars sent on application. Daily visit by physician to college.

Attention is called to the Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture. Particulars sent upon application.

Term commences September 23rd. Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER,
President M. A. C.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.

Money loaned on Mortgage.

Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.

Agent for the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.

Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

ADMINISTRATRIX'S NOTICE

This is to give notice, That the Subscriber, of Garrett county, Maryland, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of April next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

DANIEL PLEASANTS,

Given under my hand this 26th day of September, 1901.

MARIA PLEASANTS,
Administratrix.
30 3 Mountain Lake Park, Md.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, that the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

FRANCIS H. RAVENSCROFT,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1901.

R. A. RAVENSCROFT, Administrator.
Accident, Md.

EXECUTORS' NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, have obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters Testamentary on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber on or before the 15th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

W. W. FRAZEE,

Given under our hands this 10th day of September, 1901.

ELMIE FRAZEE,
OLIVER P. FRAZEE,
Executors,
Markleysburg, Pa.

EXECUTOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, Letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

JACOB SHARTZER,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 10th day of September, 1901.

LEONARD SHARTZER, Executor,
27 3* Accident, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

[JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supolies

I HAVE PURCHASED

THE OAKLAND COAL YARD

of Mr. D. L. Conneway and will continue the business. I will keep constantly on hand a large supply of

HARD AND SOFT

COAL,

KINDLING WOOD, Etc.

All orders will receive prompt attention. Leave orders with the weighmaster or at my residence, the Giessman Hotel.

35-2 GEO. GIESSMAN

The Garrett County Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:

DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MD.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.

Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.

F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

THE
SECOND NATIONAL BANK
of CUMBERLAND, MD.

Designated United States Depository.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000
Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
John Sheridan, A. Hunter Boyd,
David W. Sloan.

Burlington Route

It costs no more to ride on this beautiful train than on any other.

Chicago-St. Paul Minneapolis Limited Express

It is electric lighted and heated by steam, carries a library-buffet-smoking car, a dining car à la carte and everything there is to make one comfortable.

Leaves CHICAGO 6.30 p. m. Daily

We sell through tickets, reserve sleeping car berths, furnish maps and time tables, and can, perhaps, be of service in other ways. Kindly write or call.

H. E. HELLER, District Passenger Agent, 632 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

CONSTIPATION CURED!

Nearly everyone suffers in a greater or less degree from this dreadful disease. It is dangerous to neglect the bowels, and often by doing so a foundation is laid for serious ailments.

Those suffering from Constipation suffer from slow Poison.

OUR NATIVE HERBS cures Constipation quietly and permanently.

No Pain, No Griping, No Binding effect afterwards. Its action is pleasant and sure.

200 DAYS' TREATMENT $1.00.

A CURE GUARANTEED OR THE MONEY BACK.

"When a girl I had Small Pox succeded by Typhoid Fever and Measels. I was left with Constipation and Sinking Spells. Sometimes I felt that I could not live. After having various physicians treat me with no benefit I bought a box of Our Native Herbs, which seems to be the only medicine that suits my case. I believe it saved my life." Mrs. M. MILLER, Crellin, Md.

No Case Too Stubborn for Our Native Herbs To Conquer.

THE ALONZO O. BLISS CO.,
SOLE PROPRIETORS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

A. C. BROOKE,
Local Agent. Mountain Lake Park, Md.

A box of Tablets or Powder mailed to any address upon receipt of $1.00.

Midget Harness Riveter.

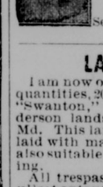
Complete repair shop in one tool. Will not wear out. Punches the hole, drives and clinches at one operation. Every horse owner, liveryman, teamster will buy on sight. Does the work of any $25 machine. Complete outfit with big bog of rivets will be sent for

ONLY 50 CENTS.

Agents Wanted.

HANDY ADJUSTABLE LIFTER. Handiest article ever invented for lifting hot pans, stove lids, etc. 15c, postpaid.

S. T. WILSON & CO.,
Box 103. Wilson, W. Va.



J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!

I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 20,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.

All trespassing will be prosecuted to the utmost extent of the law.

Call on or address:

C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.

Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.

Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

133½ acres coal land on Youghiogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale. House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187½ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 26½ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 200 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ miles southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoroughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north of Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swauger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to

JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY, ARCHITECT,

Office 7 North Liberty St.
CUMBERLAND, MD.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MD
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in McComas's Building, Main St.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. [elf-1y

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD.
Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients. 45—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett, Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. '88 16y

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.
Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 16-'99

H. W. McCOMAS M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office opposite Garrett County Bank.
Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 9 p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county, Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 6 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md.
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER,
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.
Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by aneroid barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26t*

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate.
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.
Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats, descriptions and estimates furnished. 40-1yr.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT MAY 19, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 19, 1901. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily	3.42	A. M
No. 3—Daily	7.35	A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday	10.01	A. M
No. 55—Daily	4.52	P. M
No. 1—Daily	10.07	P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 8—Daily	5.50	A. M
No. 2—Daily	6.52	A. M
No. 46—Express, daily	4.41	P. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun	5.12	P. M
No. 12—Daily	8.35	P. M
No. 4—Daily	12.37	A. M

F. D. UNDERWOOD, General Manager.
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT NOV 25, 1900.

SOUTHWARD No. 3 P. M.	SOUTHWARD No. 1 A. M.	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2 NOON	NORTHWARD No. 4 P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 00
3 43	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 31
4 06	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 09
4 16	8 05	Westernport	10 58	5 57
4 20	8 09	W. Va. C. Junc.	10 51	5 50
4 39	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 22
5 00	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	†5 00
5 45*	9 50* ar	Elk Garden	*9 10	*4 10
5 41†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	4 30
5 47	9 42	Bayard	9 29	4 25
5 59	9 54	Dobbin	9 19	4 15
6 02	9 58	Henry	9 15	4 11
6 27	10 27	Thomas	8 48	3 47
6 55	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 05
6 31	10 34 lv	Coketon	8 41	3 40
6 59	11 01	Hendricks	8 10	3 10
7 02	11 04	Hambleton	8 07	3 07
7 05	11 07	Bretz	8 03	3 03
7 08	11 10	Parsons	8 00	3 00
7 43	11 45	Kerens	7 25	2 29
8 00†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 10	†2 15
	NOON			P. M.
8 36*	12 45† ar	Beverly	lv*7 20	†1 40
9 05*	1 10† ar	Huttonsville	lv *6 30	†1 15
M. P.	3 15* ar	Bealington	lv	*11 40
	P. M.		A. M.	A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, Gen. Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agen

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1901. NUMBER 31.

THE ISSUE IN MARYLAND.

Honest Elections the Only Thing Before the People.

The Baltimore American on Tuesday had the following to say editorially on the issues of the campaign:

"At the very start of the Maryland campaign for 1901 an attempt is being made to force the race question to the front as the main issue, and to lead voters into the belief that unless the present Democratic machine is kept in power their homes will be endangered and the prosperity of the state seriously threatened, if not absolutely ruined Blind, indeed, must the bosses to think the voters of Maryland have become when such a folly is presented to them as if it were a real, live political problem, entitled to their most serious consideration. It has been worked before in this state, sometimes with success, but always as a shield or screen to protect and to hide some base purpose, some unworthy scheme to be carried out after an election had been won in this dishonest way. Tricked as the Maryland voters have been by this false issue, they will not allow themselves to fall into the trap again.

"It is no credit to the Maryland Democracy to put forward such an issue, nor is the scheme indorsed by the best elements of the party. The Maryland campaign will be watched with interest in all parts of the country this year, as the choice of a United States senator hinges on the result, and it is, therefore the duty of the campaigners to be careful what they say and not to let their party enthusiasm lead them to utterances which might do very considerable injury to the good name and to the welfare of the state. Maryland is a place of peace and good order, a commonwealth where laws are well enforced, and where serious infractions of them are as uncommon as in the quietest parts of New England. To send throughout the country wild reports that, unless the Democrats win, Maryland will become a place of disorder and law-breaking will be to put a blot on the state's name, to impugn our courts, and to intimate that the police authorities are not capable of doing the work assigned them.

"Against campaign methods which threaten harm to the state The American now protests, and always will protest. The main issue in this campaign is the course the Democratic leaders have followed in dealing with the only honest election law Maryland ever had. The facts are plain—so plain, indeed, that all voters can see them at a glance. Under the good law that Maryland secured, after long years of battling for it, both parties were put on their merits before the people. Democrats were ousted from control because they had broken their promises, and Republicans suffered the same fate for the same reason. Then when the Democrats found themselves back again, they decided to stay back, and to make this possible called an extra session of the legislature and emasculated the Election Law in the hope of cutting off about half of the vote that is sure to be cast against them. The work has failed of its purpose. The law they made, unjust and dishonest as it is, hurts them more than it benefits them; so now, in hope of retaining power by another method, they are trying to force upon the voters a question that never can be an issue in Maryland.

The real issue in this Maryland campaign of 1901 is HONEST ELECTIONS.

GORTNER.

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Slabach, Mrs. Erwin and Mr. H. Killius are visiting friends in Pennsylvania.

W. B. Hutson and son Howard, who have been visiting friends in Fairmont and Clarksburg for several weeks, returned Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ferguson and daughters Vera and Leonore, of Mt. Lake Park, and Miss Muzetta Savage, of Sang Run, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Gortner last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Swartzentruber and family are moving into their new house.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Slabach, of Cumberland, spent several days last week visiting his parents here.

Several teachers go out from this neighborhood this year. Miss Mae Hutson will teach the Aronstead school, Miss Addie Sanders the Dry Run school and Howard Hutson the Shook Shop school. We wish them success.

Estrayed.

From the farm of the undersigned, on August 10, 1901, one white improved Chester sow. Reward will be paid for her return.

CONRAD SCHMALE,
29 3t* Accident, Md.

Rambling Notes.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Recently spending several days in New Germany, Garrett county, we were struck with the thrift, industry, intelligence and prosperity of the neighborhood. The condition of churches and school buildings evidenced the political faith prevalent. They support two flourishing, growing churches—Reform and Methodist. The former congregation, which is in the ascendant, are particularly proud of the fact. The president is a professor of the faith.

Roosevelt, Ravenscroft, Republicanism and Reform are the watchwords of this section. Great indignation is felt and expressed at the shameful prostitution of political power in the outrageous extra session legislation and the unfair, brutal, bewildering ballot law passed. No one appears to understand this strange and unnatural statute. The Democratic officials are unable to give any information as to its cause or effect or what manner of ballot may be distributed a few days before the election. Many of our young men are indifferent about registering, not knowing what questions may be asked by their unlearned judges. The apathy is largely confined to Democratic ranks. The hopeless minority of that party in this county are to be pitied, as in their discouraged and disorganized condition they can barely secure material for a ticket.

The masses of that party, indeed of all parties, are earnest, honest, deserving men, too busy making a living to give professional politics attention. They are stunned and stupefied to read this law which disfranchises some of our aged, most worthy, popular, sterling citizens, who have paid taxes, defended their country in her hour of peril and voted the regular ticket for over a generation. It is the sons and relatives of these worthy men who will resent this infamy. Many will remain away from the polls rather than suffer the humiliation of acknowledging their misfortune. Why should such worthy citizens be degraded and insulted? For the selfish ambition of one man whom they have so often and highly honored.

The result at the polls will show how deeply this outrage is felt and the wrong resented and the leaders rebuked.

The rank and ille do not yet fully realize the depth and darkness of this crime. Their stolen votes and increased tax bills will awaken their vengeance. The next legislature will not be controlled by these political pirates. These wrongs will be redressed, their rights, votes and privileges restored.

District No. 11 was also visited, as the guest of Judge Merrill, his stalwart sons and his amiable family. It is unnecessary to discuss their widely known hospitality.

We were shown the famous Black Lick gold mine. Many splendid specimens of rich quartz were seen. Expert miners pronounce the indications more than promising. Many assays made prove this region rich in gold, silver, lead and copper. This mine is well worth visiting and it is attracting the attention of capitalists.

We found the good people of that district wide awake and interested in the questions of the day, as all good citizens are and should be, and in local politics particularly. We found the Republicans active and alert and preparing for November 5. The Republicans propose to make a thorough canvass of the county. Meetings will be announced and held in every district, our candidates seen and our orators heard by large, appreciative and enthusiastic crowds.

In mingling with the people of our county in their homes and talking with them around their firesides we are pleased to see THE REPUBLICAN and flattered to learn our articles are read.

OCCASIONAL.

New Germany, Oct. 8.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Major J. M. Burns is spending a few days at the Park. He is looking after some marked improvements upon his farm and upon his Park home. The lot is to be graded, and Messrs. Weber will in the spring lay off some flower beds for him.

Mrs. J. A. Hayden, Miss Helen and Masters Gay and John are enjoying a vacation among friends in West Virginia.

Mrs. J. O. Thompson, of Keyser, W. Va., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harmison.

Mrs. Oscar Archer returned Saturday from an extended visit in Ohio.

The Assembly House has several guests. So has Romney Cottage.

Mrs. L. A. Rudisill entertained on Tuesday evening at a luncheon Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sheats and Miss Bessie Sheats, of Pittsburg; Mrs. J. O. Thompson, of Keyser, W. Va., and Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Harmison, of the Park.

The outlook for next summer is very encouraging. The spirit of improvement has taken hold of our friends, hence all over the Park one sees building going on. Mrs. S. E. Blue, of Homer, Ohio, is building a three-story, twenty-room house on the corner of H and Spruce streets. Large porches will be put on the east and north sides of the house. Bath and toilet rooms with sanitary plumbing and sewer connections will be among the conveniences enjoyed by the guests of this house. M. M. Schrock has charge of the work.

Hotel Chautauqua is undergoing a complete transformation. The interior is to be remodeled. There will be a new stairway to the second floor; an enlarged, inviting and cozy office; the kitchen will be taken out of the main building; the bed rooms will be papered and an addition of twenty rooms built on H street; the porch will be extended on the east side of the hotel. The lawn on the front is being leveled and is to be placed in the hands of Messrs. Weber & Sons for the finishing touches. The work is in charge of Contractor Brown, of Rockville, Md. Hotel Chautauqua is to take its place among the best hotels of the land. When painted and the improvements are completed it will be an inviting place.

Mrs. Frank Arnold last summer made a success with her boarding house. The full capacity of the house was required to meet the demands. Mr. Arnold is adding a two-story five-room addition to the house, which will greatly improve its appearance and add to its pleasures as well as profits.

On the corner of Oak and F streets Mr. W. H. H. Sheats, of Pittsburg, is erecting a fine residence—a large two-story house. It will have bath, toilet rooms, sanitary plumbing and sewer connections and will be wired for electricity. Several rooms will have fire places in them. The lots will be graded. Your Mr. Bolden is the contractor.

Two houses are to be built on M street. Each will have eight rooms, with sanitary plumbing, bath and toilet rooms, large porches and electric light. Strange, isn't it, that some people say that "the Park has seen its best days?"

The postoffice at this place the past quarter canceled over $1200 in postage stamps and sold more than 400 postal orders. This will give an idea of the number of people who visited the Park during the months of July and August.

When The Sun was at high noon in 1895 the snake's head was cut off. Will The Sun go down before the tail stops wiggling?

B. & O. Oyster Express.

The oyster train for this season made its first run over the main line of the B. & O. last Wednesday morning. The train runs as the second section of the through train No. 7 to Chicago. It runs to Wheeling only, as the buisness west is not too heavy yet for the regular trains to carry. In a short time the oyster train will run through from Baltimore to Chicago. For several years past the Baltimore and Ohio company has been compelled to run this train during the fall and winter months. It is not put on, however, until the traffic becomes too heavy for the regular trains. Sometimes as many as seven express cars are loaded and carried, which makes a fairly good load for the passenger engines to haul over the road at the rapid rate required. The first train was a large one.

PUMPKIN PIES.

Fresh From the Larder of An Able Chef.

Reader, surrender yourself to dreamland and awaken to find you have feasted with a gusto on the pumpkin pie (not the one mother used to make) fresh from the flowing pen of "Dithyramb" Dick, of the Hagerstown Mail, which follows:

"Bland, aromatic and persuasive—genial as dear friendships reunited after long years and as deliciously warm as a sudden keen desire on the edge of gratification—the Punkin pie Americanus, clad clingingly in garments redolent of the spicy East and oriental noons, arises in the gastronomic hall and wears the gustatorial laurel of the reigning favorite. It looms filmy-winged in upon us to no tremblement of cynic brasses nor to the hoarse muttering of the drums but suave and tranquil-gliding, like the timid aspiring of young souls or the first wave of a tender bosom over a half-suppressed and faltering fancy, it flutters adrift on balmy odors into our realm and into our hearts of hearts, and there majestic sits supreme. To the entranced eye, a rhomboidovate of glimmering topaz, lit with circling memories of blossoming April days, jetted with diswreathing vales and mounds and rounded with an amorous sea of crust, oversurging the yellow disk in row on row of cherubic seraphim overhung a bowl of sheerest gold. To the taste, a rare compound of all delectable delight, of long, low night under fructifying moons amid the coolly growing ranks of corn, of warm and transient suns that transmuted the dusky and striped green to the rioting yellow and of bitter frosts that stung like robbers bees amid lustrous and mellifluous flowers. With such a shield as this might not the brave Hector have dared the plunging arrows of the golden-haired son of Thetis and might not the mighty Ajax have successfully defied the avenging thunder bolts of the sullen gods; with this as the pacificatory papulum might not the two and seventy jarring sects be joined in righteous harmony, and might not grouped about this, the quintessance of sublunar delicacies, all the Nations of the World bury their emnities and their lethal weapons, deep in its lotus bosom, and swear by it a new Federation of Mankind and a lasting Brotherhood of the World? We, about to thrust the bare tooth of anticipation and satisfaction through it, hail it chief and cast our editorial tribute at the base of its ectypal throne."

Yea, verily, with just such shields Hector could have braved the darts of the warlike Thetis. With some of such shields he could have braved elephants, lions or even 12-inch shells, belched forth at the rate of a million miles a second. With some of such shields one could brave most anything—even a high ball or a lengthy argument on the tariff. It would be best to take a goodly dose of life insurance, brother, before you "thrust the bare tooth of anticipation and satisfaction through it," lest you awaken to find yourself "deep in its lotus bosom."

Estray Notice.

This is to give notice that I have taken up as an estray a white ram, with 2 slits in left ear and swallow fork and under bit in right ear. The owner will please come forward, prove property, pay all costs and damages and take same away. The said animal can be found at my farm, 4 miles south of Deer Park.

30 3* CHAS. L. MOON.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE PROGRAM.

Sessions Will Be Held in Oakland October 14 to 18.

The Board of County School Commissioners for Garrett County has arranged the following program for the institute to be held in the public school building here next week:

MONDAY—MORNING SESSION.

10.00 a. m.—Opening exercises. Singing. Prayer by Rev. Wm. Osmond.
10.15 a. m.—Address of welcome by Rev. A. Mick. Response by J. S. Gnegy.
11.00 a. m.—Recitation, Miss Bessie Moore.
11.20 a. m.—General business.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

2.00 p. m.—"The New Curriculum," Prof. M. B. Stephens.
2.30 p. m.—Nature Studies, Prof. Guy Stewart.
3.00 p. m.—Round Table; subject, Pedagogy as an art.
B. B. Analysis, With what two things does the teacher have to deal in the practice of pedagogy in the process of education?
Powers of Mind—Consciousness, attention and conception.
General discussion.

TUESDAY—MORNING SESSION.

9.30 a. m.—Opening exercise. Prayer, Rev. Geo. I. Uhler.
9.45 a. m.—Spelling, Prof. Stephens. Discussion by teachers.
10.30 a. m.—Recess.
10.40 a. m.—Reading in public schools and how to teach it, Mr. P. O'Rourke. Discussion by teachers.
11.15 a. m.—Primary teaching—Paper—Miss Mollie Dorsey. Discussion.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

1.30 p. m.—Language and Grammar. Paper. Mr. A. S. Teats. Discussion, A. W. DeWitt, Geo. B. Frazee, Miss Lizzie B. Leary.
2.15 p. m.—Geology, Capt. Robt. H. Gordon.
3.20 p. m—Round Table—Psychology, Prof. Stephens. Discussion.

WEDNESDAY—MORNING SESSION.

9.30 a. m.—Opening exercise. Prayer, Rev. A. Mick.
9.45 a. m.—Address, Hon. Thomas C. Miller, State Supt. of W. Va.
10.15 a. m.—The English Language. (a) Its origin. (b) Pitfalls in teaching it. Prof. Wilson M. Foulk, of the Piedmont High School.
11.00 a. m.—Recess.
11.10 a. m.—Algebra, A. W. DeWitt. Discussion by C. G. Teats.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

1.30 p. m.—Arithmetic. Paper by A. L. Lee. Discussion, Ed A. Browning and S. K. Welsh.
2.15 p. m.—Geography and History, R. R. Sanner. Discussion, Ira E. Culp.
3.00 p.m.—Round Table—Psychology, Discussion by Prof. Stephens, A. W. DeWitt, H. G. Weimer, A. S. Teats.

THURSDAY—MORNING SESSION.

9.30 a. m.—Opening exercise. Prayer by Rev. J. M. Davis.
9.45 a. m.—Aesthetic Education. Paper by Miss Mollie Hamill. Discussion, H. M. Speicher.
10.30 a. m.—Recess.
10.40 a. m.—Civil Government, J. S. Gnegy. Discussion.
11.25 a. m.—Suspension and expulsion of pupils, Ed A. Browning. Discussion.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

1.30 a. m.—"Memory Work in Literature." Also a talk on Geometry at another period, Prof. John T. White. Discussion.
2.00 p. m.—Number work, George B. Frazee. Discussion.
2.30 p. m.—Round Table, Prof. Thos. C. Miller, of West Virginia. Subject to be selected.

FRIDAY—MORNING SESSION.

9.00 a. m.—Business session. Examiner and Teachers.
9.45 a. m.—Address.
10.15 a. m.—High School Work. Paper by Miss Esther Budd. Discussion.
11.00 a. m.—Recess.
11.10 a. m.—Public examination in the public schools, Leo J. Beachy. Discussion.

Addresses will be delivered during the week by Hon. George A. Pearre, Thomas J. Peddicord, Esq., Rev. A. Mick and others. Mrs. Elliott, of Chicago, will fill a period each day on the latest methods of teaching geography.

NIGHT SESSIONS.

Lecture on Tuesday night by Prof. John T. White, Examiner of Allegany county, on "Immortelles in Poetry."

Lecture on Wednesday night by Hon. J. DeWitt Miller, of the Central Lyceum Bureau of Lectures, Rochester, N. Y.

It Happend in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take abottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." The remedy owes its great popularity and extensive sale in a large measure to the personal recommendations of people who have been cured by its use. It is for sale by All dealers.

For sprains, swellings and lameness there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Try it. For sale by all dealers.

MOUNTAIN TRIOLETS.

THE FROST IS ON THE HILLS.

TO S. M. W.

The ripened nuts are dropping out
The frost is on the hills.
How merrily the children shout,
The ripened nuts are dropping out,
And everything so bright, without,
A radiant peace instills:
The ripened nuts are dropping out,
The frost is on the hills.

While through the evening's purple haze
The ruddy sun is showing,
We see his glory with amaze—
While through the evening's purple haze
The mountain slopes are all ablaze
With autumn foliage glowing;
While through the evening's purple haze
The ruddy sun is showing.

Across the uplands sweet and clear
An even' song comes ringing;
The heart is lightened with its cheer—
Across the uplands sweet and clear
We hear the song of one that's dear,
A joy bird in her singing:
Across the uplands sweet and clear
An even' song comes ringing.

Jackson Park, 1901. —T. L. L.

WEST VIRGINIA CONFERENCE

Closes Tuesday at Noon—Oakland District Appointments—Resolutions.

The fifty-third conference of the Methodist Episcopal church of the District of West Virginia closed Tuesday at noon when Bishop Andrews made the following announcements for Oakland District:

Albright—W. M. Schultz.
Aurora—J. H. Koch.
Brandonville—Martin Talbott.
Bayard—E. J. Westfall.
Blaine—F. D. Carder.
Bruceton—To be supplied.
Cranesville—H. E. Friend.
Davis—J. B. Workman.
Etam—To be supplied.
Evansville—J. O. Bolton.
Friendsville—D. A. Friend.
Grantsville—E. C. Bedford.
Horton—J. H. Funk.
Mountain Lake Park and Deer Park—J. S. Harvey.
Newburg—C. B. Meredith.
Oakland—Hezekiah Scott.
Parsons—J. W. Bedford.
Rowlesburg—E. P. Idleman.
Sinclair—R. O. Phillips.
Swanton—J. W. Funk.
Terra Alta—J. L. B. Jones.
Thomas—D. Westfall.

The committee on resolusions composed of Revs. S. V. Leech, Frank S. Townshend and B. B. Evans, introduced the following resolutions on the death of President McKinley, which were read and adopted:

WHEREAS, The Methodist Episcopal church and the entire country have recently been bereaved by the appalling tragedy that removed from earth our illustrious and beloved brother in Christ, William McKinley, President of the United States; therefore, be it resolved by the West Virginia Conference of the Methodist church:

1. That in the tragic death of the late President the Nation has lost one of the most patriotic, wise and successful Chief Magistrates it has ever had; the civilized world one of the most accomplished and gifted statesmen, and the Methodist Episcopal church a distinguished lay member, whose numerous virtues and profound consecration to the divine service have brilliantly illustrated the possibility of associating with the most exalted civil life a lofty ideal of Christian character and Christian practice. His great and progressive achievements in statesmanship and diplomacy, combined with his sterling moral endowments, have won for him the admiration and confidence of many millions of his countrymen, and will render his name and fame immortal in American history.

2. That we tender to Mrs. Ida Saxton McKinley our deepest sympathy and our earnest prayers for divine support in her great bereavement. May the precious recollections of her husband's tender and affectionate devotion to her interests, his eminent services to his country and the religious sublimity of his death be to her a fountain of comfort until she shall go to be with him forever.

3. As Methodist Episcopal pastors we regard it as both a duty and privilege to be loyal to the President of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, called suddenly and under painful circumstances to the duties and responsibilities of the Chief Magistracy of the Republic. We appreciate his high Christian character and the magnificent record he has made in civil and military life. We devoutly pray that God may so endow him with wisdom that his administration may be a great blessing to all parts of the national territory.

4. That the secretary of this Conference be and he is hereby instructed to transmit copies of these resolutions to Mrs. McKinley and the President.

Of the ministers who formerly served the Oakland charge Rev. Mick was transferred to Huntington; Rev. M. W. Rider, South Buchannon; Rev. S. K. Arbuthnot, Clarksburg; Rev. C. H. Lakin, Tunnelton; Rev. G. W. Kepler, Elburn; Rev. R. B. Ward, Cameron; Rev. J. H. Enlow, Short Creek.

Rev. Hezekiah Scott, who comes to Oakland, being transferred here from Huntington, where he had charge of the 7th avenue church, is held in high esteem by the members of his charge and also by his fellow ministers.

The Minister's Rescue

By Ethel M. Colson.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

"THE Little Minister" everybody on board the Lucretia called him inevitably; he was so very little and so obviously a minister. And everybody, before the Lucretia was three days out from Liverpool, was gossiping about the little minister's devotion to one of the women passengers—the woman with darkened eyebrows and hair a thought too golden. Everybody would have gossiped still more had everybody heard and understood the whispered words which aroused the curiosity and wonder of the head stewardness on the evening when the little minister set everybody agog by escorting the yellow-haired woman down to the very door of her state-room.

"Courage! Courage! Do not despair!" was the half-comprehended ejaculation with which he bade her adieu.

And everybody, again, would have been nearly frantic with excitement had the manner in which the two became acquainted been publicly known.

The yellow-haired woman was leaning over the rail of the promenade deck, well forward, upon the second day of the voyage, when the little minister, who had been watching her keenly from his unobserved seat behind a music room porthole, strolled easily to her side.

"I wouldn't! Don't think of it," he said, softly. "It really wouldn't be worth while. Pluck up heart and take courage. Your present sorrow will be over in a lifetime, anyway; you'll be sorry for all eternity if you jump overboard, poor child."

"Why do you speak to me like this?" cried the woman, turning wide, desperate eyes on his kindly face.

"Because I, too, have been very close to despair," he made gentle answer, "and, perhaps, with far less reason than you have. I have known despair for my own sins rather than the sins of others. You have sinned, also doubtless, but you have been sinned against as well."

For a moment the woman looked as though she would kill him. Then, suddenly, she laid her weary head down on the rail, and he could feel, rather than see, that she was sobbing. Presently he stepped a little nearer, and, affecting to be deeply interested in the tossing water, spoke to her again, in a very low tone.

"Don't give way here—and now," he exhorted, tenderly. "Others are watching us; you don't want to attract attention. Bear up a little longer; you have been silent so long, I am sure. Let them think you are ill—it is only natural. Steward!" to the blue-jacketed functionary of the lower deck, "some hot beef-tea for this lady, immediately."

"Let me give you my arm to the upper deck," he suggested, when, the beef-tea having been absorbed in a sheltered corner, the task of screening her from the inquisitive glances of casual deck-strollers became a little difficult. And there on the upper deck—which was altogether too exposed and too windy to be anything but deserted—the yellow-haired woman related her story. She was moved thereto partly by the knowledge of his cloth and his fatherly manner, partly because she looked through the clergyman, and saw that he was a man and a gentleman as well; more than all, perhaps, because she had reached the point where she could no longer contain the guilt-burdened misery from which a womanly listener might have shrunk with repellant disgust.

It was a pitiful story, more pitiful, even, than the teller of it realized. A desolate child, fatherless, motherless, she had never known a real home or affection. Tossed and buffeted from one unwilling, unloving relative to another, she had flouted them all, at 18, to fall in love with a man many years her senior, and who had never borne a good name. She had gone through the preliminary punishment of the lost in order to be true to him, in his absence. When, a year after he had bidden her good-by until "I can come back and marry you," he had sent her money and directions to cross the ocean and become his wife in Liverpool, she had sacrificed her all, deeming it no sacrifice, but a joyous privilege, to obey him. Two years later, inflamed with the fire of a new passion, he had offered her a goodly sum of money to sign an agreement protecting him from any future demands or embarrassments, and leaving him free to marry the woman of his later choice as he had promised—untruthfully—to marry her.

Stung to the quick of the sensitive nature which had lately known love for the first time, all but maddened, desperate, she had left him—but without taking the money. Now, another year later, she was using the proceeds of 12 months of hard work and semi-dissipation to go back to America. The slow passing of the long 14-days' voyage, desirable for financial reasons, had left her time for the bitter thinking and forecasting so long deferred. The Giant Despair had her fast in his iron, relentless clutches when the little minister had interfered.

He heard her through in silence—the sympathetic, comprehensive silence so rich in balm and cheer. He, too, had been lonely; he was returning now from the journey undertaken to bid his last living relative a long good-by. His was a nature, also, which, while it could never know real wickedness, suffered much because of fancied sins against God and man. Since the fancy, as now happened, taught him great sympathy and skill in dealing with other—and greater—sinners it was not, perhaps, without its uses. The yellow-haired woman realized the supposed and actual character of the fancy intuitively; but the knowledge that he believed himself a sore sinner was as indefinably comforting as his wise silence.

Day after day the little minister cheered, strengthened and encouraged her, heroically regardless of the meaning glances cast toward them by women whose hair was not yellow, and by men who considered facetious speeches concerning flirtatious parsons and the latitude of the cloth; day after day he induced her to postpone further compact with the Giant Despair at least until she had made effort a little longer. And all went well until the afternoon when he was powerless to fight the recurring battle with her because of the determined companionship and questioning of the ascetic maiden lady who wanted his views upon the Athanasian creed question—and also to talk about the yellow-haired woman. The little minister, whose gentlemanly instinct never allowed him to discuss one woman with another, found anxiety dispossessing his patient and polite boredom as he noticed that the yellow-haired woman was leaning through instead of over the rail. But before he could carry out his swiftly formed resolution to go to her immediately there was the flash of a falling figure, a sudden commotion—and he realized that the long-dreaded circumstance had come to pass.

He was in the water almost as soon as she was. Three other men made themselves ready, but were a trifle slower, for various reasons. Before they reached the rail the little minister had caught hold of the yellow-haired woman—who struggled and fought him wildly.

"Don't save me," she gasped, moaningly. "I can't help struggling, but I don't want to be saved. Please, please let me drown!"

For all answer he slipped a hand under the little, round, delicate chin which told such a clear story of the weakness which loves and finds it hard to resist temptation, pushed her at arms'-length from him, and swam as strongly as he might until a rope came to him over the stern of the ship. First she was drawn on board safely, then he followed and was hurried downstairs for brandy and hard rubbing. Almost before the two combined brought warmth and vitality back to the limbs which were so insignificantly weak and unfitted to contain the mighty spirit which upheld them a message came to his stateroom. The yellow-haired woman hoped he had not been injured in coming to her rescue; she would like to see him to say "Thank you," whenever he should feel inclined to leave his berth. She herself had been commanded by the surgeon to remain motionless for some hours.

When the aisles and staterooms had been emptied by the dinner-gong the little minister traversed the former and stood at the side of the yellow-haired woman—pathetically weak and young-looking in her physical weakness and spiritual abasement. At sight of him she broke into sobbing, regardless of the now sympathetic stewardess, who considerately slipped from the room.

"Why did you save me?" she asked him, still weeping. "You knew I wanted to die. I want to die now, as God hears me, although I have learned this evening just how sweet it would be to go on living—if one only had a chance to start over."

And then it was that the soul of the man and the gentleman stood up in the eyes of the preacher, and the divine instinct which had healed so many sins and sorrows failed not the little minister, even though the remedy required was unusual.

"I, too, learned something while down in the water," he said, with the hesitating precision of one who recites a lesson but hastily learned. "I learned that my life will never be quite perfect, never quite what it should be, unless you consent to become part of it, my—my dear. Will you"—his manner as reverential as though she had been the most conventional of conventional "good women,"—"honor me by promising to become my wife?"

The hope and the wonder which flashed out in her face transformed and transfigured it; but the glory died out a moment later.

"You are only saying this for charity's sake, to save me, to give me another chance," she told him.

"No," answered the little minister, with quiet tenderness and gentle determination, "you are quite, quite mistaken, my—my dear. I am saying it because I love you."

And the good God, hearing these words of nobility and resurrection, looked upon them with favor—and made them true.

One Admiring Constituent.

That no man is a hero to his valet is a truism that has come down through a long line of French cynics; but Lord Ripon, ex-viceroy of India, had occasion to demonstrate that he, at least, was appreciated by a faithful retainer. Soon after his return from Calcutta, and when the criticisms of his administration were particularly fierce, Lord Ripon was met by a member of the liberal party, who said to him, enthusiastically: "I congratulate you on your courage and public spirit in pursuing so large-minded and liberal a policy in the east." Lord Ripon smiled as he replied: "It is good of you to say such kind things of me; but to tell you the truth, I don't believe there was anyone in India who really approved of my policy except my old Scotch gardener."—Youth's Companion.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

ENEMY OF THE SOLDIER.

Letter from Soldier in South Africa Draws Strong Indictment Against Alcoholic Drinks.

In an English paper we find a letter from a soldier in South Africa, showing the evils of drink. Among other things he says:

The men who drank rum could not stand the cold like those who took none. One night six of us were on duty at an observation post. It was on the top of a mountain, dreadfully cold, and we dared not walk about for fear the enemy would hear us. Four were taken ill, two of whom had to go in the hospital. The two who were not ill with the cold were your humble servant and another teetotaler. Again, men don't seem to care what trouble they get into so long as they can get drink. In one camp we had six men on guard over the stores. They broke open the rum casks and got so drunk we had to take them with us in the hospital wagon. They were tried by court-martial, the corporals reduced to privates and all the lot got six months' imprisonment. There are lots of cases of this sort I could give you and I have seen five Kaffirs flogged for stealing rum. I have also taken notes of the men who have been sick and almost to a man they have been those who were fond of drink. Of course we have had hardships, privations and bad weather enough to make the strongest sick, but compare the sickness of the men when they can only get the regulation issue of rum and the sickness when in a standing camp, and I will guarantee there is double the sickness in the standing camp where the men can obtain beer, etc. I have only had a slight attack of rheumatism through getting wet and having to lie on the veldt all night in my wet clothes, and very few of my teetotal comrades have had any sickness at all. It would greatly surprise you to see the men going with buckets for beer, and they have to pay exorbitant prices for it. There is nothing that unfits a dutiful soldier so much as alcoholic drinks—cursed drinks! One night a lot of us were called out to do guard duty. Several were absent, after drink, of course, and when we were going down the kopje we saw one poor fellow lying full length across the road, and a bugler boy crying because he could not get him up. The man had such a sense of his duty that when told who and what we were he tried to get up and follow us, but all in vain. Don't think I speak with any animosity against my fellow soldiers. No, I pity them. They are more sinned against by being able to get the drink than sinning. I felt like praying a curse upon it and those who make and sell it, but it is cursed enough. It keeps the men away from our Gospel services. It was their delight when our regiment was on the march to join us in the singing, but now they can get drink they are absent from the service.

FLOGGED FOR STEALING RUM.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

A proctorial edict has been issued at Oxford reviving the prohibition of undergraduates entering any hotel or tavern.

The French minister of instruction requires that special teaching be given in the schools in relaion to the evils of intemperance.

A man who will cheerfully "treat" a lot of strangers to beer and whisky, is seldom willing to give anything toward a good cause.—Atchison Globe.

Canteen Argument.

Even if it could be proved that drunkenness and rioting had increased since the abolition of the canteen, it would not change the principle which is the basis for such abolition. There are no conditions which can make it wise or right for the government to sell liquor to its soldiers. The strongest argument of the friends of the canteen is the existence of the "outside saloon." If those who are clamoring for the restoration of the canteen are honestly and conscientiously aiming to secure the highest welfare and greatest efficiency of the soldier they will work to abolish the outside saloon, if not from the entire country, at least from the vicinity of the military forts. The remedy for "increased drunkenness" is not the removal of restrictions within the post, but the placing of more restrictions outside; not the opening of more places of temptation, but the closing of those which are universally admitted to be a menace to army morality and discipline.—Union Signal.

CHRISTIAN EXPEDIENCY.

Attitude Towards the Temperance Question Which It Would Clearly Indicate.

There is no man who can stand up and boast of his immunity from evil. We must have a certain definition of moderation, and how shall a man know what is moderation until he has touched the line of immoderation? And at that very point the evil has already been done. Besides, what is moderate at one time is not so at another. A different condition of body may entirely change the effect which alcohol may have upon the system. A time comes when the previous condition of safety is not present. The reign of danger is reached, the time of injury has arrived. Are you sure that you will recognize this time? May not the man wake up to find that he is in the coils of the serpent, that the evil is done, and that he has lost that equilibrium of bodily and mental self-control which he is bound to conserve? Even if he should be saved, yet he has been injured, and though he may retrace his steps, he has already transgressed. The law of Christian expediency is imperative against such a condition, and the only insurance we have against such a condition will be the practice of total abstinence.

But the Christian has to consider not only himself. He is one of the great family of mankind, and while his religion and the relation which he occupies toward God through his Lord and Saviour separates him from his kind, and gives to him a peculiar character and a special place, it also deepens the obligation under which he rests to live not for himself, but for his fellow-men. In the sphere of Christian liberty, therefore, we have to find as directions not only that which shall be innocuous to our own well-being, but we must avoid such things as may lead others into wrong-doing.

A direct injury is prohibited by the moral law, but an indirect injury is quite as much prohibited by the Christian expediency which rules in the sphere of liberty. Even human laws take into consideration such indirect results, and equity has stepped in to control that region which common statute law may not be able to reach, because not able to define. Expediency in regard to the welfare of our fellow-men is the equity side of justice in the court of ethics. And that is the law which controls the Christian's actions.

The Christian law of expediency is well illustrated by Paul writing to the church at Rome in the matter of eating meats offered to idols. He says an idol is nothing, and meat offered to idols is nothing; but if the eating make a brother to offend or become weak, then the eating is contrary to the law of God, and unworthy of those who trust and serve a Saviour who gave Himself up altogether for us. Do you say this is a sacrifice—a self-denial? What had we been had there been no self-denying of Himself in self-sacrifice by the Son of God?—William G. Haeselbarth, in Christian Work.

A CAUSE OF INSANITY.

Long Continued Use of Alcoholic Beverages Has a Decidedly Degenerative Effect.

That alcohol is not without utility will not be denied by any unprejudiced mind, but that it is likewise a powerful influence for evil cannot be disclaimed even by those who advocate most earnestly its legitimate and intelligent employment. Apart from the effects of acute intoxication, says the Journal of the American Medical Association, the deleterious influence of long-continued indulgence in alcohol is witnessed in chronic visceral changes principally of a degenerative character. In speaking of the increase in the number of cases admitted during the year 1900 to the Royal Edinburgh asylum, the physician-superintendent, Dr. Clouston, in his annual report was unable to avoid the conclusion that this was due to a large extent to the excessive use of alcoholic stimulants during times of prosperity, attended with brisk trade and high wages. The number of alcoholic insane admitted to the asylum has increased from an average of 15.5 per cent. in the period between 1874 and 1888 to 21.5 per cent. in the period between 1889 and 1898, and to 22.5 in 1899. Of 472 new cases received during the year 1900, drink was assigned as either the sole or contributory cause in 115, or about one-quarter of all. In the men alone 81, or about one-half, were alcoholic patients. Besides, for every man in whom excessive drinking causes absolute insanity there are 20 in whom it injures the brain, blunts the moral sense and lessens the capacity for work in varying degree. Dr. Clouston makes an earnest plea for legislative or state means for the diminution of alcoholism. He rightly contends that it is an irrational application of the doctrine of liberty to grant to every man the inalienable right to render himself a burden to others and a source of degradation and danger to the community.

Drink and Crime.

In 120 army prisons throughout Germany 46 per cent. of all the murderers committed their crimes while under the influence of drink. Sixty-three per cent. of the cases of manslaughter, 74 per cent. of serious injury to the person and 77 per cent. of criminal immorality are due to the same cause. In the navy, out of 1,671 punishable cases during the last six years 75 per cent. of the most serious cases have been due to drunkenness.—Berlin Letter to London Chronicle.

PROGRESS IN LUZON.

Substance of Gen. MacArthur's Report Is Encouraging.

Greater Part of the Philippine Archipelago He Declares to Be Under Civil Home Rule and Thoroughly Pacified.

Gen. MacArthur's report on retiring from command in the Philippines is a record of advancement all along the line. He found guerrilla warfare still raging in many districts. He leaves only a few bands in the hills, the greater part of the archipelago under civil home rule, and at peace, with industry and education advancing rapidly.

Gen. MacArthur rightly regards Funston's capture of Aguinaldo as the most important event of his administration. "The capture," he says, "dispelled the growing tendency to idealize Aguinaldo's personality, which millions of natives believed ultimately would insure success for the rebellion." Aguinaldo at large and rarely visible was a demigod to the superstitious natives. Brought within constant sight and touch, he has shrunk to his normal and commonplace dimensions.

Gen. MacArthur approves Col. E. H. Crowder's plan for reforming the Philippine currency upon the gold standard. This proposes as the standard of value a gold peso of 12.9 grains, just half the value of the American gold dollar, to be coined in convenient multiples, and a subsidiary coinage of subdivisions of the peso, these coins to be exchangeable for American at two pesos for $1. This is practically the plan successfully followed by Japan in changing from the silver to the gold standard. Whether it would be better than the plan used in reforming the Porto Rican currency need not now be discussed.

The opinion of so many European observers, that the Filipino will never make a steady worker, is not shared by Gen. MacArthur. "The Filipino," he says, "will work when properly paid, and the Chinese are not necessary, as has been asserted." He advises "the gradual decrease of the Chinese now in the islands," and evidently favors the application of our exclusion law. Thus the British doctrine that the islands will never amount to anything industrially unless the Chinese be allowed to overrun them is overthrown by American experience, just as many other British "colonial precedents" are being overthrown.

GEN. ARTHUR MACARTHUR.
(Until Recently American Commander in the Philippines.)

The much-debated "friar question," Gen. MacArthur believes, will easily be settled by the straightforward application of our principle of the absolute separation of state and church. "Properly speaking and in broad scope," he says, "there is no church question." Common-sense Americans have long held Gen. MacArthur's evident view. That is, to give the friars exactly the same protection given others, and let the people have such priests as they wish. Then let controversies over property be settled by the courts in the ordinary way.

"To doubt the wisdom of the United States' remaining in the islands," says Gen. MacArthur, in conclusion, "is to doubt the stability of republican institutions, and amounts to a declaration that a nation thus governed is incapable of successfully resisting strains that arise naturally from its own freedom and productive energy." That is why the United States stays in the Philippines, and will there remain. Their future will depend chiefly on the fitness of the natives for self-government, and to some extent on the construction of our constitution by the supreme court.

Mammoth Found in Siberia.

The St. Petersburg Academy of Science has received a telegram from the leader of the expedition which is shortly to bring the mammoth found in Siberia to St. Petersburg. The telegram, which is dispatched from Yakutsk, reports that the expedition was at that place on June 14. It is proceeding by steamer up the river, and will then journey overland to Kolymsk, which is 1,000 versts off, and where it expects to arrive in two and a half months. The mammoth found is unique of its kind. Its hair, skin and flesh are entirely preserved and there are remains of undigested food in its stomach.

Jewels for the Forehead.

There are hints from Paris of the return of the once fashionable, fervoniere—a jewel to be worn on the forehead, and held in place either by a velvet band or a fillet of gold.

CAMBON ON AMERICA.

Every Workingman, Says the French Ambassador, Hopes to Be an Andrew Carnegie.

The Echo de Paris prints a long interview with the French ambassador to the United States, M. Jules Cambon.

He says on the subject of the steel strike that the workingman in America is not hostile to the moneyed aristocracy, as he believes that with intelligence and good luck he may also become a Carnegie. So, instead of being jealous, he says that Carnegie played his game fairly.

"Europeans have no idea how hard Americans, both rich and poor, work," continued Cambon. "The French people are not aware how many French there are in America, especially the descendants of Frenchmen. A large part of the United States was settled by the French, and if their descendants have not preserved their language they still love France.

M. JULES CAMBON.
(Ambassador of the French Republic at Washington.)

"The Americans speak English, but they are not English. Their whole effort has been to weld into a single metal the French, English and Germans who compose the nation.

"The French language is popular. If the educated young women of France who are vainly seeking employment in schools would go to America they could easily gain a good living there as teachers.

"The Americans, perhaps, are inclined to reproach the French with remembering too well what they did for America. Still, the cultured classes know what America owes to France."

Describing the country, M. Cambon said: "When one returns to Europe after living with the Americans everything here looks small. America is so colossal and so young that she has many other surprises in store for Europe."

ALBERT B. CUMMINS.

Brief Sketch of the Career of the Republican Candidate for Governor of the Hawkeye State.

Albert B. Cummings, the republican candidate for governor of Iowa, is a leading lawyer of Des Moines. He was born February 15, 1850, near Carmichael, Pa., the son of Thomas L. and Sarah B. (Fennekien) Cummins.

Mr. Cummins passed through the public schools of his native town and later entered college at Waynesburg, Pa. He became a resident of Iowa in 1869, when he was 19. In 1871 he removed to Fort Wayne, Ind., where, after a brief term as assistant surveyor of Allen county, he became division engineer and then assistant chief engineer in the service of the Cincinnati, Richmond & Fort Wayne road.

ALBERT B. CUMMINS.
(Nominated for Governor by the Republicans of Iowa.)

Having decided to study law, he removed to Chicago in 1872 and became a student in the office of the old firm of McClellan & Hedges. In 1878 he settled in Des Moines, where he has since resided.

He was not prominent in politics until 1887, when he was selected on account of personal popularity to lead the anti-prohibition fight in Polk county. He did so, defeating the republican candidate for the legislature in a close finish. He maintained his opposition to the party on the prohibition issue as late as 1891.

Pipes Not Used in Cuba.

Cuba produces no tobacco for chewing or for pipe-smoking. The Cubans who smoke pipes might be counted on one's fingers without making a second round on the fingers. The cigar and the cigarette prevail. To what extent the Cuban cigarette might ever become popular with American smokers is a matter beyond determination. It is certain that most Americans of prolonged residence become, if they be smokers, addicted to Cuban brands, and find difficulty in weaning themselves back to American brands on their return.

Germany's Richest Citizen.

Krupp, the German gunmaker, has a fortune of nearly $50,000,000, an income of $4,000,000, and a payroll of 80,000 persons.

THE FARMING WORLD

HENHOUSE ON WHEELS.

It Can Be Moved from Field to Field, and Is the Idea of a Practical Farmer.

On the majority of farms where grain is raised there is more or less wasted each year that nothing but a fowl will pick up. This often happens in wheat fields. The hen house shown in the illustration is designed to meet the demand for a movable house and was gotten up by a practical poultry raiser. The house is built as light as the necessary strength will allow. The length is 12 feet and a little less than six feet wide in the clear. The height from the sill to eaves is five feet and seven and one-half feet from sill to gable. The door is six feet high and two feet wide.

POULTRY HOUSE ON WHEELS.

One window is shown, though two on the same side would be better. There is no necessity for a window on the opposite side, from the fact that it is always possible to keep the same side to the south; and in case the house should be used in winter it would be preferable to have no windows on the north side. The house is sided with matched stuff, without any inner ceiling; the floor is single also, as it is designed purely for warm weather use though the owner has no trouble in keeping Cochins in it during the winter time. The roof is tarred paper painted. On a small roof like this tarred paper painted once a year will do very well. The rear wheels are from an old mowing machine; the forward ones from a grain binder truck. The rear axle is a heavy iron rod securely bolted to the bottom, while the front axle is of wood.—Orange Judd Farmer.

BEES WILL PAY TAXES.

There Is No Good Reason Why Every Farmer Should Not Raise a Crop of Honey.

In a bulletin recently issued by the Rhode Island board of agriculture the secretary of the board, George A. Stockwell, says:

Economical as the farmer may be, careful as he may clean in field and roadside (perhaps, meanwhile, complaining of low prices and high taxes), yet he is unconscious, often apparently, of the presence, or indifferent to the value, of a rich and bountiful crop, a free gift of nature, prepared every year that may be of sufficient value to pay the taxes. Honey is as much a money crop as any other and there is no reason why it should not contribute to the general welfare.

In the city of Providence one colony of bees gathered in one season 78 pounds of comb honey, sold at 25 cents per pound, or $19.50; another colony in the same apiary gathered in the same season 124 pounds of extracted honey, sold at 20 cents per pound, or $20.80. Other colonies in the same apiary produced 20 to 60 pounds of comb or extracted honey each, above what was required to support them during the winter.

Beekeeping is usually a joint industry. Bees must have some attention, but do not require so much care as some persons suppose. By the use of the double, non-swarming hives bees may be left to themselves most of the time and the farmer may give his attention to poultry raising, small fruit culture, gardening, etc., assured that his bees are working for his benefit to supply his table and pay or help pay the taxes.

Proper Rations for Hens.

The proper feeding of birds has much to do with their health. The ration of the fowls should always be a balanced one. Fowls fed an unbalanced ration continually are certain to become weak. If it is unbalanced on the side of too much carbo-hydrates they become soft and lazy and the bones lack strength, as well as do the muscles. If the food is overbalanced on the side of too much nitrogenous matter, various troubles follow, and in such a condition the birds are said to fall easy victims to rheumatism, which in turn is made possible by too great a supply of acid formed from the nitrogenous food products. It pays a man to study the ration question if he wishes to avoid many troubles with fowls.—Farmers' Review.

Keep a Regular Account.

It is impossible to know whether you have made a profit unless accounts are kept. Charge the hens with all the food allowed, and also interest on capital invested. Credit them with all the sales and for the produce used in the family. The difference will be the profit unless you wish to charge for your labor, the value of which depends upon how much it was worth to you at the time. A large flock costs less for labor, proportionately, than a smaller one, but in families where small flocks are kept for pleasure as well as profit the labor is not estimated.—Farm and Fireside.

VALUABLE FORAGE CROP.

The Strong Points of Winter Rye Make It Invaluable Where Pasture Is Desired.

Next to rape, winter rye is probably the most valuable forage crop grown in the United States. When all its good points are considered, it almost becomes a question as to whether it should not be given first place as a forage crop. But it is inferior to rape as a soiling crop. The strong points about winter rye as a forage plant are: The abundant pasture which it produces fall and spring, the earliness and lateness of its growth, the power which it has to withstand severe weather and to grow on poor soils, and the fact that it is grown as a catch crop, that is to say, a crop grown between crops. Rye can be grown any season without losing a crop. When pastured off in the spring, it may be followed by a crop of corn, sorghum, field roots or rape. The soil is prepared for rye in the same way as for other grain. The seed bed should be fine and moist. In a dry autumn moisture is secured by a judicious use of the roller and harrow on upturned land. From two to three bushels of seed per acre should be sown, and preferably with the grain drill, for many reasons that may be given. It should be sown any time after midsummer and on until the autumn, but it should always be sown sufficiently long before winter to enable it to root firmly. If sown quite early in very hot weather it may rust. The partial remedy for this is immediate pasturing. In the spring it will furnish grazing from two to three weeks earlier than any other plant, and it should at all times be grazed down closely to keep it from jointing. Milch cows should not be allowed to pasture on it for more than two or three hours a day. The grazing which young rye furnishes is excellent for any kind of stock, and in case it should outgrow the grazing powers of the animals pasturing it, if they are removed until the heads form and ripen and begin to break down, the foraging for swine is most excellent.—Colman's Rural World.

CHEAP FEEDING FLOOR.

Progressive Stock Raisers Consider It Not Merely a Convenience But a Necessity.

Feeding floors are becoming more and more popular among advanced stock raisers and as there is so much at stake in feeding hogs no effort should be spared to keep them healthy. When the hogs are fed on the ground there is great danger of inviting disease. A feeding floor, therefore, is very desirable. To insure perfect healthfulness it should be three or four feet above the ground, so that perfect ventilation is secured and the harboring of rats and mice made impossible. The floor can be made of inch lumber and any desired size. A strong board fence must be put up all around it to prevent the hogs being crowded off and injured.

FEEDING FLOOR FOR HOGS.

At one end of the pen an approach should be built up to the gate, which can be closed while the feed is being placed on the floor. The other end of the floor a crib or pen is located in which the feed is stored. The floor must be cleaned after each feeding. Put a long-handled fork through the middle of a board about three feet long and six inches wide. With this the cobs and uneaten portion of the feed can be quickly pushed off. Hogs should never be fed unclean material. The accompanying illustration indicates the arrangement of the feeding floor and feeding pen. This floor is partially under roof.—J. L. Irwin, in Orange Judd Farmer.

Steady Demand for Stock.

There has never been a time in the history of this country when prime pure bred cattle were in such high favor as now, says the Drovers' Journal. The inquiry is as broad as the land, and broader, for it extends to our neighbors across the border, both north and south. There have been temporary spasms in the demand for high-class cattle in years past, but it was never universal, as it is now. There were never such good, wholesome reasons behind it. We are 10,000,000 short in the general cattle supply, and 10,000,000 ahead in population, with a field abroad which is constantly growing. The public is willing and better able to pay for better meat; why shouldn't it be produced?

Why Cattle Raising Pays.

Leading authorities say that in 1900 we had in this country 10,000,000 less cattle than in 1892, and that in that time our population has increased over 10,000,000. In 1892 we were considered to have 826 head of cattle to every 1,000 of population, losing on an average during those eight years 1,000,000, so that if we are only to maintain our present ratio we must be able to show an annual increase of about 1,000,000 cattle. This aspect of the situation appeals strongly to thinking men, and possibly gives the real explanation why men of great wealth are now eagerly embarking in the cattle business, both as breeders of pure bred cattle and in safe concerns on the range.—Rural World.

Turkeys are capable of rapid digestion and apparently are always hungry. They do better if they can have a free range

YOUNG FRUIT TREES.

How to Protcet Them from Rabbits Is a Problem That Has Puzzled Many a Man.

I have tried several plans of protecting young fruit trees from rabbits, and have unpleasant memories of some; especially the axle grease plan. I bought eight fine apple trees at 37½ cents apiece, and applied the axle grease as directed in an agricultural paper, and next spring all but two were dead; five years later these two were still stunted, and had made little or no growth. I would like to warn all fruit growers against the use of axle grease. Several of my neighbors followed the directions of this article, with equally disastrous results, and no telling how many readers in other parts of the country. Axle grease is an excellent thing on the axle, but on the young tree it is very destructive.

The method which I find to give the greatest satisfaction is as follows: Procure a lot of medium-sized cornstalks and cut them in two-foot lengths. With a stout cord—binder twine preferred—tie one around each end of a stalk, about three inches from end; tying stalk in middle of string, place another stalk beside this one, pass string around, tie and proceed with next stalk, picket fence fashion, until you have enough to pass around the tree. Leave several inches of string beyond the last stalk to tie around the tree. These can be made very fast, and will keep off the rodents nicely, and will be better than rags. The stalk protectors will last several winters. Some use paper and rags for this purpose, but however cheap and easily applied they are not altogether satisfactory; I have known bunny to have intelligence enough to remove this covering for his supper.—E. W. Jones, in Agricultural Epitomist.

CLEVER ARRANGEMENT.

How to Put Together a Four-Horse Whiffletree for Use on a Left-Hand Binder.

A four-horse double tree for a left-hand binder, cutting a seven-foot swath, may be made as follows: Whiffletree, a, should be six feet long and pivoted in the center with a clevis working in slot, c, just 32 inches from center of tongue. The piece, b, is made of iron three-quarters by four inches and bent in the shape of a horseshoe, with slit, c, cut in it one inch wide by five inches long and bolted to tongue as portrayed, with the iron plate, d, on top. The plate, d, is to prevent the double tree, a, from slipping too far either way. The draft rod, e, is attached to the tongue as close to the machine as possible and gives a center draft, or nearly so. The single trees are 30 inches long. This hitch may be used for either a left or right-hand binder, as by simply reversing b, or putting it on the opposite side of the tongue, it is ready for the right-hand binder. One horse only is on the side of the tongue next to the grain.—W. A. Sharp, in Farm and Home.

FOR A LEFT-HAND BINDER.

SELECTION OF COLTS.

What a French Agricultural Paper Has to Say on This Always Interesting Subject.

How can a good colt be selected? Opinions differ on this subject. Some affirm it is very difficult, if not impossible, to judge a colt before he is somewhat matured. Others pretend that at six months one can decide what he will be, while others say that at 18 months a selection can be made on his merits with almost a certainty. At 18 months the ensemble of the proportions of the head, the chest and shoulders and of the body is very near what it will be at four years if the animal has been well raised, the legs alone lengthening slightly.

There are some indications of a general order that will serve as a guide in the selection of a colt. A colt that has a good resemblance to a matured horse will have very little to acquire. A colt high in the thighs should foretell a large horse, but if the knees are small and the hams narrow and flat the legs will be lank and puny and the colt will develop little force or value for the raiser. The colt that is said to come near the earth is the one to select, for whatever other specialty he may have this is a superior quality. The connoisseur can judge and decide the merits of a colt by a glance of the eye, but the inexperienced must take into account all the knowledge he can obtain. The growth of the common horse often terminates at three years, while that of a race horse is not often achieved until towards five years. One can therefore say a horse is fully matured at five years, but one should not demand a maximum of labor and fatigue until six years.—Journal d' Agriculture Pratique.

One disadvantage with guineas is that they are not good market fowls.

How He Passed It.

Pat—I say, Mike, I have a threepenny piece with a hole in it which I cannot get rid of at all—at all. What shall I do with it, begorra?

Mike—Sure, Pat, you must do the same as I did oncst—an excellent plan was mine.

"And phwat was it, at all, Mike?"

"Oh, it was fine, Pat, I tell you. That threepenny piece had bothered me a long toime, entoirely. Nobody would have it, so at last I melted down a sixpence and filled up the hole. Begorra, it went the very next day, me bhoy."—London Spare Moments.

Do Your Feet Ache and Burn?

Shake into your shoes, Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder for the feet. It makes tight or New Shoes Feel Easy. Cures Corns, Itching, Swollen, Hot, Callous, Smarting, Sore and Sweating Feet. All Druggists and Shoe Stores sell it, 25c. Sample sent FREE. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

The Real Proof.

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating," he quoted, with a wise smile.

Now the soubrette for whom he was buying the dinner also smiled and chirped gayly:

"I guess that's right. 'This spread shows what a pudding you are for me, Algernon."—Baltimore American.

I am sure Piso's Cure for Consumption saved my life three years ago.—Mrs. Thos. Robbins, Maple Street, Norwich, N. Y., Feb 17, 1900.

Friendship's Tribute.

The man at whose funeral they were assembled hadn't drawn a sober breath during the last 15 years of his life, and had been noted for always being in trouble with his neighbors. "Well," said one of his old acquaintances, turning sadly away after the services were over, "he was a man of mighty reg'lar habits."—Chicago Tribune.

Hoxsie's Croup Cure

Checks a cold in one hour. 50 cents.

On the Safe Side.

"Mrs. Piff, how do you prepare your baby's breakfast?"

"Oh, I give him one-third milk and two-thirds microbe-killer."—Detroit Free Press.

To give happiness is to deserve happiness.—Rousseau.

Silence is the wit of fools, and one of the virtues of the wise.—Bonnard.

Woman poses while waiting for a man to propose.—Chicago Daily News.

All agree that it is more blessed to give than it is to receive advice.—Ram's Horn.

If you get hungry before noon your health is all right.—Atchison Globe.

"So they sent your poem back," said the sympathizing friend. "It's too bad." "That's what the editor said."—Philadelphia Times.

"I wish I could learn how to shave quickly," remarked the very young man. "First catch your hare," quoted his friend.—Philadelphia Press.

Explained—Mrs. Goodsale—"To what do you attribute your appetite for strong drink? Is it hereditary?" Wragson Tatters—"No, lady; it's thirst."—Philadelphia Press.

Scriblets—"I am going to make my boy a model of politeness." Wickers—"Going to let him read Chesterfield?" Scriblets—"No; I am going to let him read some of those editorial rejection slips."—Philadelphia Record.

"I strained my voice talking to a lady today," said a book agent. "I thought men in your business had your throats vulcanized so they would stand anything," said his friend. "How did you do it?" "Talking through a screen door." — Indianapolis News.

When an unworthy man tries to enforce unworthy ideas, show your disapproval. Should a lot of former culprits try to mob the sheriff, it is a part of your duty as a citizen to stand by the sheriff. It is also your duty to encourage a citizen who is in the right. It is this healthy public sentiment that makes the world good or ill; that encourages worthiness and makes evil unpopular.—Atchison Globe.

Arms and the Lady.

"Isn't it marvelous!" said the young man as they stood looking at the armless wonder. "He can feed himself without hands; he can write his name; he can thread a needle; he can paint a picture, and he can whittle."

The girl drew a long sigh and said:

"Yes, it is astonishing!"

"See, he is going to play the piano with his toes. Why, that man doesn't need arms. Of what use would they be to him if he had them?"

"Well," she said, rather low, so that the crowd couldn't hear, "they might come in handy if he were out calling, and it was along about nine or ten oclock, and the lights were turned down, and—and—"

But the master of ceremonies called out: "Now, ladies and gentlemen, if you will just step this way," and there was a rush in which she and her companion were swept down to where the man with the rubber skin was beginning his interesting and instructive performance.—Chicago Record-Herald.

He Couldn't.

"Oh, Mr. Spooneigh, pray rise. It is not right that you should kneel at my feet. Rise, I beg of you!" implored the fair lady.

But he didn't rise. His Irish did, though, and he replied, solemnly:

"I'm afraid—er—Miss Grace—I'm afraid I'm kneeling on your—er—that is, you dropped your chewing gum, and, oh, Miss Grace, I'm stuck on you!"—Denver Times.

Begone, Dull Care!

A Droitwich barber was just finishing lathering a customer and was talking volubly, as usual.

"Yes, sir," he said, "there's no carelessness allowed by our employer. Every time we cut a customer's face we are fined a sixpence, and if we make an ugly gash it costs us a shilling."

Then, picking up and brandishing his razor, he added: "But I don't care a rap to-day. I've just won a sovereign."—London Answers.

Looked Like It.

"John, dear," said the bride, after they had got to keeping house, with a never-vacant "spare room," "I believe all our friends think we are perfectly miserable."

"Why, my dear?" cried the astonished husband; "why?"

"Well, they seem to be carrying out the idea that 'misery loves company.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

SOZODONT Tooth Powder

in a handy Patent Box (new)
SOZODONT LIQUID - - 25c
Large LIQUID and POWDER, 75c
At all Stores, or by Mail for the price.
25c
HALL & RUCKEL, New York.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION
25 CTS. 25 CTS.

A. N. K.—C 1879

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please state that you saw the Advertisement in this paper.

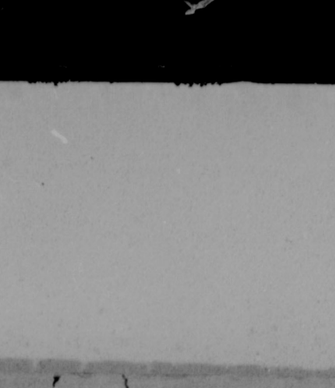
$3.00 W.L. DOUGLAS $3.50 SHOES UNION MADE.

For More Than a Quarter of a Century

The reputation of W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes for style, comfort and wear has excelled all other makes sold at these prices. This excellent reputation has been won by merit alone. W. L. Douglas shoes have to give better satisfaction than other $3.00 and $3.50 shoes because his reputation for the best $3.00 and $3.50 shoes must be maintained. The standard has always been placed so high that the wearer receives more value for his money in the W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than he can get elsewhere.

W. L. Douglas sells more $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than any other two manufacturers.

W. L. Douglas $4.00 Gilt Edge Line cannot be equalled at any price.



W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes are made of the same high grade leathers used in $5 and $6 shoes and are just as good.

Sold by the best shoe dealers everywhere. Insist upon having W. L. Douglas shoes with name and price stamped on bottom.

How to Order by Mail.—If W. L. Douglas shoes are not sold in your town, send order direct to factory. Shoes sent anywhere on receipt of price and 25 cts. additional for carriage. My custom department will make you a pair that will equal $5 and $6 custom made shoes, in style, fit and wear. Take measurements of foot as shown on model; state style desired; size and width usually worn; plain or cap toe; heavy, medium or light soles. A fit guaranteed. Try a pair.

Fast Color Eyelets used.
Catalog free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

20,000 HARVEST HANDS

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Required to harvest the grain crop of Western CANADA. The most abundant yield on the Continent. Reports are that the average yield of No. 1 Hard Wheat in Western Canada will be over thirty bushels to the acre. Prices for farm help will be excellent.

Splendid Ranching Lands adjoining the Wheat Belt, will be run from all points in the United States to the FREE GRANT LANDS. Secure a home at once, and if you wish to purchase at prevailing prices, and secure the advantage of the low rates, apply for Literature, Rates, etc., to F. PEDLEY, Supt. Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to JOS. YOUNG, 315 State St., Columbus, O., Canadian Government Agent.

EXCURSIONS

☞ When visiting Buffalo, do not fail to see the CANADIAN EXHIBIT at the Pan-American.

READERS OF THIS PAPER DESIRING TO BUY ANYTHING ADVERTISED IN ITS COLUMNS SHOULD INSIST UPON HAVING WHAT THEY ASK FOR, REFUSING ALL SUBSTITUTES OR IMITATIONS.

STARK TREES best by Test—77 YEARS. LARGEST NURSERY. FRUIT BOOK free. WE WANT MORE SALESMEN PAY CASH Weekly STARK BROS, Louisiana, Mo.; Dansville, N. Y.; Etc

RHEUMATISM Van Buren's Rheumatic Compound is the only positive cure. Fast experience speaks for itself. Depot 88 S. California Ave., Chicago.

RICH, BUT WRETCHED

Fight on for wealth, old "Money Bags," your liver is drying up and bowels wearing out, some day you will cry aloud for health, offering all your wealth, but you will not get it because you neglected Nature in your mad rush to get gold. No matter what you do, or what ails you, to-day is the day—every day is the day—to keep watch of Nature's wants—and help your bowels act regularly—CASCARETS will help Nature help you. Neglect means bile in the blood, foul breath, and awful pains in the back of the head with a loathing and bad feeling for all that is good in life. Don't care how rich or poor you are, you can't be well if you have bowel trouble, you will be regular if you take CASCARETS—get them to-day—CASCARETS—in metal box; cost 10 cents; take one, eat it like candy and it will work gently while you sleep. It cures; that means it strengthens the muscular walls of the bowels and gives them new life; then they act regularly and naturally; that is what you want—it is guaranteed to be found in—

THE IDEAL LAXATIVE

Cascarets

CANDY CATHARTIC

BEST FOR THE BOWELS

10c. 25c. 50c.

ALL DRUGGISTS

To any needy mortal suffering from bowel troubles and too poor to buy CASCARETS we will send a box free. Address Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago or New York, mentioning advertisement and paper. 423

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1901.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET

For Comptroller of the Treasury:
HERMAN S. PLATT,
Of Baltimore City.

For Clerk of the Court of Appeals:
THOMAS PARRAN,
Of Calvert County.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY TICKET.

For State Senator:
ROBERT A. RAVENSCROFT,
Of District No. 5.

For House of Delegates:
PATRICK E. FINZEL,
Of District No. 9.
CHARLES A. ASHBY,
Of District No. 14.

For Sheriff:
WILLIAM A. MAFFETT,
Of District No. 6.

For Treasurer:
JAMES W. WHITE,
Of District No. 14.

For County Commissioners:
TAYLOR FRIEND,
Of District No. 2.
JACOB STUMP,
Of District No. 4.

For Register of Wills:
EDWIN E. FRIEND,
Of District No. 7.

For County Surveyor:
FRANKLIN P. GREEN,
Of District No. 11.

CAN your father vote?

HAS anyone heard the Democratic election law upheld?

TO VOTE under the Gorman-Rasin law will try the intelligence of the most intelligent.

CAN you vote? is a question propounded not only to illiterates but also to literates.

HOW much easier it is to fight for principles than for a boss. Down with Gorman.

HAVE the people of this county figured out how much the extra session cost per capita?

THIS county will never send three Democratic Legislaturemen to cast their votes for A. P. G.

THE voters of our State will not again deliberately put on the yoke of a boss-ruled Democracy.

HOW much did you contribute toward paying for the State census taken for political purposes only?

LET all the voters of this county rally as one man and carry the G. O. P. on to an overwhelming victory.

HOW much did you contribute to the recent extra session and what benefit did you receive therefrom?

THE Democratic election law is like a boomerang: it will come back and strike the party who sent it forth.

LOCALLY we have a pretty decent sort of Democratic ticket to go "up against," but deliver us from the State ticket.

THE census taken by the United States is good enough for us. We did not need a State one. The Democrats must have been fearful of losing a vote.

DO THE voters of Maryland want A. P. Gorman back in the United States Senate? If so vote for the Democratic nominees for the Legislature.

THERE seems to be many Democrats who think that if they were literate enough to vote in past years they should not be required to attend school now.

ANYTHING for the Senate is Boss Gorman's cry. Shall we let him succeed? It is dollars to doughnuts that he will be still crying the same story after the election.

THE white illiterates of Maryland will on November 5 improve the opportunity to get even with the Democratic party which endeavored to disfranchise them.

THERE must be constant watchfulness and activity on the side of our party until November 5th, for that is the only sure way to win victory at the polls.

IF THE Democrats are successful next month we may confidently expect them to enact a law making it a crime for a man to attempt to vote unless he be a Democrat.

OF THE four hundred or more illiterate voters of this county more than half the number are taxpayers, yet they have no voice as to who shall levy and collect their taxes.

THE German citizens of this county unable to read English will be disqualified from voting. Will their sons who can read English suffer this insult to their parents to go unchallenged?

DR. GEORGE C. KELLER, of Grantsville, who was nominated by the Democrats for the Legislature, has withdrawn from the ticket and Mr. E. C. W. Ryland, of Friendsville, has been designated to take his place.

"SLICK VIC" BAUGHMAN wants to be the next Governor of Maryland. He is the father of the infamous election law now disgracing the statutes of Maryland. A vote for the Democracy now means a vote for "Slick Vic" a year or two hence.

SOME wag has written under the placard adorning the door of Democratic headquarters in Oakland the words: "Dead dog." It is not for us to say that the party is a dead dog but appearances seem to indicate that it is a dead party in Garrett county at least.

AMONG other advantages to accrue from Republican successes in Maryland this fall, one of the most important will be the repeal of the present Democratic disfranchisement election law and the reenactment of the election law passed by the Republicans in 1896, and which law gave to every man the right to vote and a guarantee that his vote would be counted as cast.

THE loading of campaign guns is a favorite occapation with many individuals during the month of October, and firing will soon be begun along the line. There are big guns and little guns, guns that kick and guns that have nothing but blank cartridges in their barrels; but the supply of ammunition is large, and the campaign musketry and artillery will soon be heard above the rumble of the trolley car in the metropolis and the voice of the screech owl in the rural neighborhoods.

THE ELECTION LAW.

The Baltimore Argus, a well-known Democratic paper, commenting upon the probable effect of the election law disfranchisement scheme says: "The new census of Maryland gives 40,000 illiterates. Of these 24,000 are colored and 16,000 whites. At least 16,000 of the colored illiterates will vote, being instructed just how they can and will catch on. These will be all Republicans. The 16,000 white illiterates, two-thirds of whom are Democratic, very few will vote, and those who do will also vote the Republican ticket, but the relatives of the 16,00 white illiterates, who are 95 per cent educated people, able to read and write, and 90 per cent. of these male relatives will also in revenge for the disfranchisement of their friends and connections, vote the Republican ticket. Where then is the gain for the Democracy in the new election law? On the face of it 40,000 illiterates are knocked out. In actual fact there are only about 8,000 colored and 14,000 white—22,000 disfranchised, nearly all Democratic among the whites. These 14,000 white illiterates mean a loss to the Democracy of not less than 12,000 voters always there. Add to these last 12,000 votes the vote and influence of relatives and family connections estimated at 12,000 more, and where will the Democracy be in November? Sometimes when we think of the quantity of damnable fools in the Democratic party and reflect on the quality of such as are managing the party, we despair and cry out, 'How long, O Lord; how long?' Added to all this comes the nomination of J. Frank Turner, the political leper and unclean man. Oh, for some power that will take off us the hoofs of unclean beasts."

SHOULD BE SUPPRESSED.

Social and commercial clubs in New York and other eastern cities are banishing the New York Journal from their rooms and in many instances the popular indignation has found vent in hanging and burning in effigy the millionaire publisher of that paper, W. R. Hearst. This displeasure is because of the anarchistic utterances of the Journal. Its general policy of coarse abuse and vilification of the late President McKinley and other high officials, holding them up to ridicule by vicious cartoons and declarations, is calculated to destroy public respect and confidence and to fire the brains of anarchists and cranks to deeds of assassination.

Does any reader of this doubt that the Journal's utterances preceding the death of President McKinley approached the anarchistic line? They not only did, but they even counseled assassination. The New York Sun is reproducing some extracts from Hearst's paper, which fairly make the blood boil. In one of these publications some months ago, the Journal called "William McKinley, bar one, the most despised and hated creature in the hemisphere; his name is hooted at, his figure burned in effigy."

Here are some further extracts reproduced by the Sun:

"McKinley's fat white hand has tossed to the starving American peasant the answer out of the White House window, 'A trust can do no wrong.'"

"Has assassination ever changed the world's history? We invite our readers to think over this question."

"Washington, Feb. 4.The bullet that pierced Goebel's chest cannot be found in all the west; good reason. It is speeding here to stretch McKinley on his bier."

Is it any wonder decent people are kicking the Journal out of their homes and places of meeting? It is justly held to be primarily responsible for the murderous deed of the creature Czolgosz, and Publisher Hearst should deem himself lucky that the indignant populace restrained themselves by stretching up on a rope his dummy instead of his own person.

DR. HERING'S FIGURES.

Dr. Joshua W. Hering, of Carroll county, comptroller of Maryland and now a candidate for re-election to that office, is a man of high character and unquestioned probity. That he handles the money of the state in a thoroughly honest way none can doubt, and the Democrats do themselves honor when they nominate and renominate such a man as he. Strong as Dr. Hering's personal character is, very weak was the defense he made of his party in the speech he delivered accepting renomination to the office of comptroller. He touched the subject purely from a financial standpoint, declaring that the Democratic party is to be congratulated upon the record it has made in reducing the net public debt of the state from about seven and a half millions in 1867 to less than three millions at the present time, and reducing the state tax rate in that time from 20 cents to 17. Then Dr. Hering added:

"We point with satisfaction to the fact that under the economical management of the Democratic majority in the legislature of 1900 the session cost the taxpayers of Maryland nearly $6,000 less than the session of 1898, the cost of the session of 1898, including per diem, printing, &c., being $173,827,49, while the cost of the session of 1900, covering the same items of expenses, was $168,003,99, a difference of $5,823,50."

Not to enter into a discussion now of the reasons for this difference, does Dr. Hering take into account the $45,000 spent by his party for an extra session to emasculate a good election law, or of the $40,000 appropriated by that $45,000 extra session for a state census, which was wholly unnecessary unless it be for the partisan purposes to which it is now being put by the very men who took it? Did any of these figures enter into Dr. Hering's calculations when he spoke of the economical administration of Maryland's finances under the present regime? If such partisan expensive legislation as that is true economy, a few years more of it would put the state debt back to the figures of 1867.

It is not safe for Dr. Hering or any other Democrat to point with too much pride to the record that party has made in the handling of the finances of the state during the past 30 years. There have been some very black spots on that record, and the people of Maryland can see some of those spots yet. It is not so many years ago that all the money in the treasury was missing one morning, and more than once have there been some very suspicious dealings in loans issued from the state capital. Maryland's financial management is not a good campaign argument for Democrats, and Dr. Hering must be careful, or he will find himself on very dangerous ground.

The reduction of five million dollars in the state debt is due in part to an increase in the state's taxable property, in larger part to unjust legislation passed by Democrats by which Baltimore is compelled carry the state on its shoulders and keep the state treasury full, while its own city treasury is empty. It is this that has made the state rich, and not any wise or economical management of state finances. When Dr. Hering looks at the state's finances he should also look at those of the city, and then he will see exactly what Democratic management of finances can do when it is given a chance.

GOVERNOR SMITH'S ANSWER.

Governor Smith seems determined that he shall share with Colonel Buchanan Schley the glory now overwhelming the Democratic leaders in connection with the Maryland census lists. The Governor's answer to a mandamus suit to compel the production of these lists is quite as ingenious as that of Colonel Schley, and has the same tendency to reveal him as a painstaking official with an over-scrupulous conscience. By the length of the Gubernatorial term, Governor Smith has been deprived of the "functus officio" plea. He is still a really live State executive, while the splendid Weste n Maryland Colonel is merely an official mummy. While the Governor himself thoughtfully furnished a scape-goat for Colonel Schley, the Governor is the man of last resort in the census business and is obliged to make a scape-goat of "some room or rooms in the State House." These, at least, will not be able to hit back. They are under no responsibility either to hide or to discover the precious census lists of which they are alleged by the Governor to have the custody.

The Governor starts out by denying that the disclosure of the census lists is a ministerial duty. It might be illjudged and indiscreet, but he hints, to permit Republicans to view these repositories of political knowledge. That is undoubtedly the view taken by the whole Democratic machine of Maryland, and that is the reason why Governor Smith was asked to carry out his part in a conspiracy to tax the people of Maryland for political information to be used only by the Gorman-Rasin gang. With characteristic generosity, Governor Smith offers to produce, "whenever duly required," the tabulated statement upon which he has based his proclamation apportioning the representation in the General Assembly from the various counties of the State. This he admits is in his control, and not in the custody of "some room or rooms in the State House." The value and ingeneousness of this offer can be appreciated when it is considered that a more or less complete summary of this information has already been published in nearly every paper in the State.

With his usual frankness, Governor Smith meets every issue fully and squarely. He wishes to take no technical advantage, but is compelled to do so to maintain the dignity of his position. The Governor merely wishes full proof that the letter he wrote to Mr. Goldsborough was genuine and that the correspondence between Mr. Goldsborough and Colonel Schley has not been cooked up. He wants full proof that a demand has been made on him for the privilege of inspecting the precious census lists—at least a demand which could be construed to be on behalf of the persons who filed the pending mandamus suit. The Governor is a stickler for orderly procedure. He stands upon his "bond" and the literal interpretation thereof.

Taking it all in all, the answer of the Governor indicates that when it is shown that he has legal custody of the census lists and no valid excuse can be made why he should give proper representatives of the people of Maryland access to them, he will do so before he will become a subject for contempt of court proceedings.

Of course, the Governor could not know when he was pushing through this census measure and helping to kill amendments which would make available all the information paid for by the whole people that so many qualms of conscience and official scruples could arise. Beyond a doubt, when he signed the census bill he realized that it was his highest duty as sworn executive of the State of Maryland to play his part in providing by general taxation of the people of the State for a Democratic campaign fund. All of his subsequent acts are merely in line with the high conceptions of his obligations formed at that time. Governor Smith shows again by his answer in the census case that he is still preparing for a long and honorable political career in this State—provided the conspiracy is successful.

Children's Fertilizer.

That's a good name for Scott's Emulsion. Children are like young plants. Some will grow in ordinary soil. Others need fertilizers.

The nature of some children prevents them from thriving on ordinary food Such children grow right if treated right.

All they need is a little fertilizer—a little extra richness. Scott's Emulsion is the right treatment.

Fertilizers make things grow. That's just what Scott's Emulsion does. It makes children grow in flesh, grow in strength, grow rich blood, grow in mind, grow happy. That's what we make it for.

Send for free sample.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 409 Pearl St., N. Y.
50c and $1.00, all druggists.

A Great Railway.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Co. owns and operates 6,600 miles of thoroughly equipped railway.

It operates its own Sleeping Cars and Dining Cars, and the service is first-class in every respect.

It traverses the best portion of the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, South and North Dakota.

It runs electric lighted, steam-heated trains.

It has the absolute block system.

It uses all modern appliances for the comfort and safety of its patrons.

Its train employes are civil and obliging.

It tries to give each passenger "value received" for his money, and

It asks every man, woman and child to buy tickets over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway—for it is A Great Railway.

Time tables, maps and information furnished on application to John R. Pott, District Passenger Agent, 810 Park Building, Pittsburg.

Call for Your Letters.

Miss Dorothy Fortney, (2) Miss Florence Forman, Miss Grace Paugh, Charlie Beckley, A. P. Rogers, F. R. Sharpless, Frank Lynch, N. Broadwater, S. F. Neal, J. L. Davis, Atlantic Refining Co.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT COUNTY BANK, AT OAKLAND, IN THE STATE OF MARYLAND, AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS, SEPT. 30th, 1901.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$169,881 88
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured		6 15
Stocks, securities, etc		104,952 87
Banking-house, furniture and fixtures		12,782 93
Other real estate and mortgages owned		1,507 66
Due from National Banks		42,111 48
Due from State Banks		27,944 95
Checks and other cash items		184 72
Fractional paper currency, nickles and cents		223 43
MONEY IN BANK, VIZ:
Specie	$8,329 20
Legal-tender notes	5,035 00	13,364 20
Total		$372,960 32

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$25,000 00
Surplus fund	10,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	4,252 62
Due to National Banks	1,701 63
Due to State Banks	542 87
Individual deposits subject to check	222,689 88
Time certificates of deposit	107,678 85
Certified checks	989 07
Cashier's checks outstanding	105 40
Total	$372,960 32

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. Jones, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 8th day of October, 1901.

G. A. FRALEY, Notary Public.

CORRECT—Attest:
D. E. OFFUTT
J. T. MITCHELL.
G. S. HAMILL.
Directors.

Sheriff's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an election will be held in the several election districts of Garrett county, at such places as shall be designated by the proper authorities for the location of the polls, on

Tuesday, November 5, 1901,

being the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November next, between the hours of 8 o'clock a. m. and 6 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing

One Comptroller of the Treasury, one Clerk of Court of Appeals, one State Senator, two Delegates to the Legislature, one Sheriff, one County Treasurer, two County Commissioners, one Register of Wills and one County Surveyor.

Attention is hereby called to the above notice, and keepers of hotels, taverns, saloons, stores, drinking establishments or any other place where liquors are sold, and all other persons are hereby notified that by Article 33, Section 105, of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland, no spirituous or fermented liquors, ale or beer, or intoxicating drinks of any kind can be sold, bartered, given away or disposed of on election day.

ANDREW J. OESTER,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD
CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE

CALIFORNIA

Via New Orleans & the Sunset Route.

THE ONLY TRUE WINTER ROUTE.

No Snow Blockades or Blizzards.

The only line operating double daily service between Cincinnati and New Orleans, carrying Pullman Palace Drawing Room Sleepers, free Reclining Chair Cars and Buffet, Library, Smoking Cars, Cafe Dining Cars (meals a la carte).

FASTEST and FINEST TRAINS in the SOUTH.

Pullman Excursion Sleeping Cars through to San Francisco from Chicago, via Omaha and the scenic line of the world.

Pullman Excursion Sleeping Cars through to San Francisco from Cincinnati and Chicago, via New Orleans and the Sunset route. These cars are personally conducted by competent agents to look after the welfare of patrons. Quickest and best line to

OKLAHOMA AND INDIAN TERRITORY.

Fastest train service to the famous

BEAUMONT, TEXAS, OIL FIELDS.

Through Sleeping Car from Chicago without change and through Sleeping Car reservations from Cincinnati via Memphis, Tenn., to

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

SPECIAL HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS TO ALL POINTS SOUTH, WEST AND NORTH WEST.
For FREE descriptive matter and full particulars regarding above, address

E. A. RICHTER,
Traveling Passenger Agent,
812 Park Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

NOTICE OF REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 18, 1901.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 33, Chapter 202 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland, 1896, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respective Election Districts of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on

Tuesday, October 1st,
Tuesday, October 8th,
and on
Tuesday, October 15th,
for revision only.

(No one can Register after Tuesday, Oct. 8.)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing, possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts, and for the purpose of performing all other duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland and Chapter 202 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1896.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the store room of Chas. S. May in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at Ed. Schlosnagle's Saddlery Shop in the town of Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in O'Hanley's Hall in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Thomas Garvey's house in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

The Officers of Registration for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Nathan C. Browning in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Corrigan property, Third and Alder streets, in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the old Hoye place on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration for the Ninth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the shop of Samuel Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the building owned by Dr. J. W. Laughlin in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the shop of H. A. Groves in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in the town of Kitzmillersville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the Opera House Building in the town of Oakland.

DANIEL E. BECKMAN,
L. H. FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 1 of Garrett county.

WILLIAM WELCH,
WALTER W. SAVAGE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 2 of Garrett county.

JAMES H. BEVANS,
C. C. DURST,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 3 of Garrett county.

ERVAN FAZENBAKER,
JAMES H. REYNOLDS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 4 of Garrett county.

JOHN H. GATTERMAN,
ASA B. FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 5 of Garrett county.

HARRISON SINES,
REUBEN M. ENLOW,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 6 of Garrett county.

JOSEPH H. SMITHMAN,
LINCOLN CALLIS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 7 of Garrett county.

JOHN H. HARVEY,
GEORGE D. STAHL,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 8 of Garrett county.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
DANIEL B. LAYMAN,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 9 of Garrett county.

ARLA SOLLARS,
C. L. PAUGH,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 10 of Garrett county.

WALTER WARNICK,
JOHN MERRILL,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 11 of Garrett county.

JAMES BOWSER,
GEORGE W. ENGLE,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 12 of Garrett county.

L. C. HAMILL,
W. S. PEW,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 13 of Garrett county.

WADE H. HINEBAUGH,
SIMON MYERS,
Officers of Registration for Election District No. 14 of Garrett county.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President,
FRANK WELCH,
A. G. STURGISS,
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland.

EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk. 28—5t.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE
Makes the food more delicious and wholesome
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

Life is short. It only has four letters.

The autumn leaf is again among the pressing issues of the hour.

Dr. John E. Legge is in Lexington, Ky., and other points south and west.

Mrs. C. M. Miller and daughter, of Swanton, were in Oakland to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius C. Renninger spent Sunday with relatives at Eglon, W. Va.

Miss Margaret Tower left this morning for a visit of two weeks to friends at Moscow Mills.

Rev. John M. Davis was at Fairmont Monday and Tuesday where he attended the sessions of the M. E. conference.

Mr. Henry Schlossnagle and two daughters, of near Accident, spent Sunday in Oakland with relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bush and their daughter Miss Ora left Oakland last night for Buffalo, N. Y., where they expect to spend a week or ten days.

Major J. M. Burns, of Morgantown, came over to Oakland and the Park Monday to look after his property in this section. On Wednesday he went to Washington on business.

Messrs. Fred. A. Thayer and Joseph E. Harned attended the sessions of the West Virginia Conference of the M. E. church at Fairmont a day or two last week.

A notable event in the history of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Tower occurred this morning when a son was born to them. May the young man grow up to be an honor to his parents.

Examiner Ed A. Browning went down to Bloomington this morning to examine the public school building there preparatory to making some needed repairs.

Jehu DeWitt Miller, the brainy platform lecturer, will deliver his lecture entitled "Love, Courtship and Matrimony" at the opera house in Oakland Wednesday night.

That the melancholy days are here, the saddest of the year, will be heartily indorsed by the gloomy ones who find themselves on the wrong side of the November elections.

Come and see the largest and best assortment of gloves and mittens ever carried in stock in Swanton. Also a full line of underwear, as well as shoes for everybody. Bring along your cash and produce and get credit for the balance. Wm. W. Sweet, Agt.

Milton Gnagey, of Accident, Md., has accepted the position of bookkeeper for the Shipley Hardward Co. He is a young man well fitted for the responsibilities attached to the position.—Meyersdale Commercial.

A party of ladies from Oakland composed of Mesdames John M. Davis, John M. Jarboe, James C. Peddicord, Benj. H. Sincell and Miss Hagans, of Morgantown, went up to Hutton Tuesday and spent the day as guests of Miss Tina Connell.

Edward E. Sollars, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Sollars, of near Oakland, left last night for Charlotte Hall Academy, St. Mary's county, which institution he will enter as a student. He was accompanied there by his brother, J. S. Sollars. The latter will return home next week.

It is thought by some people that the new electric railway will be extended from Frostburg to Grantsville. Let it go, and a telephone line with it; it would be a good thing for this section of the route. And then we must have rural free mail delivery to be up to date.—Johnsons corr. Frostburg Forum.

The excursion to Cumberland on Sunday from Oakland and points west was well patronized. About fifty from Oakland took advantage of the low rates of fare. The train consisted of fifteen coaches, all of them being comfortably filled when it reached Oakland. The train left here at 9.15 and returning arrived at Oakland about eight o'clock at night.

Much complaint is made of the condition of the National Pike across the disputed territory between the line of Allegany and Garrett counties. The cobble stones are uncovered, and travel over them is not only unpleasant but difficult and dangerous. It is said that neither county is willing to make the necessary repairs over this mile stretch of road, and the traveler has no place to lodge his complaint. Only a covering of dirt is necessary, and the expense would not be great to place the road in good condition, which would be a great benefit to the trade of Frostburg.—Frostburg Forum.

Rabbits and quail are said to be more plentiful this Fall than ever known. Some rabbits have already been killed but this is very early and hunters run the chance of getting them when they are unfit to eat. Quail cannot be killed legally until November first and everyone should be on the lookout for the game hogs who are inclined to break the law in this direction.

Killed at Bloomington.

Charles Hough, 26 years of age, single, and late of Charles Town, Jefferson county, W. Va. was instantly killed Wednsday morning by Baltimore and Ohio passenger train No. 8. The accident happend just as No. 3 and No. 8 met on the Bloomingt on stone bridge. Hough was walking across the bridge, which is about 80 feet high, and met No. 3, and stepped to the south track in front of No. 8, which struck and hurled him to instant death. His remains were taken charge of by the Garrett county authorities and word sent to his relatives at Charles Town. Hough had been working at Bloomington and boarded with Mrs. Mosser.

A Serious Runaway.

Monday afternoon Otho Paugh, aged about 83 years, in company with his son-in-law, Lewis A. Groves, were driving from Oakland to Gorman. Near Gortner, six miles south of town, the shaft of the buggy became disconnected and fell on the heels of the horse which frightened the animal and it became unmanageable. The buggy was upset and the occupants thrown out. Mr. Paugh was very seriously injured. Along with numerous severe bruises and cuts his shoulder was dislocated. Mr. Groves' head was cut in several places and he was also bruised about the body. Dr. Hinebaugh attended the injured men.

Another Old Landmark Gone.

Monday the work of demolishing the old Thayer house at the corner of Third and Oak streets was begun. This old building was erected many years before the war and was probably the oldest house in town. It was purchased at the close of the war by the late Ralph Thayer. It was his home until his death and has been occupied since that event by his daughters, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Waters. In place of the old building a modern three story structure will be erected and will be occupied by Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Waters.

Preparatory Service.

Services preparatory to Communion Saturday evening at 7.30; Communion Sunday morning at 10.30. Services also in the evening. Cordial welcome to all. G. I. Uhler.

Hurt at Crellin.

Fred. Crane, employed by the Preston Lumber and Coal Company as a woodsman, was caught under a turning log Monday. His leg from the knee to the ankle was badly mashed but no bones were broken. His injuries were dressed at the McComas Sanitarium.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y.

Many people unacquainted with the geography of the West imagine that because the names "Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul" are used in the corporate title of the railway owning the Short Line between Chicago and Omaha, they must go via the cities of Milwaukee and St. Paul to reach their destination—and if it be Omaha or west thereof. This is a mistaken idea. On a map the line running directly east and west would look like this:

Omaha——————Chicago.

There is nothing more simple than that, and it is less than 500 miles between Chicago and Omaha. Two through trains daily in each direction with the best Sleeping Car and Dining Car Service, and all regular travelers know and appreciate the merits of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway's Short Line between the East and the West.

Time tables, maps and information furnished on application to John R. Pott, District Passenger Agent, 810 Park Building, Pittsburg.

Died.

Robinson.—At the residence of his sister, Mr. Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh, in Oakland, on Sunday afternoon last, Charles Robinson, of Baltimore, aged 43 years. The deceased has been for the past two or three years suffering from consumption and came to Oakland a few weeks ago with the hope of being benefited. His remains were sent to Baltimore Sunday night and were accompanied by Mrs. Hinebaugh. Dr. J. G. Robinson, his brother, went to Baltimore Monday evening.

Dr. D. O. McKinley will be at McHenry September 30; Sines P. O., October 1 to 4 p. m. on 2nd; Oct. 3 at Mrs. Ellen Lohr's, near Crellin; at J. P. Lipscomb's, near Kearney, Oct. 4 to 3 p. m. on 5th; at Mrs. Wm. Rodeheaver's, near Thayerville, Oct. 7; at Hoyes, Oct. 8; at Friendsville, Oct. 9 and 10. Teeth extracted without pain. 28 3

REPUBLICAN MEETINGS!

The Republican State Central Committee for this county announce mass meetings to be held at the following places upon the dates named:

STRICKLAND SCHOOL HOUSE, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 16, at 7.30 p. m.

BLAINE, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, at 7.30 p. m.

SHOOK SHOP, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 18, at 7.30 p. m.

The above meetings will be addressed by Hon. D. E. Dick, Senator Ravenscroft, Assemblyman Finzel, Mr. W. McCulloh Brown, Capt. Jas. W. White, Mr. E. H. Sincell and others.

OAKLAND, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 19, at 7.30 p. m.

This meeting will be addressed by Hon. Thomas Parran, Republican candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals; Hon. David E. Dick, of Allegany county; Congressman Geo. A. Pearre, Hon. Theodore Price, of New York, and possibly Gen. Chas. H. Grosvenor, of Ohio.

Meetings for other points in the county have been arranged for and will be announced later both through these columns and also by handbills.

"BILLY" BOWMAN BLUE.

The Plucky Pitcher of Parsons' Team is Out and Wants to Know Who Is In.

"Billy" Bowman, the plucky pitcher of the late lamented Parsons base ball team, is greatly grieved at the prospect of having to give up a long planned hunting trip out west. "Billy" had allowed $400 salary with which to take the trip in the hands of Manager Husband, who posed at Parsons as a millionaire and cut quite a figure in social circles, as well as waking up the denizens of the woods about Parsons by putting in the field perhaps the best base ball team in the state and promising to pay them big salaries. Most of the boys drew most of their money, but Bowman had been planning this trip for some time, and had allowed his salary for most of the summer to remain with his trusted manager, until his plans were shattered by his sudden disappearance from the team at Lonaconing, Md. Where Husband is is as much of a mystery to his many creditors as where and how he will spend the winter is to "Billy" Bowman; but Billy is resourceful and his friends here won't be at all surprised should he bob up serenely leading a strenuous life huntig wild animals on the western plains, or ferocious beasts in the far away forests of Colorado.

Special Rates to Buffalo Pan-American Exposition, Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Excursion tickets from Oakland, Md., to Buffalo and return via Pittsburg account Pan-American Exposition now on sale at ticket offices Baltimore & Ohio Railroad:

Ten Day Tickets—On sale daily, $13.35.

Fifteen Day Tickets—On sale daily, $16.80.

Season Tickets—On sale daily, good returning until Nov. 30th, 1901, $19.20.

For full details, time of trains, etc., call on Agent Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. til nov 1

New Heating Plants.

The firm of A. D. Naylor & Co., steam heating engineers, recently completed installing heating plants in the public school building in Oakland and also in the Ravenscroft building. Both plants are working satisfactorily and are creditable to the skill of our local workmen.

Married by Advertisement.

Miss Ida Durst, of New Germany, Garrett county, was married recently to Mr. William Dunn, of Montana. They became acquainted through an advertising medium. They have gone to Mr. Dunn's Montana home. He is quite well to do.

Bank Statement.

We publish elsewhere the quarterly statement showing the condition of the Garrett County Bank at the close of business Sept. 30. The volume of business since the preceding statement has made an appreciable increase. The bank's deposits reach the sum of $330,000 and is steadily growing.

Death of An Aged Colored Resident.

Carey Bolden, colored, aged about 75 years, died in Oakland on Friday morning last and was buried Saturday afternoon from the A. M. E. church. He came to this county several years ago from Virginia. He leaves two daughters and a number of grandchildren.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby notified that trespassing on my farm at Deer Park, Md., is forbidden under penalty of the law, and $50 REWARD is hereby offered for information leading to arrest and conviction of persons taking fish from ponds upon it.

31 4t John W. Williams.

Car load feed and flour just arrived at Eagle Store, Grantsville.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Grantsville, Md., on or about the middle of July last, 5 head of sheep, 4 yearlings and one older, 4 being ewes and one a weather. Four of said sheep having crops off left ear and slit in right ear; one with left ear cropped off.

The owner or owners are hereby notified to come forward, prove property, pay costs and take them away.

Dated Oct. 1, 1901.

Christian M. Livengood,
30 Grantsville, Md.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the lands of the undersigned, lying in District No. 12 of Garrett county, either for the purpose of hunting, fishing or passing through the same armed with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Silas C. Beachy,
C. C. Beachy,
Jonas C. Beachy,
297* Mrs. John Brenneman.

Estray Notice.

Estrayed from the Meadow Mountain range about July 1st, two black heifers, one red heifer, one red steer and one black steer, all 2 years old, and have round holes in each ear size of No. 12 gauge shot gun. One black heifer will be fresh this month. Any information leading to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.

Frank O. Glotfelty,
28 4* McHenry, Md.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

Naylor still has some fertilizer for wheat on hand. 28 3*

For Sale—One eight year old dark bay horse. 1250 pounds. Will work in all harness. H. Crutzburg.

You can buy men's, boys' and children's clothing cheaper at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, than any place in town. 27 8*

Take your produce to N. Broadwater, who pays always the highest price.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

If you want a bargain in a nice family surrey or carriage you can get it at A. D. Naylor's. Closing them out for this season. Special low price and good terms. 28 3*

Buy the famous Cinderella Double Heater Cook Stoves and Ranges at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, Md.

N. Broadwater, Grantsville, has just returned from the city with the largest and most complete line of goods ever brought to town.

Go to Eagle Store, Grantsville, for ladies' tailor-made suits, jackets and capes. 27 8t*

Lost—Black leather pocket instrument case containing surgical instruments. Finder will be rewarded by returning same to Dr. I. D. Newman, Oakland, Md. 30 3*

For Sale:—The Lutheran parson age, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

When you have no appetite, do not relish your food and feel dull after eating you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at all drug stores.

A new remedy for biliousness is now on sale at all drug stores. It is called Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. It gives quick relief and will prevent the attack if given as soon as the first indication of the disease appears. Price, 25 cents per box. Samples free.

Wanted.

One hundred men for general woods work and grading railroad.

Preston Lumber & Coal Co.,
2 tf Oakland, Md

WANTED—Several persons of character and good reputation in each state (one in this county required) to represent and advertise old established wealthy business house of solid financial standing. Salary $18.00 weekly with expenses additional, all payable in cash each Wednesday direct from head offices. Horse and carriage furnished, when necessary. References. Enclose self-addressed stamped envelope. Manager, 316 Caxton Building, Chicago. 28 13t

Union Veteran Legion Encampment—Gettysburg, Pa., October 9-11—Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

One fare for the Round Trip to the famous Battlefield. Tickets on sale October 6,7,8,9 and 10, good to return until October 15th, inclusive. Apply Ticket Agents Baltimore & Ohio R. R. for full information.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the land of the undersigned lying in District No. 2 of Garrett county either for the purpose of fishing, hunting or passing through the same with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

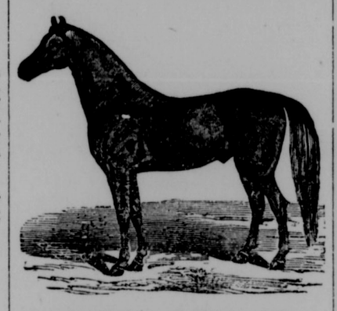
All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. C. W. Friend.

Came Near Dying

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely I went to sleep and did not awake for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of this remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say, 'God bless you and the splendid medicine you make.' 'This remedy is for sale by all dealers.

When you cannot sleep for coughing it is hardly necessary that any one should tell you that you need a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to allay the irritation of the throat, and make sleep possible. It is good. Try it. For sale by all dealers.

Public Sale
—OF—
LIVE STOCK,



CARRIAGES, Etc.

The undersigned will offer at public auction at their stables on Green street, opposite the City Roller Mills, Oakland, Md., on

Saturday, Oct. 19th,

beginning at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., the following personal property, comprising the entire stock and fixtures of two first-class livery stables:

Twenty-two head of Horses, among them being a number of fast trotters and several finely matched teams, 2 Carriages, 3 Surreys, 3 Traps, 6 Buggies, 2 Phætons, 5 Runabouts, 10 sets double Carriage and Coach Harness, 10 sets Single Harness, 2 sets Team Harness, 1 Brown Farm Wagon, 1 Harrow, 1 Plow, lot of Robes and Whips, lot Collars, Curry Combs and Brushes, lot Log Chains, lot Single Trees, 1 Horse Rake, 7 Ladies' Saddles, 4 Men's Saddles, lot of Poles and Shafts, several Suits Coachmen's Liveries and many other things.

TERMS OF SALE—On sums of $5 or over a credit of six months will be given, purchasers to execute their notes with security satisfactory to the undersigned and to bear interest from day of sale. Sums under $5 cash.

M. MARONEY & SON.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, at the January Session in the year nineteen hundred of the General Asembly of Maryland, bills were passed proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State:

First.—By amending section 9 of Article 5, of the Constitution of the State.

Second.—By amending section 4 of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State.

Third.—By amending section 2 of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State, which said bills and amendments are in words following, to wit:

CHAPTER 185.

AN ACT to amend section nine, of Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, herein and as by law provided, it shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section nine of said Article.

Section 9. The State's Attorney shall perform such duties and receive such fees and commissions or salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, as are now or may hereafter be prescribed by law; and if any State's Attorney shall receive any other fee or reward than such as is or may be allowed by law, he shall, on conviction thereof, be removed from office; provided that the State's Attorney for Baltimore city shall receive an annual salary of forty-five hundred dollars, and shall have power to appoint one deputy, at an annual salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, and such other assistants at such annual salaries not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars each, as the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City may authorize and approve; all of said salaries to be paid out of the fees of the said State's Attorney's office, as has heretofore been practiced.

Section 2. And be it further enacted, That the foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, shall be, at the next general election for members of the General Assembly, to be held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14, of the Constitution; and at said election the vote on said proposed amendment shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment" or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election one return shall be made to the Governor of the vote on said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Approved April 5, 1900.

CHAPTER 432.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this State.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and instead of section four of Article 3, of said Constitution.

Section 4. As soon as may be after the taking and publishing of the National Census of 1900, or after the enumeration of the population of this State, under the authority thereof, there shall be an apportionment of representation in the House of Delegates, to be made on the following basis, to wit: Each of the several counties of the State, having a population of eighteen thousand souls or less, shall be entitled to two delegates; and every county having a population of over eighteen thousand and less than twenty-eight thousand souls, shall be entitled to three delegates; and every county having a population of twenty-eight thousand and less than forty thousand souls, shall be entitled to four delegates; and every county having a population of forty thousand and less than fifty-five thousand souls, shall be entitled to five delegates; and every county having a population of fifty-five thousand souls and upwards, shall be entitled to six delegates and no more; and each of the four legislative districts of the City of Baltimore shall be entitled to the number of delegates to which the largest county shall or may be entitled under the aforegoing apportionment, and the General Assembly shall have the power to provide by law, from time to time, for altering and changing the boundaries of the existing legislative districts of the City of Baltimore, so as to make them as near as may be of equal population; but said district shall always consist of contiguous territory.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, shall, at the next election for members of the General Assembly of this State, to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14, of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after the said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 14, of the Constitution.

Approved April 7, 1900.

CHAPTER 469.

AN ACT to amend section two of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section two of Article 3 of said Constitution.

2. The City of Baltimore shall be divided into four legislative districts as near as may be of equal population and of contiguous territory, and each of said legislative districts of Baltimore City, as they may from time to time be laid out, in accordance with the provisions hereof, and each county in the State, shall be entitled to one Senator, who shall be elected by the qualified voters of the said legislative districts of Baltimore City, and of the counties of the State, respectively, and shall serve for four years from the date of his election, subject to the classification of Senators hereafter provided for.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall at the next election for members of the General Assembly of this State, to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Approved April 7, 1900.

Now, therefore, I, John Walter Smith, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the provisions of section one of Article fourteen of the Constitution of the State, do hereby order and direct that a copy of said bills proposing said Constitutional Amendments be published in at least two newspapers in each county where so many may be published, and where not more than one may be published, then in that newspaper, and in three newspapers in the City of Baltimore, one of which shall be in the German language, once a week for at least three months preceding the next ensuing general election (which said general election will be held on Tuesday, the 5th day of November, nineteen hundred and one,) at which the said proposed amendments shall be submitted to the qualified voters of the State for adoption or rejection, so that each amendment shall be voted on separately.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of Maryland.

Done at the City of Annapolis on the 12th day of June, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and one.

[SEAL] JOHN WALTER SMITH,
Governor of Maryland.

By order of the Governor:
Wilfred Bateman,
Secretary of State.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL. Publisher.

OAKLAND, : GARRETT CO., MD.

OPEN THE DOOR.

Open the door, let in the air;
The winds are sweet, and the flowers are fair.
Joy is abroad in the world to-day;
If our door is wide, it may come this way.
Open the door!

Open the door, let in the sun;
He hath a smile for every one;
He hath made of the raindrops gold and gems;
He may change our tears to diadems.
Open the door!

Open the door of the soul; let in
Strong, pure thoughts which shall banish sin.
They will grow and bloom with a grace divine,
And their fruit shall be sweeter than that of the vine.
Open the door!

Open the door of the heart; let in Sympathy, sweet stranger and kin,
It will make the halls of the heart so fair
That angels may enter unaware.
Open the door!
—British Weekly.

CORDELIA

By Frank H. Sweet.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

CORDELIA HACKETT was out mending her fence. This was nothing unusual, for the fence had a habit of needing mending, and for many a long year there had been no one but Cordelia to do it, and, in fact, to do all the mending and tending and baking and making for the hungry Hackett family. She had smoothed the way down into the valley for her poor, paralytic father, and had paved the way up the hill of life and into an education for her brothers and sisters, and was now thinking of performing the same office for the motherless children of an older half-brother.

Tap, tap, tap, rang Cordelia's hammer as she went along the fence, straightening a slanting picket here and driving a fresh nail in place of a rusty one there; and tap, tap, tap, sounded firm, approaching footsteps on the sidewalk. But the artist of the hammer did not notice. Her thoughts were busy in reviewing the past and in making plans for the future. The week before, her youngest brother had gone out into the world to make a place for himself, and now she was alone—for the first time in her life. She had thought to remain in her pretty, vine-covered cottage and read and study and do just what she liked. But only this morning a letter had come from her brother John, inviting her to live with him and look after his children. Well, of course she would go; but it was with a sharp pang she made the decision.

"FOR THE LAND SAKE, TOM ROGERS!"

Presently her nails gave out, and she rose with the intention of going after more. But as she did so she saw the figure of a man leaning on her gate, and a pair of keen, quizzical eyes were looking straight into her own.

An angry flush rose to her face, but was quickly succeeded by a look of pleased recognition.

"For the land sake, Tom Rogers!" she cried, as she stepped forward and gave him her hand, "who ever thought to see you here! And with such whiskers. Why, I declare, I scarcely knew you! Let's see, it's ten years since you went out west?"

"Twelve, Cordelia, twelve," he said, smilingly. "You remember it was the year after father sold his farm. That was in '89—Lizzie White had a lawn party the evening before I left."

"Yes, I remember," giving him an arch look. "You went home with Sudie Adams, and folks did say—"

"Oh, pshaw, Cordelia," he remonstrated; "you and Sudie were together, and I started to go home with both of you, but that little Ed Purcell came up, and you went off with him." Then, with sudden consternation: "I—I beg your pardon. You—ain't married to him, are you?"

"Not yet," placidly. "He comes by every few months and sort o' beats round the bush. But, you see, I've had all I could put my hands to without thinking o' such things." Then, with a gay, ringing laugh: "But let's talk sensible, Tom. I gave up marryin' years ago. How are you gettin' on out west? When did you come, and how long are you goin' to stay?"

"Just got in, and you're the first person I've talked to," he answered. "I happened to come this way, and thought I'd stop for old-time's sake. You've got a mighty flowery place, Cordelia."

"Yes, I like it. But won't you come in and sit on the piazza while I make some cool lemonade. It's pesky hot out here."

"Don't mind if I do," with alacrity. "I ain't in no particular hurry, and your piazzy looks right cool and inviting. And, besides, I'd like to ask a lot of questions about the boys and girls; what they are doing, and who's married and who ain't."

Two rocking chairs were placed opposite each other on the piazza, and while Cordelia was making the lemonade, Tom gazed around with boyish delight. The piazza was screened from the road by honeysuckles and wistarias, and he could count at least a dozen butterflies sailing contentedly about. Almost in reach of his hand was a robin's nest, and as he raised himself slightly to look at the eggs, the owner began to scold him from one of the rafters overhead.

"Just exactly like it was 12 years ago," he murmured, delightedly. "And, on my soul, I believe that's the same old bird that used to scold me so terribly. There, there, there!" as the robin redoubled her cries; "that isn't the way to welcome a friend. I won't hurt your eggs."

Here Cordelia came out with the lemonade and a small stand, which she placed between the two chairs.

"There, help yourself!" she said. "Now tell me how you've been gettin' on out west."

"Oh, jes toler'ble,' as they say out there," he replied, laughing. "Only in my case, the 'jes' toler'ble' means first-rate. I started as a cowboy, and then bought a few head of cattle and some land, and after that pushed ahead pretty steady. I was always hardworking, and so got on faster than some of my neighbors. After awhile a railroad came through, and a village started up less than three miles from my place. That boosted me right to the top. Now, I've got as pretty a ranch as there is west of the Missouri."

"Why, that's splendid!" she cried, her face glowing with pleasure. "I'm awful glad you're doin' so well. Folks around here have an idea that you've been sort of runnin' out."

"How came they to get such a notion?" cautiously.

"Well, I—I believe Ed Purcell spoke of it in the first place."

"Ed Purcell!" Tom rose to his feet in sudden wrath. Then he sat down, with a smothered laugh. "The mean liar! He didn't know the first thing of what I've been doing. You didn't believe him, Cordelia?"

She looked distressed.

"How could I help it, Tom?" she faltered. "Ed said he got letters from you off and on, and I didn't suppose he would tell a story." Then, with an effort to change the subject: "Did you bring your family along?"

"Family?"

"Yes, your wife and children?"

He gazed sharply at her for a moment to see if she was in earnest; then he threw himself back in his chair with a sudden burst of laughter.

"Did Ed tell you that?" he asked, as soon as he could get his breath. "Well, he's a dandy, he is. And did you believe it?"

She did not answer, but he could see from her changing countenance and averted eyes that she had believed it.

"Look here, Cordelia," he said, abruptly, "what do you suppose I came back for?"

"To look around—to see your relations, perhaps," she answered, hesitatingly.

"My relations are all out west. Father and brother Jake went there soon after I did. No, it was on account of this," taking a small slip of paper from his pocket and handing it to her. "Jake takes the home paper, and sometimes I look it over. Last week I happened to see this item. Read it."

She did so, mechanically.

"We understand that our esteemed fellow-townsman, Paul Hackett, has obtained a lucrative position in the city, and that he will soon depart for the scene of his future labors. This will leave his sister, Miss Cordelia, to keep house alone."

"I don't see much in that," she said, as she handed back the paper.

"Well, I do. Anyhow, it brought me here." His voice had suddenly grown eager, and her gaze fell beneath his, while her face began to flush. "Listen, Cordelia. When I was returning that night, after I had gone home with Sadie Adams, I met Ed Purcell. I felt more like pitching him into the bushes than talking, but the fellow was so friendly and soft-spoken that I was obliged to stop through mere civility. He spoke about the weather and the party, and then told me that you and he were engaged. I never liked the scamp, but I didn't suppose he would tell a lie. The next day I started west."

Cordelia was standing now, her face flushed and her eyes blazing.

"Engaged to Ed Purcell!" she gasped. "Oh, Tom! you didn't believe that?"

"How could I help it," he answered, grimly, repeating her words of a few minutes before. "I didn't suppose he would tell a story." Then all the anger and grimness left his face, and as he held out his arms the tenderness of 12 years' repression came tremulously into his voice. "Cordelia, darling, will you go back with me?"

She made a shy step forward, then hesitated.

"There's John and the children," she said.

"Bother John and the children! He's well to do and can find somebody else to look after them. Will you come?"

The flush grew deeper on her face, but her voice was clear and firm as she answered:

"Yes, Tom."

EXPECTATION OF LIFE.

Research and Observation Have Made It Possible to Prophesy Accurately.

A study of the death rate will enable one to foretell with amazing accuracy just how long a man in any occupation or environment may expect to live. The collection of vital statistics in recent years has reduced this form of prophesying to an exact science, says the New York World.

The most complete tables of this kind are kept by the life insurance companies. These tables are built up on the vital statistics of cities and villages, and show the effect of every occupation upon human life. Upon the accuracy of these calculations, of course, depend the safety and profit of millions of dollars of life insurance risks.

A good example of the care with which these figures are collected is the vital statistics for clergymen, which have been carefully calculated for various countries.

The results show, in the first place, that the profession of clergyman is one of the safest occupations in the world. The average death rate for the male population of English-speaking people between the ages of 25 and 45 years is 11.5, while the rate for clergymen in the Church of England is but 5.4. In strange contrast to this the rate among Catholic priests under the same conditions is 9.7, the highest among any class of clergymen in the world.

The death rate among the Protestant clergy in America is also much below the average, while that of the Catholic priest is comparatively high.

Ladies' maids have, according to the showing, a remarkable hold on life, as out of every thousand but eight die between the ages of 25 and 65 years. This is lower even than the rate of the most favored clergymen, who rank next in the list. Lawyers rank next, and after them grooms and then physicians. The death rate for the period between 25 and 65 years is 12.6 for grooms and 12.9 for physicians.

It is rather surprising to find that waiters come next in order after the attorneys and then Catholic priests. It is more than twice as dangerous to be a Catholic priest, for instance, as to be a Protestant clergyman or a lady's maid.

The least desirable occupation, in view of its dangers, is that of cab driver. In every 1,000 of these 26.6 die between the ages of 25 and 65. The calling of wine merchant is also very desirable, with a death rate of 25 to the thousand. Apothecaries and workers among drugs are also fated to the extent of 19.1 per thousand for the same period. Surgeons, by an odd coincidence, have exactly the same death rate. Coachmen and undertakers, on the other hand, are slightly more favored.

It is significant that the educated classes are, as a rule, less subject to accident than citizens of the lower walks of life.

HIS FARM IS UNDER GROUND.

Pennsylvanian Makes Money Raising Mushrooms in an Abandoned Mine.

An underground farm is one of the most paradoxical curiosities of the region of Scranton, Pa. Sunshine, light and air are usually considered three prime requisites to the success of agriculture, but Isaac Williams manages a farm at Greenwood which is successful and profitable and into which the light of day has never penetrated, says a local exchange.

Williams conducts an extensive mushroom farm, which is located in the abandoned top vein of the Greenwood mine three miles from thiat city. The vein is about 50 feet below the surface and along its underground passages Williams has laid out the beds in which the mushrooms are grown.

An ingenious arrangement of doors, which prevent drafts when one is entering or leaving the farm, keeps the temperature of the passage at about the same point the year around. According to Williams the matter of temperature is of the greatest importance in the cultivation of the mushroom. Without an even, moderate temperature the growth is not good and the flavor, which is the prime requirement of a mushroom, cannot be obtained.

Williams finds a market for all the mushrooms he can raise, and manages to make a very comfortable living from his queer farm. In the beginning it required infinite work and pains to convert the barren and sterile mine galleries into productive farm land. Soil and fertilizer had to be carried to the site of the underground farm, which has been greatly enlarged since Williams first began operations. He never enters the mine without bringing with him some rich soil or fertilizer. No matter how small the amount, Williams never fails to take in something with him.

The mine-grown mushroom is a trifle darker than that grown in the open air, but it is esteemed as a great delicacy, and its only rival with the epicure is the French canned mushroom, whose snowy whiteness is in strong contrast with the dark-hued product of Williams' farm.

Williams is a man well advanced in years and his one absorbing passion is this unique agricultural enterprise. All of his spare time is spent down under the ground caring for these plants.

Tennessee Tree.

"Take care of the forests," says a Tennessee paper, in announcing that out of a single tree in Dyer county a citizen had got four cords of firewood, three gallons of honey and five raccoons.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

Hypnotism is scientifically studied in some of the French medical colleges.

A writer in one of the scientific periodicals recommends walking backward as a cure for nervous headache.

The oldest known weapon was the club. The clubs of the lake dwellers of Switzerland, studded with stones in default of nails, and thus making formidable weapons, have been recovered from their habitations.

Dr. Charles Hose, of Sarawak, after many experiments has formed the theory that the disease beri beri arises in tropical regions from the consumption of moldy rice. Dr. Strangeways Pigg, of Cambridge, has expounded the theory in England.

It is a curious fact that in 1790 the Turkish government prohibited the export of Angora kid skins on the ground that the trade threatened the extinction of the Angora goat; but these animals are now more numerous than ever, and their usefulness is far more widely recognized than was the case a century ago.

Oil fuel was recently tried on the Yarrow torpedo boat Ophir. With coal alone the speed obtained was 24½ knots, with coal and oil 26½ knots an hour. Twenty-eight hundred pounds of coal and 700 pounds of oil an hour were used. With 500 pounds of oil alone a speed of 14 knots was easily obtained.

Baron Benvenuto d'Alessandro, an Italian, has invented a means of checking the force of waves by means of nets of waterproof hemp. One recently tried with success at Havre was 360 feet long by 50 feet wide, with meshes 11 inches apart. The nets will break the waves at sea, and will also be a bulwark for hydraulic works against heavy surf.

With all the efforts to get into the various bureaus of the government, it is a fact that for the $1,200 and $1,400 positions offered laboratory assistants at the national bureau of standards, the examination for which was to take place on July 6, not a single applicant appeared. The civil service commission is unable to account for this. This examination opened up two positions with excellent salaries to young scientists and the lack of interest cannot be accounted for.

FROG LIKED A MEAT DIET.

When in a Man's Stomach He Devoured Immense Quantities of It, Says This Account.

One man whose stomach, and not his throat, has been for several years the habitation of a frog, is one of the curiosities of Dock Watch Hollow, a hamlet nestling among the Watchung mountains, about five miles from Bound Brook, N. J., says a New York exchange.

Edward Blazier, a farmer, has been ailing for some time and his symptoms have baffled the skill of physicians of his vicinity, who one by one gave up the case as incurable. Notwithstanding the fact that he was unable to work and was slowly wasting away, Blazier was the possessor of a ravenous appetite, being particularly fond of meat.

When Dr. Fred A. Wild, of Bound Brook, took up Blazer's case two weeks ago he proceeded to make himself thoroughly acquainted with the symptoms. When questioned Blazer said that he suffered pains in the region of his stomach and occasionally experienced a sensation is if something animated was moving about. Further questioning brought out the fact that the family were in the habit of using water from a near-by spring for drinking purposes. This information confirmed Dr. Wild in his belief and he urged an operation which was performed the other day, when the doctor removed from the patient's stomach a full-grown bullfrog more than five inches long. When taken out the animal was dead, having been killed during the operation. It was similar to ordinary frogs, except that examination showed that it never had the use of its eyes.

Blazier is now on the road to recovery and is the center of attraction for all that neighborhood. He now recalls a circumstance which happened about five years ago when his wife was ill. He had gone to the spring to fetch her a drink, and while there took one himself. When he returned to the house he complained of having swallowed something of a foreign nature, although he did not know what it was.

He is convinced that at that time he swallowed a tadpole, which in the course of nature became a frog, undergoing the different changes within his stomach.

German Pancake.

Sift and then weigh half a pound of flour. Beat three good-sized eggs until light, make a well in the center of the flour and gradually work the eggs into flour until very smooth and light. Heat a frying pan, and when it is hot brush it well with melted butter, and pour in the batter. Cover with a pint of preserved apples and set in a hot oven for 12 or 15 minutes, or until the batter is thoroughly cooked through under the fruit. Then slide it carefully out of the pan on to a hot plate. Sift powdered sugar over it and serve at once.—Washington Star.

Pears Preserved in English Style.

Pare six pounds of pears, leaving them whole, and put them to simmer in a granite pan with two cupfuls of hot water. When you can pierce them with a straw, lift into a large jar or bean pot, cover with 4½ pounds of sugar; add half a candied lemon peel cut in strips, 12 cloves and two pieces of ginger root. Cover and put to cook for two hours in a moderate oven. Seal hot in jars.—Good Housekeeping.

MADE STRONG AND WELL.

A Prominent Lady Raised From a Sick Bed by Pe-ru-na---Entirely Cured in Two Weeks.

MRS. E. A. CROZIER.

Mrs. E. A. Crozier, Senior Vice President of the James Morgan Post, W. R. C., the largest corps in Minnesota, writes from "The Landour," 9th and Nicollet, Minneapolis, Minn., as follows:

"Please accept hearty thanks on behalf of Peruna, that wonderful medicine which raised me from a sick bed and made a strong and well woman of me in two weeks. I suffered with bearing-down pains, backache and continual headache, and found no relief until I tried Peruna. It cured me completely, and I feel as young and well as when 18. I wish every woman knew the merits of the medicine, and no home would be without it."—Mrs. E. A. Crozier.

Mrs. William Henderson, Bordulac, N. C., writes:

"I was troubled with very serious female weakness; had spells of flowing that exhausted me so that I feared I would lose my mind. I suffered untold agony with my back, the pain extending down my left leg. My pain was so severe that I would have welcomed death at any moment—so no one need wonder that I recommend Peruna so highly, for it cured me entirely of that. Not a sign of pain has returned, and that will soon be two years now.

"I am glad that there is a way I can speak, trusting that many a sufferer will read my testimonial, and not only read but believe."—Mrs. Wm. Henderson.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

Free Treatment During Hot Weather by Dr. Hartman.

By the assistance of an experienced staff of physicians, Dr. Hartman proposes to direct the treatment of several thousand women, who, for one reason or another, are ailing.

Each patient sends name, symptoms, and a short description of previous treatment, and are entered in the doctor's books as regular patients.

The treatment is directed from time to time as may be found necessary by the doctor, without charge. Every letter and name is held strictly confidential, and in no case will any one be published except by the express wish of the patient herself.

These cases are treated with the same care and fidelity as the private patients of a regular family physician. During the past year a large number of cases have been cured. Every item of the treatment is directed for which no charge whatever is made.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio, for free treatment.

PILES ANAKESIS gives instant relief and POSITIVELY CURES PILES. For free sample address "ANAKESIS," Tribune building, New York.

AGENT WANTED GENTLEMAN or LADY, only one in each town, to sell Tea at importer's PRICES. WRITE QUICKLY to HOME TEA COMPANY, 32 Pearl Street, NEW YORK CITY.

SOZODONT for the TEETH 25c

EDUCATIONAL.

HOPEDALE COLLEGE Hopedale, O. Classical, philosophical, scientific, normal, commercial, and post-graduate courses; books rented; R.R. fare free; $150 a yr., and a plan to earn that. Catalog free. W. A. WILLIAMS, D. D., Pres't.

Millions of Mothers

USE CUTICURA SOAP, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin of infants and children, for rashes, itchings, and chafings, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Millions of Women use Cuticura Soap in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and excoriations, for too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used these great skin purifiers and beautifiers to use any others, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. Cuticura Soap combines delicate emollient properties derived from Cuticura, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odours. No other medicated soap is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and baby soap in the world.

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humour,

Cuticura THE SET Consisting of CUTICURA SOAP, to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle; CUTICURA OINTMENT, to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, and humiliating skin, scalp, and blood humours, with loss of hair, when all else fails. Sold throughout the world. British Depot: F. NEWBERY & SONS, 27 and 28, Charterhouse Sq., London. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Sole Props., Boston, U. S. A.

CRIME STAMPED OUT.

Washington Now Is the Safest City in the Country.

Once Upon a Time, However, It Was Infested by Organized Gangs of Negro Criminals of the Worst Type.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"WE HAVE never yet had as many men on the police force as this city should have," says one of the veteran bluecoats; "nevertheless the force has wiped out all organized gangs of thieves and thugs. The epoch of such organized crime has passed.

"Nowadays in every section of the city one can walk with perfect safety at any hour of the night without any fear of molestation unless, perhaps, by some drunkard reeling toward his home. Even he is harmless if not interfered with. Then, too, there are certain alleys in the city which are occupied by a rough element of negroes, who think nothing of knocking a man in the head with a brick, but these are places of which respectable people do not even know the location, and consequently would not enter, especially at night, so it is still proper to say that a person can go anywhere in this capital city without feeling insecure.

"Washington is now the safest and most peaceful city in this country. Here ladies feel no hesitancy in going to the theater without escorts. We never hear of one being even insulted by a rowdy. Rowdyism is prevalent only in certain quarters, but even there rowdy gangs no longer exist.

"The element which gives our police the greatest concern is the progeny of the freedmen. This class of citizens, however, fight mostly among themselves, and seldom molest white persons. They are a cowardly set. They will lie in wait with a brick, and deeds of daring are not done by them. Their crimes are generally the result of drinking. When a certain neighborhood composed of darkies learns that an officer does not stand in awe of them they soon view him with the highest respect, and his appearance on the scene of a disturbance is generally sufficient to quell it.

"But this condition of affairs was not always so. It was not very many years ago that it was worth an officer's life to make an arrest in certain districts. The 'toughs' were as thick as bees about a hive. They were organized into gangs, which congregated at preconcerted signals to do acts of violence or steal whatever they could get their hands on. They were a continual menace to the welfare of the community, and to travel through those parts of the city after dark was to take your life in your own hands.

"Swampoodle, Bloody Field and Hell's Bottom are localities which still retain their names, but no longer the features which characterized them by those titles. Most of the crimes and rows of to-day occur in the narrow, dark and unwholesome alleys which lie well concealed between rows, perhaps, of respectable houses.

"The typical tough is a thing of the past in this city. The real old-timer has gone, and well he may, for his vocation in Washington is at an end. The gangs which used to exist have either been cleared out by sending the members to a life behind prison walls or they have been whipped and cowed into submission.

RECOVERING THE STOLEN SAFE.

"How was this done? Simply by a constant and judicious small annual increase in the police force, supervised by strict, efficient officers. They made a systematic warfare on all gangs of hoodlums. Corner loafing and the gathering of the rougher element in crowds were first broken up. It was not unusual for ringleaders to be brought into the station houses and kept there in the reserve rooms, simply that the officers might become well acquainted with them. In this way these rowdies knew that they were known and watched, and, being cowards at heart, except when they had a mob at their backs, they soon became quieted.

"Now and then will be found a crowd of youngsters with an ambition to emulate their predecessors, but a few dealings with the judge and the police department soon bring them to their senses. The sentences have been rigid, and culprits knew that they would be dealt with to the fullest extent of the law. The improvement of the city has also had its good effects. Streets have been opened through localities that were wide commons, respectable houses have been erected on them, and the use of gas and electric lights drives darkness from spots which were favorite ones for crime. A criminal dislikes nothing more than light.

"The most beneficial results, however, have been due to the introduction of the patrol system. Officers no longer are obliged to drag their prisoners through the streets, and property is not left unprotected while a policeman takes his prisoner to the station. The patrol wagon does this. Then the rough element knows that an officer can have a whole platoon of policemen to aid him at a moment's notice by simply running to his box and sounding the alarm. The superintendent allows officers to 'double' or travel in pairs through those localities where quarrelers or dissolute characters are most likely to be.

"DON'T KILL ME, BABE!"

"When did the most vicious gangs exist here? Why, during the years just after the close of the war. At that time there were a great many crooks in this city.

"A 'gang' which for a long time kept their identity unknown, while they robbed most boldly and widely, was that of 'Sol' Holloran. For a long time the city was startled every day or two by the news of a safe robbery, the best known probably being that of the safe of Lutz' harness store on Pennsylvania avenue. In this instance safe and all, weighing over 200 pounds, were bodily carried away. These robberies baffled the police for a long time.

"One night a sergeant was passing a dry goods store, and noticed the door standing ajar. His first impulse was to step toward it, but a glance showed him that he was covered by a revolver. He did not turn his head, but passed along. Collecting Sergt. Vernon and Officers Adams and Wallingford, he returned and captured two men, the third escaping. One proved to be Sol Holloran. Detectives Clarvoe and McDevitt and Lieut. Gessford searched Holloran's house, and there found a trace of some articles belonging to one of the safes that had been robbed. This gave them a clew. The case was followed up and the remainder of the gang was located in the outskirts of Georgetown. Most of them were caught. Mr. Lutz' safe was found and recovered from the bottom of the canal, where it had been thrown.

"Charles Teagles, a wealthy darky, was one of the most daring burglars that ever 'worked' Washington. He had no one to help him, but always worked single-handed. Every night he would rob three or four places. Detectives Clarvoe and Miller finally caught him, and as they arrested the man he swallowed a diamond ring which might have been used as evidence against him. His home was located, and, when searched, a barrel full of stolen articles, mostly jewelry, was found.

"Billy Williams, who shot Officer Arnold, was also the leader of a vicious gang. He is now in the Richmond penitentiary, and two- thirds of his life he has spent in prison. He is a man that cannot help stealing, and he will surely get into trouble again.

"The last organized gang of murderers was headed by a very black negro named 'Babe' Bedford. They committed a number of depredations in the northwest section of the city, covering a period of five or six months. Finally Philip Hirth, a young groceryman for whom 'Babe' Bedford worked as a driver, closed up his store one evening, taking a considerable sum of money with him, and going across some vacant lots, directly to his home. On the way he was waylaid by a gang of four negroes, one of whom struck him with a club. As he fell he recognized Bedford, and begged him not to strike again. This recognition was the cause of his death. Bedford killed him, and the gang took all of his money and his watch. A negro detective captured one of the criminals, from whom he extorted a confession. Bedford was hanged, and the others imprisoned for life."

The new chief of police of Chicago, upon assuming his office, informed his subordinates that he knew that they knew all the criminals, and he commanded that they be banished from that city. In pursuing this course, the chief of police of the big city was following the course mapped out by the chief of police in the national capital, when he was appointed three years ago. He told Mayor Harrison, when that public functionary was in Washington, that criminals could not infest any city, if the police force was absolutely required to do its duty.

Professional criminals are known in every city, and they cannot prosper without police connivance.

SMITH D. FRY.

ITS AIMS ARE NOBLE.

Plan of the Christian Builders' Union of Chicago.

Would Restore Harmony Between Capital and Labor by Making the Golden Rule the Guide of Every Transaction.

If the Christian Builders' union succeeds in its purpose the time will come when there will be neither labor unions, strikes nor lock-outs. Every man in the building trades will be a teetotaler and a Christian gentleman. It is hardly expected that buildings will be erected in Chicago to an accompaniment of prayer and psalm singing, but there will certainly be praise and thanksgiving if the new organization accomplishes its aim. If employers and employes have differences they will apply the good old golden rule, and strive with good will and mediation to reach a just solution of their difficulties.

"I found I had to quit either my church or the union," said Henry P. Berck, a contracting carpenter at 1080 West Harrison street, Chicago, who has been the prime mover in the new organization. "At the union meetings many of the men cursed and flourished revolvers, and as a Christian man I concluded it was time for me to get out. I noticed also that the old unions worked against each other, and that many of the members were addicted to drink, which is the great curse of mankind. It seemed to me that it was time Christian workingmen got together to form an organization and do business on Christian principles.

"Our union started with 60 charter members, and we have many applications from men in all parts of Chicago, and even from other states. Our organization does not attempt to fix a scale of wages, and it is wholly different from the old unions. It takes in employers as well as wage workers. We also admit dealers in building material, and we shall take in honest real estate men, though it is hard to find honest men among them.

CHRISTIAN BUILDERS' UNION.
(Trade-Mark Adopted by a Peculiar Chicago Organization.)

"In order to be admitted to full membership a man must be a Christian, but we will take others on probation. We shall have devotional meetings at the churches from time to time, and we purpose organizing a Catholic branch for the benefit of members of that church, several of whom have asked to join. As all members will be Christians, business will be done on the Christian policy of live and let live. There will be no strikes or lockouts, for if employer and employe can't agree they will go their separate ways. Every member must sign a pledge promising not to touch, taste or handle any intoxicating liquor while a member of the organization. We believe liquor to be the cause of many evils, especially among workingmen, and we intend to fight it all along the line. We shall also discourage the use of tobacco, and members are expected to abstain from profanity.

"You ask how our union is going to help its members in a material way? Well, here is a printed list of the members just issued. It contains all their names and addresses, classified by trades, and contractors are indicated by stars. This directory will be issued from time to time and will be an important feature of the organization. We expect members to help their fellows. Christian contractors will naturally prefer to employ Christian men. On the other hand, laboring men can apply to these contractors with the assurance of receiving Christian treatment. Members are expected to aid each other in finding employment. If one of them hears of an open job he will notify some friend in the union who may be in need of work. In other words, the union will run on the principle of cooperation and Christian helpfulness. When we are thoroughly organized we believe it will be possible to put up a building without the labor disturbances now so common.

Mr. Berck has been chosen president of the union. The vice president is C. D. Hill, a contracting painter at 274 Claremont avenue. The secretary is Frank Marshall, a carpenter at Harvey, and he has an assistant in the person of W. T. Hart, a cabinet maker at Wrightwood and Avers avenues. The treasurer is Richard Oates, a carpenter living at 295 Campbell avenue. President Berck's shop at 1080 West Harrison street is the headquarters of the union.

The Equal of Thirty Men.

A machine that will do the work of 30 expert mathematicians is being constructed by the government in its scientific instrument shop on Capitol hill in Washington. It is to be an improvement on an instrument in use in the bureau of the coast survey, in charge of calculating the tides.

SUBMARINE WAR VESSELS.

Progress in the Construction of a Boat for Fighting Under Water.

The feat of the French submarine boat Gustave Zede in attaching a dummy torpedo under water to the hull of the turret ship Jaureguiberry is of interest in itself, but important chiefly as showing the extent to which man's control of "the waters under the earth" has reached, says the New York Sun.

Although attempts to produce submarine vessels have been made for centuries past, it is only within the last four or five years that one of them has attained a measure of success. That attempt was made by Mr. John P. Holland, of this city, who, after 30 years of trial and failure, at last produced the vessel named for him, the Holland. Mr. Holland's first submarine vessel was built during the '60s; his first successful vessel was launched in 1897, tested continuously by the government for many months, and finally bought for the navy.

The success of this vessel attracted attention from foreign navies, and the French at once began again energetically experiments in submarine navigation which had languished some years. On our part we began a vessel, named the Plunger, a larger boat than the Holland, and intended to be an improvement over the first. Many changes in the equipment were made, but the result has not been successful, and radical changes must be made, bringing her back nearly to the form of the Holland, before she can attain any success.

Meantime, six other submarine boats of the real Holland type were ordered by the navy department; four of these, the Adder, Moccasin, Porpoise and Shark, are building at Elizabethport, and two, the Grampus and Pike, at San Francisco. These are all of 120 tons' displacement; they will be 63 1-3 feet long, 11¾ feet beam, and will have a gas engine developing 160 horse power for propulsion on the surface, and an electric motor operated by storage batteries and developing 70 horse power will carry five Whitehead torpedoes, which can be discharged when the vessel is submerged or on the surface, at rest or at full speed.

The French navy has not used the Holland system, but has developed one of its own apparently with great success. The Gymnote, launched in 1888, was not wholly successful, but the Gustave Zede, built in 1893, has within a few months been brought to a high state of perfection. The Morse and the Narval have also been proved valuable and besides the ten other submarines now afloat or building, the French government has just ordered the construction of 20 more, ten to be built at Toulon, on the Mediterranean, six at Rochefort, and four at Cherbourg, on the Atlantic coast.

Great Britain affected at first to disregard the submarine boat experiments of our own and the French navies, but within a few months the news leaked out that the admiralty had ordered five vessels of the Holland type, which are now under construction by the Vickers-Maxim company. These vessels are duplicates of those building for this country. Italy and Norway are experimenting with submarines, also, the former country having in hand the Delfino of 107 tons' displacement, while the Norwegian navy proposes to build six Holland vessels. Sweden, too, has taken up the subject, but is inclined to approve a system devised by a Swedish engineer named Enroth, rather than to follow the Holland type. The Enroth boat is of 146 tons' displacement when submerged, and uses steam and condensed air for submarine propulsion. She will carry four Whitehead torpedoes.

Almost every navy has carried submarine vessels of some sort on its list for years; Turkey has had two such vessels since 1886, and as seen above, the successful Gustave Zede was launched in 1893. But it is owing to the success of the Holland that the study of submarine warfare has received such an impetus.

STUDY WHAT YOU AFFECT.

A Word of Advice to Parents Regarding the Education of Children.

Scientists now acknowledge that education has most effect upon mediocre minds. It can do a great deal with them, less for those that are defective and still less for those highly endowed; for talented persons, even though they may receive all the usual courses of intellectual training, usually educate themselves. They gain their most valuable education through the exercise of their strongest faculties. Work is their tutor and self-direction their college, says Florence Hull Winterburn, in Woman's Home Companion.

Parents and tutors need to have a care that their efforts to be helpful to children do not interfere with the natural development of their faculties. This is sometimes done through not recognizing their special abilities, quite frequently from a wish to fix their destinies in accordance with some conventional standard. We should study the individuality of our child from his birth, so that we may avoid a wasteful employment of his energies in pursuits that are alien to his disposition and foreign to his needs.

A Touching Appeal.

"Hey, you feller, get off'n this train!" shouted the angry conductor at the hoboes.

"W'y, certainly, boss—but, say, did you ever live in a boardin' house?"

"Yes, an' what of it?"

"Nothin', 'ceptin' you might please pass the beets."—Denver Times.

MANNERS HAVE CHANGED.

But Not for the Betterment of the Young, Opines the Man from the West.

The man from the west, who is visiting his married sister in Washington, wore a puzzled look, says the Star.

"Say," he broke out, "how long has it been back this way since kids were permitted to stop being polite to their elders? I'll tell you why I inquire. My sister has three young ones, among them a six-year-old boy. He was playing out in front of the house this morning, and she called him.

"'Archibald!' she sang out from the front window.

"The kid looked up at her.

"'What?' said he.

"'Come in; I want you,' said she.

"'I wonder,' I said to myself, 'why that young one doesn't say "Ma'am" when his mother addresses him. He must be a bad-mannered lad, and it's queer that Sis doesn't correct him.'

"The bby entered the house.

"'Do you want to go on an errand for mamma if she gives you a cent?' the boy's mother asked him.

"'Yes,' he replied.

"'You don't feel too warm with that jacket on you, do you, Archibald?' she asked the kid, solicitously.

"'No,' said he.

"I was waiting for Sis to give the cub a belt on the jaw for not saying 'ma'am' to her, like a polite little man, when she spoke to him, and I was amazed that she didn't even notice the kid's lack of manners.

"Before the shaver started on the errand his father showed up.

"'Archie,' his father called to him.

"'What?' said the kid, just as he had to his mother.

"'You remember the kind of cigars you got for me around the corner the last time?' said the boy's dad.

"'Yes,' said the kid.

"'Well, stop by there and tell the man to send me another box of them. And don't loiter by the way.'

"'No,' said the kid.

"His father hadn't noticed the boy's lack of manners any more than his mother had.

"'Say, look a-here, Sis,' said I to my sister when I got her alone that day, 'I'm not trying to butt in with any advice or anything like that, but why don't you tear a picket off the fence and drub some manners into that boy of yours?'

"She looked at me in a startled kind of way, and with quite a heap of reproach in her eyes, at that.

"'Why,' said she, 'what in the world do you mean? Archibald is considered the best-mannered boy in the neighborhood.'

"'Is he?' said I, pressing on. 'Well, d'ye call it polite for a six-year-old kid to say "What" and "Yes" and "No" to his mother and father without prefixing any "Ma'am" or "Sir" to his remarks?'

"Then my sister looked relieved and smiled.

"'Why, John,' she said to me, 'I thought by the way you spoke that Archibald had been really impolite. Certainly we do not require him to say "Ma'am" or "Sir" to us or to anybody else. Indeed, we should punish him if he said any such things. It is not the thing for children to say "Ma'am" or "Sir" to their parents, or to anybody any more. That sort of thing is now left for servants.'

"'Oh,' said I, but I couldn't help sizing my sister up out of the tail of my eye and putting this question to her:

"'Sis, just supposing you or I had dropped the "Ma'am" and "Sir" when we were young ones and were addressed by our old mother and dad, what d'ye think 'ud have happened to us, hey?'

"That cornered her, but she got out of it by saying that we lived in an old-fashioned section of the country where the folks were 'way behind the times, and all that.

"Maybe Sis was right," concluded the man from the west, "but, at that, I'm bound to say that it sort o' jars on me to hear the kids back this way talking to their parents and other grown-up folks in those familiar terms. I say 'sir' and 'ma'am' to old folks right down to the present day myself, and I'm past 40, with a pretty sizable bald spot on top of my head, and it doesn't hurt me any to say those things. Comes natural, in fact, because I was raised to respect my elders, fashionable or no fashionable. If I wasn't a crabbed old bach, and if I had a gang of young 'uns around, they'd get old-fashioned real quick and say 'sir' and 'ma'am' to the grown-ups, or there'd be something doing in the slipper and hairbrush line," and the western man looked as if he meant it.

Ate His Bonnet.

An English driver for a Market street business house persuaded his employer to buy a straw hat for the horse during the recent hot spell, and on Tuesday the horse appeared without the new headgear.

"What has become of the horse's bonnet, Harry?" asked one of the firm. "Don't you think it is hot enough this morning?"

"'Ot enough. That it is, sir, but the bloomin' 'oss ate the 'at afore I could put it on 'im this morning," said 'Arry.—Newark Sunday Call.

Beauty's Greatest Hardship.

"Oh!" gasped the beautiful woman as she fell back, clutching at her heart and permitting the telegram to flutter to the floor.

"What is it? Has your husband met with an accident?"

"No—no," she moaned; "it is from my son-in-law. I am a grandmother."—Chicago Record-Herald.

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

Merchant—"I want this ad. where everyone will see it." Solicitor—"We charge higher rates for space on the baseball page."—Baltimore World.

"I understand you made money in that stock deal." "Yes, I came out on top." "How did you manage it?" "Got in on the ground floor."—Philadelphia Press.

Sunday School Teacher—"Now, Tommy, you may give your conception of 'the future state.'" Tommy—"Please, ma'am, it's a territory."—Philadelphia Record.

"Billinger is a little too captious." "What's the matter with him?" "He prayed for rain and then grumbled because the water wasn't iced."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mrs. Y.—"Before we were married, you used to swear that you loved me." Mr. Y.—"Well?" Mrs. Y.—"Er—well—I—I think it's time you stopped swearing."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

"I don't understand your radical change of views. When you were studying for the ministry you were pronounced against eternal punishment." "Yes, but I wasn't married then."—Denver Times.

First Policeman—"Why is the street so blocked? Nobody told me about this procession. What is it?" Second Policeman—"It's the reporters of the city going to see a naval officer who won't talk."—Boston Transcript.

A Philosopher.—Wife—"There's a burglar down in the cellar, Henry." Husband—"Well, my dear, we ought to be thankful that we are upstairs." Wife—"But he'll come up here." Husband—"Then we'll go down in the cellar, my dear. Surely a ten-room house ought to be big enough to hold three people without crowding."—Boston Traveler.

DISBANDING A GREAT ARMY.

Retirement of United States Troops That Served in the Philippine Islands.

An important event in the history of the United States was the sailing from Manila of the transport Kilpatrick with the 33 officers and the 1,013 men of the Forty-third regiment, United States volunteer infantry, in time to enable the war department to carry out the provisions of the law which called for the mustering out of all volunteer troops by June 30, 1901. This was the last regiment to be disbanded, says the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

By act of March 2, 1899, the army was reorganized on the basis of 65,000 enlisted men and 35,000 volunteers, volunteer service being for a term of two years and four months, or until July 1, 1901. There was no trouble in getting enough men. The enlistments showed what has been claimed by our sanest patriots, that when the nation needs help it can obtain all it wants for the asking. The American soldier is the best treated, the best paid, the best fed of any fighters the world has ever known. The consequence is a higher standard of intelligence, conduct and efficiency than in any other army. Whatever may be the fears of other peoples the United States is able to take care of itself, for it has been calculated by political economists that if necessity should arise this country could arm, equip and keep in the field 10,000,000 soldiers.

The volunteer force of 35,000, which is now no more, was nearly 10,000 larger than the whole American army before the outbreak of the war with Spain, and many of the men have enlisted in the regular establishment and will continue to serve their country for years to come. It is decidedly dangerous to make comparisons between volunteers and regulars, but there is glory enough for all. This was illustrated in the operations against Santiago from June 2 to July 17, 1898, for it was only three years ago when our men of the Fifth corps were winning the fight with Spain. The corps were 869 officers and 17,349 men, and the casualties in all the engagements numbered 1,688, of which 1,417 were among the 13,277 regulars and 271 among the 4,941 volunteers present for duty.

To Serve Watermelon.

Some hostesses are serving watermelon this season in fanciful designs. The melons have been on ice for several days, and are cut lengthwise in deep scallops or points, so that each section for a person looks like a small canoe. When the two halves have been deeply notched and placed side by side on a large hand-painted platter, with crushed ice filling the center, the melons have the appearance of huge flowers. Some young hosts are making a specialty (to please their wives) of ingeniously cutting the watermelons to represent the petals of orchids and various flowers. The hostess has in that event had her table decorations of orchids or the blooms decided upon. Some persons make a good-sized incision in a large watermelon and pour therein a bottle of champagne. After the melon has been again on the ice for three hours the champagne is drained off and the flavor of the melon is delicious.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Preserved String Beans.

The best time to do up string beans is in the latter part of October. Select young string beans, and, after freeing them of strings, wash and place them in a kettle of boiling water; cook five minutes; drain and fill the beans in glass jars. Then add to four quarts of boiling water two ounces of salt, and fill the jars to overflowing with this. Close and boil them in a kettle of water 25 minutes; take out the jars, open each one a minute; close quickly; return them to the kettle and cook 40 minutes longer.—Ledger Monthly.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7, 1901.

President Roosevelt is growing every day in the esteem, not only of the people, but of the shrewd statesmen who can fully understand and appreciate the wonderful adaptability to changed circumstances and surroundings he is displaying in filling the exacting duties of President. This is no suprise to those who have known his character and capacity; they have contended all along that he would creditably fill any position in which he should be placed. He has certainly done that up to this time. He is daily surprising his prominent Republican callers by his knowledge of political conditions in their several States, and best of all, in the eyes of many, he is showing that his head is not swelled even a little bit by the honor that has come to him so unexpectedly, and through such great national sorrow; he not only receives the most humble of his old Washington acquaintances as cordially as he does his most prominent callers, but he invariably invites them to call again.

The Ohio Republican Association held a McKinley memorial meeting yesterday afternoon in the largest theatre in Washington. So great was the desire of the public to attend that it was necessary to limit the admission to holders of cards. Among the speakers was Gen. Grosvenor, and Justice Anderson, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, both life-long friends of President McKinley. A unique feature of the meeting was the invitation to those in the audience to make five-minute speeches—an invitation that was taken advantage of by a number of gentlemen and that added interest to the meeting.

Our foreign commerce still grows at both ends. The official figures for eight months ending August 31, 1901, show an increase in exports of $23,000,000 and in imports of $14,000,000 over the same period of last year.

Another death in the administration circle to add to the unusually long list furnished by the official families since the beginning of the McKinley administration. Although it was known to be only a question of time when Miss Helen, second daughter of Secretary Long, was taken home from Colorado, where she spent two years in an unsuccessful attempt to arrest the progress of the consumption, the announcement of her death carried a shock to the residents of Washington, many of whom had learned to love her during the several years that she represented her father in the social affairs of the National Capital. There will be no official mourning on account of her death. Secretary Long is expected to return to the Navy Department in a few days.

The deficit for the postal service for the last fiscal year was smaller than it has been at any time since the postal service has been the mammoth affair it is now—in exact figures it was $3,981,520.71. During the last five years the revenues of the postal service have incurred 35 per cent. It is regarded as certain that the saving through the new regulations for second-class mail, which went into effect the first of this month, will wipe out the deficit during the present fiscal year.

Senator Spooner is in Washington, and naturally he has had a talk or two with President Roosevelt, but he says there was no foundation for the story that he was sent for and asked to consider a proposition to fill a prospective vacancy in the Cabinet. Unless Mr. Spooner has changed his mind there is no place in the Cabinet that he would leave the Senate for. It is well known to his friends that President McKinley was anxious to have him in this Cabinet, but failed in his attempt to persuade him to accept a portfolio.

The investigation of the charges against Lieut.-Col. Heistand of the army, by Major Hawkes, formerly of the volunteer service, which is being conducted by the Senate Committee on Military Affairs has so far resulted in showing Hawkes to be a blackguard—he called Heistand a liar, in the committee-soom—and arousing the suspicion that he is something worse. It has not been altogether creditable to Col. Heistand, either. The evidence shows that he exercised very poor judgment in ever entering into negotiations with Hawkes for the formation of a company to deal in hemp in the Philippines. He discovered that himself and broke off the negotiations before the formation of the company. Several other officials promised to take stock in the company, on Col. Heistand's representations, but later withdrew their promises. The investigation is not yet completed.

A meeting of prominent gentlemen will be held in Washington this week to consider the best methods of pushing along the idea for the erection of a McKinley Memorial arch at the Washington end of the proposed memorial bridge to Arlington. Everybody is enthusiastic over the proposition, and it is believed now to be simply a question of how it may be best and most speedily accomplished.

Representative Shattue, of Ohio, who was one of President Roosevelt's recent callers, said of the anti-anarchist bill he will introduce in the House as soon as Congress assembles: "That there may be no mistake I will consult the Secretaries of State and the Treasury and the imigration officials. The bill will not provide for exclusion of the anarchists, but will have for its object the prohibition of anarchist meetings and anarchist publications. The anarchists who live in this country are more dangerous than those who come to us from abroad, as the recent terrible occurrence at Buffalo proves.

Although Attorney-General Knox will have his opinion on the request of J. W. Mackey and associates for the permissfon of the President to land a cable in Hawaii, Guam and the Philippines, it will surprise no one if President Roosevelt leaves the question unacted upon until after Congress meets.

Appointment of Judge of Election to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 23, 1901.

Francis Garlitz, appointed Democratic Judge of Election by this board at a meeting held Sept. 7, 1901, for Election District No. 3, is found to be disqualified to serve as such, and in his place and stead W. H. Kaufman is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President.

Appointment of Judge of Election to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 30, 1901.

Floyd Crow, appointed Democratic Judge of Election by this board at a meeting held Sept. 7, 1901, for Election District No. 9, is found to be disqualified to serve as such, and in his place and stead Jeremiah McKenzie is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President.

ORDER NISI.

George W. Wilson vs. Joseph B. Wilson. No. 1364 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County.

Ordered, this 1st day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and one, by the Circuit Court for Allegany county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by James W. Wilson, committee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 2nd day of November, 1901; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Oakland, Md., once a week for three successive weeks before the 2nd day of November, 1901.

The report states the amount of sale to be $80.00.

R. M. LUMAN, Clerk.

True copy—test:
R. M. LUMAN, Clerk.

Examiners' Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the following proposed new county road to be located is to run, viz: Beginning for the same at the south end of Garrett V. Moon's lane and running thence down Laurel creek and through the lands of the Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company, James L. Harvey and J. B. Lipscomb and along the lines of said Lipscomb and Charles Cooper and through the lands of the said Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company to the town of Schell, a distance of three miles, and examine whether the proposed new road should be located, will meet on the 11th day of November, 1901, for such purpose and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said proposed new county road to be made, and, if so, to locate the same, and perform their duty in the premises.

J. H. WILSON,
JOHN W. HARVEY,
ANDREW J. LEE,
Examiner.

Treasury Department.

OFFICE OF
THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., August 20, 1901.

Whereas, by satisfactory evidence presented to the undersigned, it has been made to appear that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, has complied with all the provisions of the Statutes of the United States, required to be complied with before an association shall be authorized to commence the business of banking.

Now therefore I, Charles G. Dawes, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, is authorized to commence the business of Banking as provided in Section Fifty-one hundred and sixty-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

SEAL — In testimony whereof witness my hand and Seal of office this twentieth day of August, 1901.

(Signed) CHARLES G. DAWES,
Comptroller of the Currency.

oct 31 No. 5943.

Cure That Cold

And it can be done for 25 cents—a dose or two and relief is instant—a few doses more and the cure is complete.

Pine and Terpin Cough Syrup

Is a new remedy—contains new drugs and new chemicals—a trial will convince anyone of its merit—it cures where all else fails.

LOGAN DRUG COMPANY,
At all Druggists. WHEELING, W. VA.

ROAD PETITION.

This is to give notice that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new road beginning for the same at the south end of Garrett V. Moon's lane and running thence down Laurel Creek and through the lands of the Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company, James L. Harvey and J. B. Lipscomb and along the lines of said Lipscomb and Chas. Cooper and through the lands of the said Mining and Manufacturing Company to the town of Schell, a distance of about three miles.

J. L. HARVEY,
J. O. O'HAVRE,
J. B. LIPSCOMB and others,
Petitioners.

22½ 5t*

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

Maryland's School of Technology. Four Courses of Instruction.

AGRICULTURAL — MECHANICAL
SCIENTIFIC — CLASSICAL

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified at once to enter upon life's work; graduates in Mechanical Engineering and Chemistry this year, all secured positions upon graduation. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements—bath rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, $154.00 for scholastic year. Catalogue giving full particulars sent on application. Daily visit by physician to college.

Attention is called to the Short Course of Ten Weeks in Agriculture. Particulars sent upon application.

Term commences September 23rd. Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER,
President M. A. C.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.

Money loaned on Mortgage.

Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.

Agent for the Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.

☞ Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

ADMINISTRATRIX'S NOTICE

This is to give notice, That the Subscriber, of Garrett county, Maryland, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of April next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

DANIEL PLEASANTS,

Given under my hand this 26th day of September, 1901.

MARIA PLEASANTS,
Administratrix.
Mountain Lake Park, Md.

39 3

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, that the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

FRANCIS H. RAVENSCROFT,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 20th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1901.

R. A. RAVENSCROFT, Administrator,
Accident, Md.

EXECUTORS' NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers of Garrett county, have obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

W. W. FRAZEE,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber on or before the 15th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under our hands this 10th day of September, 1901.

ELMIE FRAZEE,
OLIVER P. FRAZEE,
Executors,
Markleysburg, Pa.

EXECUTOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, Letters Testamentary on the personal estate of

JACOB SHARTZER,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 10th day of September, 1901.

LEONARD SHARTZER, Executor,
27 3* Accident, Md.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

I HAVE PURCHASED

THE OAKLAND COAL YARD

of Mr. D. L. Conneway and will continue the business. I will keep constantly on hand a large supply of

HARD AND SOFT

COAL,

KINDLING WOOD, Etc.

All orders will receive prompt attention. Leave orders with the weighmaster or at my residence, the Giessman Hotel.

35-2 GEO. GIESSMAN

The Garrett County Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:

DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MD.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.

Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.

F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

THE
SECOND NATIONAL BANK
of CUMBERLAND, MD.

Designated United States Depository.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000
Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, — O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, — L. M. Shepherd,
John Sheridan, — A. Hunter Boyd,
David W. Sloan.

CONSTIPATION CURED!

Nearly everyone suffers in a greater or less degree from this dreadful disease. It is dangerous to neglect the bowels, and often by doing so a foundation is laid for serious ailments.

Those suffering from Constipation suffer from slow Poison.

OUR NATIVE HERBS cures Constipation quietly and permanently.

No Pain, No Griping, No Binding effect afterwards. Its action is pleasant and sure.

200 DAYS' TREATMENT $1.00.

A CURE GUARANTEED OR THE MONEY BACK.

"When a girl I had Small Pox succeded by Typhoid Fever and Measels. I was left with Constipation and Sinking Spells. Sometimes I felt that I could not live. After having various physicians treat me with no benefit I bought a box of Our Native Herbs, which seems to be the only medicine that suits my case. I believe it saved my life." Mrs. M. MILLER, Crellin, Md.

No Case Too Stubborn for Our Native Herbs To Conquer.

THE ALONZO O. BLISS CO.,
SOLE PROPRIETORS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

A. C. BROOKE,
Local Agent. Mountain Lake Park, Md.

A box of Tablets or Powder mailed to any address upon receipt of $1.00.

Burlington Route

It costs no more to ride on this beautiful train than on any other.

Chicago-St.Paul Minneapolis Limited Express

It is electric lighted and heated by steam, carries a library-buffet-smoking car, a dining car à la carte and everything there is to make one comfortable.

Leaves CHICAGO 6.30 p. m. Daily

We sell through tickets, reserve sleeping car berths, furnish maps and time tables, and can, perhaps, be of service in other ways. Kindly write or call.

H. E. HELLER, District Passenger Agent,
632 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Midget Harness Riveter.

Complete repair shop in one tool. Will not wear out. Punches the hole, drives and clinches at one operation. Every horse owner, liveryman, teamster will buy on sight. Does the work of any $25 machine. Complete outfit with big bog of rivets will be sent for

ONLY 50 CENTS.

Agents Wanted.

HANDY ADJUSTABLE LIFTER. Handiest article ever invented for lifting hot pans, stove lids, etc. 15c, postpaid.

S. T. WILSON & CO.,
Box 103. Wilson, W. Va.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND
IRON FENCING

Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!

I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 20,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.

All trespassing will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.

Call on or address:

C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.

Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.

Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

133⅓ acres coal land on Youghiogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale.

House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187⅝ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 26⅛ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 200 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ miles southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoroughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north of Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swauger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to

JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY,
ARCHITECT,
Office 7 North Liberty St.
CUMBERLAND, MD.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in McComas's Building, Main St.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. 1e14-1y

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD.
Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients. 15—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. '88 16

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
OAKLAND, MD.
Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.
Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 16-'99

H. W. McCOMAS M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office opposite Garrett County Bank.
Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 9 p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county, Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 6 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md.
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER.
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.
Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by aneroid barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26t*

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate.
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.
Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats, descriptions and estimates furnished. 40-1yr.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT MAY 19, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 19, 1901. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily	2.42	A. M
No. 3—Daily	7.35	A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday	10.01	A. M
No. 55—Daily	4.52	P. M
No. 1—Daily	10.07	P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 8—Daily	5.50	A. M
No. 2—Daily	6.52	A. M
No. 46—Express, daily	4.41	P. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun	5.12	P. M
No. 12—Daily	8.35	P. M
No. 4—Daily	12.37	A. M

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager.
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT SEPT. 29, 1901.

SOUTHWARD No. 3 P. M.	SOUTHWARD No. 1 A. M.	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2 NOON.	NORTHWARD No. 4 P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	*6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June.	10 51	6 01
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 15	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	5 15
6 00*	9 50* ar	Elk Garden	*8 10	*4 25
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 38	10 27	Thomas	8 38	3 53
7 10	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 15
6 48	10 35 lv	Coketon	8 35	3 50
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 09	3 15
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 10†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 15
NOON				P. M.
8 46*	12 52† ar	Beverly	lv	†1 44
9 10*	1 15† ar	Huttonsville	lv	†1 20
M. P.				P. M.
	3 15* ar	Bealington	lv	*11 45
	P. M.			A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, General Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agent

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1901. NUMBER 32.

THE DEMOCRATIC RECORD.

The Democratic party goes before the people of Maryland this year with a record unparalleled for broken promises, pledges ignored, bad faith, bad legislation, trickery, deceit and a complete and entire disregard of every principle of good government. This appalling list of what the party now in power has done and left undone, has only been equalled by the history of the same organization during the period when it was in power in this State during the twenty years from 1876 to 1896, when the same men had absolute control of the State and were only hurled from their places by the uprising of the people in 1895.

This accusation applies not only to the government of the State during the past two years, but in an equally great degree to the conduct of affairs in the City of Baltimore and in the counties where the members of that party have been in control. In every instance, without a single exception of any moment, the record has been the same,—a record of perfidy and dishonor, of disregard of popular rights, of extravagance in the disbursement of public funds, of the appointment of untrustworthy and unfit men to office as a reward for political and partisan services, of an arrogant and high-handed system of corruption and bossism, which has alienated a large number of members of their own political household. All this has taken place during the two short years which have elapsed since they were returned to authority upon the express promise made in their platform and upon the hustings that they would not follow their old course, but would administer affairs fairly and economically for the benefit and to the welfare of the whole people. The men who control the Democratic ozganization in Maryland, like the Bourbons, seem incapable of learning by experience. The defeats of 1895, 1896, 1897 and 1898 do not appear to have been of any benefit. In 1899 they were returned to power more by the apathy and indifference of their opponents than for any other reason. In order, however, to win the election in that year, they solemnly pledged their party to the completion of certain reforms inaugurated by the Republicans, which reforms they themselves thwarted by means of obstructive tactics in the General Assemblies of 1896 and '98. In fact, the great obstacles to all reform legislation in the two sessions referred to were the Democratic members, who were present in numbers sufficiently large to enable them to thwart the policy of the Republicans, and the reforms really accomplished then, were brought about only after a hard struggle and in spite of the active hostility of the Democrats who used all their skill and ability to render of no effect the work of Governor Lowndes and the Republican leaders, who were backed by the enlightened public sentiment of the entire State. The demand for the completion of these reforms was so great, that in order to win in 1899, Governor Smith, his colleagues on the Democratic ticket and their party leaders with them, one and all, gave their pledges, which they reiterated from time to time during the campaign, that they would carry them out to the letter, should they be chosen to the offices for which they aspired. Relying upon their words, the people trusted them once more, and they were elected.

No sooner were they installed in authority than it was clearly indicated that the people had been fooled, and that so far from there being any real intention on the part of the victors to redeem their pledges, exactly the contrary was the probability, which subsequent events have turned into reality.

In his appointments to office, Governor Smith has been guided almost invariably by the old clique of discredited and dishonored bosses, whose conduct brought the party to defeat in 1895. Men have been chosen to fill the positions, great and small, because of their subserviency to the ring. Fitness has had no claim for recognition. The only qualification necessary has been blind and servile obedience to the dictates of the bosses and a willingness to do all things required by the ruling power.

The police force of Baltimore City has been turned over by Governor Smith's Commissioners to the absolute control of I. Freeman Rasin, who has thus been made the absolute dictator of the peace, quiet and well-being of the whole people. Mr. Rasin never before was in more complete control of the Baltimore police force than he is at the present time, and all by the order of Governor Smith, whose Commissioners have thus become the subservient tools of the city boss.

The Liquor License Board has also been placed in Mr. Rasin's hands, and that engine of power over the saloon element is now being used for the aggrandisement and profit of the boss. Not a license can be obtained except by Mr. Rasin's consent and approval, and those who are not obedient to his commands are at all times in danger of having the permission to carry on their business revoked at his will.

The Police Magistrates appointed by Governor Smith are all creatures of Rasin, and act in accordance with his commands.

The Democratic members of the Board of Supervisors of Election are subservient tools of Rasin, and he names his henchmen as Democratic election officials in Baltimore, all of whom have been appointed by the Governor, are subservient tools of Rasin. Through them he controls the police, the License Board, and the station-houses, and thus can bring to his aid whenever he wants to do so, all the disorderly and criminal classes he expects to carry this election just as he did by the same elements of power in years past. In other words, he expects by the aid of the criminal and disorderly classes to elect his tools to the General Assembly, and thus return his friend and political partner, Arthur P. Gorman, to the United States Senate.

Other acts of Governor Smith have been on a par with his appointments, and never before, even in its palmiest days before 1895, has the ring had such absolute sway over the State Executive as it has at the present time. No Governor of Maryland has ever given himself up so entirely and completely to the bosses as has the present Chief Magistrate. With him their word is law, and he is no more than a weak puppet in their corrupt and dishonored hands. He has been, and is now, a pitiable spectacle to the people of the state.

In their control of the Legislature of 1900, they violated every pledge of reform which they made in their platform and on the hustings. Never before in the history of the General Assembly has there been such a reign of corruption as prevailed at the State House in 1900. One of the Baltimore daily papers in its account of the session, headed its article as follows:

"RASCALITY REIGN."

"The State House at Annapolis Seething with Corruption." "Rottenness unparalleled distinguishes the present session." General interest of the people forgotten in the scramble for "extra money."

And the conclusion says, "If the people of Maryland would be brought to a realizing sense of the state of affairs existing here, they would come to Annapolis in crowds and drive the entire gang into the bay."

Other accounts of the same session were equally emphatic, and the "reform" session of Governor Smith was noted as the most scandalous in the history of the state.

To give even a partial account of that disgraceful session would take columns of space, for, from the first day until the closing hours, the whole Assembly was one wild, turbulent, and dishonorable scramble for boodle and spoils. Corporations were "plugged," members openly "held up" legitimate bills for pay, and the lobby was enriched as it had not been for years.

So outrageous and scandalous was the conduct of the majority during the session, that a leading Democratic senator, Mr. Olin Bryan, of Baltimore City, said that it was a disgrace to the state, and that every private and corporate interest was considered in preference to the general public interest. Mr. Bryan also characterized the General Assembly as "corporation ridden," and corrupt to an extraordinary degree. And the men who were in control then are asking the people to entrust them with the control again, so that they may continue to ply their nefarious trade in the State House.

The question for the people to decide at the polls is, "Will they trust them? Do they wish the same old system to be continued so that Maryland politics may become once more a byeword of scorn and reproach.

ANANIAS—"Well, so you fellows had them lists after all. One of you deserves this belt—decide between you which one it is."

REPUBLICAN MEETINGS!

The Republican State Central Committee for this county announce mass meetings to be held at the following places upon the dates named:

RED HOUSE, MONDAY, OCTOBER 21, 7.30.

BRAY'S SCHOOL HOUSE, MONDAY, OCTOBER 21, 7.30.

CRELLIN, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 7.30.

DEER PARK, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 7.30.

SWANTON, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 25, 7.30.

SANG RUN, MONDAY, OCTOBER 28, 7.30.

SAND SPRING, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 7.30.

FRIENDSVILLE, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 7.30.

BITTINGER, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31, 7.30.

NEW GERMANY, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 7.30.

GRANTSVILLE, SATURDAY AFTERNOON, NOV. 2, 7.30.

ACCIDENT, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 7.30.

The above meetings will be addressed by some of the following speakers:

Capt. James A. Hayden, E. H. Sincell, J. C. Renninger, L. A. Rudisill, W. W. Sweet, F. A. Thayer, Col. A. G. Sturgiss, Capt. J. W. White, Dr. J. W. Laughlin, N. S. Heindel, Senator R. A. Ravenscroft, Assemblyman P. E. Finzel, Charles Ashby, Percy H. Veitch.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Jas. Jarboe and family have moved into one of the Jamesson cottages.

Mrs. L. E. Binkley, of Chicago, has moved into her cottage on E street.

There are sixty cottages occupied at this time.

Mr. Feather and family, of Cranesville, W. Va., have rented the Waugh cottage for the winter.

Rev. J. B. Chamberlain and family returned to Washington last Saturday.

Charles Washington is having his cottage painted. Dawson, the painter, is doing the work.

Mrs. Hayden and family have returned from their trip to Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Preaching in the M. E. Church Sunday evening at 7:30. After the sermon there will be an election of Sunday officers for the ensuing year.

[From Another Correspondent.]

Beside the long side-tracts the B. & O. has put in here, it is now preparing to put up a switch tower on the south side of the road opposite the depot.

The work on the Sheats cottage and the addition to the Blue cottage are well under way, and will be fine buildings.

The addition to the Chautauqua Hotel has been hindered for lack of lumber.

The Association is having the glade front ploughed up again, which will put it in fine condition for oats and timothy next spring. A part of the front is in tame grass already and promises a good yield. When Supt. Rudisill fully carries out his plans the entire railroad front will be a beautiful lawn nearly a mile in length and running back to the timber line.

J. A. Enlow, salesman for J. B. Williams of Frostburg, Md., spent Sunday with his family, after an absence of over two weeks. He is succeeding in marking the resting places of many who have been neglected for years, as well as the recently burried.

Several families are with us yet, enjoying our beautiful autumn.

Rev. J. S. Harvey has been returned to this circuit, whereof we are glad.

Water from Mr. Yoder's new reservoir, on the mountain about three and one-half miles south of the Park, made its appearance in the Park on Tuesday. We will now have an abundance of water.

SUNNYSIDE.

The large sale of personal property of Mr. Jas. Andrews went off Tuesday. Very good prices were realized. Mr. Andrews, with his family, will soon leave for his new home at Barton. We are sorry to give Mr. Andrews up, as he has proven himself a quiet, good citizen, not given to talking about other people's business, nor unnecessarily attending to his neighbors' private affairs.

The new school house near this place is nearing completion. Last year the school was conducted in an old building under an experienced teacher. This winter the school will be taught in the new building by Mr. Ira Culp, whose experience as teacher and scholarly attainments are well known in our State.

The Swan Meadow school will be taught by Miss Sadie Weimer, of Mt. Lake Park.

Miss Sallie Kildow will teach the Red House school.

A series of meetings will begin this (Wednesday) eve. at Union Chapel, conducted by Rev. Bunner, of Fairmont, W. Va.

No marriages to report from this time; in fact, among our young people the prospects for matrimony are not nearly so flattering as has been.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

WHAT CHAIRMAN GOLDSBOROUGH SAYS

A Signed Statement Setting Forth the Issues of the Campaign and the POSITION OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

The Election This Year Is One of the Most Important In the History of the State. It Means Whether or Not the People Will Allow Mr. Gorman to Dominate.

In a few more days the political campaign in Maryland will be in full blast and from one end of the State to the other the oratorical efforts of speakers of both political parties will ring out clear and bold.

Keener politicians of both parties, now that the registration is closed, begin to see the finish. The problematic effect of the new election law has developed unusually interesting features. In spite of the elections in Frederick, Annapolis and Baltimore in the spring both parties concede that the new law has not yet had a practical test.

Below will be found a signed statement issued by Chairman Goldsborough setting for his views as to the political conditions, the outlook and the reasons why the Republican party should be supported and why it should win:

"The voters of Maryland have never been confronted with a more important election than will be that to be held in November next. The result will be far-reaching in its effects. It means to the people of this State whether or not they will permit Mr. Gorman and Mr. Rasin, with all they stand for, to control and dominate the affairs of Baltimore city and the counties of the State. It means whether or not good government is desired, or government (if I may so misuse the word) of that form seen and experienced in its worst phase from 1875 to 1896.

"The success of Democracy in this State, under its present leaders, stands for the return of Mr. Gorman to the United States Senate and the hand of Mr. Rasin upon the affairs of the Monumental City. Do the people of Maryland desire the enactment of a 'Corrupt Practices' act? Do they wish to take the police of Baltimore out of politics? Do they desire a compulsory primary election law, the repeal of the election law enacted at the recent extraordinary session of the Legislature and the restoration of manhood suffrage, the divorcing of schools from political control and the passage and enforcement of laws that will build up the fast-declining oyster industry, by the planting of shells by the State on the barren bottoms of our rivers and bays?

"These things the Republican party will do if intrusted with the affairs of the State. These things the Democratic party will not do.

"As a guarantee that such will be done by the Republican party, I point to the redemption of every pledge made by that party in 1895. That they will not be done by the Democratic party I need but to recall that for years that party has been promising many measures of good government to the voters of this Commonwealth, but with promises it began, with promises it ended.

"For a quarter of a century the Republican and Independent voters of Maryland fought to throw off the yoke of political tyranny. After a long and heroic struggle they did it, and if I read aright the times they are not now in a frame of mind to permit those self-same tyrants to again despoil the fair name of Maryland.

"'But,' say the leaders of Democracy, 'beware of the 'negro,' ye white men of Maryland!' And upon this silly cry alone they appeal to the voters. I have said before—and I repeat it here—there has never been a white man's government in Maryland, and as the percentage of colored people has steadily decreased in the State each decade since 1810, when it was 38.22 per cent., to the present, when it is but 19.78 per cent., the puerility and absurdity of crying aloud a 'white man's government' is apparent to all. The more than 80 per cent. of the white population of Maryland is not in jeopardy from any standpoint from the less than 20 per cent. of negro population. To say it is is an insult to a brave and intelligent people.

"For these reasons I confidently predict that the voters of Maryland will administer a stinging rebuke to those Democratic leaders who are seeking to place themselves in power by methods so successfully carried out in days gone by. But the 'old game,' the 'old tricks' cannot longer win. The people are on guard. The Republican party will win a priceless victory. We are organized; we are battling for the life of our party and the life and progress of Maryland; we cannot lose, for we are right. I appeal to the people to do their duty.

"PHILIPS LEE GOLDSBOROUGH."

TOTAL DEPOSITS $426,502.24.

Oakland Banks Make a Splendid Showing.

Bank deposits are regarded as an index of the financial condition of the community. Following is a statement of the total deposits in the principal banking institutions in Oakland and vicinity, compiled in the case of the national banks from their statements made to the comptroller of the currency and in the case of the state banks from their statements made to the treasury department of Maryland as of September 30th last:

1.	Second National Bank, Cumberland	$1,562,259 18
2.	First National Bank, Frostburg	659,406 48
3.	German Savings Bank, Cumberland	625,412 75
4.	First National Bank, Cumberland	571,157 74
5.	Davis National Bank, Davis, West Va.	567,628 54
6.	Lonaconing Savings Bank, Lonaconing	443,407 17
7.	First National Bank, Piedmont, West Va.	414,274 18
8.	Garrett County Bank, Oakland	331,463 20
9.	Citizens National Bank, Frostburg	326,582 47
10.	Citizens National Bank, Cumberland	288,788 08
11.	Miners and Merchants Bank, Lonaconing	195,522 41
12.	Third National Bank, Cumberland	185,579 43
13.	First National Bank, Oakland	95,639 04
14.	First National Bank, Midland	68,315 54
Total		$6,354,877 12

MOUNTAIN TRIOLETS.

A CHILD'S LAMENT.

I loves my dolly so—
'N'en sometimes I cry:
My mama's gone—you know:
I loves my dolly so
'N'en I wants it to go
Wiv mama in the sky—
I loves my dolly so,
'N'en sometimes I cry.

SWEET ISLES OF HOPE.

Beyond the evening's sea of gold
Sweet isles of hope arise:
The day is ushered to its fold
Beyond the evening's sea of gold
Where dwell forever things of old,
The dearest things we prize:—
Beyond the evening's sea of gold
Sweet isles of Hope arise.

BABY MARGERY.

Dainty and fair and sweet to see
Baby Margery's always mine—
Dancing and laughing in innocent glee;
Dainty and fair and sweet to see;
All her true love given to me;
A true love most divine:
Dainty and fair and sweet to see
Baby Margery's always mine.

JOHNSONS.

Not seeing any items from this locality for some time thought it would be interesting to contribute a few.

Dr. Murray, of Finzel, is kept quite busy attending the sick in the district.

A daughter of George Burdock is seriously ill with diphtheria.

The daughter of Jacob Baker is dangerously ill with pneumonia.

The death of John Clark, which occurred last week, was caused by typhoid fever. He leaves a wife and six small children in destitute circumstances.

Rev. and Mrs. G. M. Murray, of Baltimore, visited their son last week.

Messrs. Simon and Christopher Warner, of Berlin, Pa., called on Mr. Frederick Warner this week.

Henry Durst, of New Germany, spent Tuesday night at his uncle Henry Finzel's.

Number 9 is enjoying a building boom just at present. Charles Johnson is building a new house as is also Mrs. John Machint, and Jasper Dress is adding an addition to his house.

Samuel Johnson has gone to Staunton, Va., to look at a tract of timber.

Every man is busy in our district. It is impossible to find one idle man. What a contrast between Republican and Democratic rule.

The disfranchisement law passed at the extra session of the Legislature will compel twenty-five of our best citizens to lose their right of suffrage, but their sons will resent the insult offered their fathers by voting the Republican ticket.

A Card of Thanks.

We hereby desire to acknowledge a "surprise party" and donation on the night of the 12th inst. Quite a number of the friends assembled at the home we are so soon to vacate, served refreshments, spent an hour pleasantly and returned to their homes, leaving us a supply of groceries, cash, etc.

As we go to a "new field" we pray the Divine blessing upon them. May peace and prosperity be theirs.

E. R. SKIDMORE and FAMILY.

Swanton, Md.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Publisher.

OAKLAND, : GARRETT CO., MD.

THE MEADOW LARK.

A sea of grass on either side
The prairie stretches far and wide;
Its undulating line of blades
Reflects the noontide lights and shades,
And brings before me one by one
The pictures wrought by wind and sun.

And silence reigns, save for the breeze
And muffled hum of droning bees,
Till in the summer hush I hear
A prairie signal sweet and clear,
In mournful, piercing notes that mark
The whistle of the meadow-lark.

Like one wild cry for loved and lost,
From a lone spirit tempest-tossed,
It wails across the waving grass,
And, blending with the winds that pass
It scatters echoes at my feet
So full of pain, so deadly sweet.

Oh! heart of hearts, could my unrest
Find such a song within my breast,
My passionate and yearning cry
Would echo on from sea to sky
Along the path of future years,
And touch the listening world to tears.
—Ernest McGaffey, in Overland Monthly.

Jim Henley, Remittance Man

By WILLIAM McLEOD

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

JIM HENLEY, manager and part owner of the Bar Z cattle ranch, got his first sight of the new teacher at the Half Way house just after he had recovered from one of his periodical sprees. He was riding along gloomily with his cayuse at a walk, and the young man was putting in his time hating himself savagely. In point of fact, Henley always despised himself after one of his outbursts, but they happened none the less regularly on that account.

He was a younger son of an old English family, a university man (College of St. Ambrose, Oxford), and a gentleman; add to which he was the pluckiest man in the San Joaquin valley—or at least one of the nerviest, and that is a pretty large order—a splendid rider, a good shot, a handsome fellow in a devil-may-care fashion, and was possessed of recklessness enough to sink a three-decker. His vices were those which sprang from indolence and unsteadiness of purpose, but at bottom he had the manliness out of which stanch men are made. The trouble with him was that he had always had more money than he knew what to do with, and unworthy companions who were quite ready to assist him on the downhill road. The result was that he had long since come to feel a cynical distrust about himself.

"I'm a bad egg, and the sooner I'm bowled clean in the middle stump the better it will be for my people," he told himself, in the mixed figures he was wont to employ. "The devil of it is that I'm liable to live 100 years yet. Hello! What's the matter here?"

The matter appeared to be that there existed a difference of opinion between a young woman and her pony. The cayuse was circling around at the end of a bridle, and the young woman was serving as the pivot of the circumference in a vain attempt to persuade the animal to let her mount.

"I'VE BROKEN MY ARM."

Henley flung himself from his horse and tendered his services gloomily. In five seconds he had brought the pony to time and was offering a hand as a mount. From the saddle the young woman explained.

"I got off to pick some of those columbines and I found that Cal was opposed to our renewing acquaintance. I'm afraid I should have had to walk if you had not happened to come along, Mr.——?"

"Henley," said the young man of that name, briefly. "You're all right now, I suppose."

"Yes, all right, thank you;" and the young woman galloped away.

"Doesn't s em very friendly. He might at least have asked my name," thought Miss Lyndona Forsyth, teacher of the school at the Half Way house. "I don't think I've ever seen a face at once so sad and so reckless. Looks like a gentleman too. I shouldn't wonder if there isn't a history behind those great eyes."

With which Miss Forsyth, being eminently practical, dismissed the young man from her mind for the present. They met each other frequently in the months that followed, though their acquaintance continued to limp until one morning she found him lying on the ground in front of the schoolhouse.

"A new pupil, Miss Forsyth," he called out to her with his cynical laugh. "Didn't want to be late the first day, so I came last night. Afraid you'll have to excuse me from rising. Fact is, my pony's foot went into a prairie dog's hole and I came a cropper. Sorry to trouble you, but I'm afraid I shall have to ask one of your hopefuls to ride over to the Bar Z outfit with the news. I've broken my arm."

"But you don't mean that you've been here all night," she said, in dismay, noticing that his face was white and drawn with pain.

"Yes, I—you needn't waste any pity on me. It was my own fault," he said, gruffly, flushing to the roots of his hair.

Miss Forsyth's eyes grew grave. She was from New England, and at heart the Puritan instincts of her ancestors still swayed her. She understood him to mean that he had been intoxicated at the time, and her heart rebelled against the weakness of this debonair young man with the splendid eyes of fire. It was bad enough for the other cowmen to get on their yearly "tears," but for a man with dormant possibilities like this one the sin was the greater. At the same time she confessed to herself that she was very greatly interested in the young fellow lying on the ground before her and looking up at her with the cynical sardonic smile and the eyes so full of scorn at himself.

Henley on his part was also very much taken with this rather fine-looking young woman whose manner was unconsciously so eloquent of judgment on him. It had been a long time since any woman of that type had been interested enough in him to care whether he went to the dogs or not. Indeed, a woman had started him there in the first place by jilting him for a more eligible match. Some appealing quality in her gray eyes stirred him now to say, with the ironic gleam in his eye:

"A fine specimen, is it not, Miss Forsyth? You'll have a chance to study the remittance man at his best, you know. One of the most prolific products of the Rocky mountain region is the remittance man, originally an exotic transplanted at great expense from England for his family's good."

"You mustn't talk that way—as if you didn't care," she said, gently.

"Do you happen to care?" he asked her, looking out of bold unabashed eyes.

She flushed uneasily. "Of course I care at seeing such a waste of human life. It is one of the saddest things I have ever seen."

He drew a long breath and groaned.

"Is your arm paining you very much?" she asked.

"Arm? No!" he said savagely. "What's a broken arm to shout about? I'm doing the baby act because Heaven's opened to me after I've elected hell."

That was the last of Jim Henley's "sprees." He fought his fight out grimly and won. Even the Christmas season passed without the usual jollification. But, oddly enough, the friendship between Henley and Miss Forsyth did not progress. Perhaps the memory of that morning when she had found him a victim of his own weakness rose as a barrier between them. At any rate there was a subtle reserve in their speech and manner that grew greater rather than less.

Then came the great blizzard in the San Joaquin valley. All day the storm had been growing worse and by the afternoon it had developed into a blizzard in which no living thing could be out and retain life. At the Bar Z ranch they worked like Trojans to get things ship-shape for the night, and just before dusk Henley dropped into his chair a weary man.

He was up again like a flash, for it had come to him suddenly that Miss Forsyth might be still at the schoolhouse. To the amazement of his men and despite their protests he mounted and rode to the ranch house where she stayed. She had not arrived. They were in great fear for her, but no man cared to venture out into the howling blizzard, for they counted it sure death.

How Jim Henley fought his way to the schoolhouse; how his horse succumbed and he pushed on alone; how the bitter cold and the unendurable wind took the sap of life out of him; how he fell and rose and fell again, still fighting forward step by step against the grimmest enemy that ever man conquered; how he found Lyndona Forsyth in the drift all but dead, and won at length to the schoolhouse with her; how they were together for three days without food except some few scraps, cut off from a rescue by the raging blizzard, and how next spring the Methodist minister at the Half Way house joined in wedlock James Marlborough Henley and Lyndona Forsyth, the ranchers of the valley still delight to tell.

On Another Road.

A ticket collector on a railway got leave to go and get married and was given a pass over the line. On the way back he showed to the new collector his marriage certificate by mistake for his pass. The latter studied it carefully, and then said: "Eh, mon, you've got a ticket for a long, wearisome journey, but not on the Caledonian railway."—London Tit-Bits.

Merely a Suggestion.

"Now, my hearers," asked the lady orator, who had just finished enumerating the qualities which should be possessed by man, "what should be done with this ideal husband?"

"Have him stuffed," suggested a coarse, frivolous person in a side seat.—Baltimore American.

The Boston Baby.

Stranger—I think, madam, that your child must have a pin discommoding it somewhere.

Boston Mother (severely)—My baby, sir, does not cry over such trivial things as that. He has just heard how ill Henrik Ibsen is.—Sommerville Journal.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS.

A Variety of Good Things for the Table and How to Prepare Them.

A simple cream candy, easily cooked and healthful for the children, is made by cooking slowly until the sirup spins a hair: Three cupfuls of granulated sugar, 1½ cupfuls of boiling water, a piece of butter the size of a hickory nut and a few drops of vanilla. If the mixture boils rapidly or is stirred it will grain. When it is done turn into buttered tins, and as soon as it is sufficiently cool pull until it is white and light. In pulling candy of any kind care should be taken not to twist it in the process, says the New York Tribune.

A half cupful of cocoanut added to the recipe for chocolate fudge will give variety and will be found to be an improvement.

Sardines broiled in a chafing dish are nice for Sunday night suppers. Use just enough of the oil in the box to cover the bottom of the dish and keep the fish from sticking. When they are browned on both sides sprinkle liberally with lemon juice and serve hot.

Minister's cake, well known in the country, where a variety of cakes for teas is considered a necessity, is made as follows: Cream together a half cupful of butter and a cupful of sugar. Beat the whites and yolks of two eggs separately. Dissolve a teaspoonful of soda in a half cupful of sour milk. Beat together the butter, sugar and yolks of the eggs. Add a half cake of chocolate dissolved over warm water, the milk and soda and two cupfuls of flour. Fold in the whites of the eggs. Flavor with vanilla. Bake slowly for nearly an hour. Frost the cake with white icing.

Hermit's cookies will be found a welcome addition to the school luncheon box. Cream together 1½ cupfuls of brown sugar and a cupful of butter. Add three eggs, lightly beaten; two large tablespoonfuls of sour milk, one teaspoonful of soda, one cupful of raisins, chopped fine, and cinnamon and cloves to taste. Use as little flour as possible to keep the paste from sticking when it is rolled out. Instead of a cupful of raisins a half cupful of raisins and a half cupful of currants may be chopped together.

Banbury turnovers will be hailed with delight in the children's school luncheon. Make a filling of one cupful of raisins, chopped fine, the juice and rind of one lemon, one large cracker rolled fine or the same amount of bread crumbs, one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of melted butter and one egg. Make the usual pie paste and cut it into pieces three or four inches square. Put a tablespoonful or so of the mixture in the center, brush the edges with white of egg mixed with water and fold.

For the Scotch rarebit make a cupful of cream sauce of a half cupful each of milk and cream, a tablespoonful of butter, a tablespoonful of flour and salt to taste. When it is done add a tablespoonful of anchovy paste and a dash of paprika. Cook the mixture for a minute and add five hard-boiled eggs cut in large dice-shaped pieces. Bring again to a simmer and serve on slices of toast.

Whipped Peach Cream in Baskets.

Beat the whites of four eggs until very stiff, then mix in by degrees four level tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, next add two tablespoonfuls of rich peach sirup (drained from preserved peaches), and stir in lightly one pint of sweet cream. Whisk to a stiff froth. Everything should be very cold before beginning, and keep the bowl containing the cream in a pan of cracked ice while whipping the ingredients. Have ready round individual sponge cakes, scoop out the center until the walls and bottom are only three-fourths of an inch thick, and just before serving fill with the peach cream. If an especially handsome dessert is wanted, brush the outside of the basket with white of egg, and stick all over it halved English walnut meats or pecans.—Good Housekeeping.

Cream Pea Soup.

Put three-fourths of a pint of peas to soak over night in a quart of water. In the morning, drain, and put on to cook in cold water; as soon as the water boils, skim carefully, cover closely, and let simmer gently for four or five hours, or until tender. Rub through a colander to remove the skins. Put a pint and a half of thinly sliced potatoes in a little cold water; let simmer till dissolved, rub through a colander, and add to the peas, add milk enough to make 3½ pints in all; return to the fire with a small head of celery, let boil ten or fifteen minutes, add a cupful of thin, sweet cream, and salt to taste.—Home Magazine.

Escalloped Mutton.

Remove fat and skin from cold roast mutton. Cut the meat into small, thin slices; season with salt and pepper. Butter a dish, put in a layer of meat, then cold boiled macaroni; moisten with tomato sauce, and so continue until all is used. Cover with buttered crumbs and brown in the oven.—Ladies' World, New York.

Plum Soy.

Four quarts of plums, measuring after the seeds are removed; scald and rub them through a colander; add a pint of vinegar, a teaspoonful of black pepper, one of ground mustard, one of cloves; half a cupful of light brown sugar and salt to taste. Boil gently for an hour and bottle while hot.—Washington Star.

Gravitation.

Thespis—That was a queer accident you had at your theater. How did the flies happen to come down?

Manager—I guess they were attracted by the bald heads in the front row.—Judge.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

An English clergyman named Bacon is making balloon ascents in and around London with a view to ascertaining the sources of London fog.

In the coldest parts of Siberia a rainbow may sometimes be seen all day long in a cloudless sky. It is supposed to be due to fine particles of snow in the air.

The Marconi station installed on the Nantucket lightship has proved to be very successful and several trans-Atlantic steamers have been able to communicate successfully with the shore by its aid.

It is asserted that the number of compound locomotives in use in this country (as compared with simple engines) averages 75 per cent. of the whole number in use in freight and passenger traffic.

The danger of living in a house that harbors consumptives is illustrated by the fact that of 6,273 patients officially examined by the German imperial board of health 2,177, or 34.7 per cent., belonged to families that included other victims of tuberculosis.

An English steamship company has issued a circular letter offering free passages to delegates from labor unions who wish to visit this country to ascertain the exact conditions of labor and wages here, and also what advantages, if any, we have in the way of labor-saving tools.

Recent experiments made to determine the loss ensuing by exposing coal to the weather, unprotected in any way, show, contrary to general belief, that it is very small. There was a gain in the amount of oxygen, but a loss of carbon, hydrogen and nitrogen; the loss of calorific power was slight.

CITIES SPEND HUGE SUMS.

Municipalities the World Over Engage in Enormous Public Improvements.

In no previous period of the world's history have so many cities been busy at the same time with extensive and costly public enterprises. The daily reader of the news of all countries cannot fail to have noticed that the closing years of the nineteenth century and the opening year of the twentieth have been marked by the beginning or the continuance of municipal undertakings the total cost of which will amount to hundreds of millions of dollars, says the New York Tribune. In London and Paris and in other capitals of Europe local railways, underground and on the surface, are in course of construction or will be begun at an early date. The tendency to improve the facilities for local transportation is widespread and seems now to have become irresistible in many quarters. Progressive communities with ample resources and conspicuous for population and advancement are entering upon notable tasks for the benefit of their citizens and of strangers within their gates.

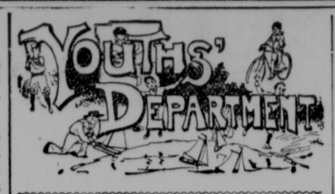
Rapid transit is a watchword and a rallying cry both in the eastern and western hemispheres, and armies of wage-earners are toiling in subways, on elevated roads and on the street levels in dozens and scores of well-known places here and abroad. But the principal cities of the globe are concerned with other great works than those which will effect the swift distribution of hosts of passengers. Schemes for the construction of new docks and piers on the most ambitious scale, for the deepening and broadening of harbor channels and for the opening of wider avenues of commerce and trade in the best-known ports of various countries are more numerous and are planned on more generous lines than in any former era. And the provision of more abundant supplies of water for cities which consume huge quantities is drawing millions upon millions of dollars from municipal treasuries in the United States and in other countries.

TERRIFIC AUTOMOBILING.

Fournier's Speed in the Recent Great Race Over Seventy Miles an Hour at Times.

The most wonderful long distance speed automobile performance yet credited to anyone was made by Henry Fournier, winner of the 1901 Paris-Bordeaux race, held May 29. The 348 miles were made in eight hours 44 seconds, or equal to a rate of speed which would take the winner from New York to Buffalo in a trifle over ten hours. Had Fournier not been forced to limit his speed to 12 kilometers an hour in passing through Versailles, Chartres, Chateaudun, Vendome, Tours, Chatellerault, Poitiers, Ruffic, Angouleme and Libourne, he would have made an average speed which would have taken him from New York to Buffalo in seven hours, or at a rate of speed considerably faster than the world-famed empire state express travels. There is no question, says the Automobile Magazine, that at some parts of the journey Fournier went somewhat over 70 miles per hour. His 330 miles outside of towns were made at an average rate of 53 miles per hour, and the average of the whole distance, including the slowing up through towns, was over 40 miles per hour.

The previous record for this race was held by Charron, his time being 11 hours 4 minutes and 20 seconds. It will be seen that Fournier reduced these figures by nearly three hours. The second arrival was Farnham, in a Panhard-Levassor, in nine hours and 40 minutes, while the third man, Voigt, who also operated a Panhard-Levassor, was third in nine hours 49 minutes and 11 seconds, both beating Charron's record.



BURMESE MAIDENS.

They Compare Favorably with Our Girls in Looks, But Indulge in Strange Habits.

A traveler in far-away Burmah, of which we know very little except from missionary reports, says that Burmese girls compare very favorably with our girls in looks and manners. Of course they smoke cigars, which is contrary to our standard of good manners, but it is good form in Burmah. Perhaps the most interesting trait about Burmese girls is their passion for personal adornment, especially in the way of earrings.

All Burmese women, says Golden Days, wear ear-plugs. These are as costly as the purse of the women can purchase, and they are like no earrings you will find in America.

The lobes of their ears have holes in them, each of which is from a half-inch to an inch and a half in diameter, and I have seen such holes through which a man's thumb could be thrust and not bruise the skin.

In some cases women carry these big Burmese cigars in their ears, and I once saw a woman's ears in which there were gold rings which would have made good-sized napkin-rings.

It seems incredible that the flesh can stretch as it does, but some of the poorer women's ears are so enlarged by this process that the string of flesh which hangs down in the place of the lobe is almost as large around as the ear itself.

The high-caste lady has a hole in her ear about as big around as her index finger, and the ear-plugs, which are about half an inch long, are often tipped with clusters of diamonds. They are sometimes of gold, and in the cases of less well-to-do people are plugs of solid amber.

The ceremony of boring the ears of a Burmese girl is quite as important to her as that of the first long dress to the American girl. It takes place when she reaches the age of 12 or 13.

A FUNERAL AT SEA.

It Is Described as a Most Impressive Ceremony by Those Who Have Witnessed One.

A funeral service at sea is a most impressive scene. All hands are dressed in white, called "funeral rig," consisting of blue cloth trousers, a white frock, and cloth tunic over the frock, with a black silk handkerchief bound around the left arm. The officers wear frock-coats and swords, while 12 marines form a firing party.

When everything is ready the ship's engines are stopped, the ensign is hoisted half-mast at the peak or ensign staff, and the ship's bell is tolled.

The hands are mustered on the quarter-deck, and the four bearers, usually the dead man's messmates, bring up the body, which is sewed in a canvas hammock and laid out on a wooden grating.

The chaplain reads the funeral service, and then the bearers, followed by their messmates, walk slowly onto the quarter-deck with the body. On arriving there the grating is rested on the gangway, previously opened.

The body is wrapped in the national colors, and a signal-man attends to holding firmly to this covering, to prevent it going overboard with the body.

The bearers, with the exception of two, let go their hold upon the grating and step back. When the chaplain comes to the words: "And now we commit his body to the deep," the two holding the grating tilt it upward, and the body falls into the waters.

The marines then form upon the gangway, and three volleys are fired into the air, the drummer each time sounds the "salute for the dead," the hands are dismissed, and the awful ceremony is over.—Columbian.

STRANGE PLAYTHINGS.

Camp Children in the Far West Were Delighted When They Found Three Little Mice.

I wonder if the boys and girls who have traveled to the Pacific coast remember the wide, desertlike plain over which the train seems to travel so slowly. Perhaps they remember better the grand old mountains that tower far up into the clouds. One often hears the remark: "A fine piece of engineering!" and people exclaim over the wisdom and ingenuity of the brain that made it possible to cross those terrible mountains by bridges, tunnels and switchbacks. But you don't hear much about the workmen who dug it out, mile after mile, along the weary stretches.

These men are called contractors, subcontractors and men, and they live a life quite different from the rest of the world, particularly the subcontractors and the men. The work takes them from one part of the country to another, wherever there is "railroading" to be done, and many of them take their families with them. They do not sleep in a house year in and year out, but camp near a town between "jobs." When moving camp or going on a new piece of work, the boys and girls mount their ponies and ride along beside the wagons, which carry the scrapers, plows, cooking utensils and bedding. Often the children of the camps do not see a town or other children for months, or sometimes years at a time. They grow up very hardy and strong from the outdoor life, but as wild as deer.

I went into the tent of one of these contractors a few years ago, and in the farther corner I noticed two little girls chuckling over the antics of some pet. I wondered what it was, but was afraid to speak to them for fear they would run, as they had on a previous occasion, so I went on talking with their mother. Presently a piercing scream and a low sob were blended as they came from the corner.

WORKMEN MOVING CAMP.

"What is it?" I cried, running over to them.

"Maggie dropped it, and it is dead," wailed one little girl. There in a nest were three baby mice, while one lay silent in the heartbroken little girl's palm.

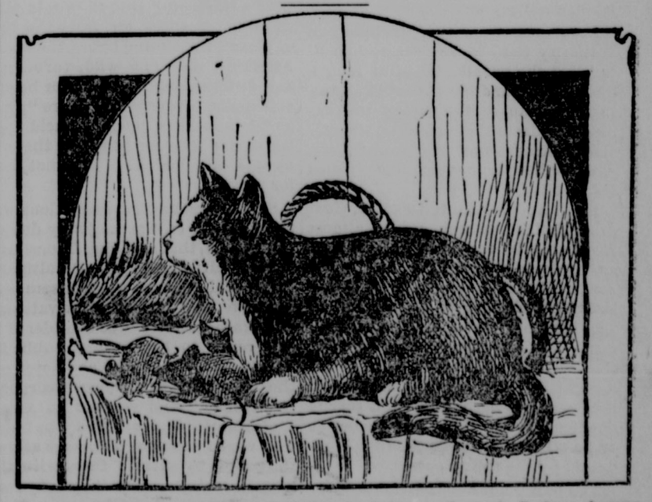
"Maybe it isn't," their mother said, comfortingly. "Drop a little water on its head and see."

The little girl who had dropped it rushed to the pail and got the water; then she dropped it ever so carefully on the tiny head of the mouse. Presently it squirmed, and I jumped back, fearing it might scramble out of Maggie's hand, but the little girls uttered exclamations of delight. That night the mother mouse came and carried her babies away. All next day the children ran from one sage bush to another, hunting their pets, and at last they found them. They only played with them this time, and then went away and left them with their mother, after carefully marking the bush so they could find it again.—Anne Shannon Monroe, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Soup Preserved by Freezing.

Travelers in eastern Siberia carry soups in sacks. They are frozen solid and keep indefinitely. Milk, also, is frozen and sold by the pound.

MICE ADOPTED BY A CAT.



Louisville reports a cat that has adopted a nestful of baby mice. The cat is Kate, a little striped mouser, that has been a pet at the Tenth Street Union station for a year past. Two weeks ago Kate had her first family of kittens. A dog killed them all during her absence, and her mother heart was sad. Just then some of the workmen about the station, tearing up a portion of the floor, uncovered a nest of mice. They killed the mother mouse and called Kate to feast upon the three tiny mice babies in the nest. Perhaps she was thinking of her own recent loss. At any rate she lifted the wee mice one at a time and carried them carefully into the baggage room and placed them in her basket, where they have since remained. Kate is apparently as proud of her adopted children as she could have been of her own, but the railroad men predict that when the foundlings grow large enough to leave they will desert Kate for their own free life.

PAPA'S KISS.

"Why don't you tiss like mamma?"
Asked the little maid of three,
As she ran to greet her papa,
And climbed upon his knee.
"Her tisses taste like candy,
And is dood enough to eat,
But your mouf do taste awful,
And ain't the least bit sweet."

"That is so," replied the father—
Her eyes he dared not meet—
"There's no reason why, my darling,
My kiss should not be sweet."
To him the thought was galling
That each evening, with his kiss,
He had thoughtlessly polluted
Those innocent young lips.

"Come here, dear wife and mother,
And help me take this vow:

Neither liquor nor tobacco
Shall touch my lips from now.
And oh, dear Heavenly Father,
Thou who art good and wise,
I thank Thee for this angel,
Who has opened my blind eyes!"
—Samuel F. Harker, in National Advocate.

INSURANCE FOR TEETOTALERS

One of the Great Companies of Country Puts the Nonuser of Alcoholic Drinks in Privileged Class.

One of the great life insurance companies is about to begin an experiment which is already in operation in England, and will be watched with unusual interest in its results in this country. Hereafter, all applicants for insurance in that company who are "total abstainers" will be placed in a class by themselves. If, as is maintained, the death-rate among teetotalers is less than the death rate among the users of malt and spirituous liquors, the expense of insurance will, of course, be less, and the total abstainers will receive the benefit in lower premiums or larger dividends.

The company has been influenced to this course largely by a petition signed by Senator Frye, of Maine; John Wanamaker, Edward Everett Hale and other men of note in various fields. The usual system, it is asserted, works an injustice. The cost of insurance is very carefully fixed in accordance with the death rate per thousand, as determined by years of experience and systematically kept tables. Anything which prolongs life and lowers the death rate also lowers the cost of insurance. If, then, the teetotaler lives longer than his less careful brother, there is less risk in insuring his life, and he should have the benefit of his good habits.

The results of this interesting experiment must, of course, remain unknown for years. Definite proof can come only from comparison of the actual death rate among total abstainers with the average death-rate of all classes, and this will take time. It is a significant fact, however, that in England, where the separate classification has been in use for some years, the death rate among total abstainers is reported by one company to be only one-half of that among the users of liquors, and by another company as three-fourths. The experience of the first company extends over a period of 16 years, and of the second company over a period of 25 years.—Youth's Companion.

ITEMS.

Since the town of Rockland, Mass., voted license last spring the order on the electric cars to other towns in the evening has been so bad that ladies are urged not to patronize them. —Temperance Cause.

The following custom has sprung up in many of the villages of Austria, where numerous temperance societies have been formed: The peasants bury a small cask of brandy, and raise a mound with a cross on it having this inscription: "To remind us for all time that we have promised to drink no more brandy."

The Christian Builders' union has been organized in Chicago. Applicants for membership are required to be conscientious Christians who are members of some evangelical church. The constitution prohibits saloon work of all kinds; members renting or causing their property to be rented for saloon purposes will be expelled, and if a member shall become drunk he shall be expelled and cannot join again.—National Advocate.

Prize Temperance Orations.

Pomona college, at Claremont, Cal., offered two prizes, this year, of five and ten dollars respectively, for the best temperance orations. Four young men from the freshman class entered into competition for the money and the first prize was awarded to James D. Culbertson, of San Bernardino. His subject was "Neal Dow." Morrill Boynton, of Los Angeles, won the second prize; subject, "Temperance—A Vice or a Disease." Two prizes are offered for next year.

COST OF LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Millions of Money, Political Corruption, Social Evil, Wrecked Homes and Blighted Childhood.

This is a subject of vital importance to society at large, and one which concerns the health, the happiness and the lives of thousands of our people. A learned writer upon this subject crammed the whole argument in favor of governmental prohibition in a nutshell when he said that "the chief interest of the state is in the character of its citizens," and that "it is vitally important that a people should encourage and foster only those trades and habits which tend to promote industry, sobriety and virtue." In other words, it is the duty of the government to make it as hard as possible for a man to go wrong, and as easy as possible for him to go right.

The stolid indifference manifested by so many of our people to this great evil may perhaps be accounted for in part by the fact that it has existed so long. The curse has been so universal, admitted by every one and denied by none, that men have come to look upon it as a part of man's original sentence, for which no remedy has been provided, and from which there is no escape. The fact that this monstrous evil, which far exceeds those of war, pestilence and famine combined, is allowed to exist and increase in our country, not only without legal restraint by the federal government, but under the sanction and protection of federal law, can only be accounted for by the fact that our familiarity with crime sometimes so blunts our sensibilities and deadens our feelings that we fail to realize its extent, or to get a full and correct idea of its hideous form and gigantic proportions. We have been accustomed to look upon its ravages from our infancy. Rum selling and rum drinking have always been familiar to us. We have seen men of all ages, and in all positions in society, fall a prey to the tempter and disappear forever. The great curse has been constantly before our eyes, until we have become hardened and have ceased to heed it or fear it, while its continued presence has softened its deformity and led us to regard it with indifference.

Every day's experience tends more and more to prove that the temperance cause lies at the foundation of all social and political reform. This fearful evil is growing and spreading throughout the land, and making havoc among our workingmen. Unless we make distinct and positive efforts against it, and that, too, promptly, we shall be guilty of willfully neglecting an evil which is eating out the very heart of society, destroying domestic life, and doing greater injury in a thousand forms than any other cause that could be named in this age. Surely this is a subject which challenges the attention of every citizen who loves his country, and one, as well, that appeals to the heart of every Christian.—William G. Haeselbarth, in Christian Work.

AFTER THE BOYS.

Methods That Are Employed by Wicked Men to Recruit Army of Drunkards.

During Maj. Hilton's meetings in Cincinnati he related a story of a boy in Chicago, nine years of age, who came to school drunk, and being taken in the arms of an officer, his head pillowed on his breast, he coaxed the little one to tell him where he got the vile stuff. After thinking a moment he got up and felt in his pocket, which was filled with old nails, bits of string, a top, etc., but he could not see the thing he wanted; he looked on the floor, and there he saw he had dropped a bright picture card, on the edge of which were small squares and some of these were punched. "What is this?" the officer asked. "My beer card; each boy gets a card and each hole is a drink, and the boy that gets the most holes in a month gets a prize." There are three prizes, a pistol, a story of three devils and a whisky cocktail.

One of the Cincinnati teachers felt impressed to relate the story to a class of 55 boys. The eager eyes, the distressed looks will not be forgotten. Then they opened their hearts to her how men in Cincinnati "play pool," and the winner receives brass checks for drinks, and gives them to the boys at the baseball ground on Sunday. "Can I get some of them?" said she. "Yes'm." "Well, bring me some." During the rest of the week in the press of school duties the matter was forgotten by the busy teacher, but not by the boys.

When school was called on Monday morning, the first question was: "Will you take the checks now, Miss R?" and immediately four brass checks were handed to her, each bearing the name of the saloonkeeper and five cents.

This is the way the men push the saloon business. A man who is mean enough to sell rum is, as a rule, mean enough to do almost anything.—W. L. Hastings, in National Advocate.

A Timely Work.

A reformatory for women will be opened in New York city this fall by the St. Vincent de Paul society. The work will begin in the police courts, where a record will be obtained of all women, not habitual offenders, who are sentenced to short terms of imprisonment. In order to prevent their repeating what is in many instances only a first offense, agents of the reformatory will call at the jail on the day of their release and take charge of them until places for work are assured them.—Union Signal.

The recent christening of a Maine schooner by strewing pinks and roses on the deck was a pleasant departure from the usual practice of breaking a bottle of champagne over the bow, and especially fitting in a prohibition state.

EMPEROR AND MONKS.

Beginning of the Friendship of Kaiser Wilhelm for the Order of Benedictines.

The friendship of the German emperor for the Benedictine order dates from the year 1893, when his majesty was present at the wedding of his cousin, Princess Marie of Edinburgh, to the crown prince of Roumania, at Sigmaringen. The archabbot of the German Benedictines preached the nuptial sermon, which so pleased the emperor that he invited the abbot to sit next him at the subsequent banquet, and took him at once into the high favor in which he and his order have basked ever since, says a London paper.

Not only have the Benedictine monks been allowed to return to their Rhineland abbey at Marialaach, whence they were driven many years ago, but the splendid Romanesque church (one of the finest in Germany) which, during a temporary occupation of the monastery by the Jesuits, had been kept jealously shut up by the government, has been restored to its former owners. The kaiser has erected in this church, at his own expense, a new and magnificent high altar of marble, and he crowned his favors by offering to ennoble the abbot by giving him the prefix of "von." This was declined with thanks, whereupon the abbot received from his majesty the present of a costly ring.

GETTING BIOGRAPH SCENES.

Speedy Manner in Which a Big Fire Is Photographed for Moving Pictures.

"Br-r-r-ring! Br-r-r-r-ing!" a quick connection with the desk phone of the city manager, and in another moment it is known at biograph headquarters that a fierce fire and a series of explosions have devastated a down-town business block and that the loss of life is estimated at 300.

The camera operator and his assistants receive word; there is a scamper for fire badges, and two minutes later the biograph outfit, which takes 2,000 pictures a minute, is handed into the emergency wagon, which has been waiting all day for just such a call.

The city manager arrives on the scene to arrange with fire chiefs and police sergeants for a favorable position for the picture-taking apparatus. The camera is set up on its tripod, the film boxes attached, the lens focused and the operator begins to turn the crank. Three minutes, five minutes—the shutter snaps and every movement of the exciting scene is faithfully recorded. The film, which may be from 160 to 300 feet in length, is then carried to the biograph factory, where it is developed in its entirety on reels that carry it through developing solutions, dried by power fans and a "positive" is printed from it by electric light. The process takes from two to four hours.

That night the catastrophe of the afternoon, says a writer in Everybody's Magazine, projected on a screen, seems almost as real to the theater-goer as the actual occurrence was to those who witnessed it.

THE COUNT VON SECKENDORF.

It is reported on good authority that the late Empress Frederick of Germany has bequeathed the magnificent sum of $750,000 to this well-known courtier. Count Seckendorf was a trusted friend and companion of the empress, and it was currently believed that the two had been married morganatically for a number of years. Emperor William always denied the report, but the fact that he has conferred the order of the royal house of Hohenzollern on the count lends weight to the statement, in spite of the denial. The count was the empress' court marshal and is a general in the Prussian army.

GRAIN MOVED IN STREAMS.

Thrilling Night Scene at the Big Lake Elevator When Ships Are Unloading.

Nowhere in North America will you come on a more thrilling night scene than the freshwater cargo tank unloading at Buffalo, says Rollin Lynde Hartt, in Atlantic. Here she lies, beneath the towering grain elevator, which thrusts a long pumping pipe (called the "leg") down through her hatchway. Mount the gangplank, dodging the spinning ropes that make your head reel; stumble about on the dark deck; look down, down, down, through the open hatch, and—zounds, what a sight! The hold glows with electricity. It is misty with blown dust. It roars with mechanical activity.

An enormous steel "shovel," big as the inside of a house, and manipulated by countless flying ropes, charges back and forth through the whole length of the ship, pitching the yellow grain before it, and heaping it up where the leg can get hold of it to whisk it into the bin that is somewhere up in the sky! Beneath, in the hold, an army of blue-clad men, with wooden "scoops," barely dodge the deadly shovel as they swing the grain into its path.

The Drinking of Birds.

There is no anatomical reason why all birds should not drink by prolonged immersion of the bill, supposing sufficient water to be present. A great many birds, however, depend for their liquid nutriment upon the drops of rain or dew which cling to herbage or foliage, and in this case it is obvious that alternate sipping and raising of the head is the only mode of drinking available.

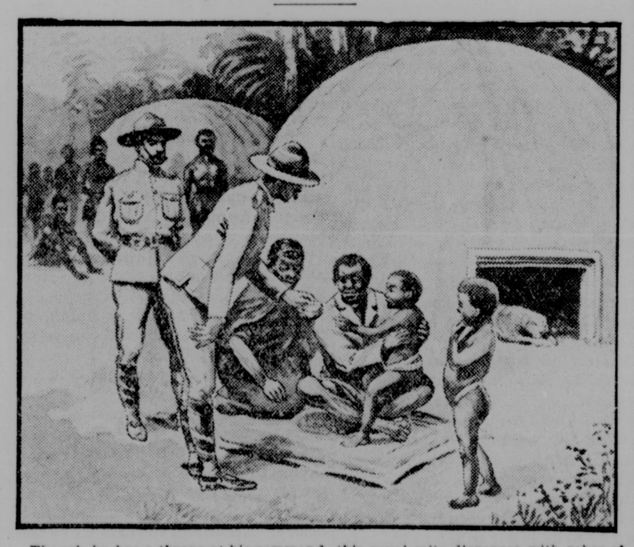
Newspapers in Iowa.

There are more newspapers published in Iowa, in proportion to the population, than in any other state of the union. Massachusetts, so long at the head of the list, will have to give the first place to the Hawkeye state, for, in proportion to its population, Iowa has more than twice as many newspaper publications as Massachusetts, and many more than a large number of other states.

Wild Goose and Weather Man.

The wild goose flyeth where it listeth, says the Chicago Tribune, and it knoweth no more when the winter will come than the weather man knoweth.

THE BABY KING OF SWAZILAND.



Though he has a throne at his command, this royal mite dispenses with robes of state and his subjects do not seem to be burdened with unnecessary garments. The picture shows the queen regent, squatting on the ground, the prime minister, holding the child, the little baby king of Swaziland, and his sister. When the picture was taken the dusky little sovereign was crying for a cup of water, which is being supplied to him by a British soldier. Swaziland was conquered for Great Britain by Capt. Methuen and ten men of the Fourth mounted infantry.

A FORTUNE IN GEMS.

Stolen in London from the Head of the Paget Family.

Marquis of Anglesey, England's Most Eccentric Nobleman, Robbed at a Hotel—His Wedding and Divorce.

The marquis of Anglesey (Henry Cyril Paget), who is stopping at the Walsingham hotel, at London, was robbed the other night of jewels of the value of $200,000. The marquis was at the theater when his room was robbed.

The marquis of Anglesey, the head of the famous Paget family of England, is one of the wealthiest and admittedly the most eccentric member of the British aristocracy. He has an income of $1,000,000 a year, likes to dress as a woman, carries pug dogs in his promenades on the Paris boulevards, wears rings on every finger and delights to appear as a skirt dancer and lightning change artist on its music hall stage in European capitals.

Two years ago, says the Chicago Tribune, the marquis of Anglesey, then earl of Uxbridge, married the beautiful Miss Chetwynd, daughter of Sir George Chetwynd and the marchioness of Hastings. She was only 17 years old, of beautiful and refined features, with violet eyes and masses of Venetian red hair. They were cousins, and it was declared at the time that the marriage was arranged in order that they might jointly inherit property which both would have lost if they did not marry each other.

Eighteen months after their wedding the marchioness applied to the English courts for a divorce. The terms of separation prove the marquis' eccentricity. For the first year he allowed her $15,000 and $4,500 to pay debts contracted while they were living together. The second year he was to pay her $20,000, the next, if they were still separated, $25,000, and so on, the allowance increasing $5,000 each year until it reached $50,000.

The young marchioness was friendly with Princess Frederick Hohenlohe, daughter of Count Hatzfeldt, the German ambassador.

MARQUIS OF ANGLESEY.
(The Erratic Head of the Ancient House of Paget.)

The princess was credited with suggesting the annulment of the marriage, for she wished to bring about a match between her brother, Count Herman Hatzfeldt, and the young Englishwoman.

Afterwards Lady Anglesey and Princess Hohenlohe quarreled. The marchioness and her former husband met at Paris, became reconciled, were seen everywhere together, and even traveled together. So society was not surprised last May when she appealed to the English courts to have her decree of divorce annulled. Her request was granted.

The marquis of Anglesey last year created a sensation by accepting an engagement on a music hall stage at Munich, where he appeared in impersonations, making lightning changes in costumes characteristic of different nations His talent in this line is said to be remarkable.

The Anglesey title was won by Lord Uxbridge on the field of Waterloo.

The British nation has been heavily taxed to support the Paget family. Thirty-four Pagets have been carried on the national pay-roll during the last 33 years. The titled members of the family have borne reputations more or less savory. One of the first holders of the marquisate was twice directly concerned in divorce proceedings before the house of lords.

The father of the present marquis was a gay man. When he married and settled down his past sins rose before him. One day there was a slight fire in the Anglesey castle, Plas Newydd, and a lot of hand grenades were ordered to guard against future emergencies.

The butler hung up the grenades in every place he could think of, and, having a dozen left, approached the marquis, saying:

"What shall we do with these?"

The marquis thought a moment and then said, sadly:

"You may put them in my coffin."

Front Seats Preferred.

A small hint to the traveler is that, other things being equal, the forward seats in a street or railway car are the most healthful. This is explained by the fact that the forward motion of the car carries a current of air backward, carrying with it the exhalations from the lungs of those in front.

The Woman's Relief Corps.

In the 18 years of its existence the Woman's Relief corps, auxiliary to the grand army, has grown from 50 to 143,000 members, and disbursed $2,500,000 in aid to veterans and their families.

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

First Business Man—"What did you do while you were up in the country with your wife?" Second Business Man (gloomily)—"Penance." —Sommerville Journal.

Miss Gotawad—"Charley, how do you know you love me more than anybody else in the world?" Mr. Saphedde—"I know it because you have money."—Ohio State Journal.

"There is a man out in the waiting room," said the great man's secretary. "I think he's a bum actor." "Why do you think so?" "He says he's anxious to get an audience."—Philadelphia Press.

Boynton—"Harding tells me he is suffering from an operation." Sawyer—"I hadn't heard of it. Surgical, of course?" Boynton—"No, this was a financial operation. Gibbons borrowed ten dollars of him yesterday." —Boston Times.

Mrs. Mann—"What a man you are, Joseph. You always take the girl's side every time I have any trouble with her." Mr. Grueby—"Well, why shouldn't I? Doesn't she sympathize with me when you and I have words?"—Boston Transcript.

Sue—"Pauline's father is quite a genius." Belle—"In what way?" Sue —"Why, he had a pair of recording scales attached to her hammock. If they registered over 130 he knew Jack had been sharing her seat."—Philadelphia Record.

"Woman," said the Sentimenal Person, "is the holiday in the life of man." "Yes," remarked the Coarsely Sarcastic Individual, "and I have noticed that after a man takes that kind of a holiday he has a hustle all the rest of his life."—Baltimore American.

"I wish you and May would become friends again," said the would-be peacemaker. "Well," said Fay, "if she'll make up, I will." "I told her you had said that, and she said: 'The idea! It's easy for her. I never saw her when she wasn't made up.'"—Philadelphia Press.

CLAIMS SHE IS 120.

Interesting Old Squaw of the Turtle Clan at the Pan-American Exposition.

Nancy Johnson, a member of the Turtle clan, Seneca nation of Indians, has lived in three centuries, and daily at the Pan-American exposition her blood relatives and fellow pagan worshipers beseech the Great Spirit by dances that her life may be prolonged for many moons to come. It is claimed that she is now 120 years old, and the fact that in spite of her age she is able to be at the exposition is a source of great joy to the many Indians who are with the Six Nations' exhibit at the fair, says a recent report.

It was only after months of negotiation that Capt. Lawton, who has charge of this exhibit, was able to induce Mrs. Johnson to go to the fair.

She insisted that her original cabin should be brought to the exposition, and this was done. None but her blood relatives were permitted to take it apart, and they marked every log and strip of wood and put it up again so it stands just as it was built about 100 years ago.

Mrs. Johnson's home is on the Tonawanda reservation, near Akron, about 32 miles from Buffalo. There she lives in a little hut by herself and attends to all her wants, or did until last spring. Up to that time she had enjoyed the best of health and a wonderfully clear memory, considering her years. But as soon as the snow left the ground she began to decline, and now she is feeble and somewhat childish, but still is able to recall incidents that are brought to her attention.

When Capt. Lawton began his negotiations with her last fall he went to her house one cold day late in October and found her coming down the road with a half bushel of potatoes on her back. She had carried them from the field a half mile away, but did not seem weary. While the visitor talked to her she prepared her evening meal in the open as she had done all her life.

In recent years it has been almost impossible to get any information from the old woman, because she is exceedingly reticent in conversation about herself. Capt. Lawton, however, has been able to get statements from her regarding the sacking of Buffalo in the war of 1812-13, when Riall's regulars and savages laid Buffalo and Black Rock in ashes and put to death most of the inhabitants who had not fled.

She has outlived six husbands, and her descendants are so numerous that it is difficult to learn the exact number.

Deaths of Royalty.

The lingering death of the late dowager empress of Germany has had few counterparts in English royal history. Twenty-five per cent. of the number that has reigned there since the Conquest met violent deaths. Two, Henry VII. and Edward VI., died of consumption. Old age, with its complication of physical troubles, helped to carry off Victoria, George III., Elizabeth, Henry VI., William VI., Edward III. and Henry III. Three died young, Edward V., at 14; Edward VI., at 16, and Henry VI., at 33. Queen Anne died comparatively young of apoplexy. Mary's death is said to have been due to sorrow over the loss of English territory in France. Henry VI.'s and George III.'s last days were clouded with dementia, and George II.'s demise was occasioned by the bursting of a blood vessel.—Philadelphia Times.

PAPA'S KISS.

"Why don't you tiss like mamma?"
Asked the little maid of three,
As she ran to greet her papa,
And climbed upon his knee.
"Her tisses taste like candy,
And is dood enough to eat,
But your mouf do taste awful,
And ain't the least bit sweet."

"That is so," replied the father—
Her eyes he dared not meet—
"There's no reason why, my darling,
My kiss should not be sweet."
To him the thought was galling
That each evening, with his kiss,
He had thoughtlessly polluted
Those innocent young lips.

"Come here, dear wife and mother,
And help me take this vow:

Neither liquor nor tobacco
Shall touch my lips from now,
And oh, dear Heavenly Father,
Thou who art good and wise,
I thank Thee for this angel,
Who has opened my blind eyes!"
—Samuel F. Harker, in National Advocate.

INSURANCE FOR TEETOTALERS

One of the Great Companies of Country Puts the Nonuser of Alcoholic Drinks in Privileged Class.

One of the great life insurance companies is about to begin an experiment which is already in operation in England, and will be watched with unusual interest in its results in this country. Hereafter, all applicants for insurance in that company who are "total abstainers" will be placed in a class by themselves. If, as is maintained, the death-rate among teetotalers is less than the death rate among the users of malt and spirituous liquors, the expense of insurance will, of course, be less, and the total abstainers will receive the benefit in lower premiums or larger dividends.

The company has been influenced to this course largely by a petition signed by Senator Frye, of Maine; John Wanamaker, Edward Everett Hale and other men of note in various fields. The usual system, it is asserted, works an injustice. The cost of insurance is very carefully fixed in accordance with the death rate per thousand, as determined by years of experience and systematically kept tables. Anything which prolongs life and lowers the death rate also lowers the cost of insurance. If, then, the teetotaler lives longer than his less careful brother, there is less risk in insuring his life, and he should have the benefit of his good habits.

The results of this interesting experiment must, of course, remain unknown for years. Definite proof can come only from comparison of the actual death rate among total abstainers with the average death-rate of all classes, and this will take time. It is a significant fact, however, that in England, where the separate classification has been in use for some years, the death rate among total abstainers is reported by one company to be only one-half of that among the users of liquors, and by another company as three-fourths. The experience of the first company extends over a period of 16 years, and of the second company over a period of 25 years.—Youth's Companion.

ITEMS.

Since the town of Rockland, Mass., voted license last spring the order on the electric cars to other towns in the evening has been so bad that ladies are urged not to patronize them. —Temperance Cause.

The following custom has sprung up in many of the villages of Austria, where numerous temperance societies have been formed: The peasants bury a small cask of brandy, and raise a mound with a cross on it having this inscription: "To remind us for all time that we have promised to drink no more brandy."

The Christian Builders' union has been organized in Chicago. Applicants for membership are required to be conscientious Christians who are members of some evangelical church. The constitution prohibits saloon work of all kinds; members renting or causing their property to be rented for saloon purposes will be expelled, and if a member shall become drunk he shall be expelled and cannot join again.—National Advocate.

Prize Temperance Orations.

Pomona college, at Claremont, Cal., offered two prizes, this year, of five and ten dollars respectively, for the best temperance orations. Four young men from the freshman class entered into competition for the money and the first prize was awarded to James D. Culbertson, of San Bernardino. His subject was "Neal Dow." Morrill Boynton, of Los Angeles, won the second prize; subject, "Temperance—A Vice or a Disease." Two prizes are offered for next year.

COST OF LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Millions of Money, Political Corruption, Social Evil, Wrecked Homes and Blighted Childhood.

This is a subject of vital importance to society at large, and one which concerns the health, the happiness and the lives of thousands of our people. A learned writer upon this subject crammed the whole argument in favor of governmental prohibition in a nutshell when he said that "the chief interest of the state is in the character of its citizens," and that "it is vitally important that a people should encourage and foster only those trades and habits which tend to promote industry, sobriety and virtue." In other words, it is the duty of the government to make it as hard as possible for a man to go wrong, and as easy as possible for him to go right.

The stolid indifference manifested by so many of our people to this great evil may perhaps be accounted for in part by the fact that it has existed so long. The curse has been so universal, admitted by every one and denied by none, that men have come to look upon it as a part of man's original sentence, for which no remedy has been provided, and from which there is no escape. The fact that this monstrous evil, which far exceeds those of war, pestilence and famine combined, is allowed to exist and increase in our country, not only without legal restraint by the federal government, but under the sanction and protection of federal law, can only be accounted for by the fact that our familiarity with crime sometimes so blunts our sensibilities and deadens our feelings that we fail to realize its extent, or to get a full and correct idea of its hideous form and gigantic proportions. We have been accustomed to look upon its ravages from our infancy. Rum selling and rum drinking have always been familiar to us. We have seen men of all ages, and in all positions in society, fall a prey to the tempter and disappear forever. The great curse has been constantly before our eyes, until we have become hardened and have ceased to heed it or fear it, while its continued presence has softened its deformity and led us to regard it with indifference.

Every day's experience tends more and more to prove that the temperance cause lies at the foundation of all social and political reform. This fearful evil is growing and spreading throughout the land, and making havoc among our workingmen. Unless we make distinct and positive efforts against it, and that, too, promptly, we shall be guilty of willfully neglecting an evil which is eating out the very heart of society, destroying domestic life, and doing greater injury in a thousand forms than any other cause that could be named in this age. Surely this is a subject which challenges the attention of every citizen who loves his country, and one, as well, that appeals to the heart of every Christian.—William G. Haeselbarth, in Christian Work.

AFTER THE BOYS.

Methods That Are Employed by Wicked Men to Recruit Army of Drunkards.

During Maj. Hilton's meetings in Cincinnati he related a story of a boy in Chicago, nine years of age, who came to school drunk, and being taken in the arms of an officer, his head pillowed on his breast, he coaxed the little one to tell him where he got the vile stuff. After thinking a moment he got up and felt in his pocket, which was filled with old nails, bits of string, a top, etc., but he could not see the thing he wanted; he looked on the floor, and there he saw he had dropped a bright picture card, on the edge of which were small squares and some of these were punched. "What is this?" the officer asked. "My beer card; each boy gets a card and each hole is a drink, and the boy that gets the most holes in a month gets a prize." There are three prizes, a pistol, a story of three devils and a whisky cocktail.

One of the Cincinnati teachers felt impressed to relate the story to a class of 55 boys. The eager eyes, the distressed looks will not be forgotten. Then they opened their hearts to her how men in Cincinnati "play pool," and the winner receives brass checks for drinks, and gives them to the boys at the baseball ground on Sunday. "Can I get some of them?" said she. "Yes'm." "Well, bring me some." During the rest of the week in the press of school duties the matter was forgotten by the busy teacher, but not by the boys.

When school was called on Monday morning, the first question was: "Will you take the checks now, Miss R?" and immediately four brass checks were handed to her, each bearing the name of the saloonkeeper and five cents.

This is the way the men push the saloon business. A man who is mean enough to sell rum is, as a rule, mean enough to do almost anything.—W. L. Hastings, in National Advocate.

A Timely Work.

A reformatory for women will be opened in New York city this fall by the St. Vincent de Paul society. The work will begin in the police courts, where a record will be obtained of all women, not habitual offenders, who are sentenced to short terms of imprisonment. In order to prevent their repeating what is in many instances only a first offense, agents of the reformatory will call at the jail on the day of their release and take charge of them until places for work are assured them.—Union Signal.

The recent christening of a Maine schooner by strewing pinks and roses on the deck was a pleasant departure from the usual practice of breaking a bottle of champagne over the bow, and especially fitting in a prohibition state.

EMPEROR AND MONKS.

Beginning of the Friendship of Kaiser Wilhelm for the Order of Benedictines.

The friendship of the German emperor for the Benedictine order dates from the year 1893, when his majesty was present at the wedding of his cousin, Princess Marie of Edinburgh, to the crown prince of Roumania, at Sigmaringen. The archabbot of the German Benedictines preached the nuptial sermon, which so pleased the emperor that he invited the abbot to sit next him at the subsequent banquet, and took him at once into the high favor in which he and his order have basked ever since, says a London paper.

Not only have the Benedictine monks been allowed to return to their Rhineland abbey at Marialaach, whence they were driven many years ago, but the splendid Romanesque church (one of the finest in Germany) which, during a temporary occupation of the monastery by the Jesuits, had been kept jealously shut up by the government, has been restored to its former owners. The kaiser has erected in this church, at his own expense, a new and magnificent high altar of marble, and he crowned his favors by offering to ennoble the abbot by giving him the prefix of "von." This was declined with thanks, whereupon the abbot received from his majesty the present of a costly ring.

GRAIN MOVED IN STREAMS.

Thrilling Night Scene at the Big Lake Elevator When Ships Are Unloading.

Nowhere in North America will you come on a more thrilling night scene than the freshwater cargo tank unloading at Buffalo, says Rollin Lynde Hartt, in Atlantic. Here she lies, beneath the towering grain elevator, which thrusts a long pumping pipe (called the "leg") down through her hatchway. Mount the gangplank, dodging the spinning ropes that make your head reel; stumble about on the dark deck; look down, down, down, through the open hatch, and—zounds, what a sight! The hold glows with electricity. It is misty with blown dust. It roars with mechanical activity.

An enormous steel "shovel," big as the inside of a house, and manipulated by countless flying ropes, charges back and forth through the whole length of the ship, pitching the yellow grain before it, and heaping it up where the leg can get hold of it to whisk it into the bin that is somewhere up in the sky! Beneath, in the hold, an army of blue-clad men, with wooden "scoops," barely dodge the deadly shovel as they swing the grain into its path.

The camera is set up on its tripod, the film boxes attached, the lens focused and the operator begins to turn the crank. Three minutes, five minutes—the shutter snaps and every movement of the exciting scene is faithfully recorded. The film, which may be from 160 to 300 feet in length, is then carried to the biograph factory, where it is developed in its entirety on reels that carry it through developing solutions, dried by power fans and a "positive" is printed from it by electric light. The process takes from two to four hours.

That night the catastrophe of the afternoon, says a writer in Everybody's Magazine, projected on a screen, seems almost as real to the theater-goer as the actual occurrence was to those who witnessed it.

The Drinking of Birds.

There is no anatomical reason why all birds should not drink by prolonged immersion of the bill, supposing sufficient water to be present. A great many birds, however, depend for their liquid nutriment upon the drops of rain or dew which cling to herbage or foliage, and in this case it is obvious that alternate sipping and raising of the head is the only mode of drinking available.

Newspapers in Iowa.

There are more newspapers published in Iowa, in proportion to the population, than in any other state of the union. Massachusetts, so long at the head of the list, will have to give the first place to the Hawkeye state, for, in proportion to its population, Iowa has more than twice as many newspaper publications as Massachusetts, and many more than a large number of other states.

Wild Goose and Weather Man.

The wild goose flyeth where it listeth, says the Chicago Tribune, and it knoweth no more when the winter will come than the weather man knoweth.

GETTING BIOGRAPH SCENES.

Speedy Manner in Which a Big Fire Is Photographed for Moving Pictures.

"Br-r-r-ring! Br-r-r-r-ing!" a quick connection with the desk phone of the city manager, and in another moment it is known at biograph headquarters that a fierce fire and a series of explosions have devastated a down-town business block and that the loss of life is estimated at 300.

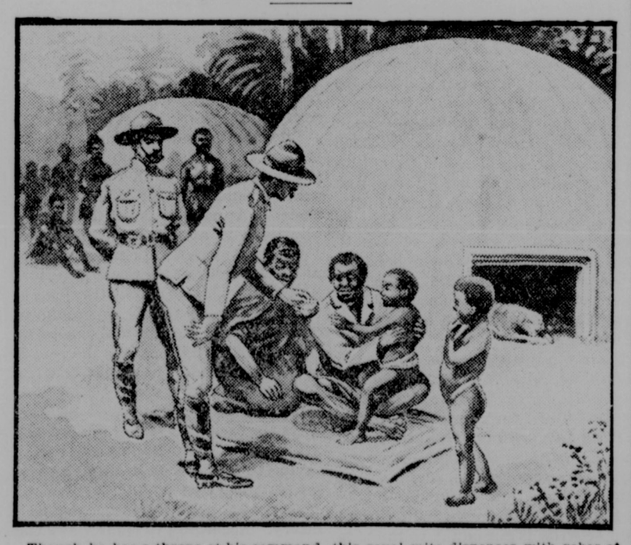
The camera operator and his assistants receive word; there is a scamper for fire badges, and two minutes later the biograph outfit, which takes 2,000 pictures a minute, is handed into the emergency wagon, which has been waiting all day for just such a call.

The city manager arrives on the scene to arrange with fire chiefs and police sergeants for a favorable position for the picture-taking apparatus.

THE COUNT VON SECKENDORF.

It is reported on good authority that the late Empress Frederick of Germany has bequeathed the magnificent sum of $750,000 to this well-known courtier. Count Seckendorf was a trusted friend and companion of the empress, and it was currently believed that the two had been married morganatically for a number of years. Emperor William always denied the report, but the fact that he has conferred the order of the royal house of Hohenzollern on the count lends weight to the statement, in spite of the denial. The count was the empress' court marshal and is a general in the Prussian army.

THE BABY KING OF SWAZILAND.



Though he has a throne at his command, this royal mite dispenses with robes of state and his subjects do not seem to be burdened with unnecessary garments. The picture shows the queen regent, squatting on the ground, the prime minister, holding the child, the little baby king of Swaziland, and his sister. When the picture was taken the dusky little sovereign was crying for a cup of water, which is being supplied to him by a British soldier. Swaziland was conquered for Great Britain by Capt. Methuen and ten men of the Fourth mounted infantry.

A FORTUNE IN GEMS.

Stolen in London from the Head of the Paget Family.

Marquis of Anglesey, England's Most Eccentric Nobleman, Robbed at a Hotel—His Wedding and Divorce.

The marquis of Anglesey (Henry Cyril Paget), who is stopping at the Walsingham hotel, at London, was robbed the other night of jewels of the value of $200,000. The marquis was at the theater when his room was robbed.

The marquis of Anglesey, the head of the famous Paget family of England, is one of the wealthiest and admittedly the most eccentric member of the British aristocracy. He has an income of $1,000,000 a year, likes to dress as a woman, carries pug dogs in his promenades on the Paris boulevards, wears rings on every finger and delights to appear as a skirt dancer and lightning change artist on its music hall stage in European capitals.

Two years ago, says the Chicago Tribune, the marquis of Anglesey, then earl of Uxbridge, married the beautiful Miss Chetwynd, daughter of Sir George Chetwynd and the marchioness of Hastings. She was only 17 years old, of beautiful and refined features, with violet eyes and masses of Venetian red hair. They were cousins, and it was declared at the time that the marriage was arranged in order that they might jointly inherit property which both would have lost if they did not marry each other.

Eighteen months after their wedding the marchioness applied to the English courts for a divorce. The terms of separation prove the marquis' eccentricity. For the first year he allowed her $15,000 and $4,500 to pay debts contracted while they were living together. The second year he was to pay her $20,000, the next, if they were still separated, $25,000, and so on, the allowance increasing $5,000 each year until it reached $50,000.

The young marchioness was friendly with Princess Frederick Hohenlohe, daughter of Count Hatzfeldt, the German ambassador.

MARQUIS OF ANGLESEY.
(The Erratic Head of the Ancient House of Paget.)

The princess was credited with suggesting the annulment of the marriage, for she wished to bring about a match between her brother, Count Herman Hatzfeldt, and the young Englishwoman.

Afterwards Lady Anglesey and Princess Hohenlohe quarreled. The marchioness and her former husband met at Paris, became reconciled, were seen everywhere together, and even traveled together. So society was not surprised last May when she appealed to the English courts to have her decree of divorce annulled. Her request was granted.

The marquis of Anglesey last year created a sensation by accepting an engagement on a music hall stage at Munich, where he appeared in impersonations, making lightning changes in costumes characteristic of different nations His talent in this line is said to be remarkable.

The Anglesey title was won by Lord Uxbridge on the field of Waterloo.

The British nation has been heavily taxed to support the Paget family. Thirty-four Pagets have been carried on the national pay-roll during the last 33 years. The titled members of the family have borne reputations more or less savory. One of the first holders of the marquisate was twice directly concerned in divorce proceedings before the house of lords.

The father of the present marquis was a gay man. When he married and settled down his past sins rose before him. One day there was a slight fire in the Anglesey castle, Plas Newydd, and a lot of hand grenades were ordered to guard against future emergencies.

The butler hung up the grenades in every place he could think of, and, having a dozen left, approached the marquis, saying:

"What shall we do with these?"

The marquis thought a moment and then said, sadly:

"You may put them in my coffin."

Front Seats Preferred.

A small hint to the traveler is that, other things being equal, the forward seats in a street or railway car are the most healthful. This is explained by the fact that the forward motion of the car carries a current of air backward, carrying with it the exhalations from the lungs of those in front.

The Woman's Relief Corps.

In the 18 years of its existence the Woman's Relief corps, auxiliary to the grand army, has grown from 50 to 143,000 members, and disbursed $2,500,000 in aid to veterans and their families.

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

First Business Man—"What did you do while you were up in the country with your wife?" Second Business Man (gloomily)—"Penance." —Sommerville Journal.

Miss Gotawad—"Charley, how do you know you love me more than anybody else in the world?" Mr. Saphedde—"I know it because you have money."—Ohio State Journal.

"There is a man out in the waiting room," said the great man's secretary. "I think he's a bum actor." "Why do you think so?" "He says he's anxious to get an audience."—Philadelphia Press.

Boynton—"Harding tells me he is suffering from an operation." Sawyer—"I hadn't heard of it. Surgical, of course?" Boynton—"No, this was a financial operation. Gibbons borrowed ten dollars of him yesterday." —Boston Times.

Mrs. Mann—"What a man you are, Joseph. You always take the girl's side every time I have any trouble with her." Mr. Grueby—"Well, why shouldn't I? Doesn't she sympathize with me when you and I have words?"—Boston Transcript.

Sue—"Pauline's father is quite a genius." Belle—"In what way?" Sue —"Why, he had a pair of recording scales attached to her hammock. If they registered over 130 he knew Jack had been sharing her seat."—Philadelphia Record.

"Woman," said the Sentimenal Person, "is the holiday in the life of man." "Yes," remarked the Coarsely Sarcastic Individual, "and I have noticed that after a man takes that kind of a holiday he has a hustle all the rest of his life."—Baltimore American.

"I wish you and May would become friends again," said the would-be peacemaker. "Well," said Fay, "if she'll make up, I will." "I told her you had said that, and she said: 'The idea! It's easy for her. I never saw her when she wasn't made up.'"—Philadelphia Press.

CLAIMS SHE IS 120.

Interesting Old Squaw of the Turtle Clan at the Pan-American Exposition.

Nancy Johnson, a member of the Turtle clan, Seneca nation of Indians, has lived in three centuries, and daily at the Pan-American exposition her blood relatives and fellow pagan worshipers beseech the Great Spirit by dances that her life may be prolonged for many moons to come. It is claimed that she is now 120 years old, and the fact that in spite of her age she is able to be at the exposition is a source of great joy to the many Indians who are with the Six Nations' exhibit at the fair, says a recent report.

It was only after months of negotiation that Capt. Lawton, who has charge of this exhibit, was able to induce Mrs. Johnson to go to the fair.

She insisted that her original cabin should be brought to the exposition, and this was done. None but her blood relatives were permitted to take it apart, and they marked every log and strip of wood and put it up again so it stands just as it was built about 100 years ago.

Mrs. Johnson's home is on the Tonawanda reservation, near Akron, about 32 miles from Buffalo. There she lives in a little hut by herself and attends to all her wants, or did until last spring. Up to that time she had enjoyed the best of health and a wonderfully clear memory, considering her years. But as soon as the snow left the ground she began to decline, and now she is feeble and somewhat childish, but still is able to recall incidents that are brought to her attention.

When Capt. Lawton began his negotiations with her last fall he went to her house one cold day late in October and found her coming down the road with a half bushel of potatoes on her back. She had carried them from the field a half mile away, but did not seem weary. While the visitor talked to her she prepared her evening meal in the open as she had done all her life.

In recent years it has been almost impossible to get any information from the old woman, because she is exceedingly reticent in conversation about herself. Capt. Lawton, however, has been able to get statements from her regarding the sacking of Buffalo in the war of 1812-13, when Riall's regulars and savages laid Buffalo and Black Rock in ashes and put to death most of the inhabitants who had not fled.

She has outlived six husbands, and her descendants are so numerous that it is difficult to learn the exact number.

Deaths of Royalty.

The lingering death of the late dowager empress of Germany has had few counterparts in English royal history. Twenty-five per cent. of the number that has reigned there since the Conquest met violent deaths. Two, Henry VII. and Edward VI., died of consumption. Old age, with its complication of physical troubles, helped to carry off Victoria, George III., Elizabeth, Henry VI., William VI., Edward III. and Henry III. Three died young, Edward V., at 14; Edward VI., at 16, and Henry VI., at 33. Queen Anne died comparatively young of apoplexy. Mary's death is said to have been due to sorrow over the loss of English territory in France. Henry VI.'s and George III.'s last days were clouded with dementia, and George II.'s demise was occasioned by the bursting of a blood vessel.—Philadelphia Times.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1901.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET

For Comptroller of the Treasury:
HERMAN S. PLATT,
Of Baltimore City.

For Clerk of the Court of Appeals:
THOMAS PARRAN,
Of Calvert County.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY TICKET.

For State Senator:
ROBERT A. RAVENSCROFT,
Of District No. 5.

For House of Delegates:
PATRICK E. FINZEL,
Of District No. 9.
CHARLES A. ASHBY,
Of District No. 14.

For Sheriff:
WILLIAM A. MAFFETT,
Of District No. 6.

For Treasurer:
JAMES W. WHITE,
Of District No. 14.

For County Commissioners:
TAYLOR FRIEND,
Of District No. 2.
JACOB STUMP,
Of District No. 4.

For Register of Wills:
EDWIN E. FRIEND,
Of District No. 7.

For County Surveyor:
FRANKLIN P. GREEN,
Of District No. 11.

VOTE the straight ticket.

THE Democratic party stands for less to-day than any time in its history.

THE Republican ticket should command the undivided support of every Republican.

THE Democratic party says it is the white man's party. It does not look like it in Garrett county.

THE Democratic party will build a marble hall for a library. Better divide up. Garrett needs some wooden school houses.

HOW do you like the party that compels thirty white men to lose their civil rights so that one black man may lose his vote?

THE Democratic party disfranchises three hundred and fifty-four white men in Garrett in order to destroy the votes of twelve black men.

THE "nigger" bugaboo in Garrett county "don't cut no ice." To discuss that question is a waste of time and space.

THE Democratic legislature has spent in the last two years over a quarter of a million dollars of the people's money and not one beneficial law was passed.

IF THERE was nothing else to be said against the Democratic party it would be enough simply to say that it should be defeated because it passed the disfranchisement act. and we believe it will be.

THE Republican meeting advertised to take place in Oakland on Saturday night next has been postponed until Wednesday night, Oct. 23, when United States Senator Louis E. McComas will address the meeting.

WHEN the leaders of the Democratic party are afraid to go before the common people and ask for an election that is honest and for an honest expression of sentiment, don't you think that it will be better to leave such leaders at home?

REPUBLICAN success this fall will mean improved methods that will tend to economy in State affairs and insure the enactment of laws for the people's good, just as prosperity has followed success in the nation at large.

JUDGE STAKE, of Hagerstown, has decided that the superintendent of the State census must produce the census lists and allow copies to be made. This decision comes too late to effect the registration, and of conrse the democrats care very little now about the mandates of the court. They have had the use of the data and information gathered by their census takers at the State's expense.

THE Democratic press has made so many predictions that have not come to pass, and has so loudly and brazenly proclaimed so much it intended to do for the people when they had the opportunity, that the sober, quiet, thinking people have lost faith in it. The eloquence of experience speaks louder than the Democratic press.

IT BECOMES daily more and more apparent that the illiterate white voters of the State intend to rebuke in no uncertain manner the great wrong done them by the Gorman-Smith manipulators. From every quarter is heard the denunciations of the unfortunate Democratic voters who have been thus outraged and humiliated by the party which they have served faithfully and long.

WHAT a contrast between the administration of this State of Governor Lowndes and the present one! Then the tone was high; the traditions of the beloved Commonwealth recognized and conserved; the personnel of public officials exceptionally strong; the honor of the State maintained on every hand. Now, trickery and evasion! Politics and personal gains first, always first; the public service afterwards. These two years have been an era of schemes which, hatched in the dark, promise to return to torment their promoters.—The Union, Towson, Md.

THE Democratic party is committed to many measures that are an oppression and injustice to the people and if that party is continued in power it is useless to expect that there will be any change for any better; on the contrary—especially in reference to the disfranchisement of voters—additional laws may be expected that will render future attempts of Republicans and Independents to change these conditions futile, and the burdens will be added to. For this reason if for no other, every other consideration except the defeat of the Democrats should be laid aside and the greatest possible effort made to accomplish this result.

THE REASONS, REAL AND SHAM, FOR THE STATE CENSUS.

The reasons given by the Democratic ring, which dominates Maryland politics, for forcing upon the taxpayers the expense of a State census were, that the Federal census was so contrary to the popular belief, and would result in such undue representation in the General Assembly of a certain section, as to force the conviction that the Federal census, either by accident or design, would cause great injustice to the people of the entire State.

How Mr. Gorman and Mr. Rasin and the rest of the gang must have snickered to themselves when they framed that excuse for the outrage which they then were about to perpetrate upon the people of Maryland. To correct a wrong against the people of the entire State sounds very well. But that was not the reason why the State census was wanted. This same wrong was corrected by the authorities taking the Federal census at no expense to the State whatever. What the Democratic managers wanted was not a correct census but some excuse for an opportunity to get a partisan advantage over the Republicans whom they saw were getting far too strong in this State and were jeopardizing the chances of this precious lot of ringsters to maintain themselves forever in control of the politics of Maryland. It has been demonstrated time and time again that the State census was carelessly taken and that its results are not as correct and reliable as the figures reached by the Federal authorities.

The great stake to be played for in the campaign of 1901 is Mr. Gorman's return to the United States Senate. As a first step to this end, it was important to ascertain exactly how many Democrtic votes could be placed upon the registration books and how many Republican votes could be kept off, and to get at these facts a poll of the entire State was necessary. For the Democratic managers to get this information would cost them a good round sum of money. It was wiser in their judgment to save this for the purpose of use on election day, and so they conceived the brilliant idea of making the taxpayers, both Republicans and Democrats, pay for their poll of the State, and the $40,000 which the taxpayers have paid in is the amount which the Democratic managers have saved for their uses in the campaign. As a financial saving, this method of getting partisan information is certainly a work of art. Whether Mr. Gorman, Mr. Rasin, Mr. Vandiver, Mr. Baughman or Mr. Schley deserves the credit from a party point of view for conceiving this brilliant scheme, we do not know and it makes but little difference, as they will all share in the profits to be derived from it, if there are any.

There is nothing more needed to convince any fair minded man of the truth of the charge that the State census was only a scheme behind which to hide bitterly partisan purposes, than the fact that Democratic registers and election officials all over the State are in possession of facts gathered by these Democratic enumerators at the expense of the whole people, while Republicans were denied access to the records which their money helped to pay for, and Mr. Schley and Governor Smith play fast and loose with a demand for a look at the records in order to kill time until after it is too late for these facts to do Republicans any good.

We should not be surprised to see a bill introduced in the next Legislature, if it should happen to be Democratic, to tax Republicans only for the expense of the State government and to exempt Democrats entirely. Such a law, in spirit, would be similar to the stand now taken by these two Democratic ringsters to dodge their plain duty in giving the people of all parties the benefit of information that was gathered at the public expense. That the Democratic managers are determined to win the elections of 1901 by fair means if possible, by foul means if necessary, but to win by any means, becomes more and more apparent every day.

Mr. Dooly, in one of his articles setting out the strong points of various men as Democratic Presidential timber, has this to say of Mr. Gorman: "Put Mr. Gorman in a room alone with the election returns and you can go out and buy the store boxes for the bonfires." Mr. Dooly looks at things through Democratic spectacles but if a man ever said in a jest what we in Maryland know to be hard facts Mr. Dooly has said it.

Whether Mr. Gorman will derive any benefit from his sham State census, or the Democratic poll, which is its correct name, and whether Governor Smith and Buchanan Schley shall profit by their course in withholding information paid for by the people of the entire State, is for every honest man and good citizen to answer for himself and upon the answer of the voters will depend the future fortunes of this job lot of politicians who are ready to do anything to further their political fortunes or win out for their scheming associates.

THE NEW CRIME OF 1901.

As the years go by and the times change, many things which our forefathers looked upon as innocent, or if not that, harmless, regrettable or unfortunate, assume the proportions of a crime. In former years not to be able to read or write was a misfortune; in 1901 not to be able to read or write is a crime and its punishment is loss of vote.

For twenty-five years the Democratic party had held practically undisputed sway in Maryland politics. During all that time it was never said in any of its platforms nor in the councils of its leaders, that the man who could not read or write was not entitled to a vote. On the contrary, that party was exceedingly fond of posing as the friend of the poor man, the man who had little opportunities for education in early life, or to use their own diction, they claimed to be the friends of the masses as against the classes. They fondly dreamed that they were so firmly entrenched in the affections of Maryland's people that the scepter of power would never pass into other hands, but the election of 1895 was a rude awakening to them from their pleasant slumbers, and for four years the Republicans directed well the State government. In 1899 they again came back into power, and the shaking up they had received seems to have unsettled the nerves of their leaders, and they now resort to any device or scheme to save themselves from a possible recurrence of the events of 1895, and one of their pet measures becomes the doctrine that the men who cannot read or write shall not vote.

Their fondness for the poor man, the unfortunate, the uneducated dissolves of a sudden into the skeleton of hypocrisy, and the cherished doctrine that all men are born free and equal, one of the supposed cornerstones upon which Democracy rests, is cast to the winds. They now come out boldly and say that the man who cannot read or write is not equal to the man who can, and they propose to shut out from the voting booth all those voters who have been so unfortunate as to receive no education in their youth. To such straits is Democracy driven; such desperate steps to save its tottering were made necessary in the judgment of their leaders by conditions which endangered not the the welfare of the State, but the existence of a political party that had outlived the day of its usefulness.

In 1901 the man who cannot read or write, by this Democratic party that catered to his vote in years gone by, that cajoled, flattered and petted the man in the humble and lowly walks of life, and called itself his friend and special advocate, is reduced to the level of the convict who has served his term in the penitentiary. So far as either are concerned, they are both debarred from any share in State or County government, the one because he is a convicted felon; the other, because in the days of his youth instead of going to school he had to work to support perhaps a widowed mother, or infant brothers and sisters. The fact that he owns property, pays taxes, lives uprightly, is doing better for his children than was ever done for him counts for nothing. He is ruthlessly cast aside because the seeming necessities of the politicians of the Democratic party require it. For the Democratic illiterate such is his reward for years of party loyalty, and he pays this penalty because the leaders of his party think that the only way to maintain themselves in power is to disfranchise enough Republicans so as to make a Democratic victory certain in 1901.

LET CZOLGOSZ DIE OBSCURELY.

The warden of the Auburn prison, where Czolgosz, the murderer of President McKinley, awaits the death penalty, is sorely puzzled by the great demand made upon him for admittance to the execution. He finds that the law provides for but a few spectators, and he is trying to reconcile the provisions of the law with the morbid curiosity of the public.

It is unnecessary that the warden should be at all disturbed. There is but one thing for him to do—follow the provisions of the law. In doing this he will be serving the public best, even the morbid members of the public who wish to see the execution. Attending such a scene can do good to nobody. The officers of the law, a few physicians—a sufficient number of witnesses to see that the sentence has been carried out properly—will be quite adequate to meet all requirements of the occasion.

Anarchist assassins and their sympathizers love notoriety, and the worst thing that can happen to them is that the death of the criminal be as obscure as ignominious. Nothing would be a better deterrent to similar crimes. Newspapers that have the good of the public at heart will not make the death of this assassin an occasion for any great "spread." Let the public know that the vicious life has been snuffed out—that is all. Thus far, in dealing with Czolgosz every act has been eminently proper and well considered. The same good judgment should be persisted in to the end.—Baltimore News.

McKinley Postal Cards.

The design for the new issue of postal cards bearing the head of the late President McKinley will be perfected within a short time. The cards will be in general use about the close of the year. As explained by Acting Postmaster General Madden, the design includes the year of birth and year of death immediately at the left and right, respectively, of the name McKinley, which will be directly under the head. Above the head will be the words "series of 1901" and above that "one cent.' The inscription "United States of American" now appearing on the postal cards will be abandoned and replaced at a point lower down, so as to leave the space at the upper part of the card, about one-third the width of the card, clear for the post marks.

Democratic Meeting.

Our friends the Democrats had their much advertised meeting on Friday evening last in Offutt's Hall.

The local band rendered several fine selections in from of the hall and a number of the large crowd outside wandered in to listen to the "lights" from afar give their version of the campaign.

The meeting was presided over by G. S. Hamill, Esq., who introduced the speakers. J. Frank Turner, Democratic candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals, was the first talker and both he and J. E. N. Wood, of Frederick, made the principal theme of their discourses the negro question. According to our Democratic friends the State seems to be in imminent danger of being swallowed whole by the "black peril," but still the people of Garrett county have not felt the least fear on this score. They also talked about the census and as is always the case laid the fault of the State census to the Republican party, saying that it was on account of the frauds perpetrated in the Federal census that the new one became necessary. According to their views the G. O. P. must have sinned times without number and things would come to a pretty pass if the Democrats would not win out on Nov. 5th.

Candidate Turner, after naming the several heroes of the party of Jefferson, sounded forth in clarion notes the name of A. P. Gorman as a type of Democrat all should follow. Mr. Turner must have felt somewhat chagrined at its reception as beyond a few faint hand clappings from the faithful in the front row not a sound was heard.

After the oratorical pyrotechnics of Mr. Wood had ceased the meeting adjourned.

Query: How many converts to the Democratic ranks did the meeting produce?

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the land of the undersigned lying in District No. 2 of Garrett county either for the purpose of fishing, hunting or passing through the same with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. C. W. FRIEND.

HOW TO VOTE THE TICKET.

Instructions Issued by the Attorney-General in Marking Your Ballot.

Both political parties claim that the operation of the new ballot law will be in their interest. The Democrats hope to disfranchise many colored voters because of their presumed inability to correctly mark the ticket, and the Republicans assert that through careful instruction the negroes will become qualified to vote, but that thousands of illiterate white Democrats, resenting the imputation cast upon their intelligence, will remain away from the polls, or else will cast their votes with the Republicans. The result, however, is attended with uncertainty, and any light which can be thrown upon the situation is eagerly sought after.

Pursuant to the requirements of law the Attorney-General of Maryland has prepared the following instruction to voters:

1. To vote. Enter room, step up to the guard rail, give name and registered residence to the judges. Wait until your name is found upon the registers, then get ballot from judge in charge of ballots. See that he has written your name and number on the coupon attached to the ballot and his own name or initials on back of ballot itself.

2. Upon receiving your ballot, retire to one of the booths or compartments and prepare your ballot by marking with an indelible pencil after the name of every person or persons for whom you wish to vote and to the right thereof, in the blank space provided therefor, cross, for example (X) and in case of a question submitted to a vote of the people, by marking likewise in an appropriate space, a cross mark (X) against the answer you desire to give. If you wish to vote for some one whose name is not printed on the official ballot, you can write the name of such person in the blank space upon the ballot provided for that purpose.

3. In marking the ballot you may take with you into the polling place any written or printed memoranda or paper to assist you in preparing your ballot, except a fac-simile of the ballot to be voted. You must prepare and deposit your ballot without undue delay. Before coming from behind the curtain in front of your compartment, you must fold your ballot in the same way it was folded when you received it, so that the marks you have made upon it shall be entirely concealed. You then hand your ballot to the judge at the ballot box, give him your name and registered address, and wait until he tears off the coupon containing your name and number and strings it, and deposits your ballot in the ballot box. You must then leave the polling room and cannot again go behind the guard rail during the day.

4. A voter must not go into any compartment occupied by another, or converse with any other voter while engaged in a compartment, nor can he occupy a compartment more than seven minutes if others are waiting.

5. You must not take any ballot outside the guard rail. If you spoil spoil a ballot you must deliver the spoiled ballot to the judge in charge of the ballots, and you can receive another from him. If you spoil THREE ballots you lose your vote.

6. A voter who is physically disabled from marking his ballot must make an affidavit to that effect if he desires assistance. The two polling clerks, after such affidavits have been made, can accompany him into one of the compartments and there mark his ballot as he instructs them, marking only the names of the candidates whom he shall name. The clerks are not allowed to read the ballot to him.

7. Any voter who shall allow his ballot to be seen by any person with the apparent intention of letting it be known how he is about to vote, or place any distinguishing mark upon his ballot, or who shall make a false statement as to his inability to mark his ballot, or who shall interfere or attempt to interfere with any voter when inside the inclosed space in the polling room, or when marking his ballot, or shall endeavor to induce any voter to show how he marks or has marked his ballot, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five ($5) dollars nor more than one hundred ($100) dollars, or imprisonment in jail for a period not exceeding sixty days, or both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists
409-415 Pearl Street, New York.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

The Republican Nominees.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Accident ranks high in agriculture. Some of the finest farms in the county are found here. The buildings are large and commodious; the farmers prosperous, progressive and intelligent. Like all agricultural communities the people are moral, thrifty and contented.

This is the home of the head of the Republican ticket. Here the Senator knows and is known by everyone. The kindly greetings and constant salutations as he passes through the streets of this lively village evidences the great good will and esteem of the community. He is popular among all classes and has no enemies. He is and has been the family physician of the entire population. His field of practice covers a large section of the county and he is frequently called to adjoining counties. The Doctor is a skilled surgeon and successful physician. He has performed many difficult and delicate operations in this community. He is specially successful in surgery. It is, indeed, a treat to visit the happy, hospitable home of this worthy family. It is here that the Doctor appears to greatest advantage. He is an admirable host. His house, planned and built by himself, is cozy, comfortable and convenient. His amiable and accomplished wife is not only a past master in all the arts of housewifery but ably assists the Doctor in his profession and is second only to the Senator in that most delicate of all arts, politics or pleasing the people. Many assert that the Senator's phenomenal success politically and professionally is largely owing to this interesting lady. The Doctor is a devoted husband and father; his greatest happiness found amidst his family and friends in his beautiful and happy home.

The ancestry of the Senator is sturdy stock—Marylanders for generations. His father was born in Allegany county, the Senator within the limits of Garrett county during the dark days of the civil war when the life of the nation was threatened, our land deluged with fraternal blood. His people were among the first to rush to the rescue; not only loyal to the great cause but active in aiding to suppress the rebellion.

The Senator's course in the Senate has been particularly distinguished by his advocacy of the principles of that great party which saved the Union. His speeches deliyered during the late extra session of the Legislature are among the ablest and most exhaustive against the enactment of that most infamous ballot law, whereby many of our most worthy citizens are robbed of their most sacred rights. He says: "The extra session of the Legislature foisted upon the people the unholy disfranchisement law and the enormous expense of a new State census at an aggregate cost of $120,000 to the taxpayers, both measures to be used for the exclusive benefit of the Democratic party and the politicians in that party who are seeking to advance their personal interests irrespective of the rights and the robbery of the people, the humiliation and degradation inflicted upon the citizens of the commonwealth. We cannot that the liberty loving people of Garrett county will consent to this political slavery and social discrimination against yourselves, your neighbors, fathers and families, which will result, if the Democratic party shall be given the power through a majority in the Legislature, to still further debase the election machinery and the rights of franchise in the county and State."

The Senator opens the canvass of this county at Strickland school house in District No. 11 on Wednesday, the 16th inst. He will visit every district in the county, accompanied by orators of national and local reputation. The party is thoroughly organized, confident and enthusiastic. It is predicted the majority will not be less than one thousand. Sullen, silence and deep indignation prevails in the camp of Democracy. The betrayal of that party by its leaders will be rebuked. OCCASIONAL.

A Great Railway.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Co. owns and operates 6,600 miles of thoroughly equipped railway.

It operates its own Sleeping Cars and Dining Cars, and the service is first-class in every respect.

It traverses the best portion of the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, South and North Dakota.

It runs electric lighted, steam-heated trains.

It has the absolute block system.

It uses all modern appliances for the comfort and safety of its patrons.

Its train employes are civil and obliging.

It tries to give each passenger "value received" for his money, and

It asks every man, woman and child to buy tickets over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway—for it is A Great Railway.

Time tables, maps and information furnished on application to John R. Pott, District Passenger Agent, 810 Park Building, Pittsburg.

WANTED—Several persons of character and good reputation in each state (one in this county required) to represent and advertise old established wealthy business house of solid financial standing. Salary $18.00 weekly with expenses additional, all payable in cash each Wednesday direct from head offices. Horse and carriage furnished, when necessary. References. Enclose self-addressed stamped envelope. Manager, 316 Caxton Building, Chicago. 28 13t

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE
Makes the food more delicious and wholesome
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

Miss Nettie Kepner is on a visit to relatiyes in Pennsylvania.

Ex-Senator W. R. Getty, of Grantsville, is in Oakland to-day.

Mr. George T. Brew is at home from his base of operations at Ronceverte, W. Va., for a few days.

Mr. Charles Anderson is in Baltimore this week on business for the Oakland Coal and Coke Company.

Dr. J. G. Robinson, who attended the funeral of his brother in Baltimore, returned home Saturday morning.

Will Sturgiss left Tuesday morning for Buffalo, Pittsburg and other cities. He will also visit Western States before his return to Oakland.

Dr. John E. Legge, who spent a few days at Parkersburg, W. Va., and also pyints in Ohio, returned home Monday morning.

A pheasant flew against a window in Oakland Monday and was stunned by the blow. Before it recovered it was picked up by a passerby and carried home.

The ladies of the Catholic church held an oyster supper Monday and Tuesday nights for the benefit of the church at which a neat sum was realized.

Rev. W. E. George, of Deer Park, who recently recovered from a severe attack of illness, was in Oakland Tuesday and made this office a pleasant visit.

Surveyor Alex. C. Mason is down near Grantsville this week making a survey of some land patented recently by the Land Office to a resident of the Grantsville community.

Mr. Thomas L. Lincoln, of Carmichaels, Pa., who spent the summer at Conneway's Tower, up in District No. 8, came down to Oakland on Thursday last and on Friday left for his home.

Mr. H. M. Speicher, of Accident, who was here attending teachers' institute this week, was taken ill Monday and forced to return home yesterday. While here Mr. Speicher was granted a life certificate to teach in Maryland.

Mr. John W. McCulloh, the Democratic nominee for State Senator from this county, came up to Oakland Tuesday and spent a day or two here in the interests of his candidacy. Yesterday he drove over to Crellin in company with Mr. W. R. Offutt, candidate for the House of Delegates.

Rev. Wm. H. Osmond, rector of St. Matthew's Parish, has gone to Brownsville, this State, to attend the convocation of the archdeaconry of Cumberland, diocese of Maryland, Protestant Episcopal church, the sessions of which begun last night and will continue for two days.

The band of Gypsies encamped near the base ball grounds comprises the family of Henry Small (father and sons) of Philadelphia, Pa. Henry Small is well known in Romany circles and is a leading and influential member of that mysterious tribe of people whose origin is lost in the mists of antiquity. This is Mr. Small's first visit to Oakland, and his outfit of wagons is one of the finest on the road. If you want to meet a Romany Rye of the pure blood visit the camp and talk with Mr. Small.

No man ever yet made a success of business without advertising of some sort. Maybe he didn't call it advertising, but it was advertising just the same. Advertising primarily consists in letting a lot of people know you are in existence and what excuse you may have for it. The nucleus of advertising is a sign over the door. If nobody had ever put up a sign, one baking powder company would not now be paying out $800,000 a year placing signs in all the newspapers of America.

At eleven o'clock Monday morning an explosion of coal dust occurred in the South Side mine of the Merchants Coal Company plant, at Tunnelton, W. Va, in which ten miners were badly burned and four of them are thought to be fatally injured. Chester Buckelew was putting in a shot and as it was not properly tamped it blew out and the coal dust from the machines, which filled the air, ignited, causing an explosion in which Buckelew, Peter Spiker, Ernest Cross and Frank Dodge were horribly burned and William Haney, Edward Stewart, William Hines and several others more or less seriously injured. Three hundred men are employed in this mine, and their escape from serious if not fatal injury is considered miraculous.

Ice to a considerable thickness was formed on Tuesday night.

County Surveyor F. P. Green was in Oakland on business this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Troy have removed to the Bolden-West building on Second street.

Miss Blanche Flowers returned on Monday from a week's visit to Savage, West Va.

Mr. E. J. Frantz, of Selbysport, was a business visitor to Oakland on Monday.

D. A. Vaughn and family have moved from Crellin to the Lowndes property on Third street.

Mr. Harry W. Hebden, of Baltimore, has been in Oakland this week attending the sessions of the teachers' institute.

Rev. Asbury Mick and family have gone to Huntington, W. Va., to which point Mr. Mick was transferred at the recent session of the West Virginia Conference.

Congressman George A. Pearre came up to Oakland from Cumberland yesterday and in the afternoon delivered an address before the teachers' institute.

When you have no appetite, do not relish your food and feel dull after eating you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at all drug stores.

Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Ravenscraft returned on Thursday after having spent several weeks at Ridgway, Pa., where they visited their son Walter and at the Buffalo Exposition.

On Sunday morning at the Protestant Episcopal church in Oakland Dr. E. H. Bartlett, one of the vestry, will read the service, owing to the absence of the Rector.

Col. A. G. Sturgiss and family, who spent two weeks at Pittsburg and the Buffalo Exposition, arrived home Friday morning. The trip was thoroughly enjoyed by the Colonel and his estimable family.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Cruetzburg have moved from the Dixon & Kelso house to the new Bolden-West building opposite where they will occupy cozy and well appointed rooms.

Cashier Scott T. Jones is at Milwaukee this week attending the annual meeting of the American Bankers' Association. He expects to be absent from Oakland until Saturday or Monday.

Mr. A. F. George, now employed in the Rural Mail Delivery division of the Postoffice Department, has been transferred from the Maryland section to Kansas, for which point he left one day last week. He will return to Garrett county by Nov. 1st.

Another cut in the railroad fare from Oakland to Buffalo has been made by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The rate for five day tickets is now $10. This being the last month of the fair it is improbable that another reduction will be made.

Mr. Thomas A. Boyer, son of the late Jacob Boyer, who was for a number of years engaged in the meat business in Oakland and later removed to Baltimore with his family, was in Oakland a day or two this week on business. Tom is now engaged as a traveling salesman for a moulding factory at Baltimore.

The leading social fuction of the season in mountain society was held at Conneway's Mountain View Tower on the evening of the 9th. Some forty or more guests were present and enjoyed the festivities of the occasion, dancing being the principal amusement. Among the distinguished guests present were the Hon. Peter Tumbledown, Col. W. J. Conneway, Rev. David Crockett from Pone Town, W. Va., and Mr. M. N. Wilson, of Wilson, W. Va. A large Montgolfier balloon was successfully sent up at 10.30 and when last seen was taking a bee line for the North Pole.

This paragraph from the eulogy of Mr. McKinley by Rev. Father Kinsella, chaplain of the Soldier's Home at Leavensworth, has attracted more attention, thought and comment than any of the beautiful things said by the Kansas orators about the dead soldier, statesman and patriot: "Standing before this vast assemblage and conscious of all that I represent, I boldly assert that the dying words of President McKinley—himself a layman and the noblest of his kind—came with greater religious force, as a message of good to the world, than the same words would have had if spoken by any other man, even the Pope of Rome himself. Behold the wave of praise and song that has swept through the nations taken from his dying lips; behold how all the people, forgetful of their avocations, are brought nearer to God—"Nearer, My God, to Thee—Nearer to Thee."

Republican Rally !

The voters of Garrett county, irrespective of party, are invited to assemble in mass convention at the Oakland Opera House on

WEDNESDAY NIGHT, OCT 23,

AT 7.30 O'CLOCK,

to hear the issues of the campaign discussed. The meeting will be addressed by

U. S. SENATOR LOUIS E. M'COMAS.

HON. THOMAS PARREN, Of Baltimore,

(Nominee for Clerk of the Court of Appeals.)

HON. THOMAS PRICE, of New York, and other speakers of National Reputation.

Two Bands will enliven the occasion with good music.

Charged With Raising a Bill.

Wayne Orville, a miner employed at Hampshire mine near Bloomington, was arrested Saturday by the United States authorities, charged with raising a $2 bill to a $20 and was taken to Clarksburg for trial. He has a family. Orville disclaims knowledge or intention of wrong, saying the bill was received and passed in good faith.

Special Rates to Buffalo Pan-American Exposition, Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Excursion tickets from Oakland, Md., to Buffalo and return via Pittsburg account Pan-American Exposition now on sale at ticket offices Baltimore & Ohio Railroad:

TEN DAY TICKETS—On sale daily, $13.35.

FIFTEEN DAY TICKETS—On sale daily, $16.80.

SEASON TICKETS—On sale daily, good returning until Nov. 30th, 1901, $19.20.

For full details, time of trains, etc., call on Agent Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. til nov 1

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. G. L. Rhodes (2), Mrs. Laura Mitchell, Mrs. Chas. E. Gough, L. B. Brunx, Lucian P. Burke, Albert Carpenter, A. L. Brown, P. A. Chisholm, Jr., Fay Jacobs, George McManns.

A new telephone company has been incorporated in Allegany county, the incorporation papers having been issued on Monday by Judge David W. Sloan. The new corporation will be known as the Western Maryland Telephone Company of Allegany County, capitalized at $100,000, divided into 2,000 shares. The incorporators are DeWarren H. Reynolds, H. J. Glick, James A. McHenry, of Cumberland; Duncan R. Sloan, of Lonaconing; Clayton Purnell and Adam E. Hitchins, of Frostburg, and J. W. Ritchie, of Harrisburg, Pa. The company will establish a system in Cumberland to connect with Frostburg, Lonaconing, Westernport, Mount Savage and other points in Allegany county and elsewhere in Maryland.

Came Near Dying

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely. I went to sleep and did not awake for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of this remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say, 'God bless you and the splendid medicine you make.' This remedy is for sale by all dealers.

More Laughter, Less Suicides.

The physiological benefits of laughter cannot be overestimated. It shakes up the diaphragm, sets the pulses beating to a lively measure, stimulates the blood corpuscles, enlivens the brain and sometimes produces dislocation of the jaw when indulged in too heartily by a man with a large mouth. Used with discretion, laughter is as inspiring as a sea breeze, as refreshing as an August shower. Its moral effect is beyond computation. It has killed more ridiculous superstitions by its rollicking roars of unbelief than any other agency. What can be more derisive than a laugh? The man who laughs never kills himself. This is the season so few Irishmen commit suicide.—Literary Era.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby notified that trespassing on my farm at Deer Park, Md., is forbidden under penalty of the law, and $50 REWARD is hereby offered for information leading to arrest and conviction of persons taking fish from ponds upon it.

31 4t JOHN W. WILLIAMS.

Car load feed and flour just arrived at Eagle Store, Grantsville.

To the Voters of Garrett County.

Having received the nomination for the office of County Treasurer and believing it to be my duty to stay and attend to the duties of the office I now hold, I take this method of soliciting your aid and influence.

Thanking you for your support in the past I respectfully solicit your assistance this time when it will be a great help to me.

Very respectfully,
JAMES W. WHITE.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the lands of the undersigned, lying in District No. 12 of Garrett county, either for the purpose of hunting, fishing or passing through the same armed with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

SILAS C. BEACHY,
C. C. BEACHY,
JONAS C. BEACHY,
297* MRS. JOHN BRENNEMAN.

In Bankruptcy.

Henry Achenbach and Harry E. Achenbach, trading as H. Achenbach & Son, and conducting lumber mills down in District No. 9, this county, have filed a petition in the United States Circuit Court, at Baltimore for the benefit of the bankrupt law. The schedule shows liabilities amounting to $2,190.76 and assets, $1,588.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Grantsville, Md., on or about the middle of July last, 5 head of sheep, 4 yearlings and one older, 4 being ewes and one a weather. Four of said sheep having crops off left ear and slit in right ear; one with left ear cropped off.

The owner or owners are hereby notified to come forward, prove property, pay costs and take them away.

Dated Oct. 1, 1901.

CHRISTIAN M. LIVENGOOD,
30 Grantsville, Md.

Death of Gustavus Broadwater.

Gustavus Broadwater, son of the venerable William Broadwater, of Grantsville, died on last Thursday morning at the residence of his brother Gilead Broadwater, near the above place. The deceased has for some years suffered with a cancer on his face, which recently moved downward and affected his throat. His funeral took place on Sunday. He was unmarried and leaves besides his father three brothers, namely, Gilead, Noah and Sanford, all of whom reside at or near Grantsville.

Wanted.

One hundred men for general woods work and grading railroad.

PRESTON LUMBER & COAL CO.,
2 tf Oakland, Md

Early Closing.

The merchants of Oakland have formed themselves into an association and have signed an agreement to close their stores at 8 o'clock every evening except Saturdays. The agreement went into effect on Monday evening and is effective until May 1. Any merchant violating the agreement obligates himself to pay the sum of $5.

Captured the Giddy Maid.

The parents of Jessie Arnett, aged 15, who live at Fairmont, W. Va., prevented an elopement of their daughter Monday with Charles Brill a brakeman on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Her parents had permitted her to go to Morgantown for a visit, but learned of her true intentions immediately afterward and followed her, capturing her in hiding at the home of friends.

For Sale

Six good milch cows, at a bargain for cash. Offer open until Nov. 1. Want to reduce number. Apply to 22-2t. H. WEBER & SONS.

Mourning Not Ended.

The official period of mourning, ordered as a mark of respect to the memory of President McKinley, will not terminate until Saturday, Oct. 19, or one month from the funeral at Canton Ohio, by order President Roosevelt.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y.

Many people unacquainted with the geography of the West imagine that because the names "Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul" are used in the corporate title of the railway owning the Short Line between Chicago and Omaha, they must go via the cities of Milwaukee and St. Paul to reach their destination—and if it be Omaha or west thereof. This is a mistaken idea. On a map the line running directly east and west would look like this:

Omaha——————Chicago.

There is nothing more simple than that, and it is less than 500 miles between Chicago and Omaha. Two through trains daily in each direction with the best Sleeping Car and Dining Car Service, and all regular travelers know and appreciate the merits of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway's Short Line between the East and the West.

Time tables, maps and information furnished on application to John R. Pott, District Passenger Agent, 810 Park Building, Pittsburg.

Killed at Deer Park.

This morning a young man named Deming, son of Mr. David Deming, of Swanton, was killed by a west bound freight train at Deer Park. Portions of the body were strewed along the track for a mile or more east of Deer Park, the body having been dragged that distance. The body was picked up at the Deer Park hotel station and taken in charge by the authorities.

Institute Proceedings.

Our report of the proceedings of the teachers institute now in session here came in late for publication this week. To do the subject justice will require two columns or more of space, and as our columns are somewhat crowded this week the matter will have to go over.

It Happend in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C.R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take abottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." The remedy owes its great popularity and extensive sale in a large measure to the personal recommendations of people who have been cured by its use. It is for sale by All dealers.

A Heavy Sentence Recommended.

In Havana, Cuba, Tuesday the indictments in the Havana postoffice frauds were found implicating Estes C. Rathbone, formerly of Oakland, jointly with C. F. W. Neely, and W. H. Reeves in defrauding the government, his complicity being based on the contention that he permitted—and, therefore, consented to and tacitly authorized—the fraudulent transactions.

The whole amount of the alleged embezzlement on all counts in the indictments is estimated at $150,000. In the papers in the case it has been recommended that each of the accused be fined in this amount and also that Rathbone be sentenced to imprisonment for 25 years, Neely for 25 years and 6 months, and Reeves for 24 years and 6 months.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

You can buy men's, boys' and children's clothing cheaper at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, than any place in town. 27 8*

Take your produce to N. Broadwater, who pays always the highest price.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

If you want a bargain in a nice family surrey or carriage you can get it at A. D. Naylor's. Closing them out for this season. Special low price and good terms. 28 3*

Buy the famous Cinderella Double Heater Cook Stoves and Ranges at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, Md.

N. Broadwater, Grantsville, has just returned from the city with the largest and most complete line of goods ever brought to town.

Go to Eagle Store, Grantsville, for ladies' tailor-made suits, jackets and capes. 27 8t*

LOST—Black leather pocket instrument case containing surgical instruments. Finder will be rewarded by returning same to Dr. I. D. Newman, Oakland, Md. 30 3*

FOR SALE:—The Lutheran parsonage, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

Come and see the largest and best assortment of gloves and mittens ever carried in stock in Swanton. Also a full line of underwear, as well as shoes for everybody. Bring along your cash and produce and get credit for the balance. Wm. W. Sweet, Agt.

A new remedy for biliousness is now on sale at all drug stores. It is called Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. It gives quick relief and will prevent the attack if given as soon as the first indication of the disease appears. Price, 25 cents per box. Samples free.

"Book of the Royal Blue."

The current issue of the "Book of the Royal Blue," published by the Passenger Department of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, is on our table and is a piece of artistic work from the printer's standpoint and also of distinctive literary merit. The book as a whole is a memorial to the late President McKinley and contains a composite editorial carefully constructed from editorials of the leading newspapers, a composite sermon from all the noted divines and a composite eulogy from the many touching tributes of prominent citizens. Mr. McKinley's last speech and an appropriate collection of poems complete the number.

When you cannot sleep for coughing it is hardly necessary that any one should tell you that you need a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to allay the irritation of the throat, and make sleep possible. It is good. Try it. For sale by all dealers.

Rough, Red Hands

made to look white as the driven snow and so soft to the touch as the skin of a baby—

LILY CREAM

imparts a velvety smoothness to the skin—dries instantly and is perfectly invisible—it is healing, soothing, protecting.

LOGAN DRUG COMPANY,
WHEELING, W. VA.
15 and 25 cents. At your Druggist.

Public Sale

—OF—

LIVE STOCK,

CARRIAGES, Etc.

The undersigned will offer at public auction at their stables on Green street, opposite the City Roller Mills, Oakland, Md., on

Saturday, Oct. 19th,

beginning at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., the following personal property, comprising the entire stock and fixtures of two first-class livery stables:

Twenty-two head of Horses, among them being a number of fast trotters and several finely matched teams, 2 Carriages, 3 Surreys, 3 Traps, 6 Buggies, 2 Phætons, 5 Runabouts, 10 sets double Carriage and Coach Harness, 10 sets Single Harness, 2 sets Team Harness, 1 Brown Farm Wagon, 1 Harrow, 1 Plow, lot of Robes and Whips, lot Collars, Curry Combs and Brushes, lot Log Chains, lot Single Trees, 1 Horse Rake, 7 Ladies' Saddles, 4 Men's Saddles, lot of Poles and Shafts, several Suits Coachmen's Liveries and many other things.

TERMS OF SALE—On sums of $5 or over a credit of six months will be given, purchasers to execute their notes with security satisfactory to the undersigned and to bear interest from day of sale. Sums under $5 cash.

M. MARONEY & SON.

Sheriff's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an election will be held in the several election districts of Garrett county, at such places as shall be designated by the proper authorities for the location of the polls, on

Tuesday, November 5, 1901,

being the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November next, between the hours of 8 o'clock a. m. and 6 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing

One Comptroller of the Treasury, one Clerk of Court of Appeals, one State Senator, two Delegates to the Legislature, one Sheriff, one County Treasurer, two County Commissioners, one Register of Wills and one County Surveyor.

Attention is hereby called to the above notice, and keepers of hotels, taverns, saloons, stores, drinking establishments or any other place where liquors are sold, and all other persons are hereby notified that by Article 33, Section 105, of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland, no spirituous or fermented liquors, ale or beer, or intoxicating drinks of any kind can be sold, bartered, given away or disposed of on election day.

ANDREW J. OESTER,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

BUBBLES ON THE STREAM.

See the bubbles as they float on the stream,
They are men!
You are there and moving swiftly on your way;
I behold you pass, and then
Find myself a peaceful eddy, and I stay
There and dream.
See the little bubbles bursting ere they start;
See the bubbles that have troubles as they go,
Each is some one's counterpart,
Each is doomed to weal or woe.
Some are carried with the current, some are dashed
To destruction on the shores; some are dashed
By the water, which is Fate.
And the bubble that is great
Oft is whirled around forever in some dark, secluded pool,
While there's many a little fool
Of a bubble that goes floating smoothly past.
Ah, the bubbles are but men—some are tossed
Fiercely out against obstructions and are lost,
Some are cast
In the stream where all is clear,
And at last,
Whether, justly or unjustly, it has got
Far away from where it started forth or not,
Each frail bubble has to burst and disappear—
Where they sparkle now and gleam
Others shall appear again;
The bubbles come and go upon the stream,
They are men.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

The Way the Stories End

By J. A. FLYNN

"WELL?" I asked, as she laid down the gayly-covered magazine. I was sorry for the ending of the tale, when the gray eyes ceased to flash and the kind lips to quiver.

"It is a pretty story, Mr. Norton," she said. "O, no, you needn't shake your head. I'm not saying so just because it's yours. I cannot imagine how you could write it."

"Pen and ink, whisky and soda, tailor's bill as a stimulus!"

"Please don't make fun. I want to be serious." When she looks at me in her earnest way I am helpless.

"Does that mean criticism?" I inquired, leaning a little towards her.

"Criticism and inquiry—if I may?"

"Inquiry by all means. I'm rather afraid of your criticism, do you know." She is very bright, and her remarks often help me, as a matter of fact.

She opened and shut the magazine absently.

"What I was wondering," she said, "was why you wrote so seriously, and talked so frivolously; whether one mood was the real you, and the other a sham you; and which was which!"

"I think," I protested, "I would rather have the criticism, if you don't mind."

She laughed softly. I like her laugh. "It is rather an obtrusive question. But I should very much like to know. You do mean this"—she touched the book—"a little, don't you?"

"Ye—es," I said, "I suppose I do. I did when I wrote it, anyhow."

"And afterwards?"

"I keep my seriousness for serious occasions."

"Which is a rebuke for my inquisitiveness, I suppose?" She flushed a little. She is rather pale generally. Some people wouldn't call her good-looking. I do.

"I didn't mean it to be," I apologized. "I ought to be flattered at your interest—"

"In your tales," she corrected.

"In my tales, of course. I suppose the real answer is, that I do not carry my heart upon my sleeve."

"But you have one, all the same?" A touch of wistfulness makes her voice perfect.

"Try!" I caught her eyes for a moment and stopped. I had made up my mind to keep heart-whole before I met her.

"Now for the criticism," she continued, hastily.

"Or as large an instalment as I can stand."

"The criticism must not be misunderstood. You will remember, please, that I like the tale—like it very much, in fact." I bowed.

"The criticism is—?"

"That it is a repetition of your other tales." I gasped.

"Why, I thought it was quite different!" She shook her head. "Fresh characters, fresh scenery, new plot, original phrases—"

"The machinery is different, but the story is really the same."

"In what way? In being about a man and a woman?"

"Yes." I laughed.

"If you can invent a third kind of person," I said, "I'll utilize it with pleasure. At present I haven't made the discovery."

"Don't be absurd. What I mean is that your men and women always do the same thing."

"Fall in love."

"Exactly."

"There are lots of ways of doing it," I suggested.

"At the present rate you will soon exhaust them. Whatever will you do then?"

I lit a cigarette with her permission to aid reflection.

"I'm hanged if I know. I've often wondered myself. Make them fall out of love, I suppose."

"And when you've exhausted that?"

"Make them fall in again!" She stamped her foot impatiently.

"Do you absolutely refuse to be original? I cannot think you do yourself justice in keeping to such a hackneyed theme—though I admit you do it very nicely."

"I might do it better if I had more practical experience," I suggested. There is something about her big eyes and the little droop at the corners of her mouth which makes a fellow say that sort of thing, you know.

"Now, remember our compact," she warned me. We were pledged to a purely platonic friendship. I've had that sort of thing in my tales, but it always broke down.

"The keeping of a platonic compact," said I, "would be a novel theme, don't you think?"

"Would it be interesting enough?" she asked, doubtfully.

"There! What stronger defense could I have? I propose to leave out the love-making, and you say that the interest would be gone." She drummed upon the table with her fingers.

"Surely there is some other theme?" I knocked the ash deliberately off my cigarette.

"Upon my word," I confessed, "I'm not sure that there is. But I'll think over it."

Then her brothers came in and we changed the subject until I was going. It is part of the compact that she shall see me out of the door. I insisted upon it.

"When shall I communicate the result of my deliberations?" I asked in the hall. "To-morrow?"

"I'm going to Vereker's."

"And Wednesday, I'm due at a smoker. Thursday?"

"If you like."

"Thursday, then. Good night, Mary."

It is in the compact that I am not to call her Mary, but I do. Sometimes she objects, sometimes she doesn't. On this occasion she only tossed her head and half turned away from me. She is aware that she looks well in profile. I suddenly bent over her, and—

"How dare you!" she cried, hotly.

"I couldn't help it, Mary; you looked so tempting." But she ran upstairs, with her face scarlet.

"I shall not be in on Thursday," she called, as she turned the corner, "or any other day."

So I went out, feeling triumphantly foolish.

Next Thursday I called, and she wasn't out; but she received me coolly, and kept the table between us.

"Look here, Mary," I began.

"Miss Montague, if you please!"

"I don't please. It is quite natural to call a friend by her Christian name."

"Ye—es; but people might misunderstand, we agreed; and so—"

"I'm not going to pander to other people's stupidity," I said, indignantly; "and I don't consider that friendship should have to be weighed and measured in exact words." I had prepared this remark beforehand.

"No—o; perhaps not." I knew it would score. "Still, there are bounds to friendship." She shut her little mouth decisively.

"If you mean last Tuesday—"

"I don't want to talk about it," she interrupted. "Have you considered about the stories?"

"Yes; I have reasoned out my position most carefully—Mary." She frowned, but passed the familiarity.

"And your conclusions?"

"Is in verse."

"O! how nice!" Women always like a fellow to run to verse. I suppose it is because he is sure to give himself away! "Let me see it."

"On condition that you read it aloud." She looked objectious. "I want to hear if I have got the swing."

So she declaimed softly. I think I said that she had a pretty voice.

TO MARY.

I made me a tale of the tempest at sea,
Full of thunder and lightning above,
And the terrors that be when the storm-winds are free—
But the end of the story was love!

I sang me a song of a raid in the glen,
With a lilt of the pipers who played,
Strike again, strike again, and die fighting like men!
And the struggle was over a maid!

I planned me a play of a monarch of fame,
And his courtiers in silken attire,
And his statesmen, who came like a moth to the flame—
For a pair of bright eyes were the fire!

I paeaned the praise of an hero so calm,
And so strong in the tumult to stand,
When I found me the charm that had strengthened his arm—
It was only the touch of a hand!

And I? If my heart for a moment be strong,
If my tale for a page ring sincere,
Or if merits belong to the play or the song—
They are only your echoes, my dear!

When she came to the last line her voice was very soft, and just a little tearful. I put my hand on her shoulder, and we stood looking silently at the paper for a minute. Then I drew her gently to me—the way the stories end!—Black and White.

Hundreds of Plays Offered.

The reading committee of the Playgoers' club, of London, which has undertaken to supply George Alexander with a play by an author whose stories have heretofore not been staged, up to date, has read over 300 plays.

Mr. Alexander's offer to produce such a play by an unknown author was in the nature of a challenge whereby he wished to disprove the charge that managers neglected the works of unknown playwrights. The committee still has more than 100 manuscripts which have not been read.

The secretary of the committee says that so far six plays have been selected. Two of these were by well-known writers who had not written a play before. The other four were by unknown writers. Three out of the six authors were women.

What More Noble Object?

"The only objetion," said the stern parent, "I have against the young man, my dear child, is that he has no noble ambition—no high or worthy object in life."

"Why, papa, how can you say that? He wants me!"—Stray Stories.

Easier Said Than Done.

The French have discovered that they can invade England with ease, but it is frogs' legs to beefsteaks, says the Chicago Tribune, that they won't do it.

WHERE THIEVES ARE SAFE.

Refuges for Criminals in London That the Law Does Not Reach.

One of the natural harbors or refuges for the criminal classes is the city of London. Indeed, all large cities offer a measure of security to lawbreakers, but the English metropolis being the most populous city in the world gives such characters exceptional opportunities for concealment, despite the fact that the metropolitan police force is the most efficient and successful in the world. The fact is that to find a hiding criminal in London (with its teeming millions of people of all nationalities) is a tremendous task, and in the case of alien criminals the magnitude of the task is doubled by the fact that the "descriptions" supplied to Scotland Yard by foreign police authorities are proverbially meager and unreliable when they are not absolutely idiotic.

Despite, however, the advantages London offers fugitives from justice, when a British criminal commits a big crime whereby he obtains the necessary funds he generally gives the "Axis of the Empire" a wide berth and endeavors to get somewhere abroad under a vague sort of impression that anywhere is safer than the country in which he committed his crime.

The question of whither he shall hie himself is one which he must find considerable difficulty in answering, and the difficulty is yearly being increased by the concluding of more and more extradition treaties, and the awakening of those countries with which the United States already has such treaties to a more proper sense of their obligations. Owing to the existence of scores of extradition treaties, almost every country is nominally as unsafe to fugitive criminals (excepting those "wanted" for political crimes) as the snug island, but nominally is not actually, for which difference the emigrating evildoer has every reason to be thankful.

More than half the treaties the government holds with foreign countries for the extradition of criminals who fly the country are practically dead letters. Were it not for this fact there would be only one actual refuge for fugitive lawbreakers, whereas there are dozens. The Bonin islands, in the Pacific ocean, and off the coast of Japan, constitute the sole remaining nominal refuge for the criminal classes, and this refuge is not favored by any but the lowest and most criminal.

Men who have committed crimes for which death, lifelong imprisonment, Siberia, or perhaps torture, would be due punishment, have flown to the Bonin islands from all parts of the world, and have set up a small colony of all that is most brutal in human nature, but the gentlemanly criminal, the bland fraud from the city who decamps with tens of thousands, prefers a less certain safety with an element of comfort, and would probably rather be arrested than be forced to patronize the Bonin islands, particularly as there is now every hope of this refuge being covered by an extradition treaty in the near future.

Argentina is still a happy hunting ground for criminals, and Jabez Balfour's capture was an exceptionally good stroke of luck for law and justice. There are scores upon scores of criminals safely retired in the Argentine Republic.

Giant Oak of Germany.

Naturalists in Germany are much interested in a wonderful old tree which has been discovered near Homburg. It is an oak, and is notable not only on account of its great bulk, but also for the fact that at the base of the trunk it is entirely hollow. The trunk, indeed, is not more than eight or nine feet high, but it is more than 20 feet in circumference. Some idea of the size of its interior may be gathered from the fact that four persons recently found ample room in it. In winter the old oak looks very bare and gaunt, but, according to peasants in the neighborhood, who have known it for many years, it regularly puts forth new twigs and foliage every spring, so that, ancient and decayed though its trunk may be, it is nevertheless crowned and surrounded with masses of green leaves, just as it was in the days of its youth. The people of Homburg are very proud of this natural curiosity, and it is safe to say that many tourists will have a look at it during the coming summer.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Rich Woman Peddles Milk.

New Jersey among its other freaks has a freak woman—a woman who, though wealthy, takes pleasure in peddling milk. She is Mrs. Anna Silliman, wife of C. P. Silliman, of Vineland, a woman of good social standing, education, refinement and beauty. Some time ago, wearying of society and the luxurious living of the wealthy, Mrs. Silliman decided to adopt the life of a milkmaid purely as a diversion. Every morning at four o'clock this society belle can be seen starting from her elegant country home in an outfit that is a veritable house on wheels. Unattended she drives from house to house and leaves the pint or quart of lacteal fluid as daintily as she receives her callers in evening dress. The townspeople, at first astonished, became so charmed with the innovation that her trade is increasing daily. Mr. and Mrs. Silliman are financially able to live in any style they may see fit and this fad makes the pretty milkmaid all the more conspicuous in her endeavor to outfad faddom.—N. Y. Sun.

Beaver in Colorado.

Beaver have become so numerous in Colorado that the ranchmen want them killed off to save their property.

FRILLS OF FASHION.

Pretty Fancies That Are Now in Favor with Followers of Fine Dress.

Gloves for the elbow-sleeved gown are shown with lacing of gold or silver cord from waist to elbow on the outer seam. The same thing is seen in shoulder length gloves and the lacing is not only decorative but also useful in fitting the glove to the arm and keeping it in place, says the New York Sun.

The latest thing in presents for the golf girl is a pair, or many pairs, of the startling red or green silk golf stockings, with huge monograms embroidered on the knees. The red stockings have the monogram in green, the green ones in red, and the girl who will not embroider a pair for her chum is no true friend.

Wonderful colorings and designs are appearing in the new silks, the manufacturers seeming to have counted confidently on increasing popularity for the Louis XVI. and Louis XV. modes. These exquisite brocades and stripes will make stunning coats, and the beautiful pompadour silks will be used more than ever, as foundation for chiffon, mousseline and other semi-transparent materials.

Jeweled lace is a fad in both Paris and London, and is a gorgeous toilette detail even if slightly barbaric. Many a grande dame wears real jewels of great value sprinkled over her old point, but the ordinary woman can accomplish wonders by buying the imitation stones which are sold for the purpose and applying them artistically to handsome heavy lace.

The latest imported French lingerie shows all the seams joined by narrow beading instead of being sewed as seams. On some of the garments baby ribbon is run through all of this beading, but that elaboration is not considered necessary.

A bit of feminine folly which is, so the corset makers say, becoming more common than ever before, consists in having the skirt hook on the front of the corset and the garter clasps and fixtures of the garters attached to the corsets made of gold and often jeweled. Corset and garter sets for this purpose are shown in all of the swell corset shops, and the prices of the sets run from ten dollars to sums that represent mild extravagance.

The display of art jewels at the Paris exposition has had much to do with spreading a taste for the unusual and unique in jewels, and the jewelers' shops are full of odd and beautiful examples of the art work. There is a greater call for hand-wrought gold work than ever before within the memory of this generation, and it is difficult to find goldsmiths who are equal to the demands of this new fad. One firm noted for its exclusive designs has a series of birthday rings, designed for the Paris exposition and altogether charming. The sign of the zodiac is used for the motif in the carving of the ring, and the birthstone, in cabochon form, is shown somewhere in the design, but not conventionally set.

AUTOMOBILES IN THE SAHARA.

French Government Plans a Regular Service for the Great Desert.

The automobile has invaded the desert of Sahara. Several Frenchmen have made trips recently through a large part of the waste country in southern Algiers with such success that the French government has officially undertaken a series of tests. A project for a regular service of control and revictualing has resulted. The government plans to connect the various oases by regular lines of automobiles, says the Chicago Inter Oceon.

Since France's greed for territory has impelled her to spread the boundaries of her African possessions far into the Sahara desert, the problem of keeping open lines of communication and supply has been most serious. At present camels are used to transport the necessary goods and provisions from oasis to oasis and to carry the mails. But it is hoped now to change this.

Camels can go about three days without water, although to be kept in the best of condition they should have water every day. Their normal rate of travel is from three to five miles an hour, although the best dromedaries will make ten miles an hour and keep it up for ten hours a day.

With these limitations, the problem of communicating across the desert between points over 300 miles apart has been an extremely difficult one. And farther to the south, where the oases are more remote and the temperature often reaches 133 degrees, the task has been practically an impossibility.

The experiments made have shown that gasoline automobiles can far outdo the camel as a means of transportation in dry countries. Trips of 500 miles in length can be accomplished without great difficulty. Twenty miles an hour is attained in many parts of the desert, and the best speed of the camels can be practically doubled anywhere. Besides this, high temperatures have no effect on the running of the machines, and the amount of goods that can be carried is largely in excess of a camel's load.

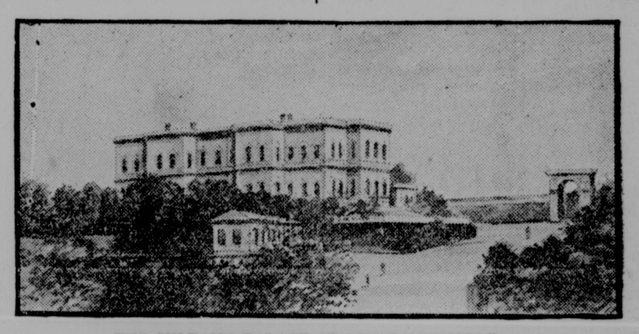
In the desert of Sahara there are between 1,500,000 and 2,500,000 square miles. The exact extent of the waste of shifting sands is unknown. A part of it is now open to some degree of civilization, through the long-distance traveling powers of the camels. If the automobiles prove as great a success in the desert as the preliminary experiments promise, another large part of the desert will become tributary to civilized man.

The Row Between Turkey and France

Jealousy About the Division of the Spoils Will Prevent Powers from Driving Sultan Out of Europe

ALTHOUGH it is hardly probable that Russia and other interested powers will permit the present Franco-Turkish misunderstanding to develop into anything serious—anything that might disturb the balance of power, as established by the Berlin congress of 1877—yet the incident is sufficiently interesting to deserve a few words of explanation.

Some years ago the Turkish government granted to a French company the privilege of constructing a chain of quays in Constantinople and conducting a general ferry and freight business. The Frenchmen invested considerable capital in the enterprise, but when they attempted to operate their various properties the sultan objected and imposed conditions which made the franchise practically worthless. From time to time the French ambassador, M. Constans, demanded recognition of the company's property rights, but could not secure a satisfactory reply from the porte. Finally he presented a protest to the Ottoman foreign minister, reciting the grievances of the concessionaires and closing with the announcement that should the Turkish government fail to comply with the demands contained in the protocol he would leave Constantinople and that Munir Bey, the Turkish ambassador at Paris, would receive his passports. The sultan hesitated, then issued an irade, which proved unsatisfactory to M. Constans, and finally permitted the latter to leave Constantinople in high dudgeon.



THE SULTAN'S PALACE AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

The severing of diplomatic relations between the two countries does not mean that war is imminent; but unless some third power interferes it may lead to all sorts of annoying entanglements. To show its resentment, the Turkish government has already issued an edict imposing a heavy tax on French religious institutions in Turkey, and France has withdrawn its surveillance over the agitators of the "Young Turks" residing at Paris. Hitherto the French minister of police has used his entire force of secret service men to watch these so-called conspirators, whose principal object is the overthrow of the ruling Turkish dynasty.

Should France attempt to solve the existing difficulties by recourse to arms, all Europe would be forced to take a part in the conflict, as every nation has some interest or other at stake in the orient. The sultan knows this as well as his enemies, and one of our American humorists has put the sentiment in clever doggerel:

The sultan smiled in crafty glee,
And murmured: "Do your worst.
Ye nations must, to get at me,
Whip one another first."

But, sooner or later, the "eastern question" must be settled, and it might just as well be now. Disinterested observers of history are unanimous on this point. But whether the world's war lords consider the present a favorable opportunity for quarreling over the "sick man's" spoils is another question.

Certain it is that much trouble and thousands of lives would have been saved had Alexander of Russia listened to the counsel of Napoleon in 1807, when the great French general proposed the division of European Turkey between the great nations, France and Russia to divide the spoils. The plan could have been carried out easily at that time, and the Crimean conflict and the Russo-Turkish war of 1877 avoided. The Turk must leave Europe. That is settled. He is an invader, intolerant of progress and steeped in corruption. His exit from Constantinople will mark a new era in the history of civilization and prove a blessing to the Mussulmans themselves.

G. W. WEIPPIERT.

Sleep Produced by Mechanical Means

Science Comes to the Temporary Relief of Sufferers from Insomnia—New French Inventions

HAPPY is the man who can go to sleep as soon as his head touches the pillow. Once his name was legion, but in these days of trolley cars, railroad trains and street noise he is rara avis, so far as our cities are concerned. Insomnia, once a sporadic affliction, nowadays is a prevalent disorder, and scientific men everywhere are giving their best thought to the discovery of remedies and contrivances to overcome its baneful effects.

Sleeplessness, unless checked in time, inevitably leads to most serious consequences. Nine-tenths of the victims of paresis and kindred brain and nervous diseases can trace their downward physical and mental career to the want of sleep; and the number of suicides resulting from insomnia is constantly increasing.

Dr. Berillon, probably the most celebrated of French physicians, uses the Matthieu "alouette" for the treatment of insomnia. This device consists of a small box, from the top of which projects a nickel pivot, penetrating the centers of two horizontal, rectangular panels of ebony, eight inches long and one inch high. A clockwork inside the box causes the ebony panels, one above the other, to revolve in opposite directions. Each of the panels is studded on both sides by a horizontal row of bright circular mirrors, maintaining a velocity of one revolution per second. As soon as the patient concentrates his gaze upon the revolving panels he becomes fascinated by the vibrating glitter. The monotony of the stimulus soon fatigues the eyes, which unconsciously close in sleep.

"FASCINATOR" USED TO PRODUCE NATURAL SLEEP.

The medical men of Paris were the first to recognize the importance of devising artificial means to produce sleep, and in the celebrated Saltpetrien hospital in the French capital a contrivance, called the "fascinator," has for some months been used with wonderful success. This machine, the invention of one Verdin, an instrument maker, is a sort of a helmet adjusted to the head by means of two straps. A plate of steel, four inches wide by one inch high, rests horizontally across the forehead, and from the center of this metallic strip protrudes a small tube of steel, into whose end is inserted a flexible wire tipped with a glistening nickel ball. By bending the wire the ball may be fixed at any desired angle above and very near the eyes. The bright ball is raised until the stare becomes forced and the eyes converge. After thus concentrating his vision for some minutes the patient experiences a decided heaviness of the eyelids, the initial process of sleep has begun, and somnolent repose soon follows.

The medical world, once wedded to the use of anaesthetic drugs, has made rapid forward strides during the past decade in the treatment of nervous disorders; and both European and American experts agree that drugs, in the long run, produce more diseases than they cure. The employment of sleep-producing machines, designed to concentrate the user's attention upon one set of sensory impressions, they pronounce reasonable and founded upon observation of nature.

Sleeplessness is a disease more common among men than women, probably on account of the fierce business competition of these days, which overtaxes certain brain cells and keeps them in enforced activity. Machine-made sleep may afford temporary relief in such cases, but a permanent cure can be effected only by a long period of rest and relinquishment of business or professional cares. The victim of insomnia should never lose sight of the fact that he is on the verge of mental collapse.

THE HOUSEHOLD

NEGRITAS OF LUZON.

Among These New Fellow-Citizens of Ours Love-Making Is Conducted on a Peculiar Plan.

This savage tribe once dominated the entire island of Luzon, but are now only found scattered here and there among the mountains. Their "reals," or villages, are built of bamboo and palm leaves, and built high above the ground, reminding one of bird cages, hung among the low branches of the trees.

A ladder of bamboo is the means of reaching these shelters from the rain and wind, for the Negritas use their houses for no other purpose. Their lives are spent in the open, fishing and hunting.

MADE MAN AND WIFE.

In spite of flat noses, thick lips and tightly curling hair these savages are a handsome race, with physiques almost faultless, bronze coloring, statuesque proportions and graceful movements.

Woe to the enemy who falls into their hands, for they are both cruel and treacherous.

The girls of the Negritas tribe marry as young as 12, seldom as late as 15, and the wooing is curious.

When the bridegroom approaches, though he may be the girl's own choice, she must immediately take flight, and, untrammeled by clothing, swift of foot, she often gives him a long chase, ere ne overtakes her. If unusually reluctant she may escape him by taking refuge in a "real," but she is generally captured and led back to the parents, who are interested spectators.

The mother receives the captive, and leads her, still resisting, up the ladder to the door of the cabin; then the father seizes the man and assists him in the same peremptory manner to mount the bamboo ladder.

Once inside the cabin the eldest male relative fills the cocanut shell with water, then dashes its contents over the couple, and as they kneel before him, more or less gently strikes their heads together, which signifies that man and wife, which they now are, should have but one mind.

The bridal party then descend to the ground and the marriage dance begins.

Native maidens, under the spell of terpsichore, whirl, spin and leap into the air, or sway like the graceful, wind-stirred palm trees, beneath which their lives are passed.

Then follows a feast of fruit and rice, after which the bridegroom takes his bride to his father's "real," where she continues her life of fishing, hunting roots for food and cooking the mountain rice, which is grown in the most primitive manner, without even clearing the ground where it is sown.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MAKING A ROSE JAR.

Two Recipes Which Have Been Used for Some Time and Are Highly Recommended.

The rind of two lemons cut thin, one pound bay salt, one ounce orris root, powdered; one ounce gum benzoin, one ounce cinnamon, half ounce cloves, one ounce nutmegs, one grain musk finely ground, 12 bay leaves, a few sage leaves, rosemary and lavender cut small, one ounce eau de cologne, one ounce bergamot. Mix all together in a pan, and add sweet flowers in their natural state, as they come into blossom; stir it frequently, at least once a day. It must be put in a covered stone pot, with a wooden spoon to stir it with. At the end of two or three months you will have a sweet-scented mass ready to fill a number of the pretty Japanese rose-jars. Roses may be thrown in from time to time.

Another recipe, said to be one of the very best, is the following: Prepare two dry pecks of rose leaves and buds, one handful each of orange flowers, violets and jessamine, one ounce each sliced orris root and cinnamon, one-quarter ounce musk (if desired), one-quarter pound sliced angelica root, one-quarter pound red part of cloves, two handfuls of lavender flowers, heliotrope and mignonette; one-half handful each of rosemary flowers, bay and laurel leaves, three sweet oranges stuck full of cloves and dried in the oven, then powdered in a mortar; one-half handful of marjorum, two handfuls of balm of gilead, dried; one handful each of bergamot, balm, pineapple and goose-mint leaves. Mix well together and put in layers in a large china jar; sprinkle salt between the layers. Add a small bottle of extract of new-mown hay and moisten with brandy. Stir occasionally.—Success With Flowers.

A CASE OF CONSCIENCE.

How Fidelity to a Trust Got Mrs. Broadway a Wetting, as Explained by Herself.

Mrs. Broadway's dress was bedraggled and her feet were wet. Moreover, she was cross, which, says the New York Sun, was but a natural consequence of her waterlogged condition.

"How did you happen to get so wet?" asked Mr. Broadway.

"I was playing keeper to another person's conscience," was the gloomy response. "A man rode uptown in our car the other night that deserves a niche in history. It was on his account that I have ruined my dress and my best pair of shoes. He got on the car at Thirty-seventh street and sat down on the front seat, facing me. It was raining hard and the conductor did not come around right away to take up his fare.

"The man wanted to change to a cross-town car at Forty-second street, and he began to beckon to the conductor to come up and get his nickel, but that public servant was huddled up comfortably on the rear platform and never budged. When we reached Forty-second street he had still failed to materialize and the man with a conscience was beside himself with anxiety.

"He couldn't make up his mind what to do. He didn't like the idea of being carried past his corner, but he liked still less to leave the car without paying his fare. Finally he hit upon a happy expedient of which I was the central figure.

"'Pardon me,' he said, 'will you take this nickel and when the conductor comes around give it to him, please?'

"With that he dropped the money into my hand and was off the car and streaking along down Forty-second street like a mad goat."

"What a chump!" put in Mr. Broadway. "He ought to have a monument erected to his memory. There isn't another man in New York that would have done that."

"That's what the men all said," continued Mrs. Broadway. "And he certainly is one of a kind. His actions were so unusual that they made me feel awfully foolish, and the remarks of the other occupants of those two seats did anything rather than restore my equanimity. 'I wonder how long since he dropped down?' said one, and, 'It looks like a shame to pass up a good beer that way,' said another. And then they all laughed.

"As for me, I sat there and blushed. I didn't know what to do with the nickel, for, try as I might, I couldn't induce the conductor to come up to the front of the car, and as I was nearing my own destination, I was scared half to death for fear I wouldn't have a chance to cash it before we reached my corner. And sure enough I didn't. It quit raining, too, just as we got to our street, and I could have run home between drops if I hadn't been burdened with that awful nickel and its owner's conscience."

HE WAS OFF THE CAR.

"But why didn't you give it to somebody else that was going farther on and let him turn it in?" asked Mr. Broadway.

Mrs. Broadway looked at her husband sternly.

"How could I do that?" she demanded. "I had my own conscience to look after, as well as his. That man had intrusted his money to me, and it was my duty to deliver it to the proper person, even if I had to ride to Jericho and back. I had been carried seven blocks past this street when the conductor finally paid our end of the car a visit, and I then had to get off in the pouring rain, but I had preserved the honor of that man's conscience and my own, so I suppose I ought not worry about a little thing like a soiled gown and soaking shoes."

Mr. Broadway looked at his wife admiringly.

"By Jove, Kate," he said, "you are a trump. But you didn't walk back, did you? You took a car, of course?"

"Certainly," said Mrs. Broadway.

"And that cost you another nickel, too," he observed.

Mrs. Broadway flushed slightly.

"No, it didn't," she said. "The conductor didn't pay much attention to me when I boarded the car and when he went past he merely called out: 'Fare, fare,' in a vague, impersonal way, so I just sat there and never offered to pay him."

"Oh," said Mr. Broadway.

THE FARMING WORLD

FOREST FIRE LANES.

Their Construction Very Materially Reduces the Danger of Great and General Conflagrations.

It is generally recognized throughout Europe that the construction of suitable fire lanes throughout the forest conduces more to the prevention of great conflagrations than any other institution. These serve as vantage points in the fighting of fire and often in themselves are sufficient to prevent its spread. By means of fire lanes the country is cut into parcels and the danger of great conflagrations very materially reduced. These fire lanes, in order to be efficient, must be wide, clean and well cared for; otherwise they are of little use.

Fire lanes may be constructed at slight expense. After the wood is cut it is necessary to plow three or four furrows along the edges and then to burn over the lane at times when there is no danger of setting fire to the neighboring woods. A lane 50 feet in width would be quite efficient.

The scheme which I have to suggest is that these fire lanes be constructed and kept in order in a way similar to the construction of state roads, which have been so popular of late. In this way no terrible burden of expense rests upon anybody. The individual benefited thereby pays part, the county another part and the state pays the remainder.

FIRE LANE IN A FOREST.

New Jersey was the first state to take any radical step toward the improvement of her public highways. The state aid law provides that, on petition of the owners of two-thirds of the lands bordering any public road, not less than a mile in length, asking that the road be improved and agreeing to pay ten per cent. of the cost, the county officials shall improve the road, one-third of the expenses to be borne by the state, if the road is brought to the standard fixed by the state commissioner of public roads, and the balance—66 2-3 per cent.—by the county. The state's expenditures for such improvements in any one year are limited to $150,000, while the county is limited to one-fourth of one per cent. of its assessed valuation. Since 1895 the applications for new roads have been far in excess of the limit prescribed by law.

It seems to me that it would be a simple process to extend this system to the construction of fire lanes. It is foolish to talk of forest culture until fires are reduced in number. For this purpose fire lanes are essential, and this is the only scheme I know of which seems practical and possible. Once institute a perfect system of fire lanes under combined state and local control, and the number and severity of fires will be reduced to such an extent that the evil will, I am certain, gradually fade away, and modern systems of silviculture will gradually creep in as the value of wood and land increases, said Dr. John Gifford before the New Jersey Horticultural society.

The Highest-Priced Butter.

Separator butter commands the highest prices on every butter market in the world. It stands best for fresh consumption and best after long keeping. The best trade in every locality can no longer be supplied with anything else. Every dealer and almost every consumer recognizes its unquestionable superiority. Almost every butter prize at fairs, conventions and exhibitions now goes to the separator-made entries, and this is invariably the case in all important contests. Separator-made butter scores from five to twenty-five points higher than the most carefully made gravity-system product.—National Rural.

True Economy in Hay.

There is only one sure way to save hay, and that is to make something else take the place of it. The man who saves it by feeding scantily is not really saving anything; but the man who makes cornfodder that he usually wastes serve as hay is saving hay and making money on the transaction. If cornfodder is to take the place of hay it must be good fodder. It must be cut at the right time, cured in the right way and kept good until it is fed.—National Stockman.

Result of Spraying Tests.

At the Vermont experiment station, spraying potatoes during ten years, of which an account was kept, showed a yield of 296 bushels per acre for the sprayed potatoes against 173 bushels unsprayed. Spraying potatoes should be directed against both disease and insects. The remedies may and for economy in applying should be combined. When Paris green or London purple is used separate from bordeaux mixture a little fresh lime added will prevent injury to tender plants.

What Is Age?

Upon one occasion when Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff was in the company of the distinguished physician, the late Sir Andrew Clarke, their talk turned upon old age. Asked to define age, Sir Mountstuart took refuge in the conventional view by which a woman is the age she looks, and the man the age he feels.

"Well enough for society," commented Sir Andrew. "But what is age?"

"Suppose you define it?" suggested Sir Mountstuart.

"It seems to me," replied Sir Andrew, that age begins when we cease to be able to adapt ourselves to the changes of our environment. A man who cannot do that is already aged, whatever the sum of his years."

"That reminds me," said Sir Mountstuart, "of a story told of a caller upon Cardinal Newman during a severe illness. 'He is very ill,' the observer said, 'nevertheless I don't think he is ging to die. He has a great deal of Latin read to him, and he is made almighty cross by the false quantities!'"

"That is deep sea sounding," Sir Andrew remarked.—Youth's Companion.

Truthful Youth.

"Ah!" sighed Percival Montague, gazing into the limpid eyes of Millicent Pyefaice—"ah! you are more beautiful than the day."

With a happy smile the maiden sank into his arms.

But if she had only thought of the fact that the day was one when the temperature registered an even hundred, and the humidity was along in the nineties, she would have known that Pecival was not giving the truth very much of a stretch.—Baltimore American.

Feminine Financiering.

He—You owe me ten kisses! Pay up!

She—Explain, sir!

"I won 'em! You know very well I wagered a dozen gloves against ten kisses and won! I—"

She—Oh! but kisses, you know—

He (firmly)—Kisses should be paid just as religiously as any other debt.

She (thoughtfully)—Just the same as a note?

"Yes."

"Or a check?"

"Yes."

"Or—or a—draft?"

"Certainly!"

"Then, you poor fellow, I'll give you a draft on mamma!"

(He never smiled again.)—San Francisco Bulletin.

From Mutton to Money.

There is, or rather was, years ago in this city, a gentleman who did a thriving business in mutton in the market district, and was well known to hundreds of people as a bright and original sort of man. Another man, who had not seen him for nearly 20 years, met him a short time ago, and after inquiries as to his health asked if he was in the same business.

"Oh, no," was the reply. "I'm presiding now."

The man who was inquiring about him was really phased by this answer, and remarked that he presumed it was his ignorance, but he must admit he derived no idea of his business from the statement that the former market man "was presiding."

"Why," he replied, "I mean that I am a president—president of a bank in Cambridge."—Boston Record.

The Literary Maiden.

"You must have discerned my love," sighed Harold Spooneigh to Beatrice Ritem, "for my face is as an open page to you."

"Huh," sweetly replied the fair young girl, "as far as I am concerned, your face is a rejected manuscript."—Baltimore American.

Secrets, as a rule, are disappointments.—Atchison Globe.

If you are not happy when at work there is little hope for you.—Atchison Globe.

Love, though blind, never stumbles while it lasts.—Atchison Globe.

Never depend upon your genius; if you have talent, industry will improve it; if you have none, industry will supply the deficiency.—John Ruskin.

On the Line.—Old Lady—"Can you tell me, if you plaze, where I'll get the Blackrock tram?" Dublin Car Driver—"Begorr, ma'am, if you don't watch yourself, you'll get it in the small of your back in about half a minute."—Punch.

The Usual Fate.—"What has become of that octogenarian who was telling us the other day how to live to be a hundred years old?" "He died at the age of 82."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

His Preference.—"Would you rather have something else than a piece of pie?" asked one kind neighbor of little Freddie, who had run an errand for her. "Yes, ma'am," said Freddie, promptly; "I wu'd ruther hav' two pieces."—Ohio State Journal.

"Subbubs seems to be popular among his neighbors." "I should say he was popular. Why, when they got up private theatricals once he was given the principal part, and no one disputed his rigat to it."—Philadelphia Press.

Ellen—"Oh! I know I'm going to have a lovely time this evening." Tessie—"Just because Fred is coming?" Ellen—"But you see Fred and I had a tiff last night, and it will be heavenly making up."—Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Higgins—"I did something to-day that I've been screwing up courage to do for a long time. I paid that odious Mrs. Bjones a call I've owed for a long time." Mr. Higgins—"I can sympathize with you, my dear. I paid the odious Mr. Bjones a bill I've owed just as long."—Nashville American.

No Ground for Hesitancy.

Frette—Do you know, it's got so with me now that when I start out in the morning to go down to business I have to stop at the corner to study which route will be the least apt to confront me with a creditor.

Callous—Thank goodness, I am no longer a victim of any such sensation as that.

"What! You surely don't mean to say by that you don't owe anyone."

"Far from it. I simply mean that there is no direction I can take that will insure any such exemption, and as a consequence it doesn't pay to hesitate."—Boston Courier.

Autocrat of the Table.

The head waiter at the Cliff house, Manitou, was given a smoker the other night and a fine gold watch. The distinguished official responded appropriately and with dignity to the presentation speech. He then lifted his hand in token that the audience was at an end. His guests departed and the great man was alone.—Denver Post.

Suffered Somewhat.

Doctor—Do you ever have ringing sounds in your ears?

Patient—Certainly. I'm a telephone girl.—Philadelphia Record.

Wisconsin Farm Lands.

The best of farm lands can be obtained now in Marinette County, Wisconsin, on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, at a low price and on very favorable terms. Wisconsin is noted for its fine crops, excellent markets and healthful climate. Why rent a farm when you can buy one much cheaper than you can rent and in a few years it will be your own property. For particulars address F. A. Miller, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, Chicago.

The actor may get a longer vacation than the ribbon-counter clerk, but the latter continues to eat regularly.—Chicago Daily News.

You Can Get Allen's Foot-Ease FREE.

Write to-day to Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y., for a FREE sample of Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder. It cures sweating, damp, swollen, aching feet. Makes new or tight shoes easy. Always use it to Break in New Shoes. At all druggists and shoe stores; 25c.

There's always life in the old land. The trouble is you have to dig to find it.—Atlanta Constitution.

What is the use in employing some one to do your dyeing for you. If you use PUTNAM FADELESS DYES you can do it just as well as a professional.

When your troubles are so firmly anchored in your mind that you dream of them, whoa! —Atchison Globe.

I am sure Piso's Cure for Consumption saved my life three years ago.—Mrs. Thos. Robbins, Maple Street, Norwich, N. Y., Feb. 17, 1900.

All tricks come back to the trickster.—Ram's Horn.

Cheek That Ugly Cough

With Hoxsie's Croup Cure. No opium. 50 cts.

Selfishness runs in families.—Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

St. Jacobs Oil

beats all records and always will. Cures

Rheumatism,

Sprains

Weakness of the limbs and all Aches and Pains.

Acts like magic

Conquers Pain

TRADE MARK

STARK TREES best by Test—77 YEARS. LARGEST Nursery. FRUIT BOOK free. We WANT MORE SALESMEN PAY CASH Weekly STARK BRO'S, Louisiana, Mo.; Dansville, N. Y.; Etc

ABSOLUTE SECURITY.

Genuine Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Must Bear Signature of

Brent Good

See Fac-Simile Wrapper Below.

Very small and as easy to take as sugar.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

FOR HEADACHE. FOR DIZZINESS. FOR BILIOUSNESS. FOR TORPID LIVER. FOR CONSTIPATION. FOR SALLOW SKIN. FOR THE COMPLEXION

GENUINE MUST HAVE FACSIMILE SIGNATURE

Price 25 Cents | Purely Vegetable. Brent Good

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

THE BEST WATERPROOF CLOTHING IN THE WORLD BEARS THIS TRADE MARK

TOWER'S FISH BRAND

MADE IN BLACK OR YELLOW

TAKE NO SUBSTITUTES

ON SALE EVERYWHERE CATALOGUES FREE SHOWING FULL LINE OF GARMENTS AND HATS

A. J. TOWER CO., BOSTON, MASS.

MAN WANTED

AT ONCE WITH RIG

To sell our Poultry Mixture; straight salary $15 per week and expenses; year's contract, weekly pay. We furnish bank reference of our reliability. EUREKA MFG. CO., Dept. 5, East St. Louis, Ill.

RAG DOLLS

To any little girl who will send us 10 cents, together with the names and addresses of (3) little friends, we will send, postpaid, one of our CRY BABY DOLLS.

ART FABRIC MILLS, Department C. C. 40 White Street, NEW YORK.

READERS OF THIS PAPER DESIRING TO BUY ANYTHING ADVERTISED IN ITS COLUMNS SHOULD INSIST UPON HAVING WHAT THEY ASK FOR, REFUSING ALL SUBSTITUTES OR IMITATIONS.

RHEUMATISM Van Buren's Rheumatic Compound is the only positive cure. Past experience speaks for itself. Depot 85 S. California Ave., Chicago.

Finest TEA Grown 45 cts. per lb.

Special Price to Agents. Write HOME TEA COMPANY, 22 Pearl St., New York City.

OPIUM WHISKY and other drug habits cured. We want the worst cases. Book and references FREE. Dr. B. M. WOOLLEY, Box 3, Atlanta, Ga.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

A. N. K.—C 1884

PENSIONS on age, disability and Widowhood; P. I. and Claims of any U. S. Service. LAWS FREE. A. W. McCORMICK & SONS, Cincinnati, O.; Washington, D. C.

SOZODONT for the Teeth and Breath 25c

At all Stores, or by mail for the price. HALL & RUCKEL, New York.

WE SHIP DIRECT TO

Contractors and Consumers

LUMBER LATH SHINGLES

MOULDINGS, SASH, DOORS, Etc., AT WHOLESALE PRICES.

COMPLETE HOUSE BILLS. COMPLETE BARN BILLS.

Permission given to examine grades before payment. We ask only satisfactory guarantee that we will get our money when stock is found as bought. SEND IN YOUR LISTS FOR ESTIMATES.

JOHN E. BURNS LUMBER COMPANY,

Long Distance Phones: MONROE 211, MONROE 288, MONROE 290.

40 W. Chicago Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

LIVER TONIC

Cascarets

CANDY CATHARTIC

BEST FOR THE BOWELS

10c. 25c. 50c. ALL DRUGGISTS

NEVER SOLD IN BULK

CURE all bowel troubles, appendicitis, biliousness, bad breath, bad blood, wind on the stomach, bloated bowels, foul mouth, headache, indigestion, pimples, pains after eating, liver trouble, sallow complexion and dizziness. When your bowels don't move regularly you are getting sick. Constipation kills more people than all other diseases together. It is a starter for the chronic ailments and long years of suffering that come afterwards. No matter what ails you, start taking CASCARETS to-day, for you will never get well and be well all the time until you put your bowels right. Take our advice; start with CASCARETS to-day, under an absolute guarantee to cure or money refunded.

GUARANTEED TO CURE: Five years ago the first box of CASCARETS was sold. Now it is over six million boxes a year, greater than any similar medicine in the world. This is absolute proof of great merit, and our best testimonial. We have faith and sell CASCARETS absolutely guaranteed to cure or money refunded. Go buy to-day, two 50c boxes, give them a fair, honest trial, as per simple directions, and if you are not satisfied, after using one 50c box, return the unused 50c box and the empty box to us by mail, or the druggist from whom you purchased it, and get your money back for both boxes. Take our advice—no matter what ails you—start today. Health will quickly follow and you will bless the day you first started the use of CASCARETS. Book free by mail. Address:

STERLING REMEDY CO., NEW YORK or CHICAGO

"MARYLAND, MY MARYLAND."

Mr. J. A. Howells, of Ohio, Writes of His Visit to Oakland.

Mr. J. A. Howells, of the Ashtabula Sentinel, published at Jefferson, O., made a recent visit to Oakland where he was the guest of Captain and Mrs. Matthew Markland, and in last week's issue of his paper Mr. Howells publishes his impressions and a vivid pen picture of the country surrounding Oakland as follows:

"CROOK CREST,"
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 1, 1901.

DEAR READER:—I write you from the top of creation—well, almost. It is nearly three thousand feet above the sea; the sun has come up and cleared off the light fog which had enveloped the valley, in the bosom of which is snuggled the pretty little village of Oakland, some hundreds feet below the "Crest," where we are entertained by Captain and Mrs. Markland.

To us—"my wife and I"—who are used to the level lands of the Western Reserve, this country is a revelation. From our front window, which opens outward on hinges like the sash in a Swiss cottage (on the stage,) we look out over the valley to hills on every hand, so diversified and beautiful in form, one almost believes they are looking thro' a magnifying glass at minature landscape gardening. The fields in the valley are still green, with trees dotted all over them, while on the rounded hills are large fields, here and there a red one which says: this is buckwheat. Very little wheat is raised here; meadows, oats and corn are the crops.

Mixed with the livid green of the fields are the darker green of the forests, and the gorgeous red and crimson of the maples and sumachs and vines which show the coming of autumn.

"High on the hills the miser, Autumn, sits Hoarding his wondrous wealth of treasured gold," while the bright October sun floods all with its warmth. It is very quiet if we except the homely announcement of a hen that a fresh egg may be had for the seeking, or a muffled sound from the village and a passing train that roars through the hills.

Away off twenty miles we see the backbone of the Alleghany mountains, as straight almost as the ridge of a house; distance has mellowed outline and smoothed the sides so that it looks as though you might caress it with your hand as you would the back of a cat.

I have just returned from a stroll through the woods with the Captain. The ferns have turned to a rich brown and the leaves of the young oaks to a bronze while the sassafras has all the colors from yellow to deep red, and the maples are flaming in yellow and crimson; the air is so pure one wishes they had lungs large enough to inflate an air ship, in their greediness to breathe in all the air that surrounds them.

We left Jefferson Saturday afternoon in a heavy rain, but Solson's team carried us to the Eagleville depot, in a steady down-pour, in about forty minutes, and about as dry as we would have been at home. It rained almost all the way to Pittsburg, but ceased before our arrival, where we were warmly greeted by friends.

At 8 a. m. Monday we took the train for Cumberland. It was a surprise to us, for we expected only the best half of us to go beyond Pittsburg, but circumstances took such a turn that we joined the party, and in the language of Mr. Micawber, "confidence was restored, and we were a reunited family."

The usual motley crowd filled the depot—the B. & O.—and we had a 45 minutes wait for a belated western train. Among the hundreds of travelers were a dozen or fifteen boys from 9 to 16 years old, with all manner of bags and bundles, none large, of clothes. They were going to Wheeling to work in a glass house. They were dirty little fellows, and a tall, bare-headed, anxious mother of one of the lot was there to see him off. They were used to work and were possible the second or third generation of glass workers; and one of them may yet be in the whirlegig of American development, be a rich manager and manipulator in the glass business of the country.

The morning was rather gloomy, and the valley of the Monongahelia was full of smoke from the furnaces, mills, coke ovens and the thousands of smoke-producing industries which fill the valley. It was 10 o'clock and we were well up in the mountains before the sun came out and dispelled the gloom; and by the time we reached Cumberland it was delightfully bright and warm.

Cumberland is a wonderful busy city of 20,000 people most of whom seem to be employed on the railroads which center there. We had to wait for almost two hours for the Wheeling train which brought us to this place. When we did start we were soon on a branch of the Potomac which was a green-blue and clear as possible.

Then we came onto a branch of the Youghiogheny and followed it as it wound among the hills. At Piedmont we begin the ascent of the mountains on the "17-mile grade" and go up at an incline of 160 feet to the mile. It requires a good engine and helper to get the train up.

On the top we stop at the beautiful summer resort, Deer Park, which is so popular with Washington, Baltimore and other cities. Two or three miles further on we have Mountain Lake Park. It is the Mountain Chautauqua—most delightful in its situation, of hills thickly wood with oak. In this natural grove are hundreds of cottages and little hotels to take care of the thousands of people who come here for recreation and culture. The auditorium is an immense wooden structure with open sides, erected over a natural amphitheatre. It will seat five thousand people.

We visited the grounds on Wednesday. Here and there a belated cottager was preparing to move and leave the place to solitude and winter. This is the southern Chautauqua and is conducted by Dr. Davidson, whose home is at Cuyahoga Falls.

Thursday.—This morning the valley and hills are rather obscure by clouds and there is an autumn chill in the air with indication of rain.

As a matter of statistics it will be well to say that Oakland is the county seat of Garrett county, the youngest and largest county in Maryland. It was made out of a portion of Allegany county—observe the spelling—in 1872 and named in honor of John W. Garrett, the famous president of the B. & O. railroad. The county is bounded on the south and west by West Virginia; Mason and Dixon's line divides it from Penn's on the north and the north branch of the Potomac river separates it from West Virginia on the southeast—so it is the most remote corner of Maryland from the seaboard.

The village of Oakland has 1,170 inhabitants; the county of Garrett 17,701 normally and in the summer perhaps ten thousand more, for the top of the hills—or more properly speaking, mountains—are alive with visitors from the seaboard and south and everywhere. The village is prettily nestled at the foot of several hills, one of the principal of which is the one from which this is written—"Crook Crest"—named in honor of one of Ohio's great military men, Gen. George Crook. He married Miss Mary Tapscott Dailey, the charming daughter of a famous landlord of that name in Oakland, Cumberland and Wheeling and elder sister of our hostess.

During the war Miss Dailey was a most inveterate little rebel, and it was while stopping at her father's hotel in Cumberland, in February, 1865, that a band of Confederates by a ruse entered the lines—the town at that time was in the hands of the Union forces—and captured General Crook and carried him to Richmond.

Secretary Stanton ordered the arrest of Miss Dailey and her father, but the officer in command at Cumberland knowing they were innocent of any complicity in the affair, by one excuse and another, delayed, until after Appotamax and then there was no need to arrest them. General Crook was soon exchanged and came back to Cumberland, and was again captured, this time by a rebel too, but clad in cavalry gray, but in dainty attire—the winsome beauty, Miss Dailey. It was a case of love at first sight on the part of both, and after she surrendered it proved to be a union that was indissoluble except by death.

General Crook saw much service during the later '60's and all through the next twenty years in the west among the Indians, all of which time his wife was his almost constant companion. In the early '90's he died very suddenly at the Grand Pacific in Chicago while attending a court martial. The General, like all brave men, was very sympathetic. The night before his death he attended the theatre when Mansfield appeared in Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde, and although in poor health it has always been thought by his friends that the strain to his nerves and sensibilities in seeing the play had something to do with his sudden death a few hours after.

Our subject is too large for one letter and will be "continued in our next."

Estray Notice.

This is to give notice that I have taken up as an estray a white ram, with 2 slits in left ear and swallow fork and under bit in right ear. The owner will please come forward, prove property, pay all costs and damages and take same away. The said animal can be found at my farm, 4 miles south of Deer Park.

30 3* CHAS. L. MOON.

I HAVE PURCHASED

THE OAKLAND COAL YARD

of Mr. D. L. Conneway and will continue the business. I will keep constantly on hand a large supply of

HARD AND SOFT

COAL,

KINDLING WOOD, Etc.

All orders will receive prompt attention. Leave orders with the weighmaster or at my residence, the Giessman Hotel.

35-2 GEO. GIESSMAN

Some Reasons

Why You Should Insist on Having

EUREKA HARNESS OIL

Unequaled by any other.
Renders hard leather soft.
Especially prepared.
Keeps out water.
A heavy bodied oil.

HARNESS

An excellent preservative.
Reduces cost of your harness.
Never burns the leather; its
Efficiency is increased.
Secures best service.
Stitches kept from breaking.

OIL

Is sold in all
Localities

Manufactured by Standard Oil Company.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.

Money loaned on Mortgage.

Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.

Agent for the Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.

☞ Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

ADMINISTRATRIX'S NOTICE

This is to give notice, That the Subscriber, of Garrett county, Maryland, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of April next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

DANIEL PLEASANTS,

Given under my hand this 26th day of September, 1901.

MARIA PLEASANTS,
Administratrix.
30 3 Mountain Lake Park, Md.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, that the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

FRANCIS H. RAVENSCROFT,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 20th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1901.

R. A. RAVENSCROFT, Administrator,
Accident, Md.

Appointment of Judge of Election to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 23, 1901.

Francis Garlitz, appointed Democratic Judge of Election by this board at a meeting held Sept. 7, 1901, for Election District No. 3, is found to be disqualified to serve as such, and in his place and stead W. H. Kaufman is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President.

ORDER NISI.

George W. Wilson vs. Joseph B. Wilson. No. 1364 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County.

Ordered, this 1st day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and one, by the Circuit Court for Allegany county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by James W. Wilson, committee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 2nd day of November, 1901; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Oakland, Md., once a week for three successive weeks before the 2nd day of November, 1901.

The report states the amount of sale to be $80.00.

R. M. LUMAN, Clerk.

True copy—test:
R. M. LUMAN, Clerk.

Examiners' Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the following proposed new county road to be located is to run, viz: Beginning for the same at the south end of Garrett V. Moon's lane and running thence down Laurel creek and through the lands of the Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company, James L. Harvey and J. B. Lipscomb and along the lines of said Lipscomb and Charles Cooper and through the lands of the said Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company to the town of Schell, a distance of three miles, and examine whether the proposed new road should be located, will meet on the 11th day of November, 1901, for such purpose and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said proposed new county road to be made, and, if so, to locate the same, and perform their duty in the premises.

J. H. WILSON,
JOHN W. HARVEY,
ANDREW J. LEE,
Examiner.

Oakland Pharmacy

[JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

Treasury Department.

OFFICE OF
THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., August 20, 1901.

Whereas, by satisfactory evidence presented to the undersigned, it has been made to appear that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, has compiled with all the provisions of the Statutes of the United States, required to be compiled with before an association shall be authorized to commence the business of banking.

Now therefore I, Charles G. Dawes, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, is authorized to commence the business of Banking as provided in Section Fifty-one hundred and sixty-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

SEAL

In testimony whereof witness my hand and Seal of office this twentieth day of August, 1901.

(Signed) CHARLES G. DAWES,
oct 31 Comptroller of the Currency.

No. 5943.

The Garrett County Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:

DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MD.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.

Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.

F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

THE
SECOND NATIONAL BANK
of CUMBERLAND, MD.

Designated United States Depository.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000
Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
John Sheridan, A. Hunter Boyd,
David W. Sloan.

CONSTIPATION CURED!

Nearly everyone suffers in a greater or less degree from this dreadful disease. It is dangerous to neglect the bowels, and often by doing so a foundation is laid for serious ailments.

Those suffering from Constipation suffer from slow Poison.

OUR NATIVE HERBS

cures Constipation quietly and permanently.

No Pain, No Griping, No Binding effect afterwards. Its action is pleasant and sure.

200 DAYS' TREATMENT $1.00.

A CURE GUARANTEED OR THE MONEY BACK.

"When a girl I had Small Pox succeded by Typhoid Fever and Measels. I was left with Constipation and Sinking Spells. Sometimes I felt that I could not live. After having various physicians treat me with no benefit I bought a box of Our Native Herbs, which seems to be the only medicine that suits my case. I believe it saved my life." MRS. M. MILLER, Crellin, Md.

No Case Too Stubborn for Our Native Herbs To Conquer.

THE ALONZO O. BLISS CO.,
SOLE PROPRIETORS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

A. C. BROOKE,
Local Agent. Mountain Lake Park, Md.

A box of Tablets or Powder mailed to any address upon receipt of $1.00.

Burlington Route

It costs no more to ride on this beautiful train than on any other.

Chicago-St. Paul Minneapolis Limited Express

It is electric lighted and heated by steam, carries a library-buffet-smoking car, a dining car à la carte and everything there is to make one comfortable.

Leaves CHICAGO 6.30 p. m. Daily

We sell through tickets, reserve sleeping car berths, furnish maps and time tables, and can, perhaps, be of service in other ways. Kindly write or call.

H. E. HELLER, District Passenger Agent,
632 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Midget Harness Riveter.

Complete repair shop in one tool. Will not wear out. Punches the hole, drives and clinches at one operation. Every horse owner, liveryman, teamster will buy on sight. Does the work of any $25 machine. Complete outfit with big bog of rivets will be sent for

ONLY 50 CENTS.

Agents Wanted.

HANDY ADJUSTABLE LIFTER. Handiest article ever invented for lifting hot pans, stove lids, etc. 15c, postpaid.

S. T. WILSON & CO.,
Box 103. Wilson, W. Va.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!

I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 20,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.

All trespassing will be prosecuted to the utlest extent of the law.

Call on or address:

C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.

Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.

Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

133½ acres coal land on Youghiogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale.

House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187½ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 26½ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 200 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ miles southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoroughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north of Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swauger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to

JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY,
ARCHITECT,
Office 7 North Liberty St.
CUMBERLAND, MD.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in McComas's Building, Main St.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. fe14-1y

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD.
Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients. 45—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. '88 10 f

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.
Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 16-'99

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office opposite Garrett County Bank.
Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county, Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 6 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER,
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.
Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by aneroid barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26t*

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate.
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.
Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats, descriptions and estimates furnished. 40-1yr.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT MAY 19, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 19, 1901. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily	3.42	A. M
No. 3—Daily	7.35	A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday	10.01	A. M
No. 55—Daily	4.52	P. M
No. 1—Daily	10.07	P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 8—Daily	5.50	A. M
No. 2—Daily	6.52	A. M
No. 46—Express, daily	4.41	P. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun	5.12	P. M
No. 12—Daily	8.35	P. M
No. 4—Daily	12.37	A. M

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager.
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT SEPT. 29, 1901.

SOUTHWARD No. 3 P. M.	SOUTHWARD No. 1 A. M.	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2 NOON	NORTHWARD No. 4 P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. Junc.	10 51	6 01
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 15	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	5 15
6 00*	9 50* ar	Elk Garden	*8 10	*4 25
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 38	10 27	Thomas	8 38	3 53
7 10	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 15
6 48	10 35 lv	Coketon	8 35	3 50
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 09	3 15
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 10†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 15
	NOON			P. M.
8 46*	12 52† ar	Beverly	lv	†1 44
9 10*	1 15† ar	Huttonsville	lv	†1 20
M. P.	3 15* ar P. M.	Bealington	lv	P. M. *11 45 A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, General Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agent

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1901. NUMBER 33.

N. Y. TAMMANY IS GORMAN'S MODEL

And Rule or Ruin Is His Single Aim, An End For Which He Toils.

THAT ELECTION MEASURE

Was Solely Designed to Retrieve Shattered Political Fortunes.

The political world like every other department of life, is constantly undergoing the process of evolution. The business of politics, as understood by the last generation, was far less complicated then, when the questions to be dealt with were more simple, even in affairs of national concern, than they are to-day. It is true that from the beginning, the rising young republic had dealings to a greater or less extent, with almost every other nation, but the propositions were more concrete, and consequently more easily settled.

When the country was in more of a primitive state, when our fathers were carving sites for their homes out of the wilderness, they required more time to attend to matters, pertaining to actual manual labor, and had less leisure for the discussion of abstract theories. Municipal and state politics were reduced to a few simple propositions. These were quite often very bitterly discussed but the conditions were not difficult to comprehend. Personal references, self interest, and even more than now, prejudice and spite, pure and simple, were factors that entered even more largely into their discussions than with the politicians of today.

Personal encounters and duels were of remarkably frequent occurrence. Some of the best men and most eminent statesmen of that day lost their lives in duels, and assassinations were not infrequent. In this connection we need not refer to the duel between Burr and Hamilton, resulting in the death of the latter, the founder of our national financial system, and secretary of the treasury under Washington, not to mention the personal conflicts of Old Hickory, Henry Clay, John Randolph et. al. The articles of the dueling code were in every statesman's pocket, and a brace of pistols in his portmaneau. However, this tendency of resorting to personal conflicts has been almost entirely eliminated from the methods of settling political controversies at the present day. Although it cannot be denied that the greater complications in all that can be dominated by political managers as policies resolve themselves more and more into economical questions for political chicanery and corruption that evidence themselves by steals of various degrees from the public treasury of municipality, state and nation.

Public improvements in each of these departments are now conducted on such a comparatively colossal scale that opportunities are offered for unscrupulous politicians and political organizations, bound together for no other purpose than for personal emolument, who have entirely lost sight of the people's interests in the headlong chase for everything in sight or prospect that may be cribbed from a long-suffering and indulgent public.

A corrupt combination of this character, of which the Gorman ring is a conspicuous example, is an organization of individuals who have held public office for periods of varying duration, which have given them opportunities for making themselves acquainted with all the most effective methods for plucking the public goose.

A state legislature dominated by a ring of this character throws out its tendrils in every direction, permeating even municipal governments, till they control every public contract of any importance to the extent that none shall be let to any contractor who will not consent to give up a large share of the spoils, or agree to use his influence in every way to keep the organization in power.

Of such a nature are the Rasin contracts that have been sucking, vampire-like, the life blood of Baltimore. Such are the methods of Tammany hall, in New York, to such an extent that almost every municipal office is given out by the henchmen of Richard Croker, knowing that their appointments will receive his sanction. These are very secret societies, and no gang of banditti were ever bonnd by stronger obligations to hang together and protect each other till the last ditch.

Had such organization existed a century ago in city hall, state house or capitol, the people would have risen in their might, and with weapons more severe than a whip of small cords, have turned out the whole mass of corruption with a clean sweep. A terrible retribution came upon Boss Tweed and the Tammany ring, and the people are getting ready to work a merited and just retribution next November on the Gorman ring.

At the mass meeting at Belair, where such broadsides were thundered against political corruption and ring rule, that the reverberations are echoing and re-echoing from center to circumferance of the state, Senator Williams made among others, the following telling remarks exposing the iniquitous methods of the Gorman wing of the legislature:

"The hollow pretense," said Mr. Williams, "that the purpose of the bill was to prevent bribery and corruption at elections was clearly shown by the voting down by the Democratic Senators of amendments offered by Republicans to the bill which would have tempered and lessened its iniquitous nature and given some foundation to the claim that it would tend to check bribery.

"Fair-minded, unbiased men, who will look for the motives that prompted the call for the extra session and search for the real purpose of this election law and the recent state census, cannot fail to see that it is the development of a well-laid plan designed not to benefit the people of Maryland, but to satisfy the ambitions of a few political leaders. I do not believe that the independent, free-thinking, thoughtful voters of this state are going to sanction such a plan or permit the party that conceived it to remain in power when its plain purpose is to still further abuse the confidence of the people."

Mr. Williams spoke of the "waste of $40,000 by the Democrats in taking a census, when the errors in the federal census would have been corrected by the federal officials themselves without cost to the state."

The following vigorous arraignment of the enemies of the free ballot occurs near the conclusion of the late speech of Senator McComas. It is a startling finish as sharp as the detonation of the torpedo that blows the ship to ——. "Go ask the winds that roam around where fragments strew the sea!"

Said Senator McComas: "The whole system is contrived to disfranchise. Every section of the Reformed Election law is amended to hinder the voter. Every amendment added words to defeat the intent of the honest voter. Vote as you will, a thousand of voters will be robbed of their suffrage in the counting of the ballots under the disfranchising rules of these conspirators against true Democracy. They will flitter away your rights by the caprice of typesetting. They will rob you of your manhood suffrage by a pretense of a spot upon the ballot. If you be old and infirm your trembling hand will cheat you at the ballot box by the law of these conspirators. If your sight, after a well spent life, is dim it will not save you from the theft of your vote in the count of the ballots. When later, if they win, they wipe out the bi-partisan two-judge system, they will give you two judges of the majority and a weak judge of the minority, whom they will choose, and election judges will be unanimous to count all doubtful voters to win an election to perpetuate the ring. If they win the old infamies of unfair election practices will be enacted into law to overcome the wrath of a slowly awakened and much outraged people. The bosses and the machine dare not trust the people."

No party ever entered upon a campaign struggling under greater odds than did the supporters of honest government in the State of Maryland when they began the work preparatory to the November election. They found the Gorman cohorts in control of the registration machinery. They found them strongly entrenched in the city and State adminstrations. They found the Gorman ring in exclusive possession of the State census lists, with all the valuable political information contained in these lists at their disposal. They found the Gorman machinery in the possession of the shrewdest and most tireless set of political workers ever gathered together in this State. They found the Gorman wing of Democracy determined upon the election to the Senate of former Senator Gorman.

At the very threshold of the campaign came the most disheartening blow of all, the death of President McKinley.

Despite all these obstacles, never once discouraged, the Republicans and their allies from the Democratic party who have declared for a free ballot and a fair count, went to work and with a result that not only have they met and overcome the difficulties which confronted them, but they have forged ahead and any man familiar with the work to date must acknowledge that victory will perch upon their banners. The obstacles which Gorman by special legislation threw in their way, seem to have acted as a stimulus, rather than deterirent. They were encouraged by the uphill fight which stared them in the face, went to work with a will that has yielded wonders.

Deprived of access to the information contained in the State census lists, they devised lists of their own, and these lists were found to be far more effective for campaign purposes than those of the Gorman contingent, since they were the latest that could be prepared, and, therefore, more accurate. Their house-to-house canvass for voters to register, which was carried on all aver the State, proved effective.

And there is another obstacle which the ring managers placed in the Republicans' way and which has been overcome, namely, the educational qualification of voters. This was really one of the most serious problems with which they had to contend. But this they have also met. It was no easy task to establish all over this State schools for the instruction of illiterate voters, but this is just what they have done and with this most gratifying result, the leaders have been brought into close contact with a class of voters heretofore neglected. The Republican workers were forced to meet this issue of making the entire ballot as they were forced to meet the change in the system of voting inaugurated when the Australian system was introduced and they had to employ simple but effective methods in instructing their voters.

In this campaign, though the lesson has been far more difficult, it has been learned by the same illiterates who learned how to mark their ballots under the Australian plan. The Republican State committee has under consideration the introduction of a simple device at all polling places by which the most illiterate can easily mark their ballots.

On election day the supporters of the free ballot system propose to establish schools of instruction for illiterates at every polling place in the city and State.

Of course, the work of the campaign could not have been done without effective organization. That the opposers of ring-rule have been able to build up the thorough organization which they have in this State is a surprise.

The following from the Baltimore News, embodying sentiments from the New Orleans Picayune, seems to reflect the ideas of the press generally, at least of those papers throughout the country that don't run their machinery without a balance wheel:

In the midst of the hysterical outcry which has been raised by a great part of the Southern press over President Roosevelt's act in asking Booker Washington to dine with him, it is refreshing to see that such a paper as the New Orleans Picayune has kept its head completely. The Picayune has few equals and no superior among Southern newspapers, and is thoroughly representative of the best thought and sentiment of the South. This excellent newspaper says:

"The Picayune regards this action on the part of the President as an official and not a social matter. Necessarily if the President should take negroes of both sexes into social relations with his family it would exact a great deal of prejudice, but officially, as the chief magistrate of the Republic, which embraces in its citizenship people of all colors and many races, he may confer with and entertain people who are black, red, brown and yellow, as well as white, and eat and drink with them. If, however, he should endeavor to bring the peoples of all races, colors and conditions into the same social plane and into intimate intercommunication it is much to be doubted if he could make it a success, either politically or socially."

The outburst which has been so general in the Southern press is not surprising. This was an instinctive protest against a thing which, at first blush, struck most Southern men in a sensational light. That there was nothing sensational about it, and that, even from the strictly Southern point of view, it should be regarded in just the light in which the Picayune regards it, will probably be the sober second thought of a large part of the Southern people.

THEY KNOW THEIR WORST ENEMY.

REPUBLICAN MEETINGS!

The Republican State Central Committee for this county announce mass meetings to be held at the following places upon the dates named:

SANG RUN, MONDAY, OCTOBER 28, 7.30.

SAND SPRING, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 7.30.

FRIENDSVILLE, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 7.30.

BITTINGER, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31, 7.30.

NEW GERMANY, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 7.30.

GRANTSVILLE, SATURDAY AFTERNOON, NOV. 2, 1.30.

ACCIDENT, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 7.30.

The above meetings will be addressed by some of the following speakers:

Capt. James A. Hayden, E. H. Sincell, J. C. Renninger, L. A. Rudisill, W. W. Sweet, F. A. Thayer, Col. A. G. Sturgiss, Capt. J. W. White, Dr. J. W. Laughlin, N. S. Heindel, Senator R. A. Ravenscroft, Assemblyman P. E. Finzel, Charles Ashby, Percy H. Veitch.

LITTLE SWEETHEART.

Do I know a little sweetheart,
One that's wondrous sweet and fair—
Just a charming little sweetheart,
Every smile a cunning snare:
With an eager mouth for kisses
When she meets her lover true—
Do I know the little sweetheart?
Well, I rather think I do.

Do I know a little sweetheart
With such winning ways of grace
That the angels sigh with envy
When they see her shining face:
Yes, I know the little sweetheart,
And I love her dearly, too.
So this dainty little sweetheart
Cannot be the one for you.

June 26, 1901. —T. L. L.

VOTERS OF GARRETT COUNTY.

A Slight Decrease Compared With the Year 1900.

The registration of Garrett county has been completed, and the corrected lists show the number of white voters to be 3,995, colored, 25; total 4,020, being a net loss of 197 from the total registered vote of last year. Grantsville district made a net gain of 14 votes, while every other district in the county lost. It is a noticeable fact that the two Oakland districts sustained nearly one-half the loss of the entire county. Notwithstanding this heavy loss, the registered vote is 440 in excess of the number cast for President in 1900. The table of registered voters for 1901 is as follows.

Districts.	White.	Col'd.	T'l.
1. Altamont	311	..	311
2. Selbysport	488	1	489
3. Grantsville	443	..	443
4. Bloomington	197	2	199
5. Accident	305	..	305
6. Sang Run	230	..	230
7. Oakland	318	8	326
8. Ryan's Glade	361	..	361
9. Johnson	150	1	151
10. Deer Park	246	8	254
11. Elbow	134	..	134
12. Bittinger	194	..	194
13. Kitzmillerville	73	..	73
14. Oakland	545	5	550
Totals in 1901	3995	25	4020
Totals in 1900	4187	30	4217

The Information Is Expensive, But—

The subscriber who tries to beat the publisher out of his subscription is the one whose cry is that publishers should only send out papers in advance; as if that was any of their business. A publisher has as much right to trust his customers as any other business man has. If editors always required pay in advance they would not know who all are rascals in the different communities. Their information is expensive but they get it and are in position to inform others and save them from being defrauded. —Cumberland Alleganian.

School Open.

The schools of Garrett county opened on Monday of this week. The enrollment of scholars in the numerous schools is not as large as it will be later in the school term, owing to the fact that many children of school age are kept upon the farm to assist in the work there while the weather remains good.

The Oakland school has for its instructors Prof. A. W. DeWitt, principal, who is assisted by the following corps of teachers: Mr. H. A. Loraditch, Misses Mae Hamill, Lizzie Leary, Rose Maroney, Ella Martin and Virginia Johnson.

Oakland Club.

All members of the Oakland Club are requested to be present at a meeting to be held at club rooms Saturday evening, Oct. 26, at 8 o'clock, as matters of vital importance to the organization will be considered.

Garrett County S. S. Convention.

The Garrett County Sunday School Convention will be held at Loch Lynn on Saturday and Sunday, November 2 and 3. The sessions will be held in the United Brethren church. Programs have been liberally distributed throughout the county, and large colored posters placed at prominent points. Each Sunday School is entitled to two delegates, who will be hospitably entertained by the good people of Loch Lynn and vicinity. Pastors and Superintendents are delegates by virtue of their offices. The Sunday Schools are requested to elect their delegates on Sunday next, 27th, and send their names and addresses promptly to Rev. J. E. Johnson, Mt. Lake Park, Md., stating whether or not they will attend. The statistics are to be mailed to the County Secretary, Miss Ella Laughlin, Deer Park, Md.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

WONDERFUL NERVE

Displayed By Sergeant Crim, Who Was Shot Monday.

He Made a National Reputation As a Detective in the Celebrated Pearl Bryan Case—No Hope of His Recovery.

In reference to the shooting of Sergeant Cal Crim, formerly of Oakland, at Cincinnati Monday, the Cincinnati Evening Post gives the following facts:

Detectlve Cal Crim was walking west on Sixth street en route to Central Police Station, where he was to meet Detective Charles Grimsley, both intending to go fishing at Aurora, Indiana.

Just east of Vine street, in front of Zumstein's livery stable, he met Dan Foley, alias Foley the Goat, the notorious pickpocket of international fame. Catching the pickpocket by the left arm, swung him around to his right side, and grabbing him by the left arm, said:

"Dan, will you walk or ride? I am going to headquarters."

With an oath Foley jerked a revolver evidently from his right coat pocket and fired two shots, pressing the revolver the second time into Crim's right side below the nipple. The first shot missed, but the second, ranging down inside of Crim, penetrated vital parts and inflicted a probable fatal wound.

Crim, paralyzed with pain, could not pull his own revolver, but staggering against a telegraph pole for support, pointed to Foley and called: "Stop that man!" Foley ran westward. Crim set down the grip he was carrying and started across the street. He was about to fall, when Ed Bohan, porter at the Palace Hotel, grasped him and helped him to Weatherhead's drug store.

Crim is in full realization of his condition, and has no hopes of recovery.

To Detective Kincaid, at the City Hospital, he said: "I know it is all up with me."

Kincaid sought to dissuade the dread belief from the wounded man's brain.

Crim only replied: "It is no use. I appreciate your spirit, but I feel that I am mortally hurt."

Detective Kincaid said of his superior: "I never saw such fortitude and pure nerve. He lies there as calm as can be, and said not a word in denunciation of Foley. When we saw that we could not encourage him we asked if he had any request to make and he said: "Do what you can for my wife and babies," and he cried.

The scene at police headquarters was pitiful. Strong men, to whose eyes tears had been strangers for years, broke down and cried like children when a false report of Crim's death was brought in about 1 o'clock. All morning the fellow officers and the chiefs made no effort to hide their poignant grief.

Sergeant of Detectives David Calvin Crim became a member of the Police Department at the reorganization under the non-partisan law in 1886. For a time Crim was assigned to duty at the Humane Society. Later he patrolled a beat and by earnest work and the exhibition of shrewdness earned promotion to the Detective Department.

It was in the Pearl Bryan case that Crim, with his partner, John McDermott, now assigned as the mayor's detective, gained national fame.

He is a son of Mr. Joseph M. Crim, of Oakland, who recently returned home after making an extended visit to his home in Cincinnati.

IN HAPPIER TIMES.

(A RONDEAU.)

In happier times, when days were bright,
And hearts were filled with sweet delight,
And roses bloomed along the way—
Then life was in its holiday,
Nor dreamed of the coming night.

With visions rare, in golden light,
Sweet Fancy took an upward flight
To far beyond the world's decay,
In happier times.

Oh, hearts afraid—from sore despite,
There is no joy but has its blight:
Why should we grieve for things astray?
HIS promise wipes all tears away;
HIS love shall bring us all delight,
In happier times.

—T. L. L.

To the Voters of Garrett County.

Having received the nomination for the office of County Treasurer and believing it to be my duty to stay and attend to the duties of the office I now hold, I take this method of soliciting your aid and influence.

Thanking you for your support in the past I respectfully solicit your assistance this time when it will be a great help to me.

Very respectfully,

JAMES W. WHITE.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1901.

BLACK AND RED ANTS

TWO COLONIES IN A FIERCE BATTLE TO THE DEATH.

Human Warfare Paralleled In This Conflict Between the Vicious Insects—Three Days' Fighting Before Victory Came to the Reds.

Was it the attempted application of the doctrine of territorial expansion? Was it a case of forcing a higher order of civilization upon an energetic and unwilling race? Was it retaliation for real or fancied insult to national honor? Was it perhaps because of an interest in the slave trade or a gold mine or a diamond mine? Was it any or none of these reasons that led to the terrific and decisive battles of which I was an interested witness some years ago? It will perhaps never be determined what were the causes underlying a struggle of three days' duration, marked by carnage, feats of strength and deeds of valor such as are rarely the lot of the historian to record.

I was sitting one summer afternoon in the shadow of my cottage near a stunted lilac bush when my attention was attracted to a horde of large black ants crossing a narrow roadway which lay between my house and that of a neighbor in the same yard. Their objective point, I soon perceived, was the foot of the lilac, the ground around which had been honeycombed by little red ants less than half as large as the others.

There seemed to be an unusual excitement here. Possibly a sentry or scout had brought news to the colony of the approaching army. At least they were not being attacked unawares. The invaders were met near the foot of the bush, and the war was on. The battleground was confined to a space perhaps three feet square, but here among the hillocks and ravines in miniature all the tragedies and triumphs of war were enacted.

There were at first arrangement and order when van met van, but the conflict soon resolved itself into a general catch as catch can encounter. Woe to the red ant luckless enough to get into the jaws of its larger foe! One closing up of those powerful instruments, and a crushed, helpless mass was flung aside. The smaller, however, had the advantage both in numbers and agility and fought in pairs or triplets. Thus while the black ant generally killed one or more of its antagonists it was itself doomed. The duration of a battle varied from five to fifteen minutes, ceased by the disappearance of the invaders, to be suddenly renewed later.

It was pathetic during these periods of truce to note the casualities and the movements on the fateful field. Busy little army surgeons or possibly members of the Red Cross corps hurried from one mangled body to anoth Sometimes a feeble response on the part of the wounded soldier to the anxious inquiry of the relief was noticeable. The solicitous and universal sympathy of the unharmed for their less fortunate companions was a sight never to be forgotten. The ground was strewed with bodies in all stages of dismemberment—legs gone, antennæ missing, head severed from the body, the body itself sectioned. Here and there one mortally wounded dragged itself slowly and painfully to some obscure spot to die. Others were helped away to a place of security, but in such condition that it is safe to infer they passed their remaining days in a hospital or some home for the disabled. For three days, in at least as many battles each day, the conflict raged. Each day witnessed a perceptible thinning out of the ranks, but the vigor and spirit of the contest kept up till near the close.

Desirous of knowing what effect the presence of strange surroundings would have on the combatants, I procured a large glass dish and captured several of both species. This I repeated at various times. Invariably, while at first trying to escape, upon becoming aware of each other's presence they grappled and fought to the death. Valor, honor, hatred, revenge—what was it?—dominated entirely over fear.

Against the stubborn resistance and greater numbers of their antagonists the invaders could not hold out. A panic finally seized the survivors such as comes upon human warriors—an unutterable, unreasoning fear—and, thoroughly defeated in their object, whatever it might have been, for days after hostilities ceased any unusual noise near their dwellings would send each individual hurriedly to shelter as if an avenger were at its heels.—Scientific American.

Pigeons Wreaked Vengeance.

A remarkable story of the vengeance wrought by pigeons is told by a paper at Zurich, writes a correspondent. Two pigeons built a nest in a tree situated in a well stocked garden of flowers and vegetables and there raised a brood of which they were very proud. The other day the old birds left the nest, and in their absence some one captured the young ones. On their return the female was much upset at her loss. The male, however, went and fetched about fifty other pigeons, which actually devastated the garden, the vegetables and flowers being destroyed in wholesale quantities.

SPEECH

Delivered by

Senator R. A. Ravenscroft, of Garrett County,

IN THE

Senate of Maryland March 13, 1901

The Election Bill being under consideration, Senator Ravenscroft said :—

MR. PRESIDENT :—Considering this measure as a whole and giving the most liberal construction and excuses for its introduction, for the motive which may have prompted it, I am constrained to insist that the gravest consideration to the people of this State and the members of this Senate is involved in the results and probabilities which are likely to follow from its passage. Until the call of his Excellency the Governor, preceded by some suggestion in the press that the emergency demanded remedial legislation, it must be conceded that the almost universal sentiment of the press approved aud cammended the most excellent election law of 1896. Opposition to this pending measure is justly founded upon the fact that, while it is intended to diminish the opportunity for bribery in elections, as a matter of fact to any man skilled in practical politics, it is clearly apparent that the facilities for successful bribery are enormously increased in favor of the political party having charge of the election machinery in the State. The real object of this bill, frankly conceded by the Democratic press and in individual intercourse by the Democratic leaders and politicians, is the disfranchisement of illiterate voters. The Democratic party has not the courage to make this issue apparent upon the face of this bill, hoping to escape the obstruction of constitutional law. Every device possible to conceal the practical intent intended to be executed by the law has been ingeniously covered by cunning phraseology with a view to make the law pass muster in the courts. The provisions of the bill itself were concealed from the public and the press until after the meeting of this Legislature, and now the Senate is asked without free and full opportunity to weigh all the conditions and results which will follow such legislation to rush this measure through without mature consideration. If fairness and honesty are intended by this bill, why authorize the supervisors of election to exclude from the public full knowledge in advance of the groupings and order in which the candidates names will be placed on the ballot ? Why invest irresponsible messengers instead of the policemen of Baltimore and the sheriffs of the counties, who are sworn officers of the law and subject to its penalties, with the custody and delivery of the ballot boxes, to the judges of election ? Why not require the present legal identification of the voter by his signature, recorded at the time of registration, or have knowledge of the fact that he is an illiterate by reason of that record ? Why exclude from candidates and public advertisement a frank and fair notice in advance of the election of the exact arrangement of the ballot before the day of election ? Experience has proven under the simplest forms of ballot that men of even more than moderate intelligence are frequently embarrassed in attempting to vote other than a straight party ticket. If your law intends to prevent bribery by the scheme now proposed it assumes practically that the illiterate and unfortunates are the only class that are bribed and purchased at elections.

Mr. President, the Democratic party has posed and masqueraded for years in this State as the champion and defender of the rights of the plain people. It now displays its cloven foot. and through this proposed legislation puts a discount upon misfortune, a degradation upon the worthy man, who, coming from humble origin and meagre fortune or coming as an adopted citizen of this country without knowledge of language or letters, and humiliates the more fortunate sons and relatives of unfortunate parents who cannot read or write by tearing away from them their constitutional right of franchise. Is this State prepared to stand for the principle of taxation without representation, or is it prepared to excuse the non-voter from the burden of general taxation ? Is it prepared to excuse the illiterate from obedience to the laws, criminal and civil, in the making of which he is to have no voice if this bill becomes a law ? If not, then the declaration of rights of this State, our constitution and our pretext of championship of individual liberty are frauds and a false pretense upon our people. Will each individual Senator in this body assume the responsibility of answering first, to his conscience, secondly, to his constitution oath, and thirdly, to his constituents, and justify himself before God and man in voting for the passage of this bill ? My brother Senators, for one I stand here as the champion of the plain people. The more fortunate classes can take care of themselves. There is now threatening in the near future a revolution by the ballot of the masses of the people against the autocracy of corporate greed and political combinations of ambitious bosses. I warn you that the day of reckoning is not far distant, when the thunders of malediction and the tidal wave of political oblivion will overwhelm the men who attempt to stand in the way of the great tide and the power of the ballot in the hands of the plain but honest voter, who will not be driven by political machines nor party bosses. There are gentlemen on this floor who must realize, if they are not blind, by the experience of the past six years that they are going to their political graves as a sacrifice to the ambition of a few men who will not be able to save them and who probably would not if they could after they have defiantly or subserviently loaned themselves to the revolutionary proceedings in which this Legislature is now engaged. When the day of disaster and defeat shall come the forces which are now driving some gentlemen unwillingly and reluctantly to their political destruction will be powerless to save or console, and the very instruments which are now sought to be used to perpetuate the power of a few men will be turned, wielded in the hands of a strong and gigantic majority, against those who have sought to make it a means of renewed political power and personal advantage. If this bill is an emergency requirement now, why was it not so one year ago ? If it is righteous and just,why not submit it to the voice of the people at the next general election as a basis of a constitutional amendment ? Failing to do this, the supporters of this measure must rest under a fear that they would not be vindicated by a popular vote of the freemen of this State who have under the constitution and without question heretofore had the right of franchise and have been compelled to pay their taxes and obey the laws.

Degrade the American voter by limiting or interfering with his free right of exercise of political franchise, brand him a political slave and send him forth among his fellow men with this discredit, disgrace and disability upon him and the humiliation which he will feel, the bitter anguish which will be reflected by his family and associates, his children and all his relations, will exhibit itself and be most emphatically felt by those who will be responsible for it, not only in the next campaign but for many years to come. Contented and self-respecting citizens, prosperous and happy in their surroundings, faithful to all public duty and obedient to all legal obligations will be changed into men of broken spirit, rebelling against the forms of law and the management of the government of the state, and will seek justification for their demoralized change of civil status in charging it to arbitrary legislation which they believe has violated the dearest rights gnaranteed to them, as American citizens, under the constitution of the United States and of the State. Humiliation will take the place of personal pride, discontent and agitation will supersede present conditions of peace and happiness. The men intelligent enough to till the soil, to successfully ply their industries, to develop the wealth of the forest and mine, to defend their country's honor on the field of battle at home and in foreign climes, will justly and righteously rebel against a law which degrades them below the level of the cunning criminal who can read and write, but has neither moral virtue, social status or patriotism. Outlaw and eliminate such men from participation in public affairs and from having a voice in the government of the State by their ballots and degrade them below the political status of the pardoned convicts, make them an object of scorn and criticism among their neighbors and their community and you will breed in them and in the generations which will descend from their loins a spirit of rebellion and revolution which will be full of danger and menace to the public good. The spread of discontent, anarchy and revolution against existing forms of government in other lands should be a warning to us in this free country to steer the course of the Ship of State and the policy of our legislation away from the rocks of danger and shoals of national disaster. The near future will present several problems of serious and far reaching importance in the solution of which the public safety will require the utmost patriotism and most earnest support of the State and the Republic by the plain people of this country. They control the ballot box and they will learn how to vote intelligently, against all the efforts which partisanship and political machinery may make to disfranchise them. But they will not forget, nor will they forgive, the influences and the sources of dictation which sought to deprive them of the right which their ancestors enjoyed for a century in this country. To kindle the forces of discontent and set in motion at this time so grave a cause for revolution and rebellion is not only injudicious, indiscreet, but almost treasonable in the light of social, financial and political conditions which now exist in this country.

Make what pretexts you please about the intention to eliminate bribery from elections our prediction is that the earliest succeeding elections after the passage of this law will prove that the facilities for bribery will be just as great, if not greater, than hertofore and that equal efforts will be made by politicians of all parties to corrupt voters and purchase elections as in the past. Mr. President. the next elections will show, and we invite the attention of you gentlemen of the opposition to our prediction, that the effect of this law will react severely and emphatically and will record a judgment of public condemnation against the plans and methods of disfranchisement, for the execution of which it was conceived, and for which it is sought to be made effective. When the future record comes to be made up and the history of political legislation in this State shall be reviewed in the generations which are to follow us there will be readers and students of history who will bear the blush of shame and regret to themselves that some men connected with their ancestry were in part responsible for this revolutionary legislation.

The descendents of some of the illiterates, who shall be more fortunate in educational advantages than some of the present generation, will rise to the front in public life in this State and take part in the management of public affairs, and they will not forget or hesitate to remind some of their contemporaries who may have ambition for public favor or advancement that their fathers and grandfathers had cruelly disfranchised in the years which had preceded, an humble and honest class of citizens from which these very men who hold honors will be the descendents.

The May election in the City of Baltimore and the November election in this State will give ample vindication of the course of the minority members of this Senate and will give a verdict of public censure against the passage of this law. Apologies and excuses will then be too late. The record of this session and its legislation will have passed into history, and the gentlemen who have helped make that record will have to accept the result of public approval or disfavor.

SPEECH BY SENATOR RAVENSCROFT

In the Senate of Maryland March 14, 1901.

The second reading of the Election Bill being under consideration Senator Ravenscroft said :

MR. PRESIDENT :—Unanimous co-operation of the majority members of this body, in solidly opposing every proposed amendment to this bill, which was intended to give more facility and more intelligent understanding to the voter, and to prevent fraud and corruption by election officials, indicates the determination of the representatives of the Democratic party under the party lash to pass this bill. The whole proceeding, commencing with the call of this special session, has been revolutionary, unwarrantable and a discredit to this proud old State. Liberty of conscience and the unobstructed right of franchise have been always claimed as cardinal doctrines and heritages of Maryland citizens. This legislation is in defiance of all the proud boasts of our past history. The claims upon which it is based are false and unworthy of the consideration of an honorable body like this. The pretext that the bill is intended to prevent bribery is a sham and a declaration which it is doubtful any Senator on this floor believes. The press and the public of this State know that this pretext is false. Forty thousand unfortunate voters who are intended to be affected by this law, and who cannot read or write, know already by communication with their neighbors of the purpose of this law and what will be its ultimate results. They know that by indirection and by an evasive process they are to be deprived of the constitutional right which the fundamental law of the State has guaranteed them. They know that they are to be placed in the same category as felons, unpardoned criminals, unnaturalized foreigners and mental imbeciles, and they know that this is being done by force or political dictation from a few ambitious men, who, when they have attained, if they shall attain, the end of their personal, selfish, political ambition, will not turn back to shed tears of sympathy or to write epitaphs of glory over the tombs of political oblivion to which some, if not many, of the members of this Legislature will shortly be consigned.

They know that they are placed by this proposed law, and by the pretenses made by its champions, before the public with the finger of scorn and infamy and degredation pointed at them and are held up for public view as degraded beings who alone are subjects of corruption and bribery at elections.

This bill, if enacted into law, will take away the right of franchise from hundreds of our veteran soldiers, many of whom are crippled and burdened with disease, because of their arduous service on behalf of the preservation of the Union and the honor of our national flag. Think of it, my fellow Senators, what an infamous outrage this disfranchisement will perpetrate upon the rights of many of our nation's heroes. The magnitude, the beauty and grandeur of our country today is due to the unflinching patriotism of these heroic men.

When the country called them into active service, at a time when an awful crisis was pending in this Union, when the dark clouds of secession were hovering over and about us, threatening, as they were, to break down the Union, no man thought to ask them if they could read aud write, nor did any man think even for a moment of making inquiry as to their efficiency, manhood and patriotism because of a lack of education. It was not and should not have been done, for they were able to render and did render their country exemplary service upon its battlefields. They have received the plaudits and commendation of a grateful people, from the close of the great civil war up until today, and even now the American heart throbs with emotion and gratitude toward these old veterans. Thus it has been, thus it is, and thus it should be as long as the citizens of this Republic breathe the atmosphere of freemen.

But, oh, what an awful wrong, what a glaring injustice and base ingratitude will be shown toward many of these heroes by legislation of this character ! It is unfair, unpatriotic and certainly un-American.

Their misfortunes in illiteracy and lack of learning, no matter how respectable, prosperous or law-abiding they may have been, and may be still, are to be turned into a crucifixion of their moral righteousness as well as used as an instrument to disfranchise them and exclude them from a voice in the making of laws, which they must obey, and the levying of taxes, which they must help to pay. They know, and we all know, Mr. President, that this law will not obstruct or hinder the bribery and corruption of those who, less honest, less reputable citizens, are able to read and write. Aye, Mr. President, they know, and the whole public will know, that this law, if passed as now proposed in this bill without further amendment, throws wide open the door for unlimited and systematic bribery and places the very machinery for that purpose in the hands of the election officials and into the hands of the party workers of the political party now in control in this State. The unfortunates who are to be affected by this law, as well as the whole State, know that this question has never been presented as an issue to be passed upon at a general election, nor has it been submitted for the calm consideration of a constitutional convention. We are told through the press that his Excellency the Governor justifies the call for this session on the ground that it comes by appeal from the people. We have not been advised who are the great people making this appeal other than a few choice spirits in the Democratic party, who, under the whip and spur of party management, were called and driven into conferences and instructed, many of them against their will and against their conscience, to have appeals and representations made to the Governor to justify him in issuing this call. But, Mr. President, the great body of the people have been heard from in another direction, the metropolitan press of Baltimore city, which certainly seems to, and generally does, voice the popular sentiment, has almost without exception denounced this measure and warned this Legislature of the retribution which will follow and of the vengeance of condemnation which will be the penalty which must be paid in the near future to those of us who, as public servants, dare abridge the sacred right of franchise. Citizens in public meeting, to the responsive applause of thousands of indignant hearers, have denounced this bill and appealed to this body to stay its mad career in revolution. The illiterate people, in excited groups about the country stores, the village blacksmith shops, upon the farms and in the factories and upon the street corners in the city and in their homes, in their places of social intercourse and even in their churches where they go to worship, have with suppressed excitement and either with bated breath or wildly extravagant declarations protested, criticised and condemned what is about to be done in this Senate today. The wounds of humiliation, of degradation and of infamy which are to be placed on this people, will not be healed during the lifetime of any member of this Senate. The children and the children's children of these citizens who are to be wronged, betrayed and politically crucified, will mark the name and the ambition and business and social aspirations of every one of us who goes upon this record as the one betrayer of the interests of the unfortunate masses. More than this, Mr. President, if the courts should decide, as we are convinced that they must and will decide, that this law is unconstitutional, in what darkened retreat, away from public gaze and sneering criticism and away from the pointing of the finger of pity and scorn, will such of the honorable members of this body as may have, in violation of conscience and judgment, been seduced by party expediency and fidelity, hide themselves away from a storm which will ever be a recurrent one when they have any ambition for future public honors or official recognition. Mr. President, the minority members of this body sought to go upon the record made by this measure, according to their best judgments and the dictates of their conscience, as to their obedience to the constitution and laws of the State ; to their oath of office and their duty and obligation to the whole people of the State, irrespective of party or social condition. They will stand proudly upon the record they are now making and will go confidently back to the people of the State feeling profoundly assured of the most absolute and overwhelming vindication and approval. Principle and public duty, a purpose to protect those who are at this hour helpless to protect themselves, and a purpose to maintain the honor, dignity and proud reputation of this old State without any motive of partisanship or party dictation, have been the incentives and the controling purpose of the members on this side of the House. When the people shall again assemble in convention and at the polls the protest they will enter against

(Continued on Page Three.)

REPUBLICAN | DEMOCRATIC

PATRICK E. FINZEL

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT

PATRICK E. FINZEL	REPUBLICAN
WILLIAM R. OFFUTT	DEMOCRATIC
ERASTUS C. W. RYLAND	DEMOCRATIC

FOR SHERIFF:

EDMUND JAMISON	DEMOCRATIC
WILLIAM A. MAFFETT	REPUBLICAN

FOR COUNTY TREASURER:

EDWARD H. BARTLETT	DEMOCRATIC
JAMES W. WHITE	REPUBLICAN

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONERS:

FLOYD CROWE	DEMOCRATIC
TAYLOR FRIEND	REPUBLICAN
JACOB STUMP	REPUBLICAN
CHARLES WHITMORE	DEMOCRATIC

FOR REGISTER OF WILLS:

THOMAS E. FLANIGAN	DEMOCRATIC
EDWIN E. FRIEND	REPUBLICAN

FOR COUNTY SURVEYOR:

FRANKLIN P. GREEN	REPUBLICAN
EDWIN L. MITCHELL	DEMOCRATIC

EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

lishing of the National Census of 1900, or after the enumeration of the population of this State, under the authority thereof, there shall be an apportionment of representation in the House of Delegates, to be made on the following basis, to wit: Each of the several counties of the State, having a population of eighteen thousand souls or less, shall be entitled to two delegates; and every county having a population of over eighteen thousand and less than twenty-eight thousand souls, shall be entitled to three delegates; and every county having a population of twenty-eight thousand and less than forty thousand souls, shall be entitled to four delegates; and every county having a population of forty thousand and less than fifty-five thousand souls, shall be entitled to five delegates; and every county having a population of fifty-five thousand souls and upwards, shall be entitled to six delegates and no more; and each of the four legislative districts of the City of Baltimore shall be entitled to the number of delegates to which the largest county shall or may be entitled under the aforegoing apportionment, and the General Assembly shall have the power to provide by law, from time to time, for altering and changing the boundaries of the existing legislative districts of the City of Baltimore, so as to make them as near as may be of equal population; but said district shall always consist of contiguous territory.

For Constitutional Amendment.

Against Constitutional Amendment.

Constitution Amendment.

Chapter 469, of Acts of 1900.

AN ACT to amend section two, of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State.

2. The City of Baltimore shall be divided into four legislative districts as near as may be of equal population and of contiguous territory, and each of said legislative districts of Baltimore City, as they may from time to time be laid out, in accordance with the provisions hereof, and each county in the State, shall be entitled to one Senator, who shall be elected by the qualified voters of the said legislative districts of Baltimore City, and of the counties of the State, respectively, and shall serve for four years from the date of his election, subject to the classification of Senators hereafter provided for.

For Constitutional Amendment.

Against Constitutional Amendment.

Published by order of the Board of Supervisors of Elections.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President,
FRANK WELCH,
A. G. STURGISS,
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County, Maryland.

number to be filled, will prevent the remainder of the ballot from being counted. Under the old law, if the voter, in the privacy of the election booth, marked his ballot, if possible, the intention of the voter, and the ballot was counted to the extent to which such intention could be ascertained. The old law tried to make the exercise of the citizen's right to vote easy; the new law makes it as difficult as possible. It can be predicted with confidence that disputes will arise in every polling place throughout the State on election day. We ask you to compare this condition with the peaceful and orderly elections to which we have become accustomed since 1896, and the results of which have never been questioned by either party, although several important offices were voted for. We offered amendments to correct the defects in the law, but they fell on deaf ears.

REVOLUTIONARY RULING.

"The President of the Senate, in violation of its rules and precedents, declared a motion for the previous question in order, and for the first time in the history of the Senate debate was cut off. The time-respected custom of permitting a full and unrestricted discussion of questions was swept aside and a most important check upon hasty and ill-considered legislation destroyed. In the House of Delegates the previous question was constantly used to prevent amendments and discussion, and was removed when the election bill was on its final passage so as to permit but one Republican speech.

"The message bill was reported by the chairman of the committee without a meeting of the committee being held, and the election was certified to be correct by Democratic members of the Engrossing Committee without the Republican members being offered an opportunity to examine and compare it. The men who brought about the call for the extraordinary session against the wishes of the people and solely for party expediency had trained their representatives in the Legislature to believe that it was right to gain a party advantage at the expense of the dearest rights of the people.

THE COSTLY STATE CENSUS.

"We earnestly and consistently favored a verification of the census and were ready to aid in every effort to have the same placed above suspicion. We advocated leaving the whole matter to the discretion of the Governor, and that he be given full power to satisfy himself of the correctness of the census, even if an entirely new enumeration of the population of the State were necessary. We believed that the error would have been found that this could have been accomplished without great expense to the State. The act of Congress authorizing the taking of the Twelfth Census provides as follows: 'Whenever it shall appear that any portion of the enumeration and census provided for in this act has been negligently or improperly taken, such incomplete and unsatisfactory enumeration and census to be amended or made anew, under such methods as may, in his discretion, be practicable.' The only publication of the census mentioned in this law is the volumes referred to in Section 7, which are to be published until 1910. These volumes are not to be printed until they have been completed by the census officials and delivered to the printer. The census bulletins are merely tentative, and invite criticism. The returns made to Congress last December were merely for Congressional apportionment and were not final for any other purpose. In December, 1901, President Jefferson, in a message to Congress, after the census had been returned to it, subsituted a corrected return for Maryland. We were not shown that the Governor had made the slightest effort to secure from the Federal Government what the law requires it to give, nor was the Democratic majority willing to authorize him to make an effort to get it, although the expense, no matter what it might be, was such an expense, so Democratic party,

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1901.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET

For Comptroller of the Treasury:
HERMAN S. PLATT,
Of Baltimore City.

For Clerk of the Court of Appeals:
THOMAS PARRAN,
Of Calvert County.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY TICKET.

For State Senator:
ROBERT A. RAVENSCROFT,
Of District No. 5.

For House of Delegates:
PATRICK E. FINZEL,
Of District No. 9.
CHARLES A. ASHBY,
Of District No. 14.

For Sheriff:
WILLIAM A. MAFFETT,
Of District No. 6.

For Treasurer:
JAMES W. WHITE,
Of District No. 14.

For County Commissioners:
TAYLOR FRIEND,
Of District No. 2.
JACOB STUMP,
Of District No. 4.

For Register of Wills:
EDWIN E. FRIEND,
Of District No. 7.

For County Surveyor:
FRANKLIN P. GREEN,
Of District No. 11.

THE race queston is not an issue in the Maryland campaign.

MARYLAND'S patriotism is all right, but its election law is wrong.

THE rank and file of the Democratic party cannot be induced to regard the prospect of seeing the 'same old crowd' in office with enthusiasm.

INASMUCH as Booker Washington is not an office-seeker, why so much discussion? It is easier to give a man a dinner than an office, and there is this difference—there are plenty of dinners left.

WHETHER it be denominated Ringism, Bossism, Gormanism or any other ism, the condition which the so called Democratic leaders are endeavoring to fasten upon this State is subversive of good government, the political rights of the people and public interests generally.

RAYNER'S excuse for not allowing the name Socialist Democratic to appear on the ballot is very flimsy. The word "Democratic" may confuse the voter, he says. The aim of the law, therefore, is to confuse only Republican voters. Yet this is called a free country where right and liberty prevail.

THE coming election will decide issue of greater import to the people of Maryland than those strictly of a party nature. The fair-minded people of all political faiths understanding this, will unite in taking such measures as shall restore the honest election law that was eliminated from the statutes of the State by the $40,000 special legislative session called by the enemies of good government.

OH, DEMOCRACY, what crimes have been committed in thy name!

What shameful sins and wrongs has humanity suffered at thy hands!

Thou hast betrayed the innocent, oppressed the weak and scourged the strong—all in the name of liberty!

Could the Sage of Monticello burst the cerements of the grave, stalk forth sheeted and shrouded and meet those puny pigmies who have stolen his raiment and parted his garments, he could not recognize a trace of Democracy in these craven cowards who are now feasting and fattening upon the vitals of the great party which he formed and led so wisely and so well.

Shades of the stalwart Jackson! who fought tyranny and dishonesty at all times in every form and shape, what would that grim, honest, sturdy warrior and statesman say to see this rotten crowd who have robbed the treasury of the State, degraded our people, debauched our schools, stolen our rights and finally, under the form of this shamful bastard ballot law, robbed 40,000 honest men of their votes in Maryland, my Maryland!

False to every principle, they have betrayed every trust to the trusts and now in the name of Democracy they impudently and insolently face the good people of Maryland and ask them to return to the United States Senate the man who has done more to debauch the voters of this State than any man who has ever figured in Maryland politics!

The honest taxpayers of Maryland have been robbed of $150,000 to disfranchise 40,000 innocent, helpless voters!

These thieves and conspirators have taken the ballot, their only protection, from the illiterates; have closed our schools and mean to make all our children illiterates!

Soon Democracy will die—under this law!

If your father, friend, relative or neighbor is difranchised you and they pay for it through your tax bills!

Therefore, your money and vote are stolen at the same time by the same men!

MEN and measures take precedence of party at the coming election November 5th. The people of Maryland are not of those who will be content to lie supinely on their backs till the enemy shall have bound them hand and foot. Their chains are already forged. Their clanking was heard when the un-American suffrage law was enacted at the special legislative session. Their links were united by Gorman and his minions, but they will be wrought into pruning hooks by the people of Maryland.

SCHOOLS AND SPECTACLES.

Schools to teach voters how to cast their ballots, and spectacles for those whose eyes are not as good as they used to be, are two of the novelties of the Maryland campaign. Both are perfectly legitimate, and have been brought into practice and use by the very remarkable ticket which was made possible by the queer work of the extra session of the Maryland legislature, held last spring. A glance at the sample ballot will show how intricate a thing it is, how puzzling to every voter, no matter how well educated he may be. To a man of limited education is it going to prove a terror, and unless the judges of election receive instructions far different from those yet given them, a very considerable number of the ballots cast at the coming election will be thrown out as invalidated by unintentional and wholly excusable errors on the part of the voters.

It is in the hope of preventing errors of this sort that the schools of voters, with their mock elections, have been started, and they are by no means confined to the Republicans. Democrats have resorted to them, as they find that a large number of their own supporters are very chary about the ticket, very uncertain of their ability to make the cross-marks in the right place. The situation would be comical were it not for the outrageous and unpardonable wrong such a method of voting inflicts upon a large number of the most substantial and intelligent voters of the State. It is going to keep from the polls hundreds, if not thousands, of such men, who, though not scholars, are useful members of the community, and who have a right to demand and to receive better treatment than they are now receiving at the hands of those who unfortunately have again come into control of the affairs of Maryland.

Whatever may be the political complexion of the next legislature, this election law, with its labyrinthine ballot, must be wiped off of the statute books. No defense can be made for it, and even the Democratic managers are disappointed with their handiwork, as they see it is not going to accomplish the results which they expected. They are, in fact, ashamed of it, and for this reason are trying to keep it out of the campaign as an issue and to turn away the eyes of the voters to the race question, when they well know there is no more danger of negro domination in Maryland than there is in Maine. We have reason to believe, and we sincerely hope, that the law will be pronounced unconstitutional by the courts and wiped off the books in this way: but if this is not done, the legislature which meets next January must undo the vicious work of the extra session, and give back to the State the law which made elections in Maryland honest, fair and clean.

ONE figure is sufficiently expressive to cover all that is implied in the present Democratic political campaign in Maryland, and Democratic speakers are wasting time and Democratic newspapers space in multiplying the number. A great big figure 2 tells the story, and its meaning is the autocratic rule of Gorman and his old lieutenant, Rasin. This is the figure however, from which Democratic speakers and newspapers are endeavoring to divert public attention.

WHAT defense of the new ballot law have the Democratic candidates for the Legislature to offer?

LARGE, ENTHUSIASTIC MEETINGS

Held Throughout the County By Republican Speakers.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Senator Ravenscroft and ex-Senator Dick opened the Republican canvass at Strickland School House, District No. 11, Wednesday, Oct. 16th, to a large, appreciative and enthusiastic audience. The honest yeomanry, their wives and sweethearts were out in force. A number of miners were present. Seldom have we seen a better dressed or more orderly audience. For two hours the speakers held this assemblage. Both Senators are orators, differing in style and delivery. Senator Ravenscroft is a fluent speaker and a forceful writer, thoroughly understanding all the issues involved in this canvass. With wide experience and keen observation he has mastered his subject (State politics) and leaves little for the speaker who may follow him in that field. Senator Dick is a born orator, well trained and highly gifted. Few men can command the attention of an audience better or longer. He is a rising man with a brilliant future awaiting him. We must not fail to mention the courtesies and attentions shown us by Hon. W. H. Jacobs and family; also Captain Weir and family. These worthy people entertained us very handsomely.

THE BLAINE MEETING.

On October 17th at Blaine, District No. 13, a fine and attentive audience greeted the Republican speakers. We noticed many miners in the crowd. As usual they were attentive listeners. No class of men take a deeper interest in public affairs and none are better posted on current events.

Senator Dick left our party on Wednesday afternoon, but we were joined by Hon. P. E. Finzel, Messrs. McCulloh Brown, J. C. Renninger and Percy H. Veitch, the latter two bright young lawyers of the Oakland bar.

The speeches of the evening were delivered by Senator Ravenscroft and Representative Finzel. The Senator's speech was particularly aggressive and effective. He was called to the floor several times and greatly applauded. Having canvassed the county so often he knows nearly every man and woman we meet at our various stopping points.

Hon. P. E. Finzel delivered a carefully prepared speech upon State issues, giving very interesting legislative experience. Mr. McCulloh Brown gave an interesting and instructive lecture upon the dangers and difficulties of handling this most peculiar and ingenious ballot. The voter can hardly fail to make his ticket secure if his instructions are followed. Mr. Renninger's speech was well received, amusing the audience greatly.

We are greatly indebted to Messrs. Kitzmiller and family for their generous hospitality. Mrs. Rafter and family did everything to make our visit to Blaine pleasant and comfortable. These gentlemen are the pioneer coal operators in this region; have opened a splendid six-foot vein of first-class coal and are heavy shippers. They are also interested in fire clay and have found a first-class mine.

AT THE SHOOK SHOP.

Gorman, District No. 8, was our next stopping point. Here we spent part of Friday, visiting the enterprising citizens of that growing town. Our neighbors on the West Virginia side of the Potomac appeared much interested in our missionary work. Late in the afternoon ex-Sheriff White drove us over to the Shook Shop.

A most pathetic illustration of the wrong and outrage this unfair and unjust ballot law inflicts upon the aged, worthy and honest citizen was here seen. Uncle Jessie King, a patriarch of 83 years, a taxpayer and voter for 62 years, who has cleared, cultivated several large farms, reared a numerous and respectable family, is a victim of this shameful statute. He voted for Abraham Lincoln in a Southern State surrounded by fierce and vindictive Secessionists, has been true and loyal to that great party, but now in his old and honored age he is difranchised. Oh shame, where is thy blush!

Our meeting in the evening at the Shook Shop was one of the largest and most enthusiastic, many ladies being present who demonstrated their zeal and interest by frequent applause.

Mr. Percy H. Veitch here made his first bow to a Republican audience in this canvass. He is well known and was most cordially received, pleasing everyone. The veteran Capt. White did the honors as president of the meeting, making a telling speech, illustrating it with witty remarks and humorous stories. Senator Ravenscroft captured the crowd and held their undivided attention for an hour by a thorough explanation and statement of National and State issues. Senator Dick was at his best. A stronger or more graceful speech has not been heard during this canvass. Mr. Harvey was heard from. Commissioner Kelso showed us many attentions and kindly led and lighted our way for a mile or more on our way to Oakland. We found the party in that district well organized and aggressive. We left them confident and determined to show up the largest majority ever given a ticket in No. 8.

THE BLOOMINGTON MEETING.

Bloomington was reached early Saturday, the 19th. A number of our lady teachers were met on their return from the institute. Our handsome Senators rivaled each other in reaching the ear of their fair listeners (everything is fair in politics.) In visiting the kindly people of that progressive town and vicinity we found the Republicans alert and active; everyone, regardless of party, courteous and attentive. A pleasant and profitable day was passed among those intelligent and industrious miners, merchants, mechanics and laboring men. They are well informed and indignant to learn many of their neighbors and friends are effected by this outrageous ballot law. This is the home of our candidate for county commissioner, Jacob Stump, Esq. He is an intelligent, popular and progressive citizen, well equipped for that office and will poll a big vote. We are indebted to him for many attentions and pleased to learn he will attend the meetings and meet his fellow citizens.

Hon. George L. Michaels presided, opening with a strong speech, introducing the speakers gracefully.

Dr. Kemp with his well known affability was active in aiding the stalwart leaders in handling the largest meeting held in Bloomington for years.

The Senator spoke for two hours without a single interruption, arousing great enthusiasm and applause.

Hon. P. E. Finzel is well known here, receiving much attention. His speech was well delivered and received.

W. McCulloh Brown, Esq., delivered with great effect his lecture on preparing the ballot at the polls. At 10.30 p. m. the meeting was adjourned amidst great enthusiasm, closing the first week of the canvass. The party never was so thoroughly organized or in such excellent fighting shape. The indications and assurances are that the Repnblicans will carry by handsome majorities every district visited.

AT BRAY'S SCHOOL HOUSE.

Monday, Oct. 31st, the Republicans opened the second week of their canvass with two large meetings held at the Red House and Bray's School House. Senator Ravenscroft, Mr. Ed. H. Sincell and McCulloh Brown, Esq., were the speakers. We were accompanied by Capt. Jarboe, our genial postmaster, who entertained us with many humorous reminiscences. The evening was perfect. With good company, smooth roads and sprightly team, the drive was highly enjoyed. When we reached the meeting point a large crowd had assembled. Judge H. G. Sanders presided and in a few well chosen words introduced the speakers. Mr. Jonas Yutzy, our secretary, did the honors of the evening. We are indebted to ex-Sheriff Lee for courtesies. McCulloh Brown's lecture on voting was highly interesting. The people realize the danger of losing their vote and mean to guard against it. The speech of Mr. Ed. Sincell was the feature of the meeting. In his most impressive style he discussed and analyzed the legislation of the late extra session, explaining the purposes and exposing the designs of the conspirators who have denied and robbed the honest voter of his franchise, suggesting legal remedies and redress, holding his audience for more than one hour, closing amidst great applause and enthusiasm. Senator Ravenscroft closed the meeting with a fervent and eloquent appeal to the honest voters of Garrett county to use every effort to redress the wrongs and outrages, insults and indignities committed upon them by the leaders of Democracy.

The Bray School House Republican meeting held on the night of October 21st was addressed by N. S. Heindel, Esq., a promising young lawyer of the Oakland bar, who delivered a carefully prepared address, pleasing his audience. This was his first appearance on the stump in this county. His effort won him many friends and much applause. Mr. Percy H. Veitch followed. This was not his first appearance in this canvass. He is well known and popular among all classes, making friends everywhere. Mr. J. C. Renninger delivered a telling address. He is well known and has hosts of friends in this part of the county. Hon. P. E. Finzel closed the meeting with a stiring address. His lecture upon voting and handling the ballot was the feature of the evening. The voters are eager for instructions and anxious to learn how to avoid disfranchisement.

John J. Garrett presided over the meeting. He is popular among all classes. His speech was well received, gracefully introducing the speakers. In every way these meetings were satisfactory.

THE CRELLIN GATHERING.

Crellin opened wide her doors to the Republican canvassers Tuesday night—our reception was royal. This is the home of two Democratic candidates, who did much to make our visit pleasant. The house was crowded with an intelligent and orderly audience, who listened with attention and appreciation to our speakers.

Mr. Chas. A. Ashby, our bright and energetic candidate for House of Delegates, presided, introducing our speakers with appropriate remarks. He is very popular among all classes; every one has a kindly word for him, deserved by his genial and gentle manner. The innovation of the occasion was the election of Miss Etta Frantz as secretary of the meeting. This handsome and intelligent lady did the honors and performed the duties of the position with unusual grace and dignity. This evidences the progressiveness of Crellin. The chief industry of this vicinity is lumbering. One of the largest mills in the county is here located. The citizens are industrious, intelligent and prosperous. The ladies bright, pretty and accomplished. We will always praise and long remember the good people of Crellin.

Mr. Heindel opened with a graceful speech, pleasing the people with a number of well told anecdotes.

Senator Ravenscroft's speech was well received. He thoroughly discussed the State issues, dwelling particularly upon the shameful legislation of the late extra session. His arraignment of the Democratic leaders was particularly strong and effective. He held his audience with him from the start and closed amidst great applause.

Mr. Ed. H. Sincell followed. He is well and widely known, a veteran campaigner, a good lawyer and forceful speaker. He kept the audience in fine humor, delivering an effective speech.

Hon. P. E. Finzell spent part of the day in Crellin in company with our hustler Mr. Maffett, candidate for Sheriff. They made many friends and are unbounded in their praise of the hospitality of the people.

The meeting was a splendid success.

OCCASIONAL.

SWANTON.

While this place has not been reported for some time in your paper we are still in the ring, and working hard to defeat that obnoxious election law enacted at the extra session of the legislature.

We were pleased with Hon. A. F. George's promotion. He deserves all that he receives from our party.

C. S. May just returned from the city, where he purchased a large stock of goods.

Our school started off nicely under the management of Miss Rallston.

Our old friend Adam Fox was seen on our streets one day this week.

The mill has started up again. Mr. James Chisholm of near Gorman, is running the burs. He has a reputation for making good flour.

Some young men in this neighborhood are in the habit of disturbing public worship. Such conduct as was exhibited in church last Sunday will not again be overlooked. Take warning and save trouble.

Fraudulent Railroad Tickets.

The State authorities record yesterday what is said to be the first conviction for ticket forgery ever obtained in Cook county. Frank L. Rice and Jacob Wolf were the defendants found guilty, the penalty being imprisonment in the penitentiary, under the indeterminate law, from one to fourteen years. Rice is said to be a member of the ticket brokerage firm of Allardt & Co., 186 Clark street, and suspicion was directed toward him in a peculiar way. Wolf was employed as an engraver in Detroit, Mich.

Rice hired Wolf to make plates of certain Western roads which would be copies of tickets in use. Wolf's Detroit employer discovered what was being done and the Western Passenger Association was informed and investigated the matter, securing the evidence which led to conviction.

"About this time forged tickets of several Western roads were being placed on the market. They were traced to Rice, and on July 26 the authorities searched the office of the brokers at 186 Clark street, and arrested Rice. Henry J. Allardt, alleged partner of Rice and witness in his behalf, was instructed to bring in a record book of the brokerage company. He failed to do so, and yesterday Judge Kavanaugh informed attorneys for the defence that they must have the man in court to morrow morning to show cause why he should not be fined for contempt.—Chicago Tribune, September 29, 1901.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y.

Many people unacquainted with the geography of the West imagine that because the names "Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul" are used in the corporate title of the railway owning the Short Line between Chicago and Omaha, they must go via the cities of Milwaukee and St. Paul to reach their destination—and if it be Omaha or west thereof. This is a mistaken idea. On a map the line running directly east and west would look like this:

Omaha——————Chicago.

There is nothing more simple than that, and it is less than 500 miles between Chicago and Omaha. Two through trains daily in each direction with the best Sleeping Car and Dining Car Service, and all regular travelers know and appreciate the merits of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway's Short Line between the East and the West.

Time tables, maps and information furnished on application to John R. Pott, District Passenger Agent, 810 Park Building, Pittsburg.

HOW TO VOTE THE TICKET.

Instructions Issued by the Attorney-General in Marking Your Ballot.

Both political parties claim that the operation of the new ballot law will be in their interest. The Democrats hope to disfranchise many colored voters because of their presumed inability to correctly mark the ticket, and the Republicans assert that through careful instruction the negroes will become qualified to vote, but that thousands of illiterate white Democrats, resenting the imputation cast upon their intelligence, will remain away from the polls, or else will cast their votes with the Republicans. The result, however, is attended with uncertainty, and any light which can be thrown upon the situation is eagerly sought after.

Pursuant to the requirements of law the Attorney-General of Maryland has prepared the following instruction to voters:

1. To vote. Enter room, step up to the guard rail, give name and registered residence to the judges. Wait until your name is found upon the registers, then get ballot from judge in charge of ballots. See that he has written your name and number on the coupon attached to the ballot and his own name or initials on back of ballot itself.

2. Upon receiving your ballot, retire to one of the booths or compartments and prepare your ballot by marking with an indelible pencil after the name of every person or persons for whom you wish to vote and to the right thereof, in the blank space provided therefor, cross, for example (X) and in case of a question submitted to a vote of the people, by marking likewise in an appropriate space, a cross mark (X) against the answer you desire to give. If you wish to vote for some one whose name is not printed on the official ballot, you can write the name of such person in the blank space upon the ballot provided for that purpose.

3. In marking the ballot you may take with you into the polling place any written or printed memoranda or paper to assist you in preparing your ballot, except a fac-simile of the ballot to be voted. You must prepare and deposit your ballot without undue delay. Before coming from behind the curtain in front of your compartment, you must fold your ballot in the same way it was folded when you received it, so that the marks you have made upon it shall be entirely concealed. You then hand your ballot to the judge at the ballot box, give him your name and registered address, and wait until he tears off the coupon containing your name and number and strings it, and deposits your ballot in the ballot box. You must then leave the polling room and cannot again go behind the guard rail during the day.

4. A voter must not go into any compartment occupied by another, or converse with any other voter while engaged in a compartment, nor can he occupy a compartment more than seven minutes if others are waiting.

5. You must not take any ballot outside the guard rail. If you spoil spoil a ballot you must deliver the spoiled ballot to the judge in charge of the ballots, and you can receive another from him. If you spoil THREE ballots you lose your vote.

6. A voter who is physically disabled from marking his ballot must make an affidavit to that effect if he desires assistance. The two polling clerks, after such affidavits have been made, can accompany him into one of the compartments and there mark his ballot as he instructs them, marking only the names of the candidates whom he shall name. The clerks are not allowed to read the ballot to him.

7. Any voter who shall allow his ballot to be seen by any person with the apparent intention of letting it be known how he is about to vote, or place any distinguishing mark upon his ballot, or who shall make a false statement as to his inability to mark his ballot, or who shall interfere or attempt to interfere with any voter when inside the inclosed space in the polling room, or when marking his ballot, or shall endeavor to induce any voter to show how he marks or has marked his ballot, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five ($5) dollars nor more than one hundred ($100) dollars, or imprisonment in jail for a period not exceeding sixty days, or both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod Liver Oil is the means of life, and enjoyment of life to thousands: men women and children.

When appetite fails, it restores it. When food is a burden, it lifts the burden.

When you lose flesh, it brings the plumpness of health.

When work is hard and duty is heavy, it makes life bright.

It is the thin edge of the wedge; the thick end is food. But what is the use of food, when you hate it, and can't digest it?

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the food that makes you forget your stomach.

If you have not tried it, send for a sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists,
409 Pearl Street, New York.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE
Makes the food more delicious and wholesome
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

GAME.—H. Creutzburg buys game of all kinds for cash.

Col. George Truesdel and family of near Deer Park, were in Oakland Monday.

Dr. Henry W. McComas accompanied Mr. C. W. Watson to New York Sunday evening.

Mr. C. J. Miller, of Brookside, was a paying visitor to this office one day this week.

Rev. W. H. Berry, of Ohio, will preach in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church on Sunday morning. Rev. Uhler will preach at night.

Rev. George I. Uhler, of St. Mark's church, returned home Tuesday from Boonsboro, Md., where he attended the annual synod of his church.

The Garrett county gold seekers who went up to Nome, Alaska, early in the spring expect to arrive home in time to vote next month.

A train killed a horse belonging to the camp of gypsies now encamped on the base ball grounds near the Washington spring.

Mrs. Edith Glover and Miss Ethel Parsons, of Keyser, were guests of friends in Oakland a day or two this week.

Mr. Horace R. DeWitt, of near Accident, was in Oakland on business Saturday and visited our sanctum while in town.

Miss Annie Townshend has opened a select school for children in a room in the Shartzer building on Second street.

Capt. and Mrs. Markland have moved from Crook Crest to Mrs. Mattie Townshend's house on Alder street, where they will reside during the winter.

The residence of Mr. King Delawder on Second street is being repainted by Contractor Joseph Helbig. The improvement of the property is marked.

When you have no appetite, do not relish your food and feel dull after eating you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at all drug stores.

Mr. Joseph E. Harned and Dr. J. G. Robinson made a recent visit to Hoyes Run and vicinity where they secured a number of excellent views of the scenery of that section.

Dr. Henry W. McComas experienced a runaway a few days ago while returning from the race track near Mountain Lake Park. He was uninjured but the vehicle was smashed to smithereens.

John Casteel and his brother Steve who left Oakland about a year ago for the west, are now at Spokane, Washington, where they will remain until young "Dick" Browning joins them upon his return from Nome, Alaska, which will be about November 1st.

Capt. S. M. Taylor, of passenger train No. 12, was taken suddenly ill while making his run from Parkersburg to Cumberland one evening last week. Upon arriving here his condition was quite serious. He completed the trip to Cumberland, however, and has been confined to his home ever since.

The first real winter weather we have experienced so far this year struck this section last Thursday night. The wind was very high and snow fell in such quantities as to cover the ground most effectually. The cold weather coming so suddenly was greatly felt by all.

Arch. Chisholm, of Round Glade, near Oakland, came home Tuesday from Tunnelton, where he was working in the mines, owing to a strike inaugurated among the miners at the above place on Monday against a reduction of wages. The entire works, with the exception of force enough to supply engines with coal, are closed down.

The docking of horses' tails by Anglomaniacs who ape English manners and customs should be made a criminal offense, punishable by imprisonment for not less than one year. Nature provided the horse with a tail to brush off the flies, mosquitoes and other insects, just as the Creator furnished man with hands to protect himself. There are no mosquitoes and scarcely any flies in Great Britain to bother animals. A man who will wantonly cut a horse's tail should be compelled to stand on a sugar dock in hot weather with his hands tied behind his back, and he would then know the agony and torture a poor horse suffers with nothing but a stump tail to drive off these pests and tormentors.

A great many of our summer visitors are still with us, enjoying the delightful October weather.

Merchant Samuel P. Specht, of Deer Park, was in Oakland Tuesday on business.

Butter, eggs, etc., can be found at all times at the Enterprise Meat Market.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Falkenstein, who went to Cranesville on Thursday last, returned to Oakland Sunday.

Mr. Charles Whitmore, Democratic candidate for County Commissioner, went down in District No. 2 yesterday on an electioneering tour.

Mr. J. E. Hostetler, of Accident, visited Oakland a few days ago and became a cash-in-advance subscriber to this paper.

Mr. G. M. Gerver, of Fairmont, who occupied Capt. Hayden's house in Oakland this summer, has returned to Fairmont with his family.

For sprains, swellings and lameness there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Try it. For sale by all dealers.

George Crim went out to Cincinnati on Monday to see his brother Cal, who was shot that morning, an account of which appears elsewhere in to-day's REPUBLICAN.

Lumber for a delightful residence to be erected on the land recently purchased by W. R. Stull in the east end of town has been received in Oakland and a force of men are now employed in putting up the building. Mr. E. M. Spedden has charge of the work.

The Board of County Commissioners will meet on Wednesday, Nov. 6th. This will be the last meeting of the board as constituted now. Two new members will be elected on Nov. 5th and these with the present Commissioner, Mr. Peter J. Stephens, will form the new board who will be inducted into office on January 1st, 1901.

It was Capt. Hayden's intention and desire to visit Districts Nos. 2 and 6 the coming week in the interest of the whole Republican ticket, but finding that his services are required in assisting the editor, he deems it of more importance to remain in Oakland and will not make the contemplated visit to the above districts.

Messrs. J. P. Simons, of St. Louis, Mo., and George Simons, of Girard, Ill., are in Garrett county visiting the scenes of their younger days. These two gentlemen are brothers, born in the Cove some sixty years ago, and went west in 1865, where they settled. The former is a prominent stockman of St. Louis, whilst the latter is engaged very extensively in farming in Illinois.

Rev. H. Scott, D. D., the minister assigned to the Oakland Methodist Episcopal church, preached his initial sermon to a large congregation in St. Paul's church on Sunday morning. Mr. Scott is making many warm personal friends here and his stay among the people of Oakland we know will be pleasant to him and profitable to our residents. His family arrived on Wednesday.

George W. Farnsworth, a native of Martinsburg, employed as a carpenter by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, residing near Washington, Pa., dropped dead Friday evening while working in Hitchcock tunnel, east of Oakland. His wife died Wednesday at Buffalo, N. Y., and was buried Thursday at Chambersburg, Pa. He had not learned of her death. He had no children.

Lawson Means, confined in the Grafton (W. Va.,) jail, charged with robbery, has made a confession in which he states that he is a member of a gang that has committed many robberies in and about that city. He also says that he and his confederates had carefully planned the looting of summer hotels at Oakland, Mt. Lake Park, Loch Lynn and Deer Park. The hotels are closed, and it was the intention of Means and his pals to overpower the watchmen in charge and carry off everything of value that could be disposed of. Chief of Baltimore & Ohio detectives John Short has charge of the case, and is confident that he will have the rest of the gang behind prison bars within 24 hours.—Pittsburg Paper.

A Garrett County Resident.

Frank Dodge, one of the victims of the explosion in the mine at Tunnelton on Tuesday of last week, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Dodge, of near Oakland. The explosion was caused by an imperfectly placed "shot" in the breast coal, which blew out and ignited the dust from the machines, seriously burning a number of men. Mr. Dodge's injuries were very painful, his clothing being almost entirely burned from his body and the flesh on his face crisped. He will be unable to resume work for several weeks.

MONSTER MEETING.

Senator McComas, Senator Ravensaroft and Mr. Thomas Parran

ADDRESS A MONSTER MEETING

In Oakland Last Night—Speeches Denunciatory of the Democratic Extra Session Were Made Amid Great Enthusiasm.

Last night Senator McComas, Mr. Thomas Parran, Senator Ravenscroft and Mr. Scott T. Jones faced the finest, fairest, largest, most enthusiastic and intelligent audience ever gathered at a political meeting in Oakland. The orators may feel proud of the warm reception and close attention given them by this highly cultured and critical audience. It must be noted through the great crowds gathered at Mountain Lake Park and our other popular resorts the greatest orators, lecturers, teachers and preachers of the country are heard and met by our people during the summer season, our residents are capable critics. Their pleasure and approval was evidenced by close attention and constant applause.

Scott T. Jones, Esq., the popular Cashier of the Garrett County Bank, presided, making one of the most effective speeches of the campaign, saying in part: "The Democrat is the most persistent kicker in the world, but we are glad we have him, for without the opposition of the Democratic party we would never have been able to accomplish so much. We have in this campaign an issue which carries us back many years. I refer to the issue of taxation without representation." After discussing this proposition briefly the chairman introduced Senator R. A. Ravenscroft, who spoke of the growth, prosperity and importance of our county and of the importance of the election to be held. He then discussed the effect of the legislation enacted at the special session of the Legislature. He then spoke of the record that he had made as a member of the state senate and said "It is for you, my fellow-citizens, to say whether that record justifies you in re-electing me. I stand upon my record, and if elected I expect to be the representative of the whole people of Garrett county."

Senator McComas, who has always been very popular among our people, delivered the most telling speech of the campaign. He is a veteran orator of national reputation. Upon this occasion he was at his best, and held his splendid audience from start to finish, closing amidst great applause and enthusiasm. Senator McComas said in part: "These conspirators beheld this legislature 'hostile to popular rights,' and procured the pliant governor to call it an extra session to execute their scheme against popular rights. The state Constitution stood in their way. A slender majority in the State Senate, with an able, aggressive Republican minority therein, led by that splendid man, Senator Williams, blocked the way. The scant but servile majority were driven by Mr. Gorman, Mr. Vandiver, Mr. Baughman, Mr. Schley and others, who stood over them with slave drivers' whips, herded and drove them like docile slaves to butcher the fairest election law any state in the Union ever enjoyed, and to pass a census law in form, but in purpose, a supplementary disfranchisement law to operate a grand larceny of voters' rights all over the whole state.

"Have you forgotten the outrages, frauds, shams crimes and scandal which in 1875 overturned the election by the people and which yearly were practiced by the ruffian ring, which in its turn was cast out by the people in 1895? The conspiracy of the extra session was to fortify the same Gorman and Rasin ring in absolute power for a generation to come. And the herded legislature, like the quiet voting cattle they were, did the bidding of the conspirators and adjourned.

"If we win this fight we will wipe out with a sponge the conspirators' law, restore the Reform League Election Law, make fair primaries to all parties by law, pass the Corrupt Practice Act, take the police of Baltimore city out of politics, and start afresh in the career of reform wherein our party in its brief ascendency gained so much honor, achieved so much good to our state.

"Chairman Vandiver, who passed the law to keep out illiterates, because they were corrupt, asks for money to qualify the corrupt illiterates, and then defeat his law that he may be able to vote the illiterates and the corrupt, and for this he calls loudly for the cash.

"The pretense was that the disfranchisement election law would stop the corrupt use of money. We Republicans do not believe that because a man is illiterate he is corrupt. We want every white Democrat, whether or not he reads, to cast his vote according to his intent and judgment. We want it, if cast against us, to be fairly counted and fairly returned against us. We believe in republicanism. We believe in democracy of the suffrage. We appeal to a people we will re-enfranchise, white and colored, who are to be disfranchised by this shameful law. Already we see that the census law has failed these conspiritors."

Hon. Thomas Parran, one of Southern Maryland's most gifted sons, delivered a great speech. He thoroughly understands Maryland politics, discussing in detail every issue—making many friends. We hope this is not his last appearance before a Garrett county audience.

BLOOMINGTON.

Piedmont Independent.

John Murphy, living on Dry Fork, this county, was down last week visiting his daughter, Mrs. Fazenbaker.

A queer passenger was noticed last Saturday on an east bound freight train as it was passing through town. A large Plymouth rock rooster was seen perched on the brake wheel of a house car, seemingly enjoying the ride as much as a first-class passenger would in a Pullman parlor car. It was no difficult thing with him to preserve his equilibrium, and only once did he seem the least disturbed or excited, and that was when he noticed a brother rooster on the green at the lower end of town. He hopped down from the wheel onto the running board, flopped his wings, crowed in a deep voice his defiance and then deliberately resumed his place on the wheel. Several of our boys tried their bean-shooters on him, but failed to bring him down.

The school house is undergoing a thorough course of cleaning preparatory to the opening of the school on Monday, Oct. 21.

Mr. D. F. Graham and Col. Sam B. Harrison, two prominent business men, of Piedmont, were in town the first of the week. The visit was especially interesting to the former, for many faces familiar to him in his boyhood days caught his eyes as he drove through town. The old homestead and his grandmother's home, with the exception of some improvements made by the present owners, have changed but little since the family moved away, about 30 years ago. Mr. Graham, like a great many others whom we can point to with pride as natives of our town, has blazed a way to business success that any young man should feel proud to follow.

Presiding Elder McKenna, of the E. Balto. Conference M. E. church, will preach at this place next Sunday at 3 o'clock p. m.

Miss Lotta Kemp started for Baltimore Wednesday to take medical treatment in Johns Hopkins hospital.

Eddy Casey, who has been spending the summer as a guest of his brother, John Casey, of Piedmont, was in town Wednesday inspecting the Casey estate. He started for Grafton Thursday to visit his sister, Mrs. Mary Love.

John Miller, Silas Cramer, John Kight and Ad. Pugh had their annual outing last Sunday by spending a very pleasant day at Burlington.

A number of young ladies and gentlemen of town, friends and acquaintances of Miss Enga Kemmel, of Lochiel, tendered her a very enjoyable surprise party last Saturday evening.

Miss Margaret Kalbaugh, of Piedmont, accompanied by her guests, the Misses Shultz, of St. Louis, spent Saturday and Sunday with Miss Edna Brydon.

Peter Fitzwilliams, who has been a resident of our town for the past six years, moved to Piedmont Tuesday morning and is residing on Hampshire street. Mr. Fitzwilliams was appointed one of the judges of election for this district. His removal may necessitate a new appointment.

Mrs. Darby Carney, of Piedmont, formerly a resident of this place for many years and the owner of a very comfortable and convenient house on Main street, was a visitor on Wednesday.

Mr. Will Bosley, of Hampshire Hill, is clerking for one of our hustling business men, Mr. George Warnick.

Word was received on Tuesday that Earne Cross, who at one time lived in this community, was fatally burned in the explosion at Tunnelton. His brother-in-law, Cal Simpson, went out and reports that while four or five are painfully burned about head and body none are fatally injured.

Nicholas Paugh, near Frankville, has probably one of the finest orchards in Garrett county. His son-in-law, Mr. Adam Elliott, returned on Wednesday, after a very pleasant visit to his place, and brought with him some of the largest apples we have ever seen. "Nick," as he is familiarly called, has made a decided success of farming since he left the old home place near Barnum, now owning three fine farms and negotiation for a fourth.

Prof. Charles Morgan, of Midland, accompanied by his daughter Mary and son Thomas, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Rollins Saturday and Sunday. Charley and his family are fine musicians and can get up a concert at any time. During their stay they entertained their host and hostess and a few invited guests with beautiful selections on piano and violins. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Will Tibbetts also entertained the Morgan family.

Rev. George Cecil is holding a very successful revival meeting at Stony Run appointment. Quite a number of his church members from this place drove over on Thursday evening to assist him in his meeting.

Mr. Elroy Lakel, of Pittsburg, agent for musical instruments of all kinds, was in town this week. Mr. "Boob" Morehead purchased a phonograph and gave a free concert on Tuesday night. "Boob" particularly stuck on one piece that the instrument produces called "Because I Love You."

Mr. John Devine has secured work in the Shamrock mine, Lonaconing, and will make that town his home in the future.

Robbers Demolish Postoffice.

The postoffice at Kingwood was robbed early Thursday morning. The safe was blown to pieces, and all the glass in the office was broken to atoms, making a complete wreck of the entire office. About $100 in stamps and money, and a number of registered packages were secured. The robbers escaped.

Horses Stolen; Thief Captured.

Friday last a stranger hired a double team of horses and a buggy at the Helbig livery stable, stating that he was going down to Selbysport and would return to Oakland within a day or two. On Monday, not having returned, the suspicions of Mr. Helbig were aroused and he set to work to locate the man and the horses, in which he was successful. The man, who gives his name as Daniel Hestkill, was found at Uniontown, Pa., with the buggy and one of the Oakland liveryman's horses. The other animal he had traded on the road. The man was charged with stealing the property and he was placed under arrest at Uniontown. Last night he was brought here by one of the deputy sheriffs of this county and lodged in jail, where he will remain until his trial at the March term, unless bond for his appearance is put up.

The Official Ballot.

On our inside pages this week will be found the ballot to be voted at the election on November 5th. Under the present law we are prohibited from publishing a fac simile of the ballot in size but the arrangement as it will appear upon the official ballot is produced. The time spent in studying the arrangement of this most monstrous document will be well spent and will repay even those who are able to read and write.

Call for Your Letters.

Fred. Martin, Henry Mealin, A. F. Chisholm, L. V. Carothers, John T. Williams, L. L. Graner, Miss Ellen Brown, Miss Edith V. Davis, Lizzie Glerenkamp, Hallie Gilpin, Ella M. Raines, Kas and Fet Car.

Special Rates to Buffalo Pan-American Exposition, Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Excursion tickets from Oakland, Md., to Buffalo and return via Pittsburg account Pan-American Exposition now on sale at ticket offices Baltimore & Ohio Railroad:

TEN DAY TICKETS—On sale daily, $13.35.

FIFTEEN DAY TICKETS—On sale daily, $16.80.

SEASON TICKETS—On sale daily, good returning until Nov. 30th, 1901, $19.20.

For full details, time of trains, etc., call on Agent Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. til nov 1

BUSINESS LOCALS.

You can buy men's, boys' and children's clothing cheaper at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, than any place in town. 27 8*

Take your produce to N. Broadwater, who pays always the highest price.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

If you want a bargain in a nice family surrey or carriage you can get it at A. D. Naylor's. Closing them out for this season. Special low price and good terms. 28 3*

Buy the famous Cinderella Double Heater Cook Stoves and Ranges at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, Md.

N. Broadwater, Grantsville, has just returned from the city with the largest and most complete line of goods ever brought to town.

Go to Eagle Store, Grantsville, for ladies' tailor-made suits, jackets and capes. 27 8t*

FOR SALE:—The Lutheran parsonage, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

Come and see the largest and best assortment of gloves and mittens ever carried in stock in Swanton. Also a full line of underwear, as well as shoes for everybody. Bring along your cash and produce and get credit for the balance. Wm. W. Sweet, Agt.

A new remedy for biliousness is now on sale at all drug stores. It is called Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. It gives quick relief and will prevent the attack if given as soon as the first indication of the disease appears. Price, 25 cents per box. Samples free.

For Sale

Six good milch cows, at a bargain for cash. Offer open until Nov. 1. Want to reduce number. Apply to 22-2t. H. WEBER & SONS.

Dentistry.

Dr. Edwin W. Green, dentist, will be in Friendsville from October 28 to November 3 inclusive.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Grantsville, Md., on or about the middle of July last, 5 head of sheep, 4 yearlings and one older, 4 being ewes and one a weather. Four of said sheep having crops off left ear and slit in right ear; one with left ear cropped off.

The owner or owners are hereby notified to come forward, prove property, pay costs and take them away.

Dated Oct. 1, 1901.
CHRISTIAN M. LIVENGOOD,
30 Grantsville, Md.

Wanted.

One hundred men for general woods work and grading railroad.
PRESTON LUMBER & COAL CO.,
2 tf Oakland, Md

What it Cures
COUGHS. BRONCHITIS. HAWKNESS,
COLDS, LOSS OF VOICE, SORENESS,
HOARSENESS, LARYNGITIS, TICKLING.
PINE AND TERPIN COUGH SYRUP
Is the new remedy that is astounding the medical world with the rapidity and permanency of its cures—it never fails—one dose relieves while a few more cures—price, 25 cents a bottle.
LOGAN DRUG COMPANY,
At all Druggists. WHEELING, W. VA.

NOTICE OF
First Meeting of Creditors.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, in Bankruptcy.

In the matter of Henry Achenbach and Harry E. Achenbach, trading as H. Achenbach & Son and as individuals, Bankrupts.

In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of H. Achenbach & Son, partners and as individuals, of the county of Garrett and district aforesaid, bankrupts:

Notice is hereby given that on the 15th day of October A. D., 1901, the said H. Achenbach & Son, partners and individuals, were duly adjudicated bankrupts and that the first meeting of their creditors will be held at my Law Office, No. 6 Washington street, in Cumberland, Maryland, on the 9th day of November, A. D. 1901, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupts and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Oct. 24, 1901. ALBERT A. DOUB, Referee in Bankruptcy.

Appointment of Judge of Election to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 22, 1901.

Peter Fitzwilliams, appointed Democratic Judge of Election by this board at a meeting held Sept. 7, 1901, for Election District No. 4, is found to be disqualified to serve as such, having removed from the State, and in his place and stead G. Carl Pattison is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.
C. E. ELLITHORP, President.

Appointment of Judge and Registration Officer to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 22, 1901.

Simon Myers, appointed Republican Judge and Registration Officer by this board at a meeting held Sept. 7, 1901, for Election District No. 14, is found to be disqualified to serve as such, and in his place and stead John T. Sincell is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county, Md.
C. E. ELLITHORP, President.

COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.
OAKLAND, MD., Aug. 22, 1901.

The Board of County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Wednesday, Nov. 6, 1901,

to transact any business that may be brought before them.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

Sheriff's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an election will be held in the several election districts of Garrett county, at such places as shall be designated by the proper authorities for the location of the polls, on

Tuesday, November 5, 1901,

being the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November next, between the hours of 8 o'clock a. m. and 6 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing

One Comptroller of the Treasury, one Clerk of Court of Appeals, one State Senator, two Delegates to the Legislature, one Sheriff, one County Treasurer, two County Commissioners, one Register of Wills and one County Surveyor.

Attention is hereby called to the above notice, and keepers of hotels, taverns, saloons, stores, drinking establishments or any other place where liquors are sold, and all other persons are hereby notified that by Article 23, Section 105, of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland, no spirituous or fermented liquors, ale or beer, or intoxicating drinks of any kind can be sold, bartered, given away or disposed of on election day.

ANDREW J. OESTER,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

I HAVE PURCHASED
THE OAKLAND COAL YARD
of Mr. D. L. Conneway and will continue the business. I will keep constantly on hand a large supply of
HARD AND SOFT
COAL,
KINDLING WOOD, Etc.
All orders will receive prompt attention. Leave orders with the weighmaster or at my residence, the Giessman Hotel.
35-2 GEO. GIESSMAN

TURKISH BATHS IN TURKEY

Nearest Approach to Them Is Known as the Hammam.

"Is the Turkish bath known in Turkey?" This curious question is not infrequently put to travelers from the east by people in this country. It is true there is not much resemblance between the external appearance and management of the so called Turkish bath in England and those of the hammam in Turkey.

Outwardly the hammam usually presents something of the appearance of a domed sepulchral edifice. Of the little domes or cupolas which arise from its roof that in the middle is the highest and is set with many small windows for the purpose of lighting the bath. The massive walls that form the sides of the hammam have no windows, and it is thought that if the walls were pierced the outside air would penetrate into the interior and cause variations in the evenness of temperature which it is held desirable to maintain. The interior thus often becomes very close, as ventilation is slow, being only through the opening by passers to and fro of the double doors of the passage which leads to the cool entrance hall. Every now and then the attendants burn frankincense in the interior of the bath, with the idea of purifying the air.

The great warm hall under the central dome has generally three large niches as well as two little chambers. Each of these niches and chambers has a roof in the shape of a half hemisphere, which contains a few tiny glass apertures and which is joined to the central dome roof. In all these niches and chambers there are, according to the size of the bath, one, two or three marble basins, which are fixed in the low part of the wall, each basin being provided with hot and cold water taps. Around these basins people sit on marble or wooden seats, which are raised about five or six inches above the floor, and seated thereon they have their bath. The little chambers can be engaged for private use on application.

The entrance hall is square shaped and has galleries running along on each side, in which are many beds. The bathkeeper is always to be seen in his place close to the door, smoking his pipe or nargile and saluting the customers who come and go. In the middle of the entrance hall is a fountain, the pure and cold water of which is ceaselessly splashing into its marble tank. In this water fresh fruits and bottles of lemon squash are kept cool in summer time for the use of customers. Near it a man may be seen always busy making coffee on the charcoal fire, for most people are ever ready to take a tiny cup of coffee at almost any time of the day.

Many of the Turkish baths are built double, one portion being assigned for the use of ladies. In some places ladies go to the baths only on certain days of the week, which are consecrated to them. Certain baths, again, are used by them every day until 7 o'clock in the evening, after which they are made over for the use of men. The charges are very reasonable. A man can have a complete bath and may stay on the premises of the establishment as long as he pleases by paying about 1s. 8d. Ladies pay much less than this sum. Their expenses can hardly be much over sixpence, as they take all their own soaps, towels and clogs with them. What they pay is really the water fee and a penny or two for the attendant.

A new feature which has been introduced into the old Turkish bath is the cold water douche, which it is becoming customary for the people to take after their hot bath.—Review of the Week.

A Squaw's Remarkable Journeying.

In the last century a Chinook Indian woman known to Father Huc, a great traveler and missionary of that period, while he was with the Indians on what we now call the Pacific coast, was many years afterward met by him in Asia. Through many vicissitudes and strange experiences she had passed from tribe to tribe and place to place, always moving northward, until she reached Bering strait, and there, having gone out in one of the large canoes used by the seafaring Indians of that region in a great storm they were driven across the strait to wreck and death to all save her, and she wandered on until she met Father Huc in the interior of Asia. She had not sought to return; but, following the spirit of adventure bred in her by her strange experience, she went on to see new lands.

To Magnetise a Knife.

Take a pocket or table knife and lay its blade flat upon the back of a fire shovel. With a pair of tongs held firmly in the hand rub the blade vigorously and always in the same direction from point to base. Turn the blade over now and then, so that the friction may be applied to both sides. After a rubbing of from forty to fifty seconds the blade will be magnetized and will be capable of lifting a needle with which it is placed in contact, point to point. The magnetization will last a long time. This experiment, which is not put down in works on physics, is very interesting and worthy of study.—Nature.

Russian Superstition.

The widow of a church beadle died in a village in the government of Penza, having expressed the desire that her remains be put by those of her husband. When the grave of the latter was opened, the coffin was not found. On investigation it was discovered that the peasants of the village had stolen the body of the dead beadle and sunk it in a swamp. There had been a drought in that district last year, and the peasants believed that if they sank the body of a righteous man in water rain would come. This superstition is said to be prevalent among the common people in that region.

List of Nominations filed with the Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County.

OFFICE OF BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MARYLAND, October 21, 1901.

In compliance with the provisions of Section 44 of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws, notice is hereby given that the nominations hereinafter mentioned have been filed with or certified to this Board under the provisions of Article 33 of Code of Public General Laws. The nominations which have been so filed with or certified to this Board will be on the official ballots, arranged as nearly as practicable in the form and order below set forth.

FOR COMPTROLLER OF THE TREASURY:
WILLIAM J. PARKER of Baltimore City	UNION REFORM
JOSHUA W. HERING of Westminster, Maryland	DEMOCRATIC
WILLIAM KLEINLE of Baltimore City	PROHIBITION
HERMAN S. PLATT of Baltimore City	REPUBLICAN
FOR CLERK OF THE COURT OF APPEALS:
THOMAS PARRAN of St. Leonards, Maryland	REPUBLICAN
GUSTAVUS W. PETHERBRIDGE of Charlotte Hall, Maryland	PROHIBITION
JOSEPH FRANK TURNER of Easton, Maryland	DEMOCRATIC
GEORGE G. SHEPHERD of Baltimore City	UNION REFORM
FOR STATE SENATOR:
JOHN W. McCULLOUGH	DEMOCRATIC
ROBERT A. RAVENSCROFT	REPUBLICAN
FOR MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF DELEGATES:
CHARLES A. ASHBY	REPUBLICAN

Constitutional Amendment.

Chapter 185, of Acts of 1900.

AN ACT to amend section nine, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this state, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 9. The State's Attorney shall perform such duties and receive such fees and commissions of salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, as are now or may hereafter be prescribed by law; and if any State's Attorney shall receive any other fee or reward than such as is or may be allowed by law, he shall, on conviction thereof, be removed from office, provided that the State's Attorney for Baltimore City shall receive an annual salary of forty-five hundred dollars and shall have power to appoint one deputy, at an annual salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, and such other assistants at such annual salaries not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars each, as the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City may authorize and approve; all of said salaries to be paid out of the fees of the said State's Attorney's office, as has heretofore been practiced.

For Constitutional Amendment.

Against Constitutional Amendment.

Constitutional Amendment.

Chapter 432, of Acts of 1900.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this State.

SECTION 4. As soon as may be after the taking and sub-

SPEECH BY SENATOR RAVENTCROFT.

(Continued from Page Two.)

the passage of this act will be so loud and strong that it will reverberate throughout the limits of this land. Handicap, manacle and obstruct the illiterate as you may; defraud, deceive and betray them to your utmost, pervert the election machinery to the utmost of the ability of those who manipulate it, for the purpose of fraud, bribery and intimidation, still yet, Mr. President, the sovereign voice of the independence liberty-loving and fair-minded people of Maryland will sweep from power the party which made possible the opportunity to arbitrarily disfranchise and defraud a large body of our citizens against their constitutional rights. The Legislature which meets here next January will hasten to undo this gigantic wrong and his Excellency the Governor will sign or veto, according to his then construction of what is the voice of the people, a bill which, if signed, will be another monument marking the pathway of progress, liberty and equal rights in this old commonwealth. There are some Senators on this floor who will come back bearing the garlands of public approval, with the material in their hands to help build that monument. There are some of you, perhaps, who will come back under a changed conviction as the divine authority of party expediency as formulated by men who have not been chosen by the voting public as the leaders of any party, and you will either help, as converted sinners, to build that monument or you will sit in sullen protest, nursing your own remorse and grieving over your own misfortunes and the misfortunes of your party, and you will see this monument being builded and regret that you did not yourselves at this session help to lay its corner-stone. The day of its dedication will mark a new and brighter era in the history of this State, and it will be planted over the tomb of political bossism, intolerance and fraud in elections in this State.

Mr. President, in conclusion let me say we will leave the consideration of this measure, when it shall have been finally settled, with the happy and comforting conviction that we have done our full duty, not to any party or class, but to the whole people of this State. We have obeyed the constitution as we saw it. We have fulfilled our official oaths as we construed them. We have protested, appealed, importuned the majority here, not to give us any partisan advantage, but to be fair, honest and undiscriminating as to the rights of every citizen of the State. We have warned the majority of the gathering storm, which is inevitable and which soon must break. Having performed this duty and having exhausted all our resources to the end of saving the State from discredit and disgrace and a large body of its people from injustice and degradation, we must now leave the responsibility to rest upon the conscience and judgment of every man in this Senate when he casts his final vote.

Your very partisanship should not let you, at such a crisis, leave to your political rivals the necessity of raising the legend which you have cast down. Trust the people! Respectability elevates the race. Privileges debarred, rights denied, authority withdrawn, tends to cast down, dwarf and belittle any people. This measure is intended to and will obstruct the inevitable progress of human liberty in the State of Maryland. I will not vote for any measure that has for its object, either directly or indirectly, the taking away from the people the right of franchise.

AN ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE.

An Appeal for Manhood and the Manhood Suffrage.

Immediately after the adjournment of the extra session of the Maryland Legislature the Republican Senators and Delegates held a meeting in the south wing of the State Library and formulated the following address "to the people of Maryland:"

To the People of Maryland:

"The Republican members of the General Assembly believe that it is their duty to address you a brief review of the extraordinary session that has just closed. We are led to adopt this unusual course by the belief that unless the power of the autocratic and unscrupulous coterie that has possession of our State government is promptly rebuked and checked there is grave danger that our election laws will be further mutilated and the machinery of the government again employed as an agency of extortion and corruption. The hand of the political boss is visible in every act of the desperate play, from its inception to its culmination. The extra session idea had its birth as a result of a political deal that was to put one man in the United States Senate by stripping 50,000 citizens of their constitutional and sovereign right to vote and to give to another man the control of the construction of the sewerage system of Baltimore city that will cost $20,000,000 before it is completed. These two men had complete control of a sufficient number of Democratic members of the two branches of the Legislature to secure the passage of any law they deemed necessary to advance their personal ambition.

SESSION BEGAN WITH FRAUD.

"When the Senate met on the day set by the Governor, the secretary declared a quorum present when only 13 Senators were in the chamber, and concealed the fact by omitting from the journal the names of those present. The 13 Democratic Senators present knowingly participated in this in violation of an express provision of the Constitution, which requires the presence of 14 Senators, and attempted to organize and legislate. In so doing they were advised and directed by their chiefs. Such party discipline is dangerous and such domination intolerable.

"The new election law renders it impossible for the citizens who cannot read to vote, and is so cunningly drawn that it will be difficult for the educated to avoid having their ballots thrown out. Any mark upon the ballot other than an 'X' within the voting square, however innocently made, will render the ballot void. Furthermore, an error in voting for a candidate for a single office, where there are a large

Constitutional Amendment.

Chapter 432. of Acts of 1900.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this State.

SECTION 4. As soon as may be after the taking and pub-

FOR MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF DELEGATES:

REPUBLICAN

CHARLES A. ASHBY

Held by Fierce Brigands

Dire Peril Of Miss Stone In Mountains Of Bulgaria

To be captured by Bulgarian brigands and carried off to one of their mountain fastnesses in the Balkans was the calamity that happened to Miss Ellen M. Stone, the Boston missionary, in the early part of September.

The region where she was captured, on the border between Bulgaria and Macedonia, in European Turkey, is where the infamous "Bulgarian atrocities" occurred which startled the world in 1876.

Gladstone, the great English statesman, described these horrors as "wholesale murders, assaults, tortures, burnings and the whole devilish enginery of crime."

A detailed account of the capture of Miss Stone has been received from Mrs. H. C. Haskell of Samokov, Bulgaria, to a relative in Kansas City.

The letter says Miss Stone had been holding her usual summer school for Bible workers at Bansko, Macedonia. On Sept. 3 a party of six students from the college institute at Samokov, three or four Bulgarian teachers, Mr. and Mrs. Tsilka, who had spent years in America; Mrs. Coshera and Miss Stone started for Djumiak, twelve hours' travel. From there they were to go to their different homes.

At 4:30 o'clock that afternoon, as they were resting in the mountains, Miss Stone and Mrs. Tsilka being on horseback and the rest on foot, they were surrounded by thirty or forty armed men. These men were dressed in Turkish costume, but were masked or blackened. They ordered the party to march and drove them up the steep mountain side.

Miss Stone told the bandits they were taking them away from the road to rob and perhaps kill them. She did not speak of capture.

After traveling an hour the brigands stopped and demanded their money, taking what gold they had, but returning the silver.

When this was done, one of them said to Miss Stone:

"We want you," and ordered her and Mrs. Tsilka to go with them. Miss Stone made no remonstrance. Mr. Tsilka made a move to follow his wife, but they forced him back.

A part of the brigands kept watch on those who remained to keep them from hurrying to inform the government, but next morning let them go.

The brigands murdered one of the men of the party before the eyes of the captives to get his horse. They took this animal as well as the horses ridden by Miss Stone and Mrs. Tsilka.

The students went to Samokov and wired Dr. House at Salonika, Miss Stone's station. He immediately went to the American consul and telegraphed Consul General Dickinson, who knew Miss Stone.

The news spread over Bulgaria like a flash, for Miss Stone was widely known and greatly beloved.

If the brigands are Bulgarian outlaws, as is suspected, their traditional religion is the Greek church, all members of which in that region have a bitter dislike to Protestant Christianity.

There is a possibility, however, that this piece of highwaymanry has been done by the bloodthirsty Bashi-Bazouks, the professional assassins of the Turkish government.

The sultan of Turkey has denied all complicity in this affair and has promised American Consul General Dickinson, at Constantinople, to send regular troops to the rescue of Miss Stone and her companion. Yet the sultan's promise is often a cloak for treachery.

The country where Miss Stone was captured is the same as the Thessaly of the Scriptures, to the people of which the Apostle's Epistle to the Thessalonians was addressed. It is the Thrace of Greek history, where Philip of Macedon and Alexander the Great led their armies and where Socrates campaigned barefoot as a common soldier. Yet with its 3,000 years of recorded history it is still one of the wildest regions of Europe.

MURDERED ONE OF THE MEN.

Only a few years ago a native Albanian Christian missionary was seized and held until ransomed for $3,500.

The district where Miss Stone was taken is especially favorable to brigandage. It is a part of the Balkan mountains, which divide Bulgaria from Macedonia.

Bands of roving, pillaging Turks or Bulgarian outlaws infest the whole border region of the Balkans between Macedonia and Bulgaria.

Woman's honor is held in light esteem. Up to within a very few years the most deplorable outrages were committed openly and are even now done secretly.

While the corps of janizaries existed every fifth male child was forced into the Turkish military service and young girls were carried off by thousands to fill the harems of their conquerors or otherwise minister to their pleasure. The haughty bearing and tyranny of the troops which marched to and fro in the country so cowed the Christian population that they became timid serfs.

CAPTURED BY BULGARIAN BRIGANDS.

Many escaped death by embracing Islam, and it was not uncommon for parents voluntarily to send their daughters into the harems of the begs so that they themselves might gain protection.

Numbers of young begs, or men of station, made excursions from Philippopolis into neighboring villages, ordered the girls brought out to dance for their amusement and afterward compelled the young women to join them in debauchery.

Respectable girls fled in terror when a Turk entered a village or blackened their faces and resorted to various devices to make themselves repulsive.

The relatives of maltreated girls retaliated, and seducers and tyrants were assassinated.

This is one cause of the present brigandage on the Bulgarian border, which has existed for centuries. Cruel as the bandits often are to foreigners, they have a hold on the affections of the natives and are aided by the peasant population, who shelter and protect them.

A curious state of affairs has resulted from this anarchy. When the peasantry are maltreated by the Turkish begs and other officials, they appeal to the brigands, Haiduts, Kirdjalis, or by whatever name they are known, for protection or revenge.

In one place a young Turkish nobleman had been guilty of the greatest cruelty and excesses, committing outrages on the wives and daughters of peasantry, even capturing and selling children. He entered a village on one occasion on horseback, surrounded by his retinue all decked in silk and gold.

He had not gone far when a band of Haiduts, led by a well known chief, sprang from hiding places, pulled the beg from his horse, broke his arms and legs and struck off his head. This bloody trophy they put on the end of a spear and carried it in triumph at the head of the band as they marched through the village.

Many similar instances are still told of similar brigand chiefs and their followers leading a kind of Robin Hood life in the mountains.

There are even historic cases of brigand chiefs becoming so formidable that the sultan has been obliged to take them into his service and recognize their authority.

The most notable instance is that of Osman Pasvanogla, the independent pasha of Vidin.

As a young man he saw his father murdered by a Turkish noble. He then left his home and adopted a brigand life in the mountains of Albania near Bulgaria.

Tiring of that, he took service with the porte at the head of a troop of volunteers. But his power grew so rapidly that he exercised an almost independent rule, and the formidable forces which he had at his command roamed about the country fighting and plundering, so that it was unsafe for travelers, even missionaries, to move about. Many vain attempts were made by the porte to reduce him to submission. Large armies were sent after him, but they were driven back defeated, and it was not till he felt his power begin to wane that the pasha again offered his services to the sultan and was accepted in the war with Servia.

This simply illustrates the place that brigandage holds in the Turkish domain. A new outbreak of this outlawry is indicated by the recent capture of Miss Stone, whose fate is now so anxiously speculated upon.

For Strength and Honesty at Home And Abroad

By PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

THE old iron days have gone; the days when the weakling died as the penalty of inability to hold his own in the rough warfare against his surroundings. We live in softer times. Let us see to it that while we take advantage of every gentler and more humanizing tendency of the age we yet preserve the iron quality which made our forefathers and predecessors fit to do the deeds they did.

THIS COUNTRY CANNOT AFFORD TO HAVE ITS SONS LESS THAN MEN; BUT NEITHER CAN IT AFFORD TO HAVE THEM OTHER THAN GOOD MEN.

If courage and strength and intellect are unaccompanied by the moral purpose, the moral sense, they become merely forms of expression for unscrupulous force and unscrupulous cunning. If the strong man has not in him the lift toward lofty things, his strength makes him only a curse to himself and to his neighbor. All this is true in private life, and it is no less true in public life.

WOE TO ALL OF US IF EVER AS A PEOPLE WE GROW TO CONDONE EVIL BECAUSE IT IS SUCCESSFUL.

Each of us has not only his duty to himself, his family and his neighbor, but his duty to the state and to the nation. We are in honor bound each to strive according to his or her strength to bring ever nearer the day when justice and wisdom shall obtain in public life as in private life.

* * *

For the sake not only of ourselves, but of our children and our children's children, we must see that this nation stands for strength and honesty both at home and abroad. In our internal policy we cannot afford to rest satisfied until all that the government can do has been done to secure fair dealing and equal justice as between man and man. In the great part which hereafter, whether we will or not, we must play in the world at large let us see to it that we NEITHER DO WRONG NOR SHRINK FROM DOING RIGHT because the right is difficult; that on the one hand we inflict no injury and that on the other we have a due regard for the honor and the interest of our mighty nation and that we keep unsullied the renown of the flag which beyond all others of the present time or of the ages of the past stands for confident faith in the future welfare and greatness of mankind.

HIGHWAYS OF NORWAY.

National Government Maintains Splendid System of Roads.

When one travels in Norway, he is compelled to adopt primitive means of transportation, and that's the charm of it, says W. E. Curtis in Chicago Record-Herald. There are plenty of rivers and lakes with "damp sheep" upon them—that's the Norwegian word for steamboat—but if you want to go in any other direction you must take a carriage; or, if there are only two of you, a native cart called a stolkjarre; or, if you are alone, a carriole, which is a sort of sulky. The arrangements are perfect, and the roads are fine. Everything is under government supervision for the comfort and convenience of travelers, even the scenery, which is sublime. You can ride all day without a jolt, for the roads are as hard as asphalt pavement and smoother than most of it, for in our cities the asphalt pavements generally have plenty of places that need repair.

I suppose that when the United States is a thousand years old we will have such roads in our country, for good roads are the growth of centuries and are not constructed by men in a hurry. Julius Cæsar—or was it Hannibal?—started the good roads movement in southern Europe, and in Norway it began in the days of the vikings. The national government here took charge of the highways in 1625 and has been extending and improving them ever since.

It is generally the rule that the best roads are found in countries where their construction is difficult. You can drive anywhere on our western prairies, but through the Norwegian mountains a roadway has to be hewn out of the rocks.

ROAD DESTROYERS.

Narrow Tires Most Destructive of Influences.

"The amount of money that is being expended in the building of improved roads most certainly calls for special legislation for their preservation," says C. A. Spratt, road engineer for Mecklenburg county, N. C. "The greatest destroyer of roads, stone or earth, is the narrow tired wagon, with its axles of even length. The average width of tire is not over 1¼ inches, which after a few months' use is rounded off to an inch or less. All that the wagon will bear is usually put on it if on an improved road, so we have four wedges a little blunt, it is true, working away to loosen up or grind the bond of the road, which done, deeper they go, working out larger stones, and the persistence with which each wagon follows in the track of the one preceding is sickening to the eye of the road supervisor.

"In constructing a road across a marsh some three years ago our wagons with four inch tires were going over nicely with a load of 1½ yards of earth. A light surrey came along, cut through and had to be helped out.

"The cost of repairs to streets and roads in a few years could be cut down from 50 to 75 per cent."

MAKING SAND ROADS.

With a Proper Admixture of Clay Durable Highways Result.

Judge Eve reports that he has been claying the sand roads of Richmond county, Ga., for twenty years with the result of obtaining "very pleasant hard roads that last five years without rebuilding."

The rule is to put down six inches of clay with two inches of sand on top of it, and it is better to put on the sand when the clay is wet. When the right proportions are used, "a crust is formed which sheds the water, and the road stays in good condition."

The roadbed should, of course, be first graded properly and raised in the middle so as to shed water to the drains. In dry weather the clay sand road is ideal, which cannot be said of a sandy road. The cost of construction is in proportion to the distance the clay has to be hauled. There are seventy-five miles of such roads in Richmond county. It is equally efficient to sand the clay roads. Before 1880 Judge Eve says finally, "many stretches for several miles along our roads were uncultivated. Now they are in a high state of cultivation, and land values have handsomely increased."

Economy of Good Roads.

The saving effected through the construction of scientific roads, which can be kept in good running condition at small annual expense, would more than pay for the full cost of road building of half a century ago, says G. E. Walsh in Gunton's Magazine. This saving is not always apparent at first, for the first cost seems to overshadow all other considerations in the minds of the shortsighted economists. It took two decades of agitation to convince most of the residents of rural districts that it was more profitable to build good roads under the direction of road engineers than to rebuild and repair the old dirt roads after a fashion in vogue since the beginning of things. The greatest triumph in the movement may be said to be the complete education of the farmers to a proper appreciation and understanding of the whole question of scientific road building.

Draining the Road.

Where the roadmaker encounters seepy or soft ground in the subgrade, such places should be properly and thoroughly drained by the use of drain tile laid along the center of the roadway on one or more lines to culverts intersecting across the road, thus draining and drying out the subgrade and giving him a dry foundation on which to build, as the presence of any undue quantity of moisture under the roadway would prevent him from doing permanent work. The success of his efforts will depend entirely upon the drainage he obtains.

A Monstrous Tide.

The bay of Fundy forms a cul-de-sac at which the Atlantic ocean seems to have taken a special spite and at regular intervals pours into it an enormous amount of water. Take the harbor of St. John's as an illustration of what this mighty tide must be. In most parts of the world a tide of ten feet is considered something abnormal, but at St. John's it rises twenty to twenty-four feet in good weather. In stormy weather the monotony is varied by the high water mark being pushed up even ten or fifteen feet higher.

There are about 8,000 libraries scattered over the United States, including one at Tampa, with books in the Spanish language, endowed by Queen Christina of Spain.

SUPERVISORS' Notice of Election.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 23rd, 1901.

Notice is hereby given to the Judges and Clerks of Election and to the qualified voters of Garrett county, Maryland, that in accordance with the provisions of Article XXXIII of Chapter 202 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January Session, 1896, and amended by the Acts of 1900 and 1901, an election will be held in the several districts of said Garrett county, at the usual places of holding elections and hereinafter set forth, on

TUESDAY, The 5th Day of November, 1901,

for the purpose of balloting for—

One person to be Comptroller of the Treasury of the State of Maryland.

One person to be Clerk of the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland.

One person to be Senator in the Senate of the State of Maryland from Garrett County.

Two persons to be members of the House of Delegates of the State of Maryland from Garrett County.

One person to be Sheriff of Garrett County.

One person to be County Treasurer of Garrett County.

Two persons to be members of the Board of County Commissioners for Garrett County.

One person to be Register of Wills for Garrett County

One person to be County Surveyor of Garrett County.

And—

Also for or against a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland by amending Section Nine of Articlee 3 thereof to read as follows:

CHAPTER 185.

AN ACT to amend section nine, of Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, herein and as by law provided, it shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section nine of said Article.

SECTION 9. The State's Attorney shall perform such duties and receive such fees and commissions or salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, as are now or may hereafter be prescribed by law; and if any State's Attorney shall receive any other fee or reward than such as is or may be allowed by law, he shall, on conviction thereof, be removed from office; provided that the State's Attorney for Baltimore city shall receive an annual salary of forty-five hundred dollars, and shall have power to appoint one deputy, at an annual salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, and such other assistants at such annual salaries not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars each, as the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City may authorize and approve; all of said salaries to be paid out of the fees of the said State's Attorney's office, as has heretofore been practiced.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted, That the foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, shall be, at the next general election for members of the General Assembly, to be held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14, of the Constitution; and at said election the vote on said proposed amendment shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment" or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election one return shall be made to the Governor of the vote on said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Also for or against a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland by amending Section Four of Article 3 thereof to read as follows:

CHAPTER 432.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this State.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and instead of section four of Article 3, of said Constitution.

SECTION 4. As soon as may be after the taking and publishing of the National Census of 1900, or after the enumeration of the population of this State, under the authority thereof, there shall be an apportionment of representation in the House of Delegates, to be made on the following basis, to wit: Each of the several counties of the State, having a population of eighteen thousand souls or less, shall be entitled to two delegates; and every county having a population of over eighteen thousand and less than twenty-eight thousand souls, shall be entitled to three delegates; and every county having a population of twenty-eight thousand and less than forty thousand souls, shall be entitled to four delegates; and every county having a population of forty thousand and less than fifty-five thousand souls, shall be entitled to five delegates; and every county having a population of fifty-five thousand souls and upwards, shall be entitled to six delegates and no more; and each of the four legislative districts of the City of Baltimore shall be entitled to the number of delegates to which the largest county shall or may be entitled under the aforegoing apportionment, and the General Assembly shall have the power to provide by law, from time to time, for altering and changing the boundaries of the existing legislative districts of the City of Baltimore, so as to make them as near as may be of equal population; but said district shall always consist of contiguous territory.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, shall, at the next election for members of the General Assembly of this State, to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14, of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

The polls of said election will be opened in each and every Election District of said Garrett county, at the usual places of holding the polls, at 8 o'clock a. m. and will be closed at the hour of 6 o'clock p. m., when the ballots shall be counted according to law.

For the information of all persons concerned the following Act of the Legislature, passed March 24, 1865, is published:

CHAPTER 461.

AN ACT prohibiting the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors in the several counties of the State on the day of election.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That it shall not be lawful for the keeper of any hotel, tavern, store, drinking establishment, or any other place where liquors are sold, or for any person or persons, directly or indirectly, to sell, barter, give or dispose of any spirituous or fermented liquors, ale, beer, or intoxicating drinks of any kind, on the day of the election hereafter to be held in the several counties of the State.

SEC. 8. And be it enacted, That any person violating the provisions of this Act shall be liable to indictment by the Grand Jury of the county where the offense is committed, and shall, upon conviction by a judge of any Circuit Court of the State, be fined a sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each and every offense—one-half the fine shall be paid to the informer, the other half to the County Commissioners for the use of the public roods.

And the places of election in the several Election Districts of said Garrett county will be as follows:

Election District No. 1—Swanton.—In the town of Swanton.

Election District No. 2—Friendsville.—In Ed. Schlossnagle's Saddlery Shop in the town of Friendsville.

Election District No. 3—Grantsville.—In O'Hanley's Hall in the town of Grantsville.

Election District No. 4—Bloomington.—In Thomas Garvey's house in the town of Bloomington.

Election District No. 5—Accident.—In the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District No. 6—Sang Run.—In the Election Building in the village of Sang Run.

Election District No. 7—Oakland.—In the Corrigan House, corner Third and Alder streets, in the town of Oakland.

Election District No. 8—Ryan's Glade.—At the old Hoye place on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District No. 9—Johnson's.—At the shop of Samuel Johnson on the National Road.

Election District No. 10—Deer Park.—In the building owned by Dr. J. W. Laughlin in the town of Deer Park.

Election District No. 11—The Elbow.—At the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District No. 12—Bittinger.—In the shop of H. A. Groves in the village of Bittinger.

Election District No. 13—Kitzmillersville.—In the Paul Shultz building in the town of Kitzmillersville.

Election District No. 14—Oakland.—In the office of the Board of Supervisors of Elections in the Opera House building in the town of Oakland.

By order of the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Md.

C. E. ELLITHORP, Pres.,
FRANK WELCH,
A. G. STURGISS,
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland.

EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Treasury Department.

OFFICE OF
THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., August 20, 1901.

Whereas, by satisfactory evidence presented to the undersigned, it has been made to appear that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, has complied with all the provisions of the Statutes of the United States, required to be complied with before an association shall be authorized to commence the business of banking.

Now therefore I, Charles G. Dawes, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, is authorized to commence the business of Banking as provided in Section Fifty-one hundred and sixty-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

SEAL

In testimony whereof witness my hand and Seal of office this twentieth day of August, 1901.

(Signed) CHARLES G. DAWES,
Comptroller of the Currency.

oct 31

No. 5943.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

"MARYLAND, MY MARYLAND."

Continuation of Mr. J. A. Howell's Letter to His Paper at Jefferson, Ohio.

Last week we published a portion of a letter written from Oakland by Mr. J. A. Howells to his paper, the Ashtabula Sentinel, published at Jefferson, O. This week the balance of the letter is published herewith:

"CROOK CREST,"
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 3, 1901.

DEAR READER:—In our last we spoke of the sudden death of General Crook at Chicago. The loss to the army and his friends by this death was a severe one, and indeed his wife followed him within a few years; but not until she and her sister—Mrs. Captain Markland, our hostess—had built the quaint cottage on the "crest" as a memorial to him.

A cottage of today does not mean a two room one-story building as of old, for now a "cottage" at the seaside or on the mountain top may be three stories, with a basement, and twenty rooms. This house is not quite so elaborate, but it is homelike in every respect. And the welcome we received by the lady of the house, as she stood on the broad porch with a wide door open behind her, and a bright fire on an open hearth, burning in the hall, was such that we felt at home at once.

The house is full of reminders of the famous General whose dream it was, after time limit retired him, to spend his days here. In the hey-day of his young manhood General Crook when at Oakland would often come to this spot to enjoy the bright sun and the unlimited view of the mountains and valleys on every hand. Then after his death his wife and her sister, Mrs. Capt. Markland, built this quaint house as a memorial to him. Wide open fire-places, windows opening on charming vistas, books and papers everywhere, old flags, pictures and bric-a-brac are around you in greatest profusion.

In a carefully preserved case are three swords which belonged to Gen. Crook; one presented by the officers of the 36th Ohio, in 1863, believe. The enlisted men of the regiment were not asked to contribute to the gift, and as an offset they too presented him a magnificent sword, which is number two; then number three is a plain old style sword in gold scabbard which came down from a General Hamilton of the Revolutionary war. In the case is also the plain cap worn by the General, as well as a dress parade chapeau. In another box are the epaulets once worn by General Thomas—"Pap" Thomas as he was affectionately known by "the boys" in the Nashville campaign. The epaulets were bequeathed by General Thomas to General Crook and are to go, with one of the swords, to Webb Hayes, of Cleveland, who was always a great favorite of Gen. Crook's. But it is useless to even attempt to catalogue what is before us, as space will not admit, even if it were admissable.

The balmy air calls one out of doors and this morning in company with the Captain we had a stroll through the beautiful oak forest back of the house. We struck into an old woods road, but so encroached on by underbrush it would only permit of both a very narrow horse and wagon to travel it. The Captain very appropriately calls it the "Path of Mars," although no more peaceful spot on earth could be found. With the autumn smell of the deep woods about us the Captain described his ideal library. It was to have no shelves, but only tables, covered with cloth to correspond with the subject of the books. We walked on until we came to an abrupt ending of "Path of Mars," against a wire fence which enclosed a neighbor's poultry yard, and were again the world. We retraced our steps. Wild raspberry, blackberry and blueberry bushes line the road on either hand. All sounds from the outer world comes to one on this warpath, muffled and bereft of all harshness.

Who would think of seeing fine cornfields with big pumpkins, lying among the shocks—for the corn is all cut; at nearly 3000 feet above the sea? But here you have just this to be seen, and with the exception of wheat and peaches, almost everything we raise in Ashtabula county will grow here. On one of our drives, in reply to our inquiry as to the price of farm land, the driver said, pointing his whip at one of the fields we were passing: "That farm is worth $50 or $60 an acre." The soil looks a yellow clay like ours and is quite productive.

Judge Wilson, a former Ohio man, who died so suddenly during the Schley trial, lived just across from the "Crest" and only a short distance away was formerly the summer home of Gen. Rathbone, who has been dragged into unpleasant notoriety in the Postoffice Department scandal in Cuba. There are a number of other prominent Ohio people in this vicinity, including the family Hon. Samuel Shellenbarger, who served four terms in Congress from Ohio in the '60's from the 7th and 8th districts.

On our drive we visited the Weber green houses, located on the railroad between Oakland and Mountain Lake Park. How such an industry should have grown up here seems very curious. Mr. Weber, as his name implies, is a German. He began in a small way to cultivate flowers, principally carnations. Now he has hot houses almost a half mile in length, filled from end to end with carnations, smilax, chrysanthemums, roses, etc. At a platform on the farm trains stop to carry great boxes of these flowers to Washington, Baltimore, Boston, New York and elsewhere. Just now but few flowers are in bloom. Plants were set for the new winter crop. The meadows and rich garden surrounding the green house only a few years ago was a cold marsh grown up to alders and scrubby trees, but under draining, ditching and cultivation all is changed.

We were surprised at the scarcity of wild birds on the mountains. Even the ever present crow was missing. We saw one hawk, which just as the sun was tipping the tops of the distant hills with its last rays, silently winged its way over the valley, and high above a small flock of robins probably on their way south, were all the birds we saw. Of course, we do not count the English sparrows as birds any more than chickens. We were told that most of the northern birds were to be found here during the summer, but at this season the woods are silent.

There are some quail in the fields and the mountain brooks are well stocked with trout, but we did not hunt or fish for either.

Although this is in a southern state there appears to be fewer colored people in Oakland than in Jefferson; we saw but one colored man. The domestic help is principally white.

NOTES ON THE WAY.

Up and down the grade which carried us from the banks of the Potomac to the highest elevation was a series of delightful surprises. We would reach a point that would open out a beautiful view between the hills, up a little valley, along which would be a small farm, with fields on the mountain sides, so steep it would seem impossible to plow the land. The forests had begun to put on their autumn colors, and we have the dark green of the pines, hemlocks and spruces, the browns of the oaks with the gold and crimson of the maples, and everywhere wild vines on the ground or clinging to the trunks and limbs of trees, and here and there entirely covering an old stump bereft of limbs, but straight as a mast for fifty or a hundred feet, all in flaming red, and crimson, and yellow; the colors so gorgeous that if copied in a picture, they would be pronounced over drawn.

GORTNER.

Rev. Miller, a Mennonnite minister, of Tub, Pa., delivered two sermons before an appreciative congregation last Saturday evening and Sunday morning. Mr. Miller was accompanied by his amiable wife and the Misses Miller, his sister and cousin.

Miss Sarah Weimer, the teacher of our school, began with an enrollment of 32 pupils Monday. There are quite a number of pupils yet to enter this school. We wish Miss Weimer much success.

Rev. Bunner, a minister of the Disciple church, began a series of meetings here Sunday night.

Mr. H. Hauser, of West Virginia, was here Saturday evening looking after his best interest.

Miss Emma DeBerry, one of Garrett county's efficient teachers, is again teaching the Mason school.

Miss Annie Beachy, of Grantsville, and Mr. Orendorf, also of Grantsville, spent several days of last and this week with friends here. They returned home Tuesday of this week.

Mr. Noah Slabach and his brother Alvin went to Bittinger last Saturday to visit friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gortner and little son, of Oakland, spent last Sunday with friends in this neighborhood.

Mr. Will Gortner, who has been employed by Mr. George Geissman, of Oakland for about six months, recently returned home.

Mr. P. P. Gortner left Tuesday for Buffalo, N. Y., and Erie, Pa. Mr. Gortner had business in Erie, but he expects to visit the Pan-American Exposition and Niagara Falls before his return.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The re-organization of the M. E. Sunday School was effected Sunday evening by the election of the following officers for the ensuing year: Superintendent, A. R. Sperry; Assistant Superintendent, Jas. A. Hayden; Secretary, E. E. Friend; Librarian, John D. Hayden; Treasurer, Mrs. Levi Hewitt; Superintendent of Home Department, Miss Carrie Rudisill.

Preaching next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock by the pastor.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby notified that trespassing on my farm at Deer Park, Md., is forbidden under penalty of the law, and $50 REWARD is hereby offered for information leading to arrest and conviction of persons taking fish from ponds upon it.

31 4t JOHN W. WILLIAMS.

Came Near Dying

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely I went to sleep and did not awake for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of this remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say, 'God bless you and the splendid medicine you make.' This remedy is for sale by all dealers.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the lands of the undersigned, lying in District No. 12 of Garrett county, either for the purpose of hunting, fishing or passing through the same armed with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

SILAS C. BEACHY,
C. C. BEACHY,
JONAS C. BEACHY,
MRS. JOHN BRENNEMAN.

297

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the land of the undersigned lying in District No. 2 of Garrett county either for the purpose of fishing, hunting or passing through the same with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. C. W. FRIEND.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.

Money loaned on Mortgage.

Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.

Agent for the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.

☞ Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

ADMINISTRATRIX'S NOTICE

This is to give notice, That the Subscriber, of Garrett county, Maryland, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of April next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

DANIEL PLEASANTS,

Given under my hand this 26th day of September, 1901.

MARIA PLEASANTS,
Administratrix,
Mountain Lake Park, Md.

393

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, that the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

FRANCIS H. RAVENSCROFT,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1901.

R. A. RAVENSCROFT, Administrator,
Accident, Md.

ORDER NISI.

George W. Wilson vs. Joseph B. Wilson.
No. 1364 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County.

Ordered, this 1st day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and one, by the Circuit Court for Allegany county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by James W. Wilson, committee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 2nd day of November, 1901; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Oakland, Md., once a week for three successive weeks before the 2nd day of November, 1901.

The report states the amount of sale to be $80.00.

R. M. LUMAN, Clerk.

True copy—test:
R. M. LUMAN, Clerk.

Examiners' Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the following proposed new county road to be located is to run, viz: Beginning for the same at the south end of Garrett V. Moon's lane and running thence down Laurel creek and through the lands of the Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company, James L. Harvey and J. B. Lipscomb and along the lines of said Lipscomb and Charles Cooper and through the lands of the said Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company to the town of Schell, a distance of three miles, and examine whether the proposed new road should be located, will meet on the 11th day of November, 1901, for such purpose and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said proposed new county road to be made, and, if so, to locate the same, and perform their duty in the premises.

J. H. WILSON,
JOHN W. HARVEY,
ANDREW J. LEE,
Examiner.

The Garrett County Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:

DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MD.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.

Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.

F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

THE
SECOND NATIONAL BANK
of CUMBERLAND, MD.

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000
Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
John Sheridan, A. Hunter Boyd,
David W. Sloan.

CONSTIPATION CURED!

Nearly everyone suffers in a greater or less degree from this dreadful disease. It is dangerous to neglect the bowels, and often by doing so a foundation is laid for serious ailments.

Those suffering from Constipation suffer from slow Poison.

OUR NATIVE HERBS cures Constipation quietly and permanently.

No Pain, No Griping, No Binding effect afterwards. Its action is pleasant and sure.

200 DAYS' TRIAL $1.00.
A CURE GUARANTEED OR THE MONEY BACK.

"When a girl I had Small Pox succeded by Typhoid Fever and Measels. I was left with Constipation and Sinking Spells. Sometimes I felt that I could not live. After having various physicians treat me with no benefit I bought a box of Our Native Herbs, which seems to be the only medicine that suits my case. I believe it saved my life." Mrs. M. MILLER, Crellin, Md.

No Case Too Stubborn for Our Native Herbs To Conquer.

THE ALONZO O. BLISS CO.,
SOLE PROPRIETORS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.
A. C. BROOKE,
Local Agent. Mountain Lake Park, Md.

A box of Tablets or Powder mailed to any address upon receipt of $1.00.

Burlington Route

It costs no more to ride on this beautiful train than on any other.

Chicago-St. Paul Minneapolis Limited Express

It is electric lighted and heated by steam, carries a library-buffet-smoking car, a dining car à la carte and everything there is to make one comfortable.

Leaves CHICAGO 6.30 p. m. Daily

We sell through tickets, reserve sleeping car berths, furnish maps and time tables, and can, perhaps, be of service in other ways. Kindly write or call.

H. E. HELLER, District Passenger Agent, 632 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Midget Harness Riveter.

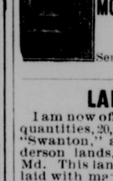
Complete repair shop in one tool. Will not wear out. Punches the hole, drives and clinches at one operation. Every horse owner, liveryman, teamster will buy on sight. Does the work of any $25 machine. Complete outfit with big bog of rivets will be sent for

ONLY 50 CENTS.

Agents Wanted.

HANDY ADJUSTABLE LIFTER. Handiest article ever invented for lifting hot pans, stove lids, etc. 15c, postpaid.

S. T. WILSON & CO.,
Box 103. Wilson, W. Va.



J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!

I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 30,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.

All trespassing will be prosecuted to the ullest extent of the law.

Call on or address:
C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.

Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.
Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

133⅓ acres coal land on Youghiogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale.

House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187⅓ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 26⅓ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 200 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ miles southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoroughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north of Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swauger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to

JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY,
ARCHITECT,
Office 7 North Liberty St.
CUMBERLAND, MD.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MD
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in McComas's Building, Main St.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. je14-1

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD.
Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients. 45—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. '88 10

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

DR. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

DR. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.
Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 16-'99

DR. H. W. McCOMAS M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office opposite Garrett County Bank.
Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 9 p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county, Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 6 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md.
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER,
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.
Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by aneroid barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26t*

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate.
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.
Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats, descriptions and estimates furnished. 40-1yr.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT MAY 19, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 19, 1901. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily	3.42	A. M
No. 3—Daily	7.35	A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday	10.01	A. M
No. 55—Daily	4.52	P. M
No. 1—Daily	10.07	P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 8—Daily	5.50	A. M
No. 2—Daily	6.52	A. M
No. 46—Express, daily	4.41	P. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun	5.12	P. M
No. 12—Daily	8.35	P. M
No. 4—Daily	12.37	A. M

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager.
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT SEPT. 29, 1901.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	SOUTHWARD No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	NORTHWARD No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. Junc.	10 51	6 01
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 [illegible]
5 15	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	5 [illegible]
6 00*	9 50* ar	Elk Garden	*9 10	*4 [illegible]
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 38	10 27	Thomas	8 38	3 53
7 10	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 15
6 48	10 35 lv	Coketon	8 35	3 50
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 15
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 10†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 15
	NOON
8 46*	12 52† ar	Beverly	lv	†1 44
9 10*	1 15† ar	Huttonsville	lv	†1 20
M. P.				P. M.
	3 15* ar	Bealington	lv	*11 45
	P. M.			A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, General Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agent

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1901. NUMBER 34.

More Enthusiastic Meetings.

Large Crowds Attracted by the Republican Speakers.

The Republican speakers stormed Swanton last Thursday evening, Oct. 24th. The largest meeting held for years assembled in the school house. The Deer Park brass band discoursed excellent music, greatly enlivening and enthusing our meeting. Many ladies were in attendance. We are particularly indebted to Miss Ralston, a charming and accomplished lady. Although differing with us in politics she gracefully granted us the use of the school building. The teachers attend our meetings, encouraging, inspiring our speakers by their presence and sympathy with our cause.

Mr. W. W. Sweet presided, opening the meeting with a strong and well delivered speech, covering National, State and local issues.

Hon. P. E. Finzel gave an interesting and instructive lecture upon marking the ballot. The people are awakening to the importance of understanding this matter and were very attentive.

Attorney Heindel was next introduced. His speech was well delivered and frequently applauded.

Senator Ravenscroft was at his best, delivering a most effective speech, thoroughly discussing State and local issues. The audience was greatly pleased with his forceful delivery and frequently applauded his hard hits at Democracy.

Mr. Charles A. Ashby, the genial candidate for House of Delegates, who is well known here, added many friends to his long list.

Our candidate for Sheriff, W. A. Maffett, with his usual energy was constantly on the move and mixing with the crowd. Having many friends and acquaintances he was most cordially received.

We left Swanton early Friday morning and will long remember the good people of that hospitable town. There as elsewhere we found the party united, active and enthusiastic, determined to roll up the largest majority ever given a ticket in District No. 1.

THE DEER PARK MEETING.

The Republican meeting held in Deer Park Friday night, Oct. 25th, was one of the largest meetings of the campaign. Nearly half the audience were ladies, who listened with attention and applauded with frequency and fervency. Indeed, at all our meetings we are indebted to the ladies for their attendance, attention and zeal. The local band excelled themselves, pleasing everyone with their performance. Our veteran chairman of the Central Committee, Dr. J. W. Laughlin, had charge of this meeting. The hall was tastefully decorated and everything prepared for our comfort and entertainment. Mr. W. C. Jones presided, with A. L. Lee, Esq., as secretary.

ASSEMBLYMAN FINZEL.

Hon. R. A. Ravenscroft, our candidate for State Senate, made a strong speech. He was listened to with great attention, closing with an earnest appeal to every liberty-loving voter and citizen to carefully prepare his ballot and cast it for the entire Republican ticket.

Senator Ravenscroft was followed by Rev. L. A. Rudisill, who delivered his first speech in this campaign. He is a fluent, graceful speaker, presenting the Republican party's claims for consideration and support in a forceful manner.

Our handsome and popular candidate for House of Delegates, Hon. P. E. Finzel, was the attraction of the evening. He easily makes friends, particularly among the younger element. His speech was well prepared and gracefully delivered. His instruction to voters was a popular feature of our meeting.

The Republicans of this district are well organized and enthusiastic. This being the home of our veteran chairman the voters are well instructed in handling the ballot under this law. Holding a mock election Thursday night out of twenty ballots only two failed to mark properly.

Our best wishes and respects to the good people of Deer Park.

MEETING AT SANG RUN.

Sang Run, the Gibralter of Republicanism of Garrett county, outdone herself Monday night. This was easily the greatest meeting of the canvass. The sturdy, stalwart citizens of this peaceful and prosperous region turned out en masse to greet the speakers and visitors. Our greeting and entertainment was royal. Many ladies were present and graced our meeting with their smiles and compliments. The attendance of the fair sex in large numbers has been a feature of this canvass. They are not only interested and well informed upon the various issues and topics discussed, but enthusiastic in their efforts to bring others, eloquently advocating our cause.

The weather was all that could be desired. This is our third week of itinerancy through our grand and glorious mountain scenery, every day like summer. Indian summer is upon us, the loveliest season of the year. If you would see the Alleghanies at their best visit them in October when King Frost has touched each tree with his magic sword, then these majestic mountains are a mighty wilderness of color, glory and beauty. The pure, clear, sun-warmed air is Nature's sovereign tonic, curing all our ills, vanquishing the clouds that hover over the minds of busy, restless men. One can easily understand why Garrett county is so strongly Republican—the disease of modern Democracy, like malaria, is cured 3000 feet above sea level.

The venerable and honored Judge D. H. Friend presided at the meeting. His modest speech was listened to with profound respect and attention. This nestor of our party deserves all the honors and attentions we can and do pay him. In every way he is a model man and citizen. His declining years are being spent like a Christian and a philosopher in doing good. Long may he live, enjoying the veneration, love and respect of this community and county, which he helped to form and has done much to develop. His hospitable home, presided over by his worthy son Alvin and his excellent wife, was opened wide to us. Our entertainment was all we could desire and more than we can describe.

W. A. Smith, the genial, hustling merchant and all-around politician and good fellow, acted as secretary. To him we are indebted for this report. He brought the unterrified Hoyes legion of Republicans with him.

Mr. F. A. Thayer opened our meeting. This was his first speech of the canvass. He is so well and widely known, so popular and affable, he was warmly received, closing amidst great applause.

Mr. E. H. Sincell followed. His masterly effort held the crowd for over an hour. Being a fine speaker and an old lawyer, he left little for any one to say.

Senator Ravenscroft followed His energy and earnestness always captures the crowd. Everyone was highly pleased with his speech. He has no enemies.

Hon. P. E. Finzel closed. Our popular and handsome representative won the hearts of all, particularly the ladies. Mr. Finzel's speech, a masterful effort, follows:

Mr. Chairman, ladies and fellow-citizens:—It is my pleasure to meet with the good people of district No. 6, and I will endeavor, in my humble way, to discuss some of the issues that confront the people of our Commonwealth today. Enlightenment, advancement are the watch-words of today, and woe be to the social sect or political party that plants itself in front of progress in this day and age. The Democrats in convention assembled one year ago, in the City of Baltimore, made this declaration and duly adopted it as part of their party platform: "That all governments instituted among men derive their just powers from the consent of the governed; that any government not based upon the consent of the governed is tyranny." That was a fling at the Republican party for attempting to rule the islands in the Pacific ocean by the use of the military arm of our government, which was a necessity to preserve order in those lands until the inhabitants were able to govern themselves; and had our Democratic friends been in the majority in Congress with a Democratic President, they would have been compelled to do just as the Republicans did. But as we look at conditions today in our own state, we find the leaders of the Democratic party resorting to the opposite plan in order to carry out their schemes to get back into power. They believe today that the government of our state does not derive the power from the consent of the governed—only from a part of the people—and they seek to take away the laboring man's dearest rights, and centralize the government of out state among a favored few, placing the power among the aristocrats of our state. They say to us, you cannot participate in this government of ours unless you can read and write. My fellow-citizens, does it not seem to you that a leader of a great party that has enjoyed the highest honors of profit and trust that could be given by our people, should at this enlightened day and age attempt to prevent you from enjoying a liberty that you have had since the foundation of our government in order to get back into the United States Senate. What ungratefulness; what ingratitude. A man who by his acts in the past fears to go before the people of our grand old Commonwealth for an indorsement, should deserve the utmost contempt of every right thinking man of our state, irrespective of party, when he attempts to get back into power against the wishes of the citizens of our state by sacrificing that which we hold as a precious heritage from our fathers of the Revolution.

The great corner-stone of this American Republic is civil liberty. Any attempt by a party to change this, or to modify this right in any way, has a tendency to undermine the principles upon which this government is founded. The basis of our political system is the right of the people to make any changes in the laws not contrary to the Constitution of the United States, and this right exists with all the people, and no faction or part of the people. The legislature passed the law, and it should be left to all our people to say whether, in their opinion, it is a wise and just law, and a minority of artful and enterprising politicians should not govern a majority. The issues which the Republican party presents to you and asks for your careful consideration, are these: are you willing to aid the Democrats to get back into power when they seek to take away the common man's citizenship.

We are told that our state is in peril from negro domination. Any man possessing the least bit of intelligence knows how absurd that charge is, when the negro only constitutes nineteen per cent. of the population of the state—more than five white men to each negro. Here at home we have the rights of four hundred and fifty white men taken away in order to take away the right to vote from twenty blacks. Yet our Democratic friends tell us that this is the white men's country. My friends, we have always been patriotic: the air we breathe on the summit of these grand old mountains inspire us at all times with feelings of devotion to our country and its rulers. It has been recorded on the pages of history in all the past of this world's affairs, that the men who inhabit the mountains have always been devoted to their homes and their country. And we ask what constitutes patriotism? It is an extended self-love mingling with all the enjoyments of a good life, and entwining itself with the filaments of the heart. It is thus we obey the laws of society because they are the laws of virtue. In their authority we see not the array of force and terror, but the venerable image of our country's honor. Every good citizen, irrespective of party or color, should make that honor his own, and cherish it, not only as precious but as sacred. He is willing to give his life in its defense, and is conscious that he gains protection while he gives it. For what rights of a citizen will he deem inviolable when the governing party renounces the principles that constitute the freeman's security. If our homes should be invaded by a foreign foe, what enjoyment could we find in defending our homes when our laws has made our state odious in the eyes of strangers and dishonored in our own mind. Could we look to such a state with the veneration we once possessed? No; our sense of pride would die in us, and we would blush for our patriotism if we retained any, and rightly so, for we would be a banished man in our own native land. In this great and glorious country, where all men are equal every day in each year, let us all strive to ever retain that principle that has made us so powerful today among all the nations of the earth.

We ask all Republicans and all Democrats to aid us in our fight for freemen's rights. The Republican party stands today pledged to the people of our grand old Commonwealth, if successful in this election to repeal this law and to restore to our people the good law that we have had for the past four years. That the Republican party has always been true to its pledges, I only need refer you to the history of the past. And when you go to the polls on November 5th, cast your ballots for the party of progress; and may we all exclaim with the poet when he said:

"Men who their duties know, but know their rights,
And knowing, dare maintain."
Prevent the long aimed blow,
And crush the tyrant while they rend the chain.
These constitute a state and sovereign law,
That states collected will o'er thrones and globe elate,
Sits freedom crowning good, repressing ill."

Mr. McCulloh Brown's lecture upon handling the ballot was well received and delivered. Evidencing its effectiveness 10 ballots were cast after he spoke and all were perfect. This can partly be attributed to the lecture, but largely to the intelligence of Sang Run.

Our honored and respected chairman of the State Central Committee, Dr. Laughlin, added grace and dignity to the meeting. He will have charge of the canvass to the end.

Tuesday, 8:30 a. m., we bid the fair

STATE SENATOR RAVENSCROFT.

and hospitable people of Sang Run adieu and started for Sand Spring, where we held a meeting that night. We close with the warmest wishes for the health, happiness and prosperity of all the good people of Sang Run. We will long remember this present visit and hope to meet them at their happy homes again.

AT SAND SPRING.

Selbysport district, old No. 2, once the banner Republican district of our county, was reached Tuesday morning. Mr. Taylor Friend, our candidate for Commissioner, was our host. His splendid estate, one of the finest in the county, and the many fine farms surrounding shows great thrift and prosperity. Near this place, in easy sight, is Blooming Rose church and hamlet. This is said to be one of the first settlements of this district and one of the oldest in the county. This region is highly cultivated. The many beautiful homes attract the attention of the visitor. The scene is fair and restful, the Arcadia of Western Maryland. Mr. Friend is widely connected and one of the most progressive and prosperous citizens of the county, a man of great intelligence and energy. He will make a wide-awake official. He has many friends and will add strength to the ticket. His amiable wife is a model hostess. We left this hospitable home with great reluctance and best wishes for this interesting family.

Our meeting at the school house at night was largely attended by the stalwart, sturdy Republicans of this neighborhood. The building was crowded with an intelligent audience who listened with attention to our speakers. Franklin T. Fike, Esq., presided, with Mr. Sherman Friend was secretary.

McCulloh Brown, Esq., delivered his interesting lecture upon voting the new ballot. He was followed by Hon. P. E. Einzel, who delivered a carefully prepared speech. As this was his first appearance before a Sand Spring audience he scored a great success. He is making many friends.

Senator Ravenscroft was next introduced. He was at his best and easily held the attention of his audience. His extended legislative experience and earnest, forceful delivery interests and enlightens an audience. Through this region he is well known and popular. Everyone appears to be the friend of the genial Senator.

D. Lindley Sloan, Esq., a prominent young attorney of the Cumberland bar, closed the meeting. He held the undivided attention of his audience for one hour. Of good voice and fine appearance, he is a most interesting speaker. His discussion of National and State issues was clear, strong and logical. He pleased his audience and to judge from the frequent applause which greeted him his hearers were delighted with him.

During our drive through this section we rarely met an opponent. All appear to be Republicans or in sympathy with the party, pledged to repeal this odious ballot law.

THE FRIENDSVILLE DEMONSTRATION

Yesterday we were greeted by the good people of Friendsville, the metropolis of our county. This thriving business point is improving rapidly, the town containing many fine stores and bright business men. It is the trading point of a wide and wealthy farming community and the centre of large lumber interests. Many saw mills, manufacturies, etc., are located in this vicinity. The town is well supplied with every modern improvement and convenience—good schools, fine churches, large planing mill; a bank will soon be opened, the newspaper revived. Having fine railroad facilities, it is bound to become a big business town with a bright future.

Our night meeting held at the opera house was the decided demonstration of the canvass. The audience was large, intelligent and enthusiastic, frequently and freely applauding our speakers.

Senator Ravenscroft's reception was royal. He reached the ear and touched the heart of those warm-hearted, well-behaved, sturdy yeomanry. For more than an hour he entertained this good humored audience with a discussion of State and county issues. Every point was wildly applauded. The shameful imposition, deception and betrayal of the people by the Democratic leaders and their infamous legislation was thoroughly exposed. His address follows:

Fellow citizens of Garrett county, we have again come into the midst of a State political campaign, which presents to the voters of this Commonwealth and to the citizens of this splendid county, a number of propositions and questions of public interest which are of the gravest and most supreme importance to every voter and to every individual member of every household in this county. We are about to elect a new Legislature for the State of Maryland, financial officers of the State, who collect and disburse public funds, and we are about to elect local county officials whose duties are to direct, control and manage, under proper legal supervision, the immediate business affairs of the citizens of Garrett county. Garrett county, while modest in population, as compared with many of the older counties of this State, is still a county which represents extensive and important industrial and business interests which have been and are still being rapidly developed, expanded and increased.

We are justly proud of our mines, our forests and our farms. We are proud of the industry and thrift, the progress and prosperity of our people. Beyond all this we are most supremely proud of the manhood, intelligence and independence of the people themselves who are citizens of this county, and we repudiate and condemn and shall ever continue to aggressively fight against any political, legislative or state policy which might hamper or interfere with the business prospects and prosperity of any class of our citizens, or which might in any way result in limiting their freedom and liberty, their power and their influence as American citizens, or degrading them as men by casting upon them any badge of discredit, and restriction of their right of franchise or any political or social distinction on account of any misfortune which may have precluded them from measuring up to the educational standards which have been accessible to their more favored fellow citizens, to the men who make the laws and to the selfish politicians who may seek for their own discreditable purposes to disfranchise honest and industrious men, who are sturdy sons of toil, on account of educational qualifications.

It has been my pleasure, and an honor which I most profoundly appreciate, to represent the people of this county in the legislative halls of the state as a member of the State Senate. I have again been complimented by a re-nomination at the hands of the Republican party for a re-election to the high and honorable office of State Senator. It is for the people to determine by their ballots next Tuesday whether the record which I have made as a public servant justifies their confidence in me, and my re-election to this honorable office. That record is before the people of this county and the people of the state. It has not been concealed nor suppressed. On the contrary the public press of this county and of the State have freely given to the people, through their columns, repeated and continuing statements of the public policies which I have advocated and of the measures of legislation which I have strenuously opposed, whenever my judgment dictated to me that they were against the best interests of the people of this county or of this state. Upon that record I stand and upon that record my party has honored me by presenting me again as a candidate for your suffrages.

I want to ask at the outset the cordial co-operation of a united Republican party in the work upon which you would bid me enter as a standard-bearer of your party, and in the event that the people ratify the choice of my party next week, I hope to measure up to the requirements of the duties and responsibilities of a representative of the whole people of Garrett county. We can point with pride to the glorious victories of the past in our county and state, but the living present demands our earnest thought and best endeavor.

I ask every Republican to buckle on his armor in this campaign and work as though success depended upon his individual efforts.

The legislative session of 1902, following this election, will have most important matters of public interests before it for consideration. The Platforms of the two political parties have been so frequently published by the press that I need not repeat them at this time. Political promises by party managers and machine politicians are not always performed. Public estimate of the reliability of candidates and party promises can be more safely formed by records which have been made. The record of the Democratic administration in this State from 1867 to 1895 and in the January session of 1900, and in the extra session of 1901 is before the people of this state. It is known of all men that this record presents a history of extravagance, financial mismanagement, political bossism and jobbery, prostitution of the public service to private gain, to the use of enormous sums of public money for party and political purposes, corrupted elections, infamous registration and election laws, excessive taxation, and, finally and most infamously, a dastardly attempt to disfranchise, discredit and disgrace a large body of the citizens of this state.

As against this record stands the brief but brilliant record of Republican administration in this state from January, 1896, to January, 1900. That administration gave reduced taxation, free and fair election laws, liberal provisions for public education, free school books, the promotion to public office of men who are non-partisan and who are representatives of the whole people and not of any mass or class, or of any political faith, of men who were honest, courageous, intelligent and faithful in the performance of public duties, of the magnificent modern charter of the city of Baltimore, of improved, honest and non-partisan police organization for the city of Baltimore, of improved public credit, extensive public improvements, and for the subordination of the power of corporations to the honest interests of the masses of the people.

Again, during all these years of Democratic administration, the Republican party and its representatives were found in the halls of legislation persistently and aggressively resisting and opposing the vicious, extravagant, corrupt and finally the un-American plans and policies of the state democracy. Between these two parties which will you trust as to future promises upon the platforms presented and upon the public records which they have made? The restoration of Republican supremacy in this state will keep our people in the line of this new and great prosperity, in conjunction with the great states of the Union, where national and state Republican policies have control. Renewal and continuance of Democratic supremacy in this state will fasten upon the people, with increased violence and oppression, the old policies and practices against which they fought for redress and relief. Political bossism will thrive, machine politicians will dictate legislation and elect candidates of its own selection. Public money will again be used at the expense of the taxpayers to keep professional politicians in office and promote the fortunes of the political party. Taxation will be increased, capital will be driven from this state, labor interests will be handicapped and the liberal policy of free public school education will be in danger.

And, my fellow-citizens, remember and consider most gravely another supreme question involved in this election. The extra session of the legislature foisted upon the people the unholy disfranchisement law and the enormous expense of a new state census, at an aggregate cost of one hundred thousand dollars to the taxpayers of the county and the state. Both measures to be used to the exclusive benefit of the Democratic party and of the politicians in that party who are seeking to advance their personal interests irrespective of the cost to, the rights of, and humiliation and degradation inflicted upon the citizens of the state.

(Continued on Page Eight.)

THE REPUBLICAN.

EDWARD H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 10 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1901.

ON THE THROW OF THE KNIFE

A Story In Which an American Girl and an Indian Girl Are Rivals.

By GWENDOLEN OVERTON.

By all the laws of true romance she should have felt upon opening her eyes a promonition that this was to be a day of destiny, but she merely felt that the engines had stopped, that the ship was at anchor and that therefore it was moistly, insufferably warm. The curtains across the stateroom windows did not so much as move. She came down from her berth and pulled them aside. The coast of Guatemala was before her and the port of San Jose.

There had been rain in the night, a tropic shower. The clouds were lifting away. They were massed in white and gold behind the two volcano peaks that had sent forth the one fire, the other water, in their time, and the peaks themselves were side by side, two cones of glowing pink.

They were miles inland, many miles, and the thick, lush tropic green was between, reaching to the curve of the sand. There were some white houses by the beach, white with red tiles. They made the port of San Jose. But the ship was anchored well out in deep water, and there were no craft in sight, save a rowboat or two drawn up on the sand and one that was starting out from the pier across the faint blue water that showed back the clouds of white and gold. The wake and the oars glistened in the new sunlight.

The girl leaned her bare arm on the sill and stood looking out. She had seen many beautiful things in her life, but nothing so lovely as the coast and volcano peaks of San Jose de Guatemala at the break of day.

The rowboat came near, and she saw that the quarantine officials sat in the stern, but by the time she was dressed and came on deck they had long since gone. There was no one at all in sight either aft or amidships, but when she was forward of the bridge she saw some one standing near the bow. He was a new passenger. He turned and looked at her.

There was a breeze, the faintest south sea morning breeze, that rippled her thin white gown and moved the loose tendrils of her hair. He raised his straw hat civilly and turned back to his consideration of the shore. Presently the purser joined him, and he stood talking, his hands jammed into his sack coat pockets and his tan shod feet wide apart on the deck. Then he went into the saloon.

That was all Miss Strathmore saw of him, but she described him to her mother accurately nevertheless.

"He's the only Latin I ever saw who looked as though he could do things—and not talk about it afterward. His skin is very white, and his jaw shuts hard, and, moreover, though his eyes are brown, they are neither sparkling nor soft." She objected to both. "They are level and hard. That he may speak English is my fondest wish."

He did. He was put beside her at breakfast, and the captain presented him. His name was Merida.

"You saw me this morning," he said, "when I was looking back upon 'my house, my home, my heritage, my lands.'"

"And 'the laughing dames in whom you did delight?'" she followed it up.

He gave it a quick look. "Perhaps," he said and turned short about to talk to the man on the other side, a little Chilean whom Miss Strathmore did not like. They talked Spanish together, and she could not understand. So she ate her breakfast and wondered why the Guatemalan should have objected to having his quotation finished out. Had she hit some nail too neatly on the head? He had risked that. But he knew Byron apparently, and his English had not so much as an accent. If there was to be any further conversation, it lay with him to begin it. He did so presently, but he kept to generalities and refused to be drawn out about himself.

The captain was more communicative on the subject later on. He belonged to the general sea dog type. "Better make up to young Merida, Miss Elizabeth," he advised, coming to a stop in front of her steamer chair. "He owns about everything in sight over there." His arm swept the view of dense green from the beach curve to the mountains far away. "Half Guatemala belongs to his brother and him. The other brother is married—to a Spanish princess, too—but he's not, and you'll do the best two weeks' work you ever did in your life if you catch him between here and Frisco bay."

The captain liked the topic evidently. He drew up a stool and sat down to pursue it further, growing from the jocose to the serious.

He could recommend Matcho Merida. He wasn't like the rest of the "black and tans."

"He's made this trip with me six times now, and I've watched him close. He don't go in for the things that most of his breed do—cards and women and wine." Miss Strathmore thought of her quotation. "We've got the chance to see things on these ships, you bet, but I've never seen Merida do a foolish thing yet. It may be because he's been to school in England and runs the New York end of affairs for their fincas, but why ever it is it's so. And edicated!" he added awe inspiredly. "Why, that fellow speaks four languages as well as he does his own and has got something to say in all of them. You mind what I say, Miss Elizabeth. I knew your father when I was a boy, and the best I could wish for his daughter would be to marry young Merida." He stood up and started off. "Get him to tell you how he and the other young bloods held the governor's palacio against a revolutionist mob for a day and a night. Make up to him."

Which—the advice and the strategy—had the natural effect of rendering Miss Strathmore more than barely civil to Merida when he stopped to speak to her. He had changed the suit in which he had come on board and was in white flannels now.

"He's not handsome," she decided, remembering the regular features of other Spanish blooded males she had known, "but he's quite the most swagger individual I ever saw."

He pulled up a wicker chair beside her, and they began to talk. It was 10 o'clock then. They were still talking when the luncheon gong sounded at one. They went down together and talked through the meal.

If Miss Strathmore had been stupid, she would have stayed on deck the rest of the afternoon. As it was, she went to the cabin for a nap and then devoted herself—the least in the world obviously—to her mother until dinner time. But there was the evening after that. They spent it together in the bow and talked—of the phosphorus and things.

It was not until after a good many nights that they got to anything much more personal. Then it came all at once. Merida stood wedged into the extreme point of the bow and Miss Strathmore sat half overhanging the black ocean when the prow cut into gold light. She was holding fast to a stay. She could just see Merida's face in the starlight, and his eyes were on her steadily. There had been a stop in speech.

"Was I uncivil when you finished my line for me that night?" he asked.

"Rather," Miss Strathmore answered him.

"And you didn't know why, I suppose?"

She admitted that she did not.

"Well," he explained, "it's just this: I get so sick of having people go on the basis that all men down here are—devils of fellows, Don Juans and all that. We get so deucedly much of it."

She reminded him that he had laid himself open to it.

"I know I did, but one doesn't expect an American or an Englishman to know his poets, if you don't mind my saying so. I never thought about you going on." There was a pause. "And I don't go in for women and flirtations," Merida said. "I have never cared for any girl except you."

It was sudden certainly, so sudden that she let go her hold on the stay. His hand went out to steady her instantly. Then he took it away.

"I suppose you are surprised," he said. "I am myself. But it's true."

Miss Strathmore's self possession had weathered many experiences, but it foundered at this. She did not think of anything to say.

"I don't want to bother," he told her, "and I don't expect you to like me yet, but I hope you will before long." Then he went off to other things, but conversation was not a success.

They were at anchor off Mazatlan the next day, some two miles beyond the bar. Merida put in his appearance at breakfast in shore clothes.

"I'm going to land," he told Miss Strathmore, "if the captain will have a boat whistled for me."

"It's rough," she tried to suggest.

"I know it is," he answered, leveling his eyes straight on her for the benefit of all who might choose to see, so that she flushed very pink. "If it were not, I should ask you and your mother to go too." They had done it at Acapulco and Manzanillo before.

"I will not go," observed the Chilean. "It is too dangerous."

Merida caught Miss Strathmore's glance of contempt and nearly smiled.

Toward the middle of the morning a rowboat whose owners were courageous responded to the signals and ventured out to the ship. Merida went down the Jacob's ladder. The captain watched him.

"You'll come to grief, Matcho, if you don't watch out. See that your men aren't tequila drunk when you start back. It's pretty bad now, but it'll be rolling like fun then. We h'ist anchor at 3," he added warningly.

Merida watched his chance to jump. He caught it expertly, and the boat pulled away.

It was 2 o'clock when it reappeared, coming slowly, hidden in a hollow, climbing a crest, flung about through the frothing bar. Miss Strathmore and the captain and a good many others were watching it. Miss Strathmore had been shooting at driftwood and at a big turtle that was floating on its back in the sun. The captain had been watching her. The turtle was a shifting and difficult mark, but she had hit it three times, and then a boat had put out to bring it in.

"We'll have turtle steaks tomorrow," said the captain. "You're a pretty good shot."

But she had had enough of the amusement, and they were leaning idly against the rail. The captain reverted to Merida.

"Matcho tell you about the palacio?" he asked.

"He won't," she answered. "He says he's forgotten it."

"He isn't much on the talk," he said approachingly. "Hasn't told about the girl down below on the spar deck either, I suppose?"

She shook her head.

"Well," said the captain, "she's a little Indian from one of his plantations down there—pretty little devil too. Seems she's in love with him and he won't look at her. So what does she do but go and scrape the money together somehow and take steerage passage and follow him. She came on at San Jose, but he never knew she was aboard until after we got off the Guatemalan coast. She's a shy one, and sharp. Then one day when he was down with the doctor looking at the hospital she showed herself, clasped his knees and wept and all the rest of it—made the dickens' own row. He acted very well, but it put him in a ticklish kind of place. Of course we won't let her up here, and he's mighty careful to keep off the spar deck now. He's going to ship her back from Frisco, he says." He pointed to the back of a black haired head that appeared over the side directly below them. "That's her." Evidently the eyes of the head were watching the boat too.

"She's seen you with him, and she don't like you a little bit," the captain chuckled. "She calls you names."

Miss Strathmore did not think it amusing at all. The rowboat was near. Miss Strathmore met Merida's eye.

"He'll have a scramble of it getting up," the captain opined.

The ship was rolling heavily.

"And his Mexicans," said the captain, uneasily—"by heaven, they're half drunk too! Look at their eyes."

Whether it was that or not, it was certain that they could not seem to manage to keep the boat alongside long enough for Merida to catch the platform when the ship rolled down.

"Take your time, Merida," the chief engineer called to him—"take your time."

Apparently the word suggested something to Merida. He put his hand to his watch pocket, and then his face changed. There were three Mexicans in the boat, but only two of them had rowed. The other had been sitting near him in the stern, steering occasionally with an oar. Merida said something to this one. The fellow looked too innocent and shook his head. Merida caught the mozo by the arm, and that began the fight. The rowers shipped their oars and, urged by the excitement and the tequila, joined in. The boat pitched and plunged.

"They'll kill him!" the captain called out. "Lower away a boat!"

"If they've no knives"— began the purser, but as he said it a knife was thrown, and by the little Indian girl on the deck below.

The captain swore one oath. "They'll do him now— sure," he said.

Merida had his man by the throat, but he was down, and all three were on top of him. One of them jumped up and caught the knife by the handle, as it came, dexterously. He gave it to the man who had Merida under him, and the other two drew back. A splendid brown arm, with its hand grasping the knife, rose high and poised above Merida's breast. Then it fell, but uselessly, limp from the shoulder bone. There was smoke in the muzzle of the revolver in Miss Strathmore's hand.

Merida threw the wounded Mexican off, bent over him, felt in his sash and drew out his own watch. The rowers had resumed their oars. "Now," said Merida quietly, "you take me alongside."

The little Indian on the spar deck had watched it eagerly, hanging out far over the side. She turned now, twisting around lithely upon her back, her face upturned. Her dark eyes glowed, her lips were apart. Miss Strathmore, the revolver still in her hand, was straight above. The Indian threw back her head, farther still, and laughed. Her right hand went to her forehead and came away again with a sweep in mock salute—the salute of the matadore who has missed his stroke and forsakes the ring.—Argonaut.

Took Her Hand With Her Fortune.

A young solicitor got a verdict for a client of considerable riches, but little beauty. Shortly afterward, in due course of business, he sent her a somewhat formidable account. On the following day his client called on him and asked him if he had been serious in his proposal.

"Proposal? But I have not proposed," replied the solicitor, somewhat aghast.

"What!" replied the fair client calmly. "You have asked for my fortune! I should have supposed that you would at least have had the politeness to take me along with it."

The next day she received a revised account as follows:

"Miss B., debtor to Mr. C. for legal business performed."

Then in place of "£ s. d." was "Total amount, Miss B."—London Telegraph.

Old Theater Checks.

In Wilkinson's "Londini Illustrata," 1819, there are twenty-four illustrations of the checks and tickets of admission to the public theaters and other places of amusement, among others the Red Bull theater, which flourished from about the middle of the reign of Queen Elizabeth until some time after the restoration—a check for the "Upper Gallery." For Drury Lane theater there is one "For the First Gallerie, 1671," on the obverse the head of Charles II., and another with the bust of James II. and Maria d'Este, his queen, dated 1684. There is also another "For the First Gallerie" of the Queen's theater, bearing the same date. The remainder are modern and comparatively of recent dates.—Notes and Queries.

HELPS ROAD CAUSE.

EFFECT OF THE AUTOMOBILE ON HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT.

New and Strong Factor Added to Forces Working In This Direction. Highways Should Be Level and Straight.

The automobile is so natural an evolution and fills such a long felt want that there can be no question as to its career, says John Jacob Astor in Pittsburg Dispatch. Every improvement in transportation is a distinct gain, and ever since the aborigine found that the earth would bear part of its burden if he dragged instead of carried it improvement has been going on.

The automobile will undoubtedly do more for good roads than all other factors combined, because while bringing health and pleasure to those using it for enjoyment it will be a great convenience to the business man and will increase the profit of the farmer, so that all these will have a common interest in extending its sphere and in providing what it must have to give good results—that is, good roads.

To produce a practical country road the location, if it is a new road, is the first consideration. Avoid steep hills for two reasons. A steep hill reduces the possible load and makes the maintenance expensive on account of washing during every heavy rain. Six to eight feet of elevation to every 100 feet of length is about as steep as a hill should be, and a uniform standard of only 5 per cent is much better.

Next in importance to easy grades is straightness. The straight line being the shortest distance between two points, the road engineer should see to its application. When the alignment is decided, fill all low and soft places with such surface stones as the country traversed possesses. After this spread about six inches of broken stone, if you have a stone crusher, nearly flat over the width of road, sprinkle it thoroughly with a watering cart mounted on tires eight inches wide and roll thoroughly with a steam roller. After this spread an equal thickness of fine stone, sprinkle and roll as before, and the road is done.

HARD ON HORSES OR AUTOMOBILES.

The largest size of crushed stone should not exceed one inch in diameter, and the smaller pieces should be no larger than almonds; the more irregular of course the better, since irregularity helps them to knit. In bringing an old country road up to the standard it is best to attack the hills. Cut through their tops and put the material thus obtained in the dips between. This kills two birds with one stone and is easily worked, since material is always being moved to a lower level. The road should be widened toward the fences and the excessive crown removed, and provision must always be made for carrying water under the road by a sufficiently large pipe when the line crosses a gully or any place that may ever contain a stream.

The road maintenance and betterments also call for an ordinance requiring the use of rubber for very wide tires by all vehicles, the width increasing with the weight carried.

The more a road is used by vehicles so equipped the better it will become, especially if the surface is not roughened by the feet of horses struggling to drag their loads up steep hills.

It has been demonstrated in Massachusetts and New Jersey that the farmer is the friend of good roads if some one will show him how to build them and help to pay for them. There should be national and state aid, for the country and state as well as the local communities have use for the roads and should pay their share in creating and maintaining them. The first move should be in the direction of co-operation. The second should be the formation of a practical system capable of expanding and taking in the entire country. In this way we might create a system of national highways such as we find in several European countries. To secure co-ordination and a harmonious system when completed the work must, of course, be guided by federal officers.

No investment could be safer for the United States government than aiding the improvement of public roads, which add so materially to the wealth of a country, and this may lead up to the construction of a great national highway across the continent. Such a road should be an object lesson and have a beneficial influence by encouraging intercourse between different sections of the country.

Convict labor might be used to advantage in enlarging and improving our road system, since this would give the convicts useful occupation and in which they would not compete with honest labor.

However, in connection with automobiling we always come back to the question of good roads, on which automobiles depend, so that in the development of automobiling in the country at large the road builder is as important a factor as the electrician or engineer.

NOTICE OF First Meeting of Creditors.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, in Bankruptcy.

In the matter of Henry Achenbach and Harry E. Achenbach, trading as H. Achenbach & Son and as individuals, Bankrupts.

In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of H. Achenbach & Son, partners and as individuals, of the county of Garrett and district aforesaid, bankrupts:

Notice is hereby given that on the 15th day of October A. D., 1901, the said H. Achenbach & Son, partners and individuals, were duly adjudicated bankrupts and that the first meeting of their creditors will be held at my Law Office, No. 6 Washington street, in Cumberland, Maryland, on the 9th day of November, A. D. 1901, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupts and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
Oct. 24, 1901. Referee in Bankruptcy.

COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

OFFICE OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., Aug. 22, 1901.

The Board of County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Wednesday, Nov. 6, 1901,

to transact any business that may be brought before them.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

Sheriff's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an election will be held in the several election districts of Garrett county, at such places as shall be designated by the proper authorities for the location of the polls, on

Tuesday, November 5, 1901,

being the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November next, between the hours of 8 o'clock a. m. and 6 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing

One Comptroller of the Treasury, one Clerk of Court of Appeals, one State Senator, two Delegates to the Legislature, one Sheriff, one County Treasurer, two County Commissioners, one Register of Wills and one County Surveyor.

Attention is hereby called to the above notice, and keepers of hotels, taverns, saloons, stores, drinking establishments or any other place where liquors are sold, and all other persons are hereby notified that by Article 33, Section 105, of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland, no spirituous or fermented liquors, ale or beer, or intoxicating drinks of any kind can be sold, bartered, given away or disposed of on election day.

ANDREW J. OESTER,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R.R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT MAY 19, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 19, 1901. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily	2.42 A. M
No. 3—Daily	7.35 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday	10.01 A. M
No. 55—Daily	4.52 P. M
No. 1—Daily	10.07 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 8—Daily	5.50 A. M
No. 2—Daily	6.52 A. M
No. 46—Express, daily	4.41 P. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun	5.12 P. M
No. 12—Daily	8.35 P. M
No. 4—Daily	12.37 A. M

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager.
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT SEPT. 29, 1901.

SOUTHWARD No. 3 P. M.	SOUTHWARD No. 1 A. M.	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2 NOON	NORTHWARD No. 4 P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. Junc.	10 51	6 01
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 15	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	5 15
6 00*	9 50* ar	Elk Garden	*8 10	*4 25
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 38	10 27	Thomas	8 48	3 53
7 10	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 15
6 48	10 35 lv	Coketon	8 35	3 50
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 15
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 10†	12 00† ar NOON	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 15
8 46*	12 52† ar	Beverly	lv	†1 44
9 10* M. P.	1 15† ar	Huttonsville	lv	†1 20 P. M.
	3 15* ar P. M.	Bealington	lv	*11 45 A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, General Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agen

I HAVE PURCHASED

THE OAKLAND COAL YARD

of Mr. D. L. Conneway and will continue the business. I will keep constantly on hand a large supply of

HARD AND SOFT

COAL,

KINDLING WOOD, Etc.

All orders will receive prompt attention. Leave orders with the weighmaster or at my residence, the Giessman Hotel.

35-2 GEO. GIESSMAN

THE

SECOND NATIONAL BANK

of CUMBERLAND, MD.

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital	$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits	250,000
Liability of Shareholders	100,000
Additional Security to Depositors	$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, James Clark, John Sheridan, O. C. Gephart, L. M. Shepherd, A. Hunter Boyd, David W. Sloan.

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY, ARCHITECT,

Office 7 North Liberty St.

CUMBERLAND, MD.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.

Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.
Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Money loaned on Mortgage.
Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.
Agent for the Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.
Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
OAKLAND, MD
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in McComas's Building, Main St.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET,
Particular attention given to Conveyancing investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. 1e14-1y

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD.
Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients. 45—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. '88106

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.
Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 16-'99

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office opposite Garrett County Bank.
Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 6 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER,
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.
Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by aneroid barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26t*

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate.
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.
Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats, descriptions and estimates furnished. 40-1yr.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!

I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 20,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.
All trespassing will be prosecuted to the utmost extent of the law.
Call on or address:
C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

CHARLES A. ASHBY
PATRICK F. FINZEL
REPUBLICAN
REPUBLICAN

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this State.

SECTION 4. As soon as may be after the taking and publishing of the National Census of 1900, or after the enumeration of the population of this State, under the authority thereof, there shall be an apportionment of representa

MARVEL OF PROMISE

A GEORGIA TOWN THAT IS MOVING TO THE FRONT.

Wonderful Development of Industry and Commerce in Five Years. Result of Concerted Push by Its Hustling Citizens.

Not long ago the board of trade of Bainbridge, Ga., thought the time had arrived to let the outside world know what kind of a town they lived in and represented. With a zeal characteristic of the south it set about to do the job. It took an entire page in the Atlanta Constitution as a means of accomplishing that result. Here are a few of the reasons they give for their belief in the future prosperity of their town:

Wrapped in the vestal robes of countless numbers of live oaks, Bainbridge sits, a veritable Eden of beauty, on the banks of the Flint river. Luxuriant in her primeval forests and rich in the absolute monarch of trade, being on the Plant line of railroads from Savannah to Montgomery, she is now building the Georgia, Alabama and Florida railway to Eufaula and the gulf on the south and toward Columbus and Birmingham on the north. With a regular line of heavy tonnage steamers plying between here and Apalachicola, giving strong competition in freight rates, her commercial position is as stable as her natural surroundings are inspiriting.

Her population gives Bainbridge 2,700 souls. Adds from being incorrectly taken, this does not consider some of the leading industries that are without the limits of the corporation. Accordingly the census report is expected to far exceed the census report by 1,000.

A thriving little city, you say, whose sociable industries add a blossomed to the social life of the south? Not to be considered that this is the status of an old town that has donned these new clothes within the last four or five years, the surprise becomes intensified. Let us take a look at the industries of the five years Bainbridge and vicinity has advanced as follows:

An abundant supply of artesian water. One fine underground system of sewerage.

A splendidly equipped fire department.

A splendid water system.

A splendid electric lighting plant.

An ice factory that supplies outlying districts.

One of the best cooperages in the state.

A modern variety works plant.

One of the largest rift flooring mills in the country.

A sawmill with variety works that ranks second to none.

Two fine cotton industries that show a combined capital of $500,000.

One of the best appointed hotels in the state that cost $50,000.

A modern opera house.

Another splendid factory in course of construction at cost $30,000.

A new bank, giving two institutions of this character.

Two new handsome brick churches.

Two miles of cement walks in any town of its size.

A half mile track in one of the prettiest parks of the south.

A graded school with military discipline, employing seven teachers.

A brass band, made up entirely of local talent.

More handsome private houses than any town of twice the size.

Two new and handsome stores that do a trade of a half million a year.

A business center, where nearly all the old stores have been replaced with new ones.

One new railroad.

One new steamboat line.

A tobacco plantation that is the largest independent management in the world. This grows the best Shumata leaf. Its output the present season shows an annual product valued at $800,000.

These are the changes that have occurred within five years—and Bainbridge is not satisfied.

What has brought about this transformation? Why, natural advantages that have lately been appreciated, and that is all. Bainbridge has what is in addition to other things, has made the best use of her transportation as an adjuster of freight rates.

In addition to all this, Bainbridge is not an abode of Puritanism in any respect. Even her ministry, representing five denominations—Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian and Christian—are men of liberal thought and broad ideas of man's mission, all vying with the business element in material upbuilding and therefore adding to the glories of the natural vineyard.

No institution has done more for the upbuilding of Bainbridge than the Georgia, Florida and Alabama railway. Projected by Mr. Plant, the great progressive millionaire of Savannah, took charge of an old charter that was granted under the Bullock regime. It is now operated by the Plant system and has been completed to Bainbridge, under a first class passenger service. Grading is going on at both ends toward Tallahassee and the Columbus and Birmingham. On the north it is heading toward Columbus and Birmingham. On the south it is heading toward Apalachicola, which seems to be the objective point. Although the officials are cautiously reticent as to their ultimate intentions. They have already contracted for the entire southern end of the work, including a steel bridge across Flint river, to be erected at a cost of $90,000. The road bed is now under way and is completed by the end of the year, at which time the position of Bainbridge will be doubled in commercial advantage.

List of Nominations filed with the Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County.

OFFICE OF BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MARYLAND, October 21, 1901.

In compliance with the provisions of Section 44 of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws, notice is hereby given that the nominations hereinafter mentioned have been filed with or certified to this Board under the provisions of Article 33 of Code of Public General Laws. The nominations which have been so filed with or certified to this Board will be on the official ballots, arranged as nearly as practicable in the form and order below set forth.

FOR COMPTROLLER OF THE TREASURY:
JOSHUA W. HERING of Westminster, Maryland	DEMOCRATIC
WILLIAM KLEINLE of Baltimore City	PROHIBITION
HERMAN S. PLATT of Baltimore City	REPUBLICAN
WILLIAM J. PARKER of Baltimore City	UNION REFORM
FOR CLERK OF THE COURT OF APPEALS:
THOMAS PARRAN of St. Leonards, Maryland	REPUBLICAN
GUSTAVUS W. PETHERBRIDGE of Charlotte Hall, Maryland	PROHIBITION
GEORGE G. SHEPHERD of Baltimore City	UNION REFORM
JOSEPH FRANK TURNER of Easton, Maryland	DEMOCRATIC
FOR STATE SENATOR:
JOHN W. McCULLOUGH	DEMOCRATIC
ROBERT A. RAVENSCROFT	REPUBLICAN
FOR MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF DELEGATES:
CHARLES A. ASHBY	REPUBLICAN
PATRICK F. FINZEL	REPUBLICAN

Constitutional Amendment.

Chapter 185, of Acts of 1900.

AN ACT to amend section nine, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this state, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 9. The State's Attorney shall perform such duties and receive such fees and commissions of salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, as are now or may hereafter be prescribed by law; and if any State's Attorney shall receive any other fee or reward than such as is or may be allowed by law, he shall, on conviction thereof, be removed from office, provided that the State's Attorney for Baltimore City shall receive an annual salary of forty-five hundred dollars and shall have power to appoint one deputy, at an annual salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, and such other assistants at such annual salaries not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars each, as the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City may authorize and approve; all of said salaries to be paid out of the fees of the said State's Attorney's office, as has heretofore been practiced.

For Constitutional Amendment.

Against Constitutional Amendment.

Constitutional Amendment.

Chapter 432, of Acts of 1900.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this State.

SECTION 4. As soon as may be after the taking and publishing of the National Census of 1900, or after the enumeration of the population of this State, under the authority thereof, there shall be an apportionment of representation

---

Appointment of Judge of Election to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 22, 1901.

Peter Fitzwilliams, appointed Democratic Judge of Election in District No. 2, Election Precinct No. 1, Second Ward, Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, to fill vacancy caused by the failure of Carl Patton to qualify as such Judge, is hereby appointed Judge of said Election.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett County, Md.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President.

Appointment of Judge and Registration Officer to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 22, 1901.

Simon Myers, appointed Republican Judge and Registration Officer by this Board at a meeting held on the 21st day of October, 1901, for District No. 11, to fail to be qualified to act as such Judge and Registration Officer, and John T. Sincell is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett County, Md.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President.

Examiners' Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, to examine and report to the next term of said Court the location of a new public road to be located as follows, viz: Beginning at a point in the public road leading from Garrett C. Moon's farm and running thence through the lands of said Moon and others to the Manor Sliding and Manufacturing Company's road, and to connect with the road now in use along the lines of said Lincoln and said Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company's road, a distance of about one and three miles, and examining whether the proposed road is of sufficient public utility to be laid out and opened, and reporting their opinion thereon to the next term of said Court, will meet at the premises on the 11th day of November, 1901, for the purpose of examining the said proposed road, and will then and there hear all persons who may desire to be heard touching the same and perform their duty in the premises.

J. H. WILSON,
JOSEPH H. HAYES,
ANDREW J. PEACE,
Examiners.

ADMINISTRATRIX'S NOTICE

This is to give notice, That the Subscriber has obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, Maryland, letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof, legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 3rd day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. And those indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

DANIEL PLEASANTS,

Given under my hand this 8th day of September, 1901. MARIA PLEASANTS, Mounta Administratrix.
20-3

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 3rd day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. And those indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

FRANCIS H. RAVENSCROFT,

Given under my hand this 8th day of September, 1901.

R. A. RAVENSCROFT, Administrator.

ORDER NISI.

George W. Wilson vs. Joseph H. Wilson.
No. 1301 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Ordered, this 1st day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and one, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Jesse D. Price and Thomas Hitches, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 2nd day of November, 1901; provided a copy of this order be inserted in some newspaper published in Oakland, Md., once in each of three successive weeks before the 2nd day of November, 1901.

The report states the amount of sale to be $6,150.

True copy—test:
R. M. LUMAN, Clerk.

HOW TO VOTE THE TICKET.

Instructions Issued by the Attorney-General in Marking Your Ballot.

Both political parties claim that the operation of the new ballot law will be in their interest. The Democrats hope to disfranchise many colored voters because of their presumed inability to correctly mark the ticket, and the Republicans assert that the new method of voting is so simple that even illiterate colored voters will become qualified to vote, but that thousands of illiterate white Democrats, resenting the imputation cast upon their intelligence, will remain away from the polls, or else will cast their votes with the Republicans. The result, however, is attended with no difficulty, and any reasonably intelligent voter can see the situation is eagerly sought after.

Pursuant to the requirements of law the Attorney-General of Maryland has prepared the following instruction to voters:

1. To vote. Enter room, step up to the official ballot, which you must have registered residence to the judges. Wait until your name is found upon the register of voters by the judge in charge of ballots. See that he has written your name and number on the coupon attached to the ballot and that he initials such coupon. Fold ballot itself.

2. Upon receiving your ballot, retire to one of the booths provided for the purpose and prepare your ballot by marking with an indelible pencil after the name of each candidate for whom you desire to vote or after the right thereof, in the blank space provided therefor, cross, for example (X), and make a similar cross (X) after or to a vote of the people, by marking likewise in an appropriate space, a cross (X) before the words "For Constitutional Amendment," if you wish to vote for some one whose name is not printed on the official ballot, you can write the name of such person in the blank space upon the ballot provided for that purpose.

3. When you have prepared your ballot you may take with you into the polling place any written or printed memoranda or "pointers" you may desire to consult in the preparation of your ballot, except a facsimile of the ballot to be voted. You must prepare your ballot with reasonable promptness and due delay. Before coming from behind the curtain in front of your compartment, you must fold your ballot so that the face thereof shall not be seen when you received it, so that the marks you have made upon it shall be fully concealed. You must then deposit your ballot to the judge at the ballot box, give him your name and register address and initial the ballot, and number and stringe it, and deposits your ballot in the ballot box. You must then leave the polling room and cannot again go behind the guard rail during the day.

4. No person may not go into any compartment occupied by another, or converse with any other voter while engaged in a compartment, nor remain in the compartment for more than seven minutes if others are waiting.

5. You must not take any ballot outside the room. If you spoil a ballot you must deliver the spoiled ballot to the judge in charge of ballots and can receive from him another ballot. If you spoil THREE ballots you lose your vote.

6. A voter who is physically disabled from marking his ballot may make an affidavit to that effect if he desires assistance. The two polling officers must then mark the ballot as made, cast accompany him into one of the compartments and there mark his ballot as he instructs them, marking it in the presence of no other person, not allowed to read the ballot to him. The clerks are required to keep secret the manner in which they have marked the ballot to be seen by any person with the apparent intention of betting it be place any distinguishing mark upon his ballot, or who shall make a false statement as to his inability to mark his ballot, or who shall interfere or attempt to interfere with any voter within the inclosed space, or who shall, or shall endeavor to induce any voter to show how he marks or has marked his ballot, shall be published by a fine of not less than five ($5) dollars nor more than one hundred ($100) dollars, or imprisonment in jail for a period not exceeding sixty days, or both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

A Great Railway.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Co. owns and operates 6,000 miles of railway in the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, South and North Dakota, Missouri, Montana and Nebraska.

It traverses the best portion of the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, South and North Dakota.

It runs electric lighted, steam-heated trains.

It has the absolute block system.

It uses all modern appliances for the comfort and safety of its patrons.

It is liberal, courteous and obliging.

It tries to give each passenger "value received" for his money, and

It asks every man, woman and child to buy tickets over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway—for it is A Great Railway.

Time tables, maps and information furnished cheerfully and promptly by any agent of the company.

C. J. EARLING,
General Passenger and Ticket Agent.
C. A. MILLER,
District Passenger Agent, 839 Park Building, Pittsburg.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the lands of the undersigned, lying in District No. 13 of Garrett county, either for the purpose of cutting, hauling or passing over the same, or hunting with gun or weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

SILAS C. BEACHY,
C. C. BEACHY,
JONAS C. BEACHY,
MRS. JOHN BRENNEMAN.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 10 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1901.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET

For Comptroller of the Treasury:
HERMAN S. PLATT,
Of Baltimore City.

For Clerk of the Court of Appeals:
THOMAS PARRAN,
Of Calvert County.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY TICKET.

For State Senator:
ROBERT A. RAVENSCROFT,
Of District No. 5.

For House of Delegates:
PATRICK E. FINZEL,
Of District No. 9.
CHARLES A. ASHBY,
Of District No. 14.

For Sheriff:
WILLIAM A. MAFFETT,
Of District No. 6.

For Treasurer:
JAMES W. WHITE,
Of District No. 14.

For County Commissioners:
TAYLOR FRIEND,
Of District No. 2.
JACOB STUMP,
Of District No. 4.

For Register of Wills:
EDWIN E. FRIEND,
Of District No. 7.

For County Surveyor:
FRANKLIN P. GREEN,
Of District No. 11.

GONE TO HIS REWARD.

THE inhuman assassin of President McKinley, Czolgosz, was electrocuted Tuesday morning at Auburn, N. Y. Now let his name be forgot.

THE REPUBLICAN CANVASS IN GARRETT COUNTY.

With this issue of THE REPUBLICAN the campaign in Garrett county closes, so far as the paper is concerned. This certainly has been the most thorough, effective and earnest canvass the county has ever experienced. Every district has been visited, large meetings addressed by experienced and noted speakers; every effort has been made to reach each individual voter. Two special editions of this paper of 7,000 copies have been printed and distributed to the voters of the county. Thousands of circulars have been issued and circulated. Literature containing instructions in handling the ballot has been placed in the hands of every voter. If these instructions are followed we have no fear of the result.

REMEMBER, Republicans, if you mark a little outside the square opposite the word Republican, your ballot will not be connted.

GORMAN! GORMAN! GORMAN! RASIN! RASIN! RASIN!

The above desire to be known and designated as the "White Man's Party." Farmers, mechanics, laborers, ministers, lawyers, everybody, young and old, rich and poor, before voting, just recall what you will be voting for if you vote the Democratic ticket!

Remember the fraudulent elections prior to the Republican law of 1896.

Remember the $60,000,000 worth of stocks and bonds the Republicans had placed on the tax books.

Remember the $400,000 of cold cash the Republicans compelled, by a suit at law, to be paid into the State treasury, which sum had long been withheld under a Democratic administration.

Remember the liberal exemption that the Republicans gave the farmer.

Remember how the State debt was refunded at a lower rate of interest and almost paid off entirely by the Republicans who recommened a large reduction in the tax rate; but the Democrats came into power and saw fit to make large expenditures for an extra session of the Legislature costing thousands of dollars to the tax payers.

REPUBLICANS, don't trade off any man on your ticket! We are going to carry the entire ticket through, if every Republican will work and vote. The Democrats are making a desperate effort to trade some of their candidates, but don't allow yourselves to be thus deceived into voting for a Democratic Legislature that will rob you of your rights.

"RASCALITY REIGN."

"The State House at Annapolis seething with corruption, rottenness unparalleled distinguishes the present session. General interest of the people forgotten in the scramble for 'extra money.' And the conclusion says, if the people of Maryland would be brought to a realizing sense of the state of affairs existing here, they would come to Annapolis in crowds and drive the entire gang into the bay."

Other accounts of the same session were equally emphatic, and the "reform" session of Governor Smith was noted as the most scandalous in the history of the State.

To give even a partial account of that disgraceful session would take columns of space, for, from the first day until the closing hours, the whole Assembly was one wild, turbulent, and dishonorable scramble for boodle and spoils. Corporations were "plugged," members openly "held up" legitimate bills for pay and the lobby was enriched as it had not been for years.

So outrageous and scandalous was the conduct of the majority during the session that a leading Democratic Senator, Mr. Olin Bryan, of Baltimore City, said that it was a disgrace to the State, and that every private and corporate interest was considered in preference to the general public interest. Mr. Bryan also characterized the General Assembly as "corporation ridden" and corrupt to an extraordinary degree. And the men who were in control then are asking the people to entrust them with the control again; so that they may continue to ply their nefarious trade in the State House.

The question for the people to decide at the polls is, "Will they trust them? Do they wish the same old system to be continued so that Maryland politics may become once more a byword of scorn and reproach?"

IF you vote for one more name than the law allows your ballot will be thrown out. So be sure and only make an X mark opposite the word Republican.

THE plain people of Garrett county don't want a ballot law that will simply confuse them. What they want is a fair election, a fair count and the victory to go to the party that honestly wins.

ALTHOUGH he may not be educated, the man who pays his taxes, works the roads and clothes and feeds his little children by his daily toil, has as much right to as a man who has been educated in a college and can count his wealth by the thousands.

IN THE light of the disfranchising election law, passed by a Democratic legislature, one of the most disgusting sights ever witnessed is to see a ring Democratic henchman trying to teach an illiterate voter how to mark his ballot. What a shame! What a shame!

IF you wish to vote the full Republican ticket you must make an X mark in the square opposite the name of each Republican candidate, and if this mark is not exactly in the blank space left for it the ballot will be thrown out. There is now no way by which a voter with a single mark can cast his ballot for the entire ticket. Put your X mark in the square opposite the name of each candidate marked Republican.

LET all Republicana remember that we are now back again in the dismal state of having to fight, not so much for or against any man or any policy, as for the right to have a fair and decent election. If the Democrats win the next Legislature they will wholly disfranchise all who haye not had the advantages of a good education. If Democrats win the people of Maryland will be put back into the mire of the days before Lowndes was elected Governor.

WE DO most earnestly plead with the Republican workers in the various districts to see to it that every Republican is instructed how to mark his ticket before he goes into the booth to vote. The well educated as well as the man who unfortunately can't read or write, will unquestionably make a blunder unless he studies his ticket before he goes into the booth on election day. Let each district have some one with sample ballots at the polls all day, so that each and every Republican can have an opportunity to look at the ballot before he goes in to vote.

IF voters of all parties, in the case of the Maryland election this year, would calmly consider the effect of their ballots, it is safe to say the majority would be against the so-called Democratic ticket. What measures, national or local, can be credited to the Democratic party? It is true they passed the disfranchisement law, the obnoxious oyster law and other like measures, but wherein have the people, outside of the politicians, been benefitted?

Don't Moisten Your Pencil.

The pencil to be used in marking the ballot on Tuesday next will be an indellible one and entirely different from the kind in use formerly. Great care will have to be taken by the voter not to wet the lead when making his X marks. If the lead is moistened the X marks become blurred when the ballot is folded and will make another mark on the opposite fold such as would cause the ballot to be thrown out as defective.

THE rank and file of the Democratic party cannot be induced to regard the prospect of seeing the same old crowd in office with enthusiasm. They hear the horns and hoofs rattling and smell brimstone too plainly not to know that there has been a transaction with his satanic majesty.

LET the citizen, who have been voting the Democratic ticket in the past ask himself these questions: In what manner have I benefited my country, my State, my county, my home, myself and family by this voting? Nothing but to return to power the old Gorman-Rasin ring, with all its evils. Think seriously over these things.

THE sample ballot is now being studied by the voter. Just how a man who cannot read is to cast his vote by this ballot we cannot understand. Yet the Gorman crowd who made the law that produced this ballot still contend that they are for equal rights and an untrammeled ballot. Such deceit and hypocrisy should be relegated to private life forever, and we believe the voters will so declare on election day.

NEARLY a thousand years ago Magna Charta was wrested from King John on the plain of Runnymede by the liberty loving people of old England, and it now looks as if the people of Maryland would have to demand a new charter of liberty from Gorman, Rasin & Company. When this is done—as it will be done under God on election day—the spirit of our Constitution will shine forever and ever like a star, and the great principle of the equality of all men before the law will again be proclaimed. And John Walter Smith, who has been truly characterized as "weak, pliant and ambitious" will go down to his political grave in ignomy and shame.

THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

The Republican candidates for County Commissioners are substantial and progressive citizens. They are first-class men who understand the needs of this county and ought to be elected by large majorities. Work for them and vote for them—and see to it, by honorable means, that neither of them is defeated.

REPUDIATE THE SCHEME.

The Democrats by their extra session, which cost the taxpayers of Maryland $125,000, spent for the sole purpose of passing a law that is hoped to guarantee the election of the entire Democratic ticket, have given us a Chinese puzzle of a ticket, a low and shabby piece of despicable work to deprive honest voters of the right to vote, the fundamental right of every citizen of Maryland. Let every Republican come out to the polls on election day and repudiate this nefarious scheme and vote the full Republican ticket by making this X mark exactly in the square opposite the name of each candidate marked Republican wherever it appears on the ballot.

VOTE YOUR OWN TICKET.

Let no Republican vote for any Democratic nominee for the House of Delegates, it matters not how well you know them. It will not be a vote for them personally, but a vote for Gorman for the United States Senate and a vote, should the Democrats be successful in carrying the Legislature, toward the passage of a law at the next session of the Legislature that will disfranchise all who cannot read or write, be they taxpayers or not. A Republican vote for any Democratic nominee for the House of Delegates means a vote to put the entire election machinery in the hands of the Gorman-Baughman ring gang, to again perpetuate the outrages, the frauds, crimes and scandals which in 1875 cheated the people of their verdict, and which yearly were practiced by this ruffian ring until cast out overwhelmingly by the people in 1895 when Lowndes was elected Governor. If a single Republican votes for any one of the Democratic nominees you help to fortify the same Gorman-Baughman ring in absolute power for a generation to come. Vote to defeat these extra session conspirators.

To the Voters of Garrett County.

Having received the nomination for the office of County Treasurer and believing it to be my duty to stay and attend to the duties of the office I now hold, I take this method of soliciting your aid and influence.

Thanking you for your support in the past I respectfully solicit your assistance this time when it will be a great help to me.

Very respectfully,
JAMES W. WHITE.

HOW THEY TREAT UNEDUCATED VOTERS.

Have you a father who cannot read and write? Have you a brother who cannot read and write? Have you a son or a cousin or an uncle or a nephew who cannot read and write? If you have don't vote the Democratic ticket.

The last Democratic Legislature passed an infamous ballot law to take away the right to vote from people who cannot read; illiterates the Democrets call them. The Democratic party says if your relatives are not educated they have no business to vote. Will you stand it? Will you submit to it? It is an outrage that a man should not be allowed to vote simply because his father or mother were too poor to send him to school.

There are in this county a number of people who cannot read, who own property and pay taxes and help to support the State and county, but the Democratic bosses say such people are not fit to vote.

Rise in your might, honest voters; give your support to the Republican candidates, and let the Gorman-Baughman ring understand that a man shall not be denied the right to vote simply because he is not educated.

THE PEOPLE UNDERSTAND.

The frantic efforts of the Ring Democracy to divert the attention of the people from the true issues of this campaign will fail of their purpose. These real issues are fully comprehended by the people, and they have time and again demonstrated that they can be depended upon for a proper verdict at the polls.

All these boasts of lofty and honorable purpose in the call of the extra session of the legislature which, with the useless and partisan census, cost the tax-payers over one hundred dollars, simply serve to disgust the people because they know so well why the legislature was convened in extra session. These repeated frantic appeals from Vandiver, Schley & Co. for approval only excite in the mind of every sensible man the query: "If the old non-partisan election law was such a menace to the liberties of the people, if there was such grave danger, under this law, in the illiteracy of the State, and in the universal suffrage, why did not this same Gorman ring have this self same legislature enact the present election at the regular session in 1900?

The membership at the regular session was the same, this same notorious political combination, Gorman, Vandiver, Rasin, Schley, Baughman and Co. were in absolute control then as now, the peril, if it existed at all existed then as now, we were then on the eve of a great national election, if the danger was imminent the time was propitious, why, therefore, did they not at this regular session frame their disfranchising and purifying proposition into an election law?

Does any sane man believe that Messrs. Gorman and Co. would have called the extra session and forced the exactment of this election law and the taking of this census at the expense of the people, if this State had gone democratic last fall and there would be no United States Senator to elect next winter?

Partizanship, arbitrary partizanship of the most disgusting, dangerous and inexcusable type inspired the whole movement and its sole design is to secure, by an infamous election law, control of the next legislature, the election of Gorman to the Senate and the restoration of the notorious Gorman ring to power in this State.

This is the issue:

Shall Gorman be elected to the Senate and shall Gorman, Vandiver, Raisin and their followers be again given control of the State?

And no cajolement however flattering, no fawning however servile, no appeals however eloquent, no promises however multiplied will disturb the good sense of the people of Maryland or divert their minds from the actual political situation.

Change in Voting Place.

The polling place in District No. 7, east Oakland, has been changed from the Corrigan property at the corner of Third and Alder streets to the Giessman house on Third street, adjoining the railroad bridge. The change in the polling place was made necessary owing to the prevalence of diphtheria in the house first selected as the place of holding the poils.

Dentistry.

Dr. Edwin W. Green, dentist, will be in Friendsville from October 28 to November 3 inclusive.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Grantsville, Md., on or about the middle of July last, 5 head of sheep, 4 yearlings and one older, 4 being ewes and one a weather. Four of said sheep having crops off left ear and slit in right ear; one with left ear cropped off.

The owner or owners are hereby notified to come forward, prove property, pay costs and take them away.

Dated Oct. 1, 1901.

CHRISTIAN M. LIVENGOOD,
30 Grantsville, Md.

Wanted.

One hundred men for general woods work and grading railroad.

PRESTON LUMBER & COAL CO.,
2 tf Oakland, Md

TRAVELING THE SLIMY ROAD.

GORMAN:—"Say, Free, walking in slime ain't so bad when you have had 30 years' practice, is it?

COLONEL KILGORE INDISCREET.

Admits That Democrats Intend To Further Complicate the Ballot.

Colonel William Kilgore, the Democratic spell-binder from Montgomery county, who has been touring the State in the interest of the Democratic candidates, made some admissions in Wicomico county recently which have been reduced to the form of an affidavit by two well-known citizens of the county and which should certainly result in the recall of Colonel Kilgore by the Democratic committee. In a conversation which occurred at the Peninsula Hotel in Salisbury about 8 o'clock last Sunday morning, Colonel Kilgore said:

"It is our intention," said Mr. Kilgore, "if successful, to further fix the qualifications to entitle a man to vote, and make it more difficult by adding a property qualification to the already educational qualification, and I assure you that we will place it sufficiently high and strong to get rid of this rabble and negro vote. We must get rid of them, and if we are successful this fall we will so thoroughly entrench ourselves that they will never again be able to get us out. We must win. It is very essential that we should have the legislative part of the ticket."

To this statement Mr. Isaac H. White and Mr. Jesse H. Bratton, two well-known citizens, made affidavit before E. C. Fulton, a Notary Public.

In differentiating between the negro and the "rabble," it is claimed that in alluding to the "rabble" Col. Kilgore meant the poor whites who own no property. The affidavit has been largely circulated through the lower part of the State.

Elk Garden Rehabilitated.

Elk Garden, W. Va., has taken a new lease of life. Recently many houses were empty and sold at auction from $10 to $25 each, torn down and moved elsewhere. Since the West Virginia Central railway has begun work opening new coal mines there every house is full, and some families live in warerooms. Over 300,000 shingles have been used the past few weeks reroofing tenement houses owned by the railroad company. The coal miners have all the work they can do, and make good pay.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby notified that trespassing on my farm at Deer Park, Md., is forbidden under penalty of the law, and $50 REWARD is hereby offered for information leading to arrest and conviction of persons taking fish from ponds upon it.

31 4t JOHN W. WILLIAMS.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod Liver Oil is the means of life, and enjoyment of life to thousands: men women and children.

When appetite fails, it restores it. When food is a burden, it lifts the burden.

When you lose flesh, it brings the plumpness of health.

When work is hard and duty is heavy, it makes life bright.

It is the thin edge of the wedge; the thick end is food. But what is the use of food, when you hate it, and can't digest it?

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the food that makes you forget your stomach.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists,
409 Pearl Street, New York.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

You can buy men's, boys' and children's clothing cheaper at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, than any place in town. 27 8*

Take your produce to N. Broadwater, who pays always the highest price.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

If you want a bargain in a nice family surrey or carriage you can get it at A. D. Naylor's. Closing them out for this season. Special low price and good terms. 28 3*

Buy the famous Cinderella Double Heater Cook Stoves and Ranges at N. Broadwater's, Grantsville, Md.

N. Broadwater, Grantsville, has just returned from the city with the largest and most complete line of goods ever brought to town.

Go to Eagle Store, Grantsville, for ladies' tailor-made suits, jackets and capes. 27 8t*

FOR SALE:—The Lutheran parsonage, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

A new remedy for biliousness is now on sale at all drug stores. It is called Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. It gives quick relief and will prevent the attack if given as soon as the first indication of the disease appears. Price, 25 cents per box. Samples free.

Opera House!

THREE NIGHTS,

Commencing

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4.

Special Engagement of the Popular

Stewart Fulmer Stock Company,

PRESENTING

"The Southern Rose."
"The Vendetta."
"In the Heart of Tennessee."
"The Bondsman" and others.

MONDAY NIGHT,

"The Southern Rose,"

A Beautiful Play of Life in Old Virginia.

Special Scenery and Effects.
Strong Specialties.
Unexcelled Players.
Everything Up-to-date.

Prices, 15, 25 and 35 Cents.

SHERIFF'S SALE

OF AN INTEREST IN

Valuable Real Estate

Situated in Garrett County, Md.

By virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett county at the suit of G. S. Hamill, executor of William W. Bray, deceased, against Harriet B. Paugh, the same being No. 5 Judicials to December term, 1901, of said Court, I, the undersigned Sheriff, by an actual entry upon the premises hereinafter described, did seize, levy upon and take in execution all of the right, title and reversionary interest of the said Harriet B. Paugh, in and to all that property situated in District Number Fourteen, Garrett county, known as the

William W. Bray Farm,

containing one hundred and sixty acres, more or less, which said real estate is more particularly described in a deed from Joseph Friend of John to the said William W. Bray, dated the 6th day of June, 1872, and recorded in Liber H. R. No. 36, folio 482, &c., one of the land records of Allegany county, especial reference to which deed is herein made for a more complete description of the interest hereby intended to be sold, which is an undivided one-sixth interest of the above defendant in said property subject to the life estate of Amanda Bray, and I hereby give notice that on

SATURDAY,

The 23d Day of November, 1901,

in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, at the hour of eleven o'clock a. m. of said day, will offer the interest of the said Harriet B. Paugh in the aforesaid real estate at public auction to the highest bidder for cash on the day of sale to satisfy the aforesaid execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on the day of sale.

ANDREW J. OESTER,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

The United States Government Report shows ROYAL Baking Powder to be stronger, purer and better than any other.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

Mrs. D. Grant Smith, of Grafton, is in Oakland visiting relatives.

GAME.—H. Creutzburg buys game of all kinds for cash.

Miss Nell Offutt is visiting friends and relatives at Cumberland this week.

Just received, a big car white middlings, or red dog, at Dixon & Kelso's. 33-2t*

School Commissioner George E. Bishoff, of Hoyes, was in town yesterday on business.

"Andy" Gonder, son of 'Squre A. B. Gonder, is clerking in the store of Messrs. D. E. Offutt & Sons.

Rev. George I. Uhler, the pastor, will preach on Sunday morning and eveniug in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church.

The ladies of the Lutheran church will serve dinner and supper on election day at the Boyer building, Oakland.

Miss Hagans, of Morgantown, who visited Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell in Oakland for several weeks, will leave for her home to-morrow morning.

Westernport schools are closed as a result of the diphtheria epidemic in Westernport, Piedmont and Luke, all within a short distance of each other.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Savage, of Meyersdale, Pa., who were guests of Mrs. West, at the West House, have returned home, accompanied by Miss Lillie Raley.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Berry, of Massilon, O., who were guests over Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Falkenstein, departed for their home Monday morning.

Young man don't loaf around and complain of your hard luck. Go to work with a vim and make a lot of good luck. That is the only way you will ever have it.

Messrs. D. O. Kimmel, L. L. Schooley and P. H. Hamill, of near Thayerville, returned Monday morning from a ten days' trip to Niagara and Buffalo.

Miss Jennie Smith, the railroad evangelist, has been holding a series of meetings in the Methodist church at Hyndman since last Saturday night. The church has been crowded at every service.

Train men will in a few days all be supplied with winter uniforms. The frosty air has been cutting through the summer garb until further orders and a chilly feeling has been prevalent among the employes.

The exposition at Buffalo will close on Saturday night November 2nd at midnight. This has been decided by the board of managers. The show has been a disappointment as a money maker and the managers are now figuring if it was a help to the town in any respect.

The point designated as the center of population of the United States, according to the census of 1900, has been found by exact astronomical observations to be on a farm owned by James Marr, five miles south of Columbus, Indiana. The spot is close to longitude 85 West from Greenwich, and 39 degrees 9 minutes and 36 seconds North latitude.

We hope the farmer who said this will be a very mild winter is right. The old gentleman when asked for his reasons said: The hornets had built exceptionally low this season, which is a sign that never failed. He further stated that the hardest part of the winter would come first since the woolly worms had more back on their head than on their tail.

This weather has been great for the builders and they are properly thankful. Few days this fall have been unfit for outdoor work and a great deal of work has been pushed along that otherwise might have been greatly hindered. There hasn't been any rain to speak of for the past month. There are those who predict that the month will go out dry.

Railroad men these days are being badly overworked. They don't get time to sleep and in consequence many accidents are taking place. The men go to sleep at their posts even if they known that they will get killed for doing it. Flagmen sit down on the track and go to sleep and get run over. The men are complaining over the condition of affairs which has become intolerable.

Mr. H. H. Warnick, of near Barton, was a business visitor to Oakland Friday of last week.

Rev. Bunner, of Gladesville, W. Va., who is conducting a revival service near Gortner, was in town last Friday and made this office a brief visit.

Another excursion was run to Cumberland last Sunday from Oakland and points west. On next Sunday an excursion will be run from Oakland and points east to Grafton and Clarksburg.

For sprains, swellings and lameness there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Try it. For sale by all dealers.

This office is in receipt of a memoir of the life of the late Junge Jeremiah Morrow Wilson, of Washington, who recently died very suddenly in that city. The memorial sets out in brief the busy life of that most remarkable man who was probably at the head of his profession in the country—the law. A beautiful half-tone engraving of the deceased is printed on the first page of the booklet. In life Judge Wilson was one of the summer residents of Oakland and was held in high esteem by all who knew him.

That an epidemic of diphtheria is imminent in Oakland cannot be concealed. There are a number of cases already in town and thus far one death has resulted. It is well for the public generally to be made acquainted with the facts when an outbreak of this character threatens, that they may be placed on their guard and in a measure use preventatives for the safeguard of their children and themselves. All families should be effectually quarantined when a case is known to exist, as it is the only safe and sure remedy against a spread of the malady.

Go to Hinebaugh's Restuurant for meals, lunches, oysters, etc. Ladies' dining room in connection.

Halloween comes to-night. Usually on the morning following Halloween Oakland presents a woe-begone and dilapidated appearance. Store boxes, gates, old wagons, signs and many other things are piled high in the streets. Sometimes sidewalks are lifted bodily from their places and dumped into the street. In some instances this is the quickest manner of getting rid of dangarous walks—many of which are now in evidence to the casual observer who has occasion to walk along certain of our thoroughfares, notably Second street.

Mr. W. E. Boyer, of Accident, who left his home some fourteen years ago and went west where he settled in San Francisco, afterward marrying a lady of that city, arrived in Oakland Sunday morning to pay a brief visit to his parents at Accident and his many friends in Oakland where he was employed prior to going west. Mr. Boyer is manager of one of the largest machine works on the Pacific coast which position he obtained by hard work and application. His wife came east some weeks ago and met Mr. Boyer here. Before returning home the couple will visit New Orleans and other southern cities.

Coming Attractions.

The phenomenal success with which the Stewart Fulmer Co. has met in the larger cities this season will doubtless be repeated here where the company will begin a three nights' engagement, beginning Monday, November 4. The initial production will be the picturesque, romantic and tremendously successful four act comedy-drama of life in Old Virginia, "The Southern Rose," which every lover of the beautiful in theatricals should witness. Mr. Fulmer has the exclusive right to produce this piece on the road and it is now for the first time to be seen at popular prices—15, 25 and 35 cents. The mounting, scenic effects and costumes are beautiful. The company is composed of carefully selected and thoroughly competent metropolitan players and uncommonly good productions of high-class plays are promised during this engagement. New and genuinely agreeable specialties will be introduced between the acts, making virtually a continuous performance, a kind of entertainment that is immensely popular in the big cities.

By all means see "The Southern Rose" at the opera house next Monday night.

The repertoire includes "The Vendetta," "In the Heart of Tennessee," "The Bondsman" and "Pygmalion and Galatea."

MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

Louis F. Neil, of this County, Found Murdered at His Home.

WAS A WIDOWER AND LIVED ALONE.

Recently Sold His Farm and Robbery Suspected as Being the Motive for the Crime. Missing Itinerant Clock Mender Suspected.

Louis F. Neil, aged about forty years, a widower and by occupation a farmer, was found murdered at his home near the National Road in the northern end of this county on last Friday afternoon by his neighbors, who, missing him, had instituted search.

Neil was married three times, his last wife having died about three years ago. He had no children and lived alone on his farm. He was a man of considerable means and recently sold a piece of land for which he is supposed to have received a cash payment of several hundred dollars.

For some days prior to the discovery of the murder by his neighbors Neil was seen in company with an itinerant clock repairer. This man suddenly disappeared and from that time his whereabouts have been unknown. Neil was missed by his neighbors for a number of days and finally becoming suspicious a search for him was instituted. Friday afternaon they went to his house which was entered by them. After thoroughly investigating the premises and not finding the missing man a closet in one of the rooms was opened and the dead body of the man was found within. His head had been crushed by a blunt instrument, probably a hatchet, which was fouud near the door of the closet.

The scene of the crime is situated in the extreme northern end of this county on the old National road near the Pennsylvania State line and on the western slope of Keyser's Ridge. Neil's postoffice was Strawn, Pa.

As soon as the discovery of the crime was made a jury of inquest was summoned by Acting Coroner Peter Nathan, of Grantsville. After the remains of the murdered man had been viewed by the jury that body returned a verdict that the deceased had come to his death at the hand of some party or parties to them unknown.

The State's officers at Oakland have been placed in possession of what little facts are known concerning the tragedy and every effort is being made by them to discover the guilty party or parties connected with the crime. The murder is most mysterious and there is slight prospect of the discovery of the perpetrators of the outrage.

Died.

JUNKINS.—On Saturday last at her home near Deer Park, after an illness of several weeks, Mrs. William Junkins, aged about fifty years, the interment being made in the Oakland cemetery.

MENHORN.—George Leonard, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Menhorn, died at the home of his parents in Oakland on Tuesday morning, aged 9 years, 10 months and 5 days. The child was taken with diphtheria but a few days prior to his death. He suffered intensely and seemed to realize that his death was near. He was of a kind and lovable disposition, a great singer for one so young, and enjoyed attending church and Sunday school. The funeral took place on Tuesday evening, conducted by Rev. Uhler at the home. The interment was made in the Oakland cemetery.

Fell From His Engine and Fatally Injured.

A fireman on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad named Isaac Sebold, fell or jumped from his engine on Sunday afternoon as it was descending the seventeen-mile grade at a point near Swanton and received injuries which resulted in his death Monday evening. Sebold, according to the statement made by his engineer, was sitting in his seat in the cab when a cold water pipe in the firebox burst with a loud report. Simultaneously steam and hot water filled the cab and it is thought that Sebold, becoming frightened, jumped through the window. The engine was going at a rate of speed exceeding twenty miles an hour. In falling Sebold's head struck a rock fracturing his skull at the base. He was brought to Oakland and at the McComas hospital every effort was made to save his life but his injuries were of such a nature that the physicians were unable to do anything. His friends, living in Philadelphia, were communicated with and on Monday evening a brother of the young man arrived here. Shortly after his arrival the injured man died without having regained consciousness. His remains were prepared for burial by Undertaker Bolden and shipped to Charlestown, W. Va., for burial.

When you have no appetite, do not relish your food and feel dull after eating you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at all drug stores.

Opening of the High School.

The high school, in connection with the Oakland public school, opened on Monday morning with an enrollment of twenty-four scholars, that number having passed the required examination on the Saturday previous. The scholars are: Blanche Flowers, Josephine Robinson, Clara Davis, Annie Bell, Susie Litman, Nellie White, Carrie Veach, Effie Mealy, Maud Shartzer, Vernie Schrock, Prema Shartzer, Rebecca Thayer, Gertrude Shirer, Philip Peddicord, Ralph Thayer, Frank Byrd, Estelle Rasche, Mary Hart, Dennis Rasche, John D. Hayden, William Grant, Ernest Ashby, Milton Lantz.

Obituary.

Gustavus A. Broadwater was born September 24, 1845, in Garrett county, Md., and departed this life October 19, 1901, aged 56 years and 16 days.

On last Friday morning one week he professed faith in Christ and expressed his desire to unite with the Methodist Episcopal church, the church to which his father now belongs and the one from which his mother took her transit to Glory several years in his advance. He was received, then he requested the Communion, which was administered to him in company with his father and brother Gilead, his wife and daughter, his sister, Mrs. Augustine, and a friend, Miss Maust. He spoke fully and freely with respect to his future hope. He also spoke at another time that he was not concerned about the things of this world, but was looking forward to the end. He also said as he neared life's close, as he spoke to his brother: "We have had our troubles here, but I am going to a better place than this."

All was well seemingly as his friends went down into the Valley of the Shadow with him. He was conscious at 11 a. m. and though unable to articulate sentences he signaled he was resigned to his fate.

Brother Broadwater quit this life of suffering while the clock struck one. He gave up his house of clay, passed into the beyond from us.

E. C. BEDFORD.

It Happend in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take abottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." The remedy owes its great popularity and extensive sale in a large measure to the personal recommendations of people who have been cured by its use. It is for sale by All dealers.

Released From Jail.

Simon Smith, of Preston county, West Va., who was arrested last week at Bloomington by Sheriff Oester and brought to Oakland, where he was placed in jail on the charge of perjury, has been released upon bond for his appearance at the March term of court. Smith, who is about twenty-five years of age, is charged with having procured a license to marry a Miss DeWitt, of near Terra Alta. George Teats, also of Preston county, and a friend of Smith, made the necessary affidavit in order to procure the license, but he claims he did it at the solicitation of Smith. Mrs. DeWitt, who at the time resided at or near Terra Alta, had the warrant issued for the arrest of the groom. Since that time, however, she has moved to Hutton. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Geo. I. Uhler, of the Lutheran church, Oakland.

Came Near Dying

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely I went to sleep and did not awake for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of this remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say, 'God bless you and the splendid medicine you make.' This remedy is for sale by all dealers.

Oakland Club.

A special meeting of the Oakland Club will be held in the club rooms Tuesday night, November 5th. Full election returns will be received, luncheon served and auction of the periodicals held. Let all members be present.

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. Mary E. Shafer, Mrs. Geo. L. Rhodes, Mrs. Lydda J. Paugh, Mrs. Minnie Forbes, Miss Emma Johnson, Miss Emma Riley, Miss Lizzie Emmerson, James Calhoun, L. H. Friend, Israil Spiker, T. O. Miller, John W. Smith.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

Communicated.

To the Editor of The Republican.

The hope of those dear old custodians and guardians of State's rights and American freedom, which six years ago was so ruthlessly torn from the deadly grasp they had retained on them for twenty years, has not been dead but sleeping, and during the long and disturbed sleep their dreams were rambling. Hence the effort to brand indellible stigma upon the illiterate voters and their future posterity by the propagation of the infamous disfranchisement act. But the Republican party of Maryland can afford to abide the time. In that act the first course of their political funeral pile was laid, and on the 5th of November the pile will be finished, and immediately after that the fiery indignation and wrath of an awakened people to a true sense and knowledge of the loss they have sustained by the severing of the sacred right to participate in the affairs of government will ignite the pile, and thus will the advocates and their principals perish, unregreted and unlamented by an outraged people.

The courtesy of one of the high officials of the School Board shown to a member of our community upon his request for some favor, or rather for justice, as reported, reminds me of an Irishman whose dog barked till very late on a very cold night, keeping him awake to his great discomfort. Finally an idea struck Jamie—he would freeze the dog, and suiting the act to the idea, he jumped out of bed and all unrobed ran out at the door. After a long time Biddy, his better half, became alarmed, fearing some accident had happened to him, and got out of bed and went to the door and there stood Jamie, his teeth chattering and almost frozen to death, but holding on to the dog's caudal appendage with a viselike grip, and in a voice filled with amazement she cried: "Jamie, phat on eirth be ye doin'?" but all she heard was a loud whisper through his chattering teeth: "Hush, hush, Biddy, O'im thryin' to fraze the beast."

Ere this last warning reaches you the majority of you will have heard many truths spoken by those best acquainted with the whole political situation in Maryland and, of course, have arrived at some definite conclusion.

It is the common report up here that the Democratic candidate for State Senator has announced himself a candidate for the Sixth district, which, it is natural to suppose, means the Sixth Congressional district. Our Republican candidate is to be elected to represent Garrett county, presuming that the other four counties will be able to find capable men amongst their own citizens and that Hon. Geo. A. Pearre can take care of the Sixth district. We, of course, do not understand the deeper things in 20th century Democracy. This may be a new feature in it, a representative-at-large. And now, gentlemen, seeing that somebody is mixed I once more charge you to be careful. Go to the polls, don't get excited, get your ticket, look how it is folded, inspect both sides and see that there is no mark of any kind on it. Don't tear or soil it with your fingers. Look only for the word "Republican," follow the line to the square on the right, make a small X in it—don't touch the line around the square—fold your ticket as it was, give it to the judge and see that he detathes the coupon without tearing away any of the ticket and that he places your ticket in the ballot box.

With implicit confidence in our success on next Tuesday, I am

Yours respectfully,
S. E. FLOWERS, SR.

Mt. Lake Park, Oct. 28.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Fred. T. Martin shipped about 800 bushels of potatoes, last week, to Fairmont. This sale distributed $560 among our farmers.

J. L. Little and wife of Suffolk, Va., were the guests of Capt. Hayden and wife the latter part of last week. They were delighted with the Park, and expect to visit it again next summer.

F. T. Martin and family returned to Fairmont last Monday.

There are a few families from distances still in our midst.

Wesley Feather and family of Cranesville, W. Va., have moved into the John Waugh Cottage. They expect to make their home in the Park.

"Wolton Cottage," the summer home of W. H. H. Sheets, is being plastered.

Mrs. Williams, of Buckhannon, W. Va., has a number of music scholars at this place. She will remain here this winter.

The October number of the Mountain Chautauqua is at press, and will be mailed in a few days.

Miss Carrie Rudisill and Mrs. Bessie Flowers are the delegates to represent the Mt. Lake Park M. E. church in the Sunday School Convention, at Loch Lynn, Saturday and Sunday.

Manager Rudisill has made a very delightful change in the vicinity of the Close crossing, making this locality one of the most charming spots in the Park.

Carpenters, painters and plasterers have availed themselves of the delightful weather of the past days and "made things lively" in this neighborhood. There are no idle men hereabout.

Mrs. L. C. Binkley, of Chicago, Ill., has moved into her home, on F street. She will spend the winter here.

A "mock election" will be held in room No. 1, Assembly Hall, Mt. Lake Park, Thursday evening at 7:30, and at Loch Lynn on Friday evening, at the same hour, for the instruction of voters in casting the new ballot.

Preaching in the M. E. Church Sunday evening at 7:30, by the pastor.

Mrs. Stele, who with her family has occupied the Young cottage on F street during the summer, left Wednesday for her winter home.

Miss Ott of Wheeling, W. Va., who has been the guest of Mrs. Hayden, left the Park this morning. She was so delighted with the place that she would have remained longer had not her ticket been limited.

Unique Trespass Notice.

A Preston county farmer has the following expressive, if not elegant notice posted at several points on his farm: "Every gosh-darned chump who comes along here with a gun and yaller dog will be expected to knock down eight pannels of fence and shoot six of my tame turkeys while his goldarned purp sucks the blood out of four of my best sheep, ewes with sucking lambs preferred. Then the bow-legged city sun-of-a-gun must tramp right throuh my wheat field and circle around in order to tramp down all the blades that his brethern who have gone before have overlooked. In the afternoon for a divarsion he can fill one of my heifers full of B. B. shot so that she will drop her milk without bothering my daughter to squz it out. Long bout dusk the blooming galoot will be expected to show up near the barn and fill the old woman's legessess full of shot as she scampers er long after a pail of water with which to make him a cup of coffee, and than darn his pictures he can slam a load of shot into the ole gander and knock out a few feathers to be stuffed into the piller so that his weary head can repose in peace while Merander and me pick shot out of the ole woman. Please foller instrucuns and avoid trouble."

Come and see the largest and best assortment of gloves and mittens ever carried in stock in Swanton. Also a full line of underwear, as well as shoes for everybody. Bring along your cash and produce and get credit for the balance. Wm. W. Sweet, Agt.

For Sale

Six good milch cows, at a bargain for cash. Offer open until Nov. 1. Want to reduce number. Apply to 22 2t. H. WEBER & SONS.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the land of the undersigned lying in District No. 2 of Garrett county either for the purpose of fishing, hunting or passing through the same with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. C. W. FRIEND.

Stops the Cough and Works off the Cold.

Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets cure a cold in one day. No Cure, no Pay. Price 5 cents.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

183⅓ acres coal land on Youghiogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale.

House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187⅓ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 26½ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 200 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ miles southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoroughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north o Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swauger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to

JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT	DEMOCRATIC
ERASTUS C. W. ÆYLAR	DEMOCRATIC

FOR SHERIFF:

EDMUND JAMISON	DEMOCRATIC
WILLIAM A. MAFFETT	REPUBLICAN

FOR COUNTY TREASURER:

EDWARD H. BARTLETT	DEMOCRATIC
JAMES W. WHITE	REPUBLICAN

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONERS:

FLOYD CROWE	DEMOCRATIC
TAYLOR FRIEND	REPUBLICAN
JACOB STUMP	REPUBLICAN
CHARLES WHITMORE	DEMOCRATIC

FOR REGISTER OF WILLS:

THOMAS E. FLANIGAN	DEMOCRATIC
EDWIN E. FRIEND	REPUBLICAN

FOR COUNTY SURVEYOR:

FRANKLIN P. GREEN	REPUBLICAN
EDWIN L. MITCHELL	DEMOCRATIC

in the House of Delegates, to be made on the following basis, to wit: Each of the several counties of the State, having a population of eighteen thousand souls or less, shall be entitled to two delegates; and every county having a population of over eighteen thousand and less than twenty-eight thousand souls, shall be entitled to three delegates; and every county having a population of twenty-eight thousand and less than forty thousand souls, shall be entitled to four delegates; and every county having a population of forty thousand and less than fifty-five thousand souls, shall be entitled to five delegates; and every county having a population of fifty-five thousand souls and upwards, shall be entitled to six delegates and no more; and each of the four legislative districts of the City of Baltimore shall be entitled to the number of delegates to which the largest county shall or may be entitled under the aforegoing apportionment, and the General Assembly shall have the power to provide by law, from time to time, for altering and changing the boundaries of the existing legislative districts of the City of Baltimore, so as to make them as near as may be of equal population; but said district shall always consist of contiguous territory.

For Constitutional Amendment.
Against Constitutional Amendment.

Constitution Amendment.

Chapter 469, of Acts of 1900.

AN ACT to amend section two, of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State.

2. The City of Baltimore shall be divided into four legislative districts as near as may be of equal population and of contiguous territory, and each of said legislative districts of Baltimore City, as they may from time to time be laid out, in accordance with the provisions hereof, and each county in the State, shall be entitled to one Senator, who shall be elected by the qualified voters of the said legislative districts of Baltimore City, and of the counties of the State, respectively, and shall serve for four years from the date of his election, subject to the classification of Senators hereafter provided for.

For Constitutional Amendment.
Against Constitutional Amendment.

Published by order of the Board of Supervisors of Elections.

C. E. ELLITHORP, President.
FRANK WELCH,
A. G. STURGISS,
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County, Maryland.

EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Road.

Election District No. 10—Deer Park.—In the building owned by Dr. J. W. Leasure in the town of Deer Park.

Election District No. 11—The Elbow.—At the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District No. 12—Bittinger.—In the store of H. A. Groves in the village of Bittinger.

Election District No. 13—Kitzmillersville.—In the Paul Shutte building in the town of Kitzmillersville.

Election District No. 14—Oakland.—In the office of the Board of Supervisors of Elections in the Brown House building in the town of Oakland.

By order of the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland.

C. E. ELLITHORP, Pres.
FRANK WELCH.
A. G. STURGISS.
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

The polls of said election will be opened in each of the several Election Districts of said Garrett county, at the usual places of holding the polls, at 8 o'clock a. m. and will be closed at 4 o'clock p. m. and the votes that may be polled shall be counted according to law.

For the information of all persons concerned I have caused the following Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed March 28, 1902, to be published.

CHAPTER 163.

AN ACT prohibiting the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors in the several counties of the State on the day of election.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That it shall not be lawful for the keeper of any hotel, tavern, place where liquors are sold, or for any person, directly or indirectly, to sell, barter, give or dispose of any spirituous or fermented liquors, or mixture thereof, or drinks of any kind, on the day of the election in the State to be held in the several counties of the State.

SEC. 2. And be it enacted, That any person violating the provisions of this Act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction in the Circuit Court of the State, be fined a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars for each and every offense, or be imprisoned in the jail of the county where the offense is committed, for a period not exceeding six months, or both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the Court.

And the places of election in the several Election Districts of said Garrett county will be as follows:

Election District No. 1—Swanton.—In the town of Swanton.

Election District No. 2—Friendsville.—In Ed. Schlosnagle's Saddlery Shop in the town of Friendsville.

Election District No. 3—Grantsville.—In O'Hanlon's Hall in the town of Grantsville.

Election District No. 4—Accident.—In the house of Thomas Garvey's house in the town of Accident.

Election District No. 5—Accident.—In the house of Mrs. Susan Engelhart in the town of Accident.

Election District No. 6—Sang Run.—In the Election House, corner of Third and Alder streets in the town of Sang Run.

Election District No. 7—Oakland.—In the Corrigan House, corner of Third and Alder streets in the town of Oakland.

Election District No. 8—Ryan's Glade.—At the old Hoye place on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District No. 9—Johnson's.—At the shop of Samuel Johnson on the National Road.

Election District No. 10—Deer Park.—In the building owned by Dr. J. W. Leasure in the town of Deer Park.

Election District No. 11—The Elbow.—At the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District No. 12—Bittinger.—In the store of H. A. Groves in the village of Bittinger.

Election District No. 13—Kitzmillersville.—In the Paul Shutte building in the town of Kitzmillersville.

Election District No. 14—Oakland.—In the office of the Board of Supervisors of Elections in the Brown House building in the town of Oakland.

By order of the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland.

C. E. ELLITHORP, Pres.
FRANK WELCH.
A. G. STURGISS.
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Treasury Department.

OFFICE OF
THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., August 20, 1901.

Whereas, It has been made to appear to the undersigned, by the certificate of its Cashier, duly verified, that The First National Bank of Oakland, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, has been duly organized under the Statutes of the United States, required by law to obtain the same, and has complied with all the provisions of said Statutes which are shall be authorized to commence the business of Banking;

Now therefore, I, Charles G. Dawes, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that "The First National Bank of Oakland, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland," is authorized to transact the business of Banking as provided in Section Fifty-one Hundred and Sixty-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

In testimony whereof witness my hand and seal this twentieth day of August, 1901.

Signed, CHARLES G. DAWES,
Comptroller of the Currency.

No. 5943.

Butter, eggs etc., can be found at all times at the Enterprise Meat Market.

SUPERVISORS' Notice of Election.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., OCT. 22ND, 1901.

Notice is hereby given to the Judges and Clerks of Election and to the qualified voters of Garrett county, Md., that in accordance with the provisions of Article XXXIII of Chapter 332 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January Session, 1896, and amended by the Acts of 1900 and 1901, an election will be held in the several districts of said Garrett county, at the places of voting mentioned and designated hereinafter set forth, on

TUESDAY,

The 5th Day of November, 1901,

for the purpose of balloting for—

One person to be Comptroller of the Treasury of the State of Maryland.

One person to be Clerk of the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland.

One person to be a member of the Senate of the State of Maryland from Garrett County.

Two persons to be members of the House of Delegates of the State of Maryland from Garrett County.

One person to be Sheriff of Garrett County.

One person to be County Treasurer of Garrett County.

Two persons to be members of the Board of County Commissioners for Garrett County.

One person to be Register of Wills for Garrett County.

One person to be County Surveyor of Garrett County.

Also for or against a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland by amending Section Four of Article three of the Constitution.

Also for or against a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland by amending Section Two of Article three of the Constitution.

CHAPTER 183.

AN ACT to amend Section Four, of Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses concurring), That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Article 5, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, when adopted by the legal and qualified voters of this State, as hereinafter provided for, and when adopted and ratified as hereinafter provided for, shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section nine of said Article.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Clerks of the Circuit Courts shall perform such duties and receive such fees and commissions or salary not exceeding the sum hereinafter mentioned, as may be hereafter be prescribed by law; and if other fee or reward than such as is or may be allowed by law, be shall, on conviction thereof, forfeit his office; and the Judges shall appoint and at their pleasure remove the Clerk of the Court of Appeals, and shall appoint and may remove the Clerk of the Circuit Court of their county; and the Clerk of the Court of Appeals shall receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars, and the Judges shall have power to appoint one deputy at an annual salary not exceeding one thousand dollars, and such other assistants at such annual salaries not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars each, as they may deem necessary, to be paid out of the fees of said office, as has heretofore been practiced.

That the foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, shall be published in this State, subsequent to the passage of this Act, at the next general election for members of the General Assembly, to be held in this State, substantially in the manner provided by Section 3 of Article 14, of the Constitution; and at said election the vote on said proposed amendment shall be taken by the qualified voters of this State, as the voter shall elect, and immediately after the said election the returns thereof shall be made to the Governor of the State, who shall thereupon proceed to ascertain the result of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by Section 2 of Article 14, of the Constitution.

Also for or against a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland by amending Section Fourteen of Article 3 of the Constitution.

CHAPTER 182.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and to submit the same to the qualified voters of the State for their adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses concurring), That section four of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the State, when adopted by the legal and qualified voters of this State, as hereinafter provided for, and when adopted and ratified as hereinafter provided for, shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section four of said Article.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Governor shall appoint all officers whose offices are established by this Constitution, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and no appointment shall be made or office created by the Governor during the session of the General Assembly, except to fill vacancies occasioned by death, refusal to serve or resignation, but he may make appointments during the recess of the Senate, which shall expire at the end of their next session; he shall have power to fill all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate, in offices to which persons may be elected by the General Assembly, or by the joint ballot of both Houses, which appointments may be made for the residue of the term of the last predecessor in office; he shall have power to remove any officer in case of incompetency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office, to be ascertained by the Senate, when in session, upon the impeachment of the House of Delegates, and he shall nominate to the Senate, when in session, all persons appointed to offices established by this Constitution, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and no person nominated for office shall be eligible unless he be recommended as qualified for the office by the Judges of the Court of Appeals, or a majority of them, or by the Judges of the Circuit Court of the county in which he may reside, or a majority of them, or by the Judges of the Court having jurisdiction in the city in which he may reside, or a majority of them, or by the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas of Baltimore City, or a majority of them, as the case may be.

That the foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, shall be published in this State, subsequent to the passage of this Act, at the next general election for members of the General Assembly, to be held in this State, substantially in the manner provided by Section 3 of Article 14, of the Constitution; and at said election the vote on said proposed amendment shall be taken by the qualified voters of this State, as the voter shall elect, and immediately after the said election the returns thereof shall be made to the Governor of the State, who shall thereupon proceed to ascertain the result of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by Section 2 of Article 14, of the Constitution.

Also for or against a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland by amending Section Four of Article three of the Constitution.

CHAPTER 181.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses concurring), That section four of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State, be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the State, and it adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof as hereinafter provided, and when adopted and ratified as hereinafter provided, shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section four of said Article.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Governor shall appoint all officers whose offices are established by this Constitution, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and no appointment shall be made or office created by the Governor during the session of the General Assembly, except to fill vacancies occasioned by death, refusal to serve or resignation, but he may make appointments during the recess of the Senate, which shall expire at the end of their next session; he shall have power to fill all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate, in offices to which persons may be elected by the General Assembly, or by the joint ballot of both Houses, which appointments may be made for the residue of the term of the last predecessor in office; he shall have power to remove any officer in case of incompetency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office, to be ascertained by the Senate, when in session, upon the impeachment of the House of Delegates, and he shall nominate to the Senate, when in session, all persons appointed to offices established by this Constitution, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and no person nominated for office shall be eligible unless he be recommended as qualified for the office by the Judges of the Court of Appeals, or a majority of them, or by the Judges of the Circuit Court of the county in which he may reside, or a majority of them, or by the Judges of the Court having jurisdiction in the city in which he may reside, or a majority of them, or by the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas of Baltimore City, or a majority of them, as the case may be.

That the foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, shall be published in this State, subsequent to the passage of this Act, at the next general election for members of the General Assembly, to be held in this State, substantially in the manner provided by Section 3 of Article 14, of the Constitution; and at said election the vote on said proposed amendment shall be taken by the qualified voters of this State, as the voter shall elect, and immediately after the said election the returns thereof shall be made to the Governor of the State, who shall thereupon proceed to ascertain the result of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by Section 2 of Article 14, of the Constitution.

Also for or against a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland by amending Section Four of Article three of the Constitution.

CHAPTER 182.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and to submit the same to the qualified voters of the State for their adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses concurring), That section four of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the State, when adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof

Weird Tales of Specters

Records of Psychical Society Tell of New York Ghosts

The records of the Psychical Research society do not prove that there are ghosts, but they do show that there have been many weird and mysterious happenings which have never been scientifically explained.

The society's records furnish a number of interesting ghost stories from Greater New York. The first specter reported was popularly known as Sheppard's ghost.

Joseph B. Sheppard was a night watchman who patrolled Third avenue between Thirty-fifth and Fortieth streets. In March, 1878, he aroused a sleeping man at Thirty-ninth street and First avenue. Soon afterward a heavy body was heard to fall with a sickening splash into the East river.

Sheppard was missing from that very moment, and investigation led to the belief that he had met with foul play at the hands of the wayfarer whose slumbers he had interrupted. His body was soon recovered and buried from his son's house.

Shortly after the funeral the east side became a-flutter with excitement. On the water's edge near Thirty-ninth street hundreds watched a mysterious floating flame. This supposed spirit fire danced aimlessly about and glided just over that part of the river's surface where Sheppard's body was seen to sink. When pursued, this spectral flame vanished like breath in the wind.

Later a strange figure was seen to haunt the Thirty-ninth street wharf. Many identified it as the ghost of Sheppard. The phantom, it was said, would gesticulate toward those with whom that ill fated man had happened to be acquainted in life, but ignored the many who had been unknown to him. It always appeared to be arrayed in the clothing and slouch hat worn by him on his nightly rounds.

These visitations are said to have continued throughout the spring of 1878, and so vivid was the resemblance of the weird shade to Sheppard that many who viewed it grew to believe that it was really the old watchman still alive, masquerading in the darkness, and that his family had been mistaken in its identification of his corpse.

"The haunted house of Graniteville" was the next psychic phenomenon to set New York agog. This edifice stands on the left side of the road leading from Graniteville Corners, Staten Island, just above the grounds of Isaac Van Name. It is an ancient three story mansion, standing alone.

In 1879 it was occupied by David Decker and family. The Misses Decker, daughters of the household, occupied the second story rear room, just over the kitchen. The Deckers had been in the house but a short time when the women of the family commenced to complain of "queer noises and strange movements," beginning always about midnight and continuing until about 2 a. m.

THE PHANTOM OF THE WHARF.

The Misses Decker said that the bed in their room was lifted from the floor, bearing them with it, and that their furniture rattled furiously about the room. David Decker was a practical and conservative man. Superstition was unknown to him.

To satisfy the girls that they were merely suffering from a bad case of "nerves," the father invited Captain George Wood and five other neighbors to spend the night with him in the haunted chamber.

The next morning this committee of hitherto skeptical researchers calmly reported that they had witnessed enough to substantiate the theories of the frightened girls.

While the seven men were seated upon the iron bedstead of the chamber it repeatedly raised about five inches from the floor and at intervals continued suspended in the air. The Decker family immediately left the house, which remained vacant some years.

Last Fight of Outlaw Salaveras

The legislature of Arizona has just provided for a body of rangers to patrol the extreme southern part of the territory to run down desperate characters. Burt Mossman, a well known ranch superintendent, has been made captain of the rangers.

Burt is the man who years ago ran down the Mexican bandit Salaveras, who shot the superintendent of the Calico Silver mine when he was on his way with the coin to pay off the men. Burt happened to be up in another part of the territory at that time and was in Daggett when the story of the murder came into camp. Salaveras was a Mexican miner and had been working in the Calico. At just about the time when the superintendent was about half way to the camp Salaveras started to meet him. After shooting the superintendent the Mexican took his horse and money and started off across the desert to Utah. The horse gave out near the big dead lake of Paradise valley, and Salaveras had nothing to do but run to the coyote holes. He knew that by this time the men whose pay he had captured would be on his trail to avenge the superintendent's death.

FILLED WITH BULLETS.

Down into the mud the Mexican plunged, taking care to put the money bag beneath him as he burrowed his way into a coyote hole. On the side from which his pursuers must approach there was a large bunch of Spanish bayonet grass, which completely hid the Mexican's head—all that remained of him above the surface. It was hours before the pursuing party reached the coyote holes. With Mossman were a couple of Indian guides and their dogs, whose services the ranchman had secured to track down the culprit. One of these brutes was soon sniffing around the bayonet bush, and Salaveras, seeing the game was up, got out of the hole and faced the posse with his sixshooter. Inside of two minutes he was filled with bullet holes, the money was dug out, and he was left for the crows to feed on.

Strange Story From Mexico

A most remarkable and curious tale has recently come from Mexico. It is almost unbelievable, yet is vouched for by such credible witnesses as to deserve the careful consideration of those persons who do not believe in ghosts. The story comes from the state of Pueblo. A missionary priest named Padre Pimentel, who is staying there, stated in a sermon he preached that he was visited by a youth named Daniel Diaz, who begged him to go to his house and confess his sister, who had been dead five years "and who had appeared to him beseeching him to call on the missionaries to assist her out of purgatory."

The padre says that, despite the fears which were aroused by this strange request, he determined to go and took for his companions Mariano Mellado and two sacristans. On reaching the house, which was a gloomy place, he was conducted to a cheerless room, where he seated himself and immediately became aware of a floating vaporous figure, while at the same time he heard "creaking of bones." The wretched young woman made her confession and, on being absolved, disappeared suddenly.

The padre states that the awful experience brought on a severe illness, but that since his recovery he has determined to make the fact known that others may not be exposed to the same long durance in purgatory for want of absolution.

The news of this occurrence has spread like wildfire, and the missionaries have been the recipients of handsome contributions since it took place.

A Real One.

"Whew!" exclaimed the first pigeon. "Wasn't that sparrow mad when I swiped that grain of corn from him?"

"I should say so," replied the other. "Talk about your 'small, hot birds!'"—Philadelphia Press.

THE MIND OF A MOB

By RENE DOUMIC,
Professor at Stanislas College, Paris

THE intellectual level of a crowd is always lower than the average levels of the component individuals. No crowd can ever rise to a high intellectual level, but it may sink to the lowest depths of brutality.

What is true of crowds is also true of gatherings and meetings which are not, properly speaking, crowds. Almost in every case AN ASSEMBLY IS LESS INTELLIGENT THAN ITS MEMBERS, council of war less than the generals, a jury less than the jurors. So soon as the individuals form a gathering or meeting their aggregate intellectual level becomes lower.

Crowds are subject to collective hallucinations and to all those mental disturbances known to alienists—partial insanity, manias, incapacity for concentration, etc. They are dominated by senseless pride, a sort of hypertrophy of the collective as well as of the individual ego.

THE SLIGHTEST SUSPICION OF DANGER, A RUMOR WITHOUT FOUNDATION, AN INSIGNIFICANT NOISE, MAY TRANSFORM A PEACEFUL CROWD INTO A HERD OF PANIC STRICKEN BRUTES. THROUGH FEAR CROWDS BECOME TERRORISTIC AND POSSESSED OF A PERFECT FUROR AND A MANIA FOR DESTRUCTION.

It is that dangerous disposition of crowds which has induced sociologists to make a study of them. Each one of the individuals of which a crowd is composed leans more toward malignity than toward indulgence. Feelings of hatred are more easily kindled than those of love. If it may truthfully be said that even in the most refined and civilized individual there SLUMBERS A REMINISCENCE OF PRIMITIVE FEROCITY, it is also true that a crowd forms the most favorable condition for the reawakening of those slumbering brutal instincts. In such cases man somehow returns to his original barbarous condition with all the ferocious instincts of his remote ancestors. It is a pronounced case of atavism, engendered by the sympathetic force of collectivity.

NO EUROPEAN COMBINATION AGAINST US POSSIBLE

By FREDERICK W. HOLLS, United States Member of the International Court of Arbitration at The Hague

THE talk about a combination of the European powers against the United States is fanciful and impracticable. They have greater causes for quarrels among themselves than any of them has against the United States. All talk to the contrary in parliaments and in the press is, in my opinion, merely a cover for an increase in tariffs by the particular powers. Of this we certainly complain. It vindicates our own policy of protection. Moreover, it is a question whether it is not even desirable for us, for it will compel us to adopt a policy of reciprocity which ought to be a permanent benefit to the country.

I feel confident of one thing, whatever may be the attitude of particular governments or classes:

THE MASS OF THE COMMON PEOPLE IN EUROPE, NOT ONLY IN ENGLAND, BUT ON THE CONTINENT, REGARD US AS EVER THEIR BEST FRIENDS.

They view the increased prestige and power of the United States in the world of politics with hope and delight. They recognize our new position as a great guarantee of peace and progress.

Genius? We Haven't Time For That

By J. G. SCHURMAN,
President of Cornell University

IN a republic like ours, governed by public opinion, a high average of popular intelligence is the first desideratum. The success of republican institutions depends upon the education of the people, and the people have been educated.

But while we glory, and have reason to glory, in the general diffusion of knowledge among our people, THERE IS ONE FLAW, and a most serious flaw, in our intellectual achievements, which thus far nothing has been able to overcome.

All our higher institutions of learning must bear the reproach, which perhaps will be more properly described as a fundamental defect in the American spirit or in American civilization.

APART FROM THE DOMAIN OF POLITICS AND INVENTION, AMERICA HAS NOT PRODUCED A SINGLE MAN OR WOMAN WHOSE NAME WILL SHINE IN THE INTELLECTUAL FIRMAMENT WITH RAPHAEL, SHAKESPEARE, COPERNICUS, NEWTON, LAPLACE, GOETHE AND DARWIN.

To what is this want of creative power due? Undoubtedly to a variety of causes. All nations have their periods of intellectual stagnation, and outbursts of creative genius are rare.

Then, the American people have been reclaiming a continent and making it habitable, and their pursuits have as a consequence been predominantly material and utilitarian. The rush and stress of life have left little time for leisure and meditation, and without leisure and meditation genius will not soar into the empyrean.

The ideal man of America, we might as well confess it, is not the patient, laborious scholar and profound thinker, but the quick, vigorous, versatile and commanding man of affairs. The social atmosphere is not favorable to the production of poets, artists, scientists and philosophers. It is a land of engineers, inventors, financiers and manufacturers.

HERE IN AMERICA THE ENVIRONMENT TENDS EVER TO DRAW US AWAY FROM THE HIGHEST AIMS.

The question of potatoes for seed will be a serious one next spring.

The highest priced rose on the market this winter will be the Early Rose—potato.

If you put out that celery bed as suggested last spring, you can now tone up your nerves at small cost.

The average cost of the hogs bought by packers in the stock markets these days is not far from $18 each.

Ducks may be raised without a pool or creek for them to swim in, but we would not want to try the job.

The grade of piety in a country community may be pretty accurately sized up by the style of the horsesheds at the country church.

None of our forage plants comes up with a fall growth quite equal to the sweet clover, but some way stock does not take kindly to it.

Lard is quoted at wholesale at 12½ cents per pound, a fact which is likely to weaken the argument against oleo and cottonseed oil substitutes for it.

The Lord made four things which man cannot improve upon—a Polled Angus steer, a blue grass pasture, a strawberry and a Jersey cow.

One dollar and a quarter per bushel is just four times too big a price to pay for potatoes when one has reference to them as a nutritive ration.

A good August rain in New Mexico advanced the price of cattle from $12, $17 and $20 for one, two and three year old animals to $15, $20 and $23.

It seems like carrying coals to Newcastle to import potatoes from Europe to this country, yet this will be done on an extensive scale before another potato crop is raised.

It looks as though the limits of profitable sheep production in this country had been about reached unless our folks will eat more mutton and less beef and pork.

Instead of serving potatoes with a meat order the dining cars and many of the restaurants are now serving them as side dishes and charging an extra 10 cents for them.

Possibly 20 cent corn and hog cholera have something to do with each other. Ordinarily if hogs do die when corn is 50 cents it is no great loss, provided they die young enough.

Many a man who has not enough faith to accept the simplest of religious truths will devour with a keen relish any of the fancy brands of sausage meat turned out by the packing houses.

A September frost which spared the dahlias, nasturtiums and cannas was still severe enough to kill every leaf on the coleus, showing it to be one of the most tender of our summer growing plants.

One of the most extensive feeders of beef cattle told us recently that he always made the most money in feeding either when corn was 20 cents or 50 cents, his best returns being from the 50 cent corn.

If the Grout bill for the suppression of oleomargarine stood as good a show in the next congress as a bill for the suppression of anarchy, the dairy cows of the country would forthwith hold a jubilee meeting.

When the conditions are all favorable, the milk of a fresh cow may be considered usable at the fifth milking. When men seek to work any of the other four milkings on to the creamery, they do a dirty trick.

A pretty good rule as to milk and cream furnished the creamery is this: If for any reason it is so off in quality that you would not use it yourself, don't send it, just applying the "do as you would be done by" test.

The tea roses did not like the extreme dry heat of midsummer, even though they never lacked for water, but they did respond to the moderated and moister heat of September with an abundance of beautiful bloom.

The calf intended for a beef animal should be kept continuously fat from the time of his birth until he is ready for the slaughter house. The heifer calf intended for a milk cow should be kept just thrifty, but never fat.

The August exports of wheat from this country were 26,694,832 bushels, or more than double those of August a year ago. America is the Egypt to which all the heathen and Philistines of other countries are looking for bread.

One cow with a diseased hoof, which affected the quality of her milk, was responsible for a loss of 3 cents a pound on the entire make of a Wisconsin cheese factory for over thirty days, or until the source of the trouble was located.

Everything points to still higher prices for beef. The more money the American citizen makes the more and better beef he wants. We do not believe anything but a run of hard times will ever bring up beef production to equal the demand.

Through the west there has been four times as much corn cut up, bound and shocked as ever before. This forage will release an immense amount of hay and thus become indirectly a substantial source of revenue to thousands of farmers.

A good many of the Illinois men who sold out at $100 per acre, expecting to buy just as good farms in Iowa and southern Minnesota at $50 an acre, were not quite quick enough and found out that the last named farms have jumped in price to $70 and $80 per acre.

The peach growing belt in the west was moved easily a hundred miles north the past season in all the western states and large crops raised where it had been thought impossible to grow this fruit. Perhaps the peach belt will follow the corn belt in its extension north.

A feature of the dairy interest in Norway consists in placing a dish of porridge on the threshold of the cow barn on Christmas morning. While this smacks of superstition, it is still better than swiping old bossy with the fork handle on days which are not rated as holidays.

One reason why the south does not attempt to raise its own corn is the great difficulty in keeping the corn when raised. The moist, warm fall and winter weather prevents the perfect ripening of the corn, while even northern grown ear corn placed in crib in Louisiana will mold and spoil.

We know of several men who will harvest thirty-five or forty bushels of good corn to the acre who should, if they don't, feel real miching over the way they howled over the loss of their corn crop last July. It always pays to trust Providence just a little bit when a fellow has done his level best.

The harvest is past and the summer ended, and every weed which grew in the highway around the farm went to seed. So general has this thing been that we are ready to favor a change in the law which will compel a man to fence his crops and leave the highways as a commons pasture for the stock.

We rode over a section of country lately where the cocklebur held undisputed possession of nearly all the tillable land on the farms. It was the very worst weed show that we ever saw. The landowners in that section have a serious problem to contend with, and it will require united effort to subdue the pest.

One of the very prettiest of lawn trees is the common haw, or thorn bush. It may be pruned as closely as a red cedar into almost any shape and in no manner injure the grass which grows beneath it. These trees may sometimes be found in an old pasture where they have been browsed by the stock into an ideal shape for a lawn tree.

Whatever method you may adopt in the handling of the shocked corn, do not leave it out in the field until the snow is piled up two feet in depth around the shock, for if you do you will wish that you had never cut up a hill. Nothing wears on a man's piety more than to have to handle shocked corn when the butts are frozen into the mud and snow.

We once watched a man cultivating a little patch of corn upon the side of a West Virginia mountain. The slope was so steep that he had to do all the work by hand with a hoe. This was raising a corn crop under difficulties, for, aside from the hard labor, the coons, crows and gophers were each waiting for a chance at the crop as soon as it was big enough for them to eat.

We note with pleasure the work that is being done by many of the great railway corporations in the matter of improving the looks of their rights of way and their depot grounds. In fact, the roads are setting the farmers a splendid example in the matter of keeping down the weeds, while the small parks at the depots are becoming object lessons in landscape gardening and decorative effect for all.

We note that the old trouble in the matter of tying the shocked corn is just as common as ever this fall. The shocks are tied too low down, leaving the head spreading and fuzzy to catch the rain and spoil the corn and fodder also. The well put up shock should be a cone when settled. Nearly half of the fodder was spoiled last year as a result of this careless and improper method of tying the top of the shock.

A reader anxiously inquires whether it is any worse for a farmer to go off on a Sunday excursion than it is for him to say at home and stone his neighbor's chickens. Passing the question of the Sunday excursion, we will simply say that it is a strictly pious duty to stone the chickens if they are scratching up your garden. This chicken business is enough to make the most saintly old deacon fall from grace.

Enthusiastic Meetings.

(Continued from Page One.)

Another Democratic legislature will mean a still further process of crucifying illiterate voters by more stringent partisan and infamous laws controlling registration and elections, whereby the American right of the ballot will be denied to a large class of deserving citizens of our county and state. We cannot think that you, as liberty-loving people of this great Republic, will consent to the political slavery and social discrimination against yourselves, your neighbors, your fathers and your families which will result, if the Democratic party shall be given the power through a majority in the legislature, to still further debase the election machinery and the right of franchise in this state.

My own record and opinion upon these matters of legislation have been freely circulated throughout this county by the Republican committee by the two speeches delivered by myself in the Senate, one on March 13th, 1901, and the other on March 14th, 1901, when the disfranchisement bill was under consideration. Your attention is called to one or two quotations from the speeches, which I desire now to reiterate for public consideration: "Degrade the American voter by limiting or interfering with his free right of the exercise of political franchise, brand him a political slave and send him forth among his fellow men with this discredit, disgrace and disability upon him, and the humiliation which he will feel, the bitter anguish which will be reflected by his family and associates, his children and all his relations, will exhibit itself and be most emphatically felt by those who will be responsible for it, not only in the next campaign but for many years to come. Contented and self-respected citizens, prosperous and happy in their surroundings, faithful to all public duty and obedient to all legal obligations, will be changed into men of broken spirit, rebelling against the forms of law and the management of the government of this state, and will seek justification for their demoralized change of civil status in charging it to arbitrary legislation which they believe has violated the dearest rights guaranteed to them as American citizens, under the constitution of the United States and of the state. Humiliation will take the place of personal pride, discontent and agitation will supersede present conditions of peace and happiness. The men intelligent enough to till the soil, to succesfully ply their industries, to develop the wealth of the forest and mine, to defend their country's honor on the field of battle at home and in foreign climes, will justly and righteously rebel against the law which degrades them below the level of the cunning criminal, the anarchist and the Czolgosz's who can read and write, but have neither moral virtue, social status or patriotism. Outlaw and eliminate such men from participation in public affairs and from having a voice in the government of the state and nation by their ballots, and degrade them below the political status of the pardoned convict, make them an object of scorn and criticism among their neighbors, in their community, and you will breed in them and in the generations which will descend from their loins a spirit of rebellion and revolution, which will be full of danger and menace to the public good. This spread of discontent, anarchy and revolution against existing forms of government in other lands should be a warning to us in this free country to steer the course of the ship of state and the policy of our legislation away from the rocks of danger and the shoals of national disaster. The near future will present several problems of serious and far-reaching importance, in the solution of which the public safety will require the utmost patriotism and most earnest support of the state and the Republic by the plain people of this country. They control the ballot box and they will learn how to vote intelligently against all the efforts which partisanship and political machinery may make to disfranchise them. But they will not forget, nor will they forgive the influences and the sources of dictation which sought to deprive them of the right which their ancestors enjoyed for a century in this country. To kindle the forces of discontent and set in motion at this time so grave a cause for revolution and rebellion is not only injudicious, indiscreet, but almost treasonable in the light of social, financial and political conditions that exist in this country."

And again on March 14th, 1901: "They know that they are placed by this proposed law, and by the pretenses made by its champions, before the public with the finger of scorn and infamy and degradation pointed at them, and are held up to public view as degraded beings, who alone are subjects of corruption and bribery at elections. This bill, if enacted into law, will take away the right of franchise from hundreds of our veteran soldiers, many of whom are crippled and burdened with disease because of their arduous service on behalf of the preservation of the Union and the honor of our national flag. Think of it, my fellow-citizens, what an infamous outrage this disfranchisement will perpetrate upon the rights of our nation's heroes. The magnitude, the beauty and the grandeur of our country today is due to the unflinching patriotism of these heroic men. When their country called them into active service, at a time when an awful crisis was pending in this Union, when the dark clouds of secession were hovering over and about us, threatening, as they were, to break down the Union, no man thought to ask them if they could read and write, nor did any man think even for a moment of making inquiry as to their efficiency, manhood and patriotism, because of the lack of education. It was not and should not have been done, for they were able to render and did render their country exemplary service upon the battle-field. They have received the plaudits and commendation of a grateful people, from the close of the great civil war up until today, and even now the American heart throbs with emotion and gratitude towards these old veterans. Thus it has been, and thus it is, and thus it should be as long as the veterans of this Republic breathe the atmosphere of freedom. What an awful wrong, what a glaring injustice and base ingratitude will be shown toward many of these heroes by legislation of this character. It is unfair, unpatriotic and certainly un-American."

And again as follows: "Handicap, manacle and obstruct the illiterate as you may; defraud, deceive and betray them to your utmost, pervert the election machinery to the utmost of the ability of those who manipulate it for the purpose of fraud, bribery and intimidation, still yet, Mr. President, the sovereign voice of the independence, liberty-loving and fair-minded people of Maryland will sweep from power the party which made possible the opportunity to arbitrarily disfranchise and defraud a large body of our citizens against their constitutional rights. The legislature which meets here next January will hasten to undo the wrong, and His Excellency the Governor will sign or veto, according to his construction of what is then the voice of the people. A bill which when signed will be another monument marking the pathway of progress, liberty and equalr ights in this old commonwealth."

The great crisis through which this country has passed during the four and one-half years of Republican administration, has already accomplished the most beneficent good to our people. It has united and nationalized the fraternal and patriotic sentiment of all sections as never has been before.

The war with the kingdom of Spain united in the fraternity of arms the people of the North and South, mingled the old Confederate commanders with the commanders of the Union armies, all in the blue uniforms of the united Republic, mingling their blood upon foreign battle fields for the glory of the Stars and Stripes, for the perpetuation of this great institution of liberty and justice symbolized by our flag. This crisis has demonstrated beyond a shadow of doubt the strong, sturdy and unfaltering devotion of the American people to their beloved country. The continued existence of that spirit of patriotic sentiment and love for the cause of human liberty that has ever elevated, dignified and ennobled mankind throughout the world. It has rekindled the fires of enthusiasm that burst forth into flames from every valley, hamlet, hill top and mountain summit in the days of revolutionary memory—that bore upon its mighty and resistless tide the torch of human liberty to fix forever in the Western hemisphere the American Republic as the grandest achievement in the annals of war, and the greatest blessing to mankind. This war involved the disenthralment of millions of our fellow beings from oppression, the overthrow of a hauty dynasty and the raising of this great Republic to a position of power among the nations of the world. Having gained that power, it must be maintained. The American Nation is powerful enough to maintain itself wherever it plants its flag.

The Republican party believes, as it always has believed, in the doctrine of protection to American industries. It believes the greatest amount of prosperity should be drawn from our own soil, and the genius of our own people. Where on the face of the globe do we find a more industrious or more intelligent men and women? Where do we find a more fruitful or varied soil? Where a more genial climate? Where better opportunities for advancement in all that makes a nation great, grand and free? Under the Republican policy of protection we have made such advances that we have won, commanded and retain the respect and admiration of the civilized nations of the earth, and were commended by the greatest statesmen of France, Germany and England.

The Republican party has maintained our national credit, which was unshaken and unquestioned after the close of the civil war down to the time when the free traders took possession of our government. The Republican party has always advocated the payment of its obligations with the very best money known to the world. Our first step after the war in that splendid march to the imperial place that we now occupy among the nations of the world was to make our paper currency the equivalent of the world's money and equally good wherever our flag floated. And by our steadfast adhesion to the great principle of national currency we have maintained the national honor and kept our money good. Our party has never sought to shirk a responsibility or repudiate a debt. When the April days of 1865 brought peace to this troubled land the Republican party not only sought the rehabilitation of all the States to the Union as States, but the payment of its enormous war debt, and we gradually or continuously reduced that debt until March, 1893, when for the first time in 28 years we commenced a retrograde movement in the national credit and prosperity under the administration of Grover Cleveland.

My fellow citizens, a great change has taken place in the financial, commercial and economic conditions of the country since the inauguration of the Republican President and the enactment of Republican tariff law directs attention again to the benefits which have invariably flowed from the administration of this government by the great party born under the leadership of Abraham Lincoln. Not in many years, if ever before, have the material prospects of the United States been so bright as they are to-day, and for this wise and patriotic legislation framed and passed the Republican party is responsible. This has been a great American administration, begun under the matchless leadership of William McKinley, and he proved himself eminently worthy to be the leader of a great people—pure, noble, heroic, a lofty patriot and a wise statesman, rising and broadening with the great responsibility, a man of the people and conspicuously the people's man; his dignified bearing, his unerring words and his inkindling leadership in the Spanish-American war alone endeared him to the hearts of his countrymen. He was equal to the great trust of statesmanship and patriotism. And then after a life of heroic devotion to public duty and great deeds in the promotion of human liberty and American glory, when the dastardly hand of the assassin struck him down to death, that great and majestic hero yielded up his life to the omnicient decree of Divine Providence, and his great spirit went out into eternity leaving a monument to Christian faith—McKinley's lifework well done—"God's will, not ours, be done," stands as the creed of this christian Nation.

President Roosevelt has announced as his rule of administration a continuance of the national and international policies marked out and adopted by our martyred President. Roosevelt is a distinguished type of progressive American citizenship. He is a man of courage, experience, judgment and patriotism. Therefore, the people can rely upon the safety, the progressiveness and the prosperity of the country under the National administration. The Republican party is the party of progress, and for many years that party has been proposer of all the great ideas and measures and the Democratic party has simply made issues by opposing what the Republican party proposed.

The man who fought the machine politicians as Police Commissioner and Governor of New York, and who as a Rough Rider fought the Spaniards at Santiago, and as a fearless American athlete and as a patriotic American statesman, will fight any hostile nation on the face of the globe who dare insult or assault the honor and dignity of the American flag, may be trusted to direct the national ship of state along the line of the 20th century Americanism. I believe under his leadership that the people of this great Republic will continue to realize the dream so dear to every American heart of beholding fair Columbia as a political missionary, carrying the torch of liberty into the dark corners of the earth and establishing under the Stars and Stripes the public school house upon the soil where actual freemen never trod.

Now, my fellow citizens, it rests with you Republicans, liberty loving and fair minded Democrats as voters of this proud old commonwealth to determine this question for the best interests of yourselves, your families and associates when you come to cast your ballot on next Tuesday.

D. Lindley Sloan followed. He delivered a strong and effective speech; was honored with great attention. Seldom has a speaker received more compliments or pleased his hearers more.

Hon. P. E. Finzel closed the meeting with one of his most stirring speeches, the audience wildly applauding him.

This was the largest meeting of this campaign. We leave Friendsville with the most kindly feelings toward everyone, pleased with our reception and honored by the hospitality and attentions of all the good people of District No. 2.

We will next visit Bittinger and Grantsville, holding meetings and greeting the good, loyal people of that section of Garrett county, closing the canvass at Accident on Saturday.

With this communication we part with the gentle readers of THE REPUBLICAN. Those who have followed us through the county during our three weeks' political tour will pardon much that was dull, dry and uninteresting. We have tried to please, if not instruct; have avoided all personalities — "nothing set down in malice;" "what is writ is writ."

OCCASIONAL.

MUNICIPAL FORESTRY.

Experiment of a Maine Town In Tree Planting For Profit.

An interesting experiment in municipal forestry is being tried in Maine. Just outside of the town of Brunswick there lies a tract of land several square miles in area which, on account of the sandy and infertile nature of the soil, has never been taken up by private owners, but still remains "town common."

This tract, although valueless for agricultural purposes, is capable of bearing excellent pine timber and is thinly wooded in spots, although the fires which have from time to time swept through it have prevented anything but a scrub growth from taking possession of the land.

Under the direction of an expert in forestry the town has recently undertaken to reclaim a part of this tract. A nursery has been established, where white pine seedlings are planted and cared for during the first year or two of their growth. About 20,000 little trees have already been set out in a part of the "plains," which has a firebreak plowed around it, and most of the plantation is thriving famously.

The white pine is a sturdy tree which grows rapidly and is commercially very valuable when grown. With proper care the little forest should add very materially to the resources of the town before many years have passed. The investment may easily be made a permanent one by protecting and encouraging the seedlings which are sure to spring up among the mature trees.

There may not be many towns which have so large and so conveniently situated a "town common" as Brunswick possesses, but those which have any land at all at their disposal may find this latest development of municipal activity worth watching. As indicating the profitable possibilities of a plantation of marketable timber, it should be of interest to farmers and landowners all over the country.

POETRY OF CITIES.

Town Beauty Is Not Recognized by the Writers.

Some of the more adventurous of modern poets have attempted to attach poetry to the details of our civilization, and they have been laughed at, like all true adventurers. The project, when superficially considered, undoubtedly has elements of humor. The color of the pimpernel is exhibited on a larger scale on the Hammersmith omnibus, and yet, despite the more liberal display, it does not evoke equally poetic sentiments.

The symbolic colors of omnibuses, says the London Daily News, are not interpreted with heraldic seriousness; the green Bayswater omnibus does not recall fresh meadows to the city clerk, nor does the vehicle which finds its ultimate destination in Kilburn remind religious persons of the traditional hue of heaven. A chimney pot a mile off on a hazy day looks just as blue and just as shapeless as a mountain peak, but the observer of the picturesque cannot forget that, after all, it is a chimney pot.

An absolute distinction exists in the minds of most people between the country and the town; the country is conceived to be absolutely and essentially picturesque, the town to be absolutely and essentially prosaic. If the country is prosaic, it is by accident; if the town is poetical, it is by accident.

THE RICHEST TOWN.

Remarkable Wealth of a Massachusetts Community.

Brookline, Mass., the richest town in the world, is more than $5,000,000 richer this year than last, according to the computation of the town's wealth, given out by the assessors.

The rate of taxation is lower. The total valuation is $83,180,700 against $77,952,900 last year. The personal estate is valued at $26,871,000 against $23,499,800 in 1900. This very large gain is attributed to the fact that Brookline has exceptional attractions for residential purposes. The real estate is valued at $56,309,700 as against $54,453,100, the figures last year.

The gain in realties is largely on land values, chiefly because of many recent improvements and the extension of railway facilities. Buildings in the town are valued at $23,203,600 against $22,441,500 last year, and the land valuation is put at $33,106,100, last year's figures being $32,011,600. The number of polls is 5,773 against 5,630 assessed last year.

Deserted Village In New Jersey.

Picturesque and mysterious in its lonely grandeur stands what is left of the town of Allaire, in Monmouth county, N. J., which in the early days of the last century was the most important industrial center of the state.

All roads led to Allaire, and they were traversed by heavily laden wagons carrying crude materials to the town or taking away the manufactured product.

This continued for a period of twenty odd years. The town grew and prospered.

For half a century, however, it has been dwindling away until now little remains except the ruins of past activity.

Vacant Lots.

The Municipal Art league of Chicago asks that its members use the influence of the league with the owners of vacant lots in different part of the city, and the conversion of these lots into lawns and playgrounds by the consent of owners and co-operation of neighbors. Hundreds of such lots, now disfigured by the unspeakable billboards, could be made a delight to the eye or a joy to thousands of children.

The Garrett County Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:

DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MD.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.

Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.

F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, at the January Session in the year nineteen hundred of the General Asembly of Maryland, bills were passed proposing amendments to the Constitution of the State:

First.—By amending section 9 of Article 5, of the Constitution of the State.

Second.—By amending section 4 of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State.

Third.—By amending section 2 of Article 3, of the Constitution of the State, which said bills and amendments are in words following, to wit:

CHAPTER 185.

AN ACT to amend section nine, of Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Article 5, of the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, herein and as by law provided, it shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section nine of said Article.

SECTION 9. The State's Attorney shall perform such duties and receive such fees and commissions or salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, as are now or may hereafter be prescribed by law; and if any State's Attorney shall receive any other fee or reward than such as is or may be allowed by law, he shall, on conviction thereof, be removed from office; provided that the State's Attorney for Baltimore city shall receive an annual salary of forty-five hundred dollars, and shall have power to appoint one deputy, at an annual salary not exceeding three thousand dollars, and such other assistants at such annual salaries not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars each, as the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City may authorize and approve; all of said salaries to be paid out of the fees of the said State's Attorney's office, as has heretofore been practiced.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted, That the foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, shall be, at the next general election for members of the General Assembly, to be held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14, of the Constitution; and at said election the vote on said proposed amendment shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment" or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election one return shall be made to the Governor of the vote on said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Approved April 5, 1900.

CHAPTER 432.

AN ACT to amend section four, of Article 3, of the Constitution of this State.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and instead of section four of Article 3, of said Constitution.

SECTION 4. As soon as may be after the taking and publishing of the National Census of 1900, or after the enumeration of the population of this State, under the authority thereof, there shall be an apportionment of representation in the House of Delegates, to be made on the following basis, to wit: Each of the several counties of the State, having a population of eighteen thousand souls or less, shall be entitled to two delegates; and every county having a population of over eighteen thousand and less than twenty-eight thousand souls, shall be entitled to three delegates; and every county having a population of twenty-eight thousand and less than forty thousand souls, shall be entitled to four delegates; and every county having a population of forty thousand and less than fifty-five thousand souls, shall be entitled to five delegates; and every county having a population of fifty-five thousand souls and upwards, shall be entitled to six delegates and no more; and each of the four legislative districts of the City of Baltimore shall be entitled to the number of delegates to which the largest county shall or may be entitled under the aforegoing apportionment, and the General Assembly shall have the power to provide by law, from time to time, for altering and changing the boundaries of the existing legislative districts of the City of Baltimore, so as to make them as near as may be of equal population; but said district shall always consist of contiguous territory.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, shall, at the next election for members of the General Assembly of this State, to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14, of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after the said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 14, of the Constitution.

Approved April 7, 1900.

CHAPTER 469.

AN ACT to amend section two of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of the two Houses concurring,) That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and stead of section two of Article 3 of said Constitution.

2. The City of Baltimore shall be divided into four legislative districts as near as may be of equal population and of contiguous territory, and each of said legislative districts of Baltimore City, as they may from time to time be laid out, in accordance with the provisions hereof, and each county in the State, shall be entitled to one Senator, who shall be elected by the qualified voters of the said legislative districts of Baltimore City, and of the counties of the State, respectively, and shall serve for four years from the date of his election, subject to the classification of Senators hereafter provided for.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall at the next election for members of the General Assembly of this State, to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," or "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Approved April 7, 1900.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, JOHN WALTER SMITH, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the provisions of section one of Article fourteen of the Constitution of the State, do hereby order and direct that a copy of said bills proposing said Constitutional Amendments be published in at least two newspapers in each county where so many may be published, and where not more than one may be published, then in that newspaper, and in three newspapers in the City of Baltimore, one of which shall be in the German language, once a week for at least three months preceding the next ensuing general election (which said general election will be held on Tuesday, the 5th day of November, nineteen hundred and one,) at which the said proposed amendments shall be submitted to the qualified voters of the State for adoption or rejection, so that each amendment shall be voted on separately.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of Maryland.

Done at the City of Annapolis on the 12th day of June, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and one.

[SEAL.] JOHN WALTER SMITH,
Governor of Maryland.

By order of the Governor:

WILFRED BATEMAN,
Secretary of State

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y.

Many people unacquainted with the geography of the West imagine that because the names "Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul" are used in the corporate title of the railway owning the Short Line between Chicago and Omaha, they must go via the cities of Milwaukee and St. Paul to reach their destination—and if it be Omaha or west thereof. This is a mistaken idea. On a map the line running directly east and west would look like this:

Omaha————————Chicago.

There is nothing more simple than that, and it is less than 500 miles between Chicago and Omaha. Two through trains daily in each direction with the best Sleeping Car and Dining Car Service, and all regular travelers know and appreciate the merits of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway's Short Line between the East and the West.

Time tables, maps and information furnished on application to John R. Pott, District Passenger Agent, 810 Park Building, Pittsburg.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1901. NUMBER 35.

REPUBLICANS CARRY CITY BY 5,000 !

Have Elected Legislative Candidates In All Three Districts.

VOTE IN THE STATE CLOSE.

Probable That Republicans Will Organize the House. Chances For Control of Legislature on Joint Ballot. Returns Slow, But Sufficient to Sustain Claim. Forty-Nine Republican Members Now in Sight—At Least Four Delegates Elected in Allegany.

Indications point to the closest kind of a fight in the organization of the House of Delegates. The Republicans claim a majority of one, with St. Mary's and Prince George's, two counties with strong Republican tendencies, yet to hear from. The Democrats claim the organization of the House by a majority of six. A rumor that the Democrats have probably carried a portion of the Legislative ticket in Allegany county has been received, but the Republican managers claim that it cannot be true except in regard to Roman, the Republican candidate for the Senate, who they admit is still in jeopardy.

The Republicans claim that the State candidates—Mr. Herman S. Platt for the Comptrollership and Mr. Thomas Parran for the Clerkship of the Court of Appeals—have been elected by pluralities ranging from 3500 to 4000. They claim the election of the whole city ticket in Baltimore. Hannibal, the Democratic candidate for the clerkship, is believed to have been defeated by more than 5000 votes. Robinson and Sloan, the Republican candidates for the clerk of Circuit Court No. 2 and surveyor, are both elected by handsome majorities.

SENTOR PUTZEL RE-ELECTED.

Lewis Putzel, the Republican candidate for Senator in the Second district, has been elected by a small plurality. The Republicans probably elected 16 out of 18 Delegates in the city. They claim to have elected all 18 Delegates.

Five precincts have as yet been uncounted, and of these the Republicans claim four.

The Republican estimate of the members of the House of Delegates whom they have elected is as follows:

Baltimore City	18
Allegany	5
Garrett	2
Washington	5
Cecil	3
Caroline	1
Frederick	5
Kent	2
Somerset	3
Talbot	3
Calvert	2
Charles	2
Total	49

REPUBLICAN LEGISLATIVE MAJORITY

To organize the House of Delegates 48 members are needed, and the Republicans claim they have a safe majority with which to do this, with St. Mary's and Prince George's counties yet to hear from, and possible additional members from Talbot, Somerset and Caroline from those who are now claimed.

In the Senate the Republicans claim at least 10 and possibly 11. In addition to the Republican hold-overs they claim one from Baltimore City, Talbot, Garrett, Cecil, Calvert and Charles and possibly Allegany.

Late news was received from Wicomico county that the Democratic ticket had been elected by only 280 plurality on an average, and to accomplish this a large number of ballots had been thrown out.

It is said that Allegany county will run more than 4000 behind its usual vote on account of the large number of ballots which were thrown out.

CLAIMS OF FRAUD.

On all sides are heard the most universal claims of fraud in the counting of the ballots and it is believed that the total number of ballots counted will be about 50,000 less than the total registered vote.

Congressman Mudd telegraphed that he had carried Charles county by an average of 400 votes, notwithstanding the use of the old English type on the ballots of that county.

Chairman Goldsborough and Senator McComas were in consultation at the Hotel Rennert all day with a number of the most important Republican leaders. They are sending the best Republican lawyers in Baltimore to the various counties to look out for the interests of the party in canvassing the vote. Together they made a statement in regard to the outcome of the election. This statement read as follows:

"In the face of the most gigantic frauds practiced in Maryland since the election of 1875 we have carried the whole State and city tickets. We will easily have the votes necessary to organize the House of Delegates and will have either 10 or 11 Senators in the other body. The people will find that the situation, so far as the Republicans are concerned, will clear each day until we believe that we will ultimately have at least 53 members of the lower house. We warn the people to watch the efforts of the Democratic leaders to steal the State away from them. We are informed that no method will be left untried for this purpose, but our people will be thoroughly alive to the situation, and, backed by an enlightened public opinion, we do not fear the results. We both believe the result to have been one of the grandest achievements in the history of politics in Maryland. I think that the person or party who now believes that Maryland will allow any trifling with the ballot privileges is a very extraordinary sort of person. The people of this State are just as sure to avenge the curtailment of their liberty of franchise as they are to breathe.

REPUBLICANS CARRY CITY.

Baltimore city has given the Republican candidates about 5000 plurality, based on the aggregate of the Legislative ticket, but it is impossible to give the official figures owing to delays in counting the vote.

The three Legislative districts are Republican on the total vote, but the Democrats have probably elected two members of the House from the Second district. The Third district is overwhelmingly Republican and the First district is Republican by a safe plurality.

Yesterday morning the Democrats abandoned hope of saving anything from the wreck, but later reports showed gains in the Second district, and they began to claim one or more members of the House. With three precincts to hear from, Senator Putzel has carried the district by 314 votes. The three precincts are all Democratic, but it is hardly expected that this plurality can be wiped out. A tabulation of the vote of the district was made at the office of the Supervisors of Elections during the day and showed the figures given above.

RETURNS SLOW COMING IN.

Returns from the counties of Maryland are necessarily slow, and the closeness of the vote in a numder of the contested counties will make full returns necessary to determine which party will control in the Legislature. There is little doubt that the Republican State ticket is elected, and this fact indicates a possibility of the Republican Legislative tickets winning in sufficient number to give control on joint ballot.

The counties that are certain for the Republican column are Allegany, Calvert, Cecil, Charles, Fredrick, Garrett, Kent, Somerset, St. Mary's and Washington. Republicans have gained a Delegate here and there in the close counties, sufficient to give them 49 members of the House at least. Word comes from St. Mary's county that half the Republican ballots cast there were thrown out because of alleged defects.

In Talbot the Republicans elect Robert B. Dixon, Senator and Perry C. Benson to the Delegates, defeating James H. Covington and Joseph E. Fairbank. The balance of the Democratic ticket is elected. The Democratic State ticket gets 100 majority in Talbot.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

GENERAL SWEEP BY REPUBLICANS.

Five States Elect Republican Governors.

Republicans Will Control the Legislatures in Ohio and New Jersey—Gov. Nash, of Ohio, Re-elected By a Plurality of 60,000, and a Republican United States Senator Assured—Nebraska Safe in the Republican Column By a Good Plurality—Republican Gains in Iowa—A Falling Off in the Total Vote in Several States—Kentucky Democrats Say They Are Sure of Electing a United States Senator—Virginia's Democratic Plurality Over 30,000.

The Republicans have carried seven of the 10 states outside of Maryland in which elections were held Tuesday. These are Ohio, Iowa, Nebraska, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Rhode Island. The pluralities are:

	Rep.	Dem.
Ohio	60,000
Pennsylvania	70,000
Massachusetts	70,000
Iowa	90,000
New Jersey	10,000
Nebraska	10,000
Rhode Island	6,000
Virginia		35,000

There is a falling off in the vote in several of the states, but the Republicans have made gains in Iowa.

The Ohio Republicans are surprised themselves at their splendid victory. The plurality for Governor Nash will exceed 60,000. The re-election of Senator Foraker is assured. The Republicans attribute their success largely to the popular desire not to disturb prevailing prosperity. The failure of the Silver Democrats to vote and the attitude of John R. McLean contributed to the Republican sweep.

W. Murray Crane, Republican, was elected governor of Massachusetts for the third time by a plurality of 70,000, and the legislature will be strongly Republican. The total vote, 300,000, was the heaviest in any off-year in the history of the State.

The Kentucky legislature will be Democratic on joint ballot by an increased majority, which assures the election of a Democratic United States Senator to succeed W. J. Deboe, Republican.

In New Jersey the Rebublican plurality for Franklin Murphy for governor is estimated to be nearly double that of Voorhees three years ago. Both branches of the legislature are Republican.

Republicans were generally successful in the local elections in Kansas.

OHIO.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 5.—The Republicans to-day carried Ohio by such an increased plurality on their State ticket, and with such an enlarged majority in the legislature, as to cause all sorts of comment on "what did it." The result continues the Republicans in power in the State, making an epoch of 12 years in succession for that party in Ohio, and it insures the re-election of Senator Foraker.

The extent of the Republican success is attributed to the Silver Democrats not voting; to the attitude of John R. McLean, years ago an Ohio member of the Democratic National Committee; to the superior organization of the Republican and other causes.

The Republicans attribute the result largely to the popular desire not to disturb the prevailing prosperity in accordance with Senator Hanna's appeal to "let well enough alone;" to the desire to support President Roosevelt in carrying out the policy of McKinley and to the indorsement of Governor Nash and Senator Foraker.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—Returns from the State indicate the election of Frank G. Harris, Republican, for State treasurer, and William Potter, Republican, for Supreme Court justice by pluralities considerably below those of 1899, when Barnett, Republican, had 110,588 plurality. The reduction of the Republican plurality is due in part to the light vote cast.

Secretary Clements, of the Union party, concedes the defeat of the State and county ticket of the Union party in Philadelphia. He declines to give figures on the ground that the returns so far received are not sufficient for basing an estimate.

G. Harry Davis, Fusion, is probably elected Common Pleas judge in Philadelphia, defeating Maxwell Stevenson, Democrat. Stevenson was also on the Public Opinion party ticket and received Republican support, but not enough to elect him. The Republicans elected the other two judges, Robert Rolston and J. Willis Martin.

NEW YORK.

Hon Seth Low, ex-president of Columbia College, ex-mayor of Brooklyn, a Republican indorsed by all the anti-Tammany organizations, is elected mayor of Greater New York by a plurality of about 45,000. He carries not only Brooklyn, where he was known to be strong, but has also carried the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx by about 15,000. It is likely that Low has carried every borough.

The entire fusion ticket is elected. The Board of Estimate and Apportionment will be controlled by the anti-Tammanyites, which means that about $100,000,000 annually will be expended under men opposed to Tammany Hall. The worst blow that Tammany has received is through the election of Justice Jerome as district attorney. He will have charge of the indictments filed against Tammany office holders, and this has already thrown a scare into Tammany ranks. Van Wyck, candidate for judge, is snowed under—completely frozen out. He made the sorriest kind of fight. He failed to carry his own election district, a strongly Democratic district and was beaten everywhere. As was predicted there has been a landslide against the forces of vice and indecency. With Tammany beaten, humiliated and powerless, Croker as a figure in the Democratic politics of the nation has been destroyed.

NEBRASKA.

LINCOLN, NEB., November 5.—Based on scattering and rather incomplete precincts nearly every section of the state where there are telegraph stations, Republican managers at half-past 10 o'clock tonight are confidently claiming the election of S. H. Sedgwick for justice of the Supreme Court. The figures seem to justify their claims, and indicate a larger plurality for Sedgwick than was given Deitrick for governor a year ago, and that, too, on a greatly reduced total vote. The gains appear to have been made in Fusion communities. Early reports are always from towns, where Republicans hold their strength, and naturally early returns are favorable to that party. Country precincts will offset this, but not in a great degree.

The vote in the city of Lincoln is a surprise, insomuch as, with a falling off of 30 per cent. in the total vote, Sedgwick makes a gain of nearly five to the precinct over a year ago.

The claim of the Republicans at this hour of 7,000 plurality for Sedgwick over Hollenbeck for Supreme justice and the election of the two Republican regents of the university by nearly the same plurality does not seem to be unreasonable.

All the returns received this morning indicate that the Republican state ticket has been elected, perhaps, by as much as 10,000 majority. The figures upon which this estimate is based are given on precinct returns, which show average Republican gains of about four to the precinct.

KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Nov. 5.—The General Assembly that was elected in Kentucky today, with the exception of half the Senate, which holds over, will be Democratic on joint ballot by an increased majority, according to the latest returns. This General Assembly will elect a successor to United States Senator William J. Deboe, Rep., for the term beginning March 4, 1903. At 1 A. M. the returns indicated that the Senate will stand 26 Democrats to 12 Republicans. The same as the old Senate and the House—77 Democrats to 23 Republicans—a Democratic gain of 17. For the first time in years the returns do not show the election of a single Populist to the Assembly. In addition to electing a United States senator, the new Assembly will redistrict the state as to senatorial, representative, Appellate Court and Circuit Court districts for 10 years.

MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—With no state or national issues, and but few local contests to arouse interest, there were more ballots cast in the state election today than in any off year in the history of the state. The total vote exceeded 300,000.

As usual, the Republicans had no difficulty in carrying the state, W. Murry Crane, of Dalton, being elected governor for the third time by practically the same plurality as when he first ran for office in 1899, which was 65,037.

The state legislature of 1902 will be strongly Republican, although the Democrats have gained a few votes. Josiah Quincy, the Democratic candidate for governor, ran about 10,000 behind the vote cast for the party candidate in the presidential election last year, but he so materially increased the Democratic vote in Boston as to give the local leaders great confidence for a party victory in the municipal election next month.

MISSISSIPPI.

JACKSON, MISS., November 5.—The weather today was clear and cold, but as only the offices of state treasurer and secretary of state were to be filled little interest was manifested in the election. Private telegrams from larger towns indicate that temporary incumbents—George W. Carlisle and Joseph W. Powers, who are appointees of Governor Longino—have been elected.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Nov. 5.—Returns are coming in slowly. The vote was light over the state, only circuit judges being elected. At midnight the indications are that the Republicans elected all eight judges, but the Democrats claim the election of Bennett in the third and McGee in the seventh districts, but returns from these districts are too meager to base definite estimates upon.

VIRGINIA.

RICHMOND, VA., Nov. 5.—The latest returns from the state indicate that the majority for the Democratic gubernatorial ticket will be about 40,000; but the Republicans have made unexpectedly large gains in the legislature, and will have probably not less than 20 members in that body, as against four last session.

RHODE ISLAND.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 5.—With scarcely half the districts in the state heard from, the Republican plurality for the state ticket promises to run well over 6,000. This is a net loss of 2,500 from last year, due to the light vote. Seventy districts in the state out of 139 give Gregory, Rep., 10,133, Garvin, Dem., 6,172. The General Assembly will be Republican strongly. Pawtucket and Woonsocket have elected Democratic mayors, as also has Providence. In Newport and Central Falls the contest is close.

IOWA.

DES MOINES, IA.—Nov. 5.—The result in Iowa is remarkable. With a marked falling off in the vote throughout the state, the loss in some precincts being 40 and 50 per cent., and the average loss of the state being one-fifth of the total vote of two years ago, A. B. Cummins, the Republican candidate has been elected by a plurality of something like 90,000, the largest ever given a governor in this state.

The entire Republican state ticket is elected by similar pluraiities, and some extraordinary gains have been made. Chairman Spence, of the Republican State Central Committee, said at midnight:

"We will carry the state by 90,000 and will make good gains in the legislature.

The Republicans claim that in the legislative contests they have gained three or four members to add to their majority in the Senate, while in the House their now great majority will be increased by seven or eight. Mr. Cummins faid:

"The percentage of majority for the Republican party is as large as any the party has ever had. It could not have been any larger. I am much gratified at the result."

NEW JERSEY.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 5.—Late returns bear out the earlier indications that Franklin Murphy, Rep., has been elected by about 10,000 plurality. Partial returns from different counties show that most of them gave about the same pluralities as were given three years ago, when Voorhees, Rep., was elected governor by about 5,400 plurality. One of the exceptions is Essex county, which gave Voorhees 4,678, and is expected to be carried by Murphy by from 8,000 to 10,000.

Both branches of the legislature will be Republican.

KANSAS.

TOPEKA, KAN., Nov. 5.—Local elections were held in every county in Kansas today, county commissioners and school trustees being the only officers elected. Republicans were generally successful.

While the election was uninteresting, as far as issues were concerned, it was important chiefly in noting the way in which the political wind is blowing. The Republicans claim that in the results of today they can forecast a safe majority for the Republicans in the next legislature.

Let Gorman Purchase One.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The improved voting machine was used in eighteen election precincts to-day. The total vote was counted in exactly two minutes after the polls were closed at 5 o'clock.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

Proceedings of the Gathering Reported For "The Republican."

To Miss Ella Laughlin, the secretary, THE REPUBLICAN is indebted for the following report of the proceedings of the Sunday school convention held on Nov. 2nd and 3rd at Loch Lynn Heights:

SATURDAY'S SESSION.

10.30 a. m.—Convention called to order by State Superintendent George H. Noch, who conducted preparatory service.

2.30 p. m.—Devotional service, conducted by Rev. J. S. Harvey. State Superintendent Noch elected chairman. Address of welcome by Rev. C. Fisher. Address by Rev. J. M. Davis, "Spiritual Power in the Sunday School." "The Problem of the Big Boy and Girl," by Mr. G. E. Bishoff. "The Sunday School's Equipment," by Rev. L. A. Rudisill.

7.00 p. m.—Song service.

7.30 p. m.—Scripture lesson, by Rev. Noch. Address by Mr. S. T. Jones on "Opportunities."

SUNDAY'S SESSION.

10.30 a. m.—Devotional service.

10.45 a. m.—Conference of Sunday school workers.

11.00 a. m.—Convention sermon by Rev. Noch.

2.30 p. m.—Sunday school, conducted by the superintendent, Mr. Harvey Cuppett, followed by a review of the lesson by Mr. G. E. Bishoff. Children's service, music by the children.

7.00 p. m.—Song service.

7.30 p. m.—Devotional, conducted by Mr. J. A. Hayden. Address by Rev. Noch, "How to fill up the Sunday School Hour." Remarks on the different topics by Dr. Scott, Rev. Fisher, Rev. Rudisill, Mr. Bishoff, Mr. Jones, Mr. Enlow, Mr. Hayden and others.

The following officers were elected: President, George E. Bishoff; first vice-president, C. J. Otto; second vice-president, John H. Cuppett; district vice-presidents, 1st, Prof. A. L. Lee; 2nd, Frederick Fox; 3rd, Ralph Engle; 4th, George L. Michael; 5th, John L. Englehart; 6th, Thomas C. Friend; 7th, B. F. Crane; 8th, Isaac I. Thompson; 9th, Bradford Blocher; 10th, H. A. Hardesty; 11th, Jesse Robinson; 12th, Jonas Bittinger; 13th, R. W. Smith; 14th, S. T. Jones; secretary, Ella Laughlin; treasurer, J. A. Hayden; executive committee, C. M. Miller, George P. White, J. A. Hayden, Thomas Browning, J. M. Falkenstein.

RESOLUTIONS.

It is recommended to the Sunday school workers of Garrett county that consecrated effort be made to put our schools on a higher spiritual and practical plane, and to this end be it

Resolved, That our schools be asked to study some normal course that they may become more efficient in unfolding the truths of God's word; and be it

Resolved, That we recommend the institution of the Home Department, which has been so useful wherever adopted in linking the home with the Sunday school and in increasing the enrollment and power of the school for good.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that every Sunday school in Garrett county should make an annual contribution of some amount to the Maryland Sunday School Union, not only as an expression of gratitude to the society for its valuable work in the county, but to aid in the interest of the neglected children of the State.

Resolved, That our thanks are due the church authorities of Loch Lynn U. B. church for the use of their edifice for the sessions of the convention, to the choir for their delightful music, to the children for their sweet songs and to the homes of the community for their cordial hospitality.

G. H. NOCH,
HARVEY CUPPETT,
ELLA LAUGHLIN,
Committee.
ELLA LAUGHLIN,
Secretary.

GORTNER.

Rev. Fisher, the U. B. minister of Loch Lynn, delivered an able sermon in the Union church Sunday evening. His subject in four weeks from last Sunday evening will be taken from "The Sermon on the Mount." This discourse will undoubtedly be edifying. Rev. Fisher informed us that he has given that portion of Scripture twenty years' study.

Mr. P. P. Gortner purchased, at Erie, Pa., a large boiler for his mill, on his way from Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. Noah Slabach went down to Barton last Saturday and returned Tuesday.

This is shooting season and the sportsmen of this neighborhood are improving the time.

Mr. Jacob Gortner, who went to Denver, Colorado, in September, has returned to Pittsburg.

Dentistry.

Dr. Edwin W. Green, dentist, will be in Friendsville from October 28 to November 3 inclusive.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL. Publisher.

OAKLAND, : GARRETT CO., MD.

THE SINGING OF THE BROOK.

A little brook runs from its source,
And down a mossy vale it springs;
It chatters on its sparkling course
And over sands and pebbles sings.

It runs beside a grassy lawn,
Where loiter little children gay,
And as they hear it ripple on,
Its song to them is joyous play.

Two lovers go their happy way,
While cloudless is the sky above;
As by the singing brook they stray
It sings to them a song of love.

A weary farmer homeward comes,
And as a deep sigh heaves his breast
He pauses by the brook that hums
To him a gentle song of rest.

A war-worn soldier passes by,
But still the brook doth never cease;
The sternness fades from out his eye
As comes to him its song of peace.

A wandering pilgrim, bent and gray,
Who o'er the world is used to roam,
Beside the brook stops in his way—
It sings to him a song of home.

So ever comes Dame Nature's voice
With some sweet musing to impart,
In language soothing, calm and choice,
To suit the thoughts of every heart.

Thus Nature's grand, unrivaled lays
Doth this beguiling brook rehearse;
It ever sends its note of praise
To Him who planned the universe.

—M. H. Frederick, in Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Mountain Courtship

By Hon. H. W. (Buck) Hinrichsen

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

"YOU CAN marry him if you like, Mandy, but he's no good," said old John Scott, as he sat on a log outside his cabin door one warm morning in June.

"Ain't you a little hard on him, Daddy?" said Mandy, a tall, lithe girl of 18, who stood near him.

"I guess not; a feller who can't shoot when his mark is plain and his finger is on the trigger lacks sand, and won't do to tie to."

"Maybe he didn't want to kill Howard," said Mandy.

"What the thunder did he take his hoss for, then?"

Mandy looked down at her bare feet without answering, while her father continued to smoke his pipe. Finally he said:

"No use talking about it now, but I'll watch him clost after this."

Mandy went about her household duties troubled by her father's words, for she thought she loved Sam Williams, the subject of their conversation.

The Williams' and the Howards were at feud, and at the county seat the day before her sweetheart, to show his contempt for all the Howards, had led away Abe Howard's horse, which he found tied to the rack by the courthouse. He had called to see Mandy, leading the horse, and had bragged of his feat, saying that Abe Howard would have to follow him and get hurt or play the coward and lose his horse. Mandy felt a pride in her lover, and her father had nodded approvingly.

MANDY FELT A PRIDE IN HER LOVER.

Two hours later Abe Howard rode up to the cabin on a borrowed animal, seized his own animal and in spite of Sam's threatening rifle had led it away. He even stopped long enough to cut the bridle reins of Sam's horse, which stood near his own, and he also hurled at his enemy several insulting epithets at that time fashionable in the mountain districts. Sam had stood in the cabin door, his rifle pointed at Howard, but he did not fire, and his host had noticed a certain agitation in his manner that ruined him in his estimation.

"He's a coward," he muttered, and he did not ask him to stay to supper.

Mandy, as she washed the breakfast dishes, thought over the incident of the day before. She tried to find excuses for her lover, but could not. He had certainly shown the white feather.

"I felt so sorry for him," she murmured, "and that low-down Abe Howard hollerin' 'coward' and 'hoss thief' at him, but maybe Sam will fix him yet," and she took some comfort in the thought.

After dinner she concluded to run over to her aunt's, just beyond the ridge, for a little visit, and, telling her father, she started. Her way lay through a notch in the ridge, which made a very fair road. She had gone a mile or so when she saw a horseman coming, whom she easily recognized as Abe Howard. They were quite well acquainted, but being engaged to Abe's enemy, it was the custom of the mountains under such circumstances to ignore his existence, so she kept on her way, with her sunbonnet turned so as to hide her face from him.

Presently she heard the sharp report of a rifle, and, looking, she saw Abe throw up his arms and tumble from his horse to the ground, where he lay as if dead. A thin puff of smoke among the trees at the roadside showed from whence the deadly bullet had come. The form of a man came from behind the smoke, and she saw Sam Williams emerge and move toward the body of his fallen enemy.

Suddenly the apparently dead Howard sprang to his feet. Like the Leopard Knight in Scott's "Talisman," he had pretended to be dead in order to draw his enemy within his reach. He was apparently unarmed, but he did not hesitate to rush on his enemy.

Sam presented his rifle, but it was seized by the muzzle, jerked from his hand, and broken against a tree. Sam turned and fled. Howard sprang on his horse and followed, flourishing the remains of the rifle.

Mandy shrank to one side of the road, and her lover, his face livid with terror, darted by without seeing her. She determined to aid him to escape, and sprang into the road in front of his pursuer, shouting and waving her arms. Howard checked his horse and brought him to a standstill.

"Please let him go, Abe, he's so scared," pleaded Mandy.

"Sartin, if you ask it, Mandy," and he grinned and threw away the broken gun.

She looked up and saw a stalwart form clad in homespun shirt and trousers, a straw hat, and one yarn suspender. His brown eyes had a merry twinkle in them, and his sunburned face was far from forbidding.

"I never knew he was so handsome," thought Mandy. "And he's got lots of sand, sure."

While she was looking at him he was admiring her.

"She's as purty as a Kentuck filly," he said to himself, as he noticed her magnificent form, covered by a calico dress. Her mass of brown hair had tumbled down, and as she took off her sunbonnet to knot it up she disclosed the full beauty of her gray eyes and red cheeks.

"Where you going, Mandy?" he asked.

"Over to see Aunt Nancy Styles."

"Can I give you a lift?"

She hesitated, and before she could make up her mind whether to refuse or accept his invitation she found herself lifted behind him.

They had a very pleasant ride, but Sam Williams was not mentioned. He told her of his farm, the new cabin he had just built, and mentioned the good qualities of another horse he had at home.

She told him of her chickens and how much butter she had made from Bloss, her cow, her very own, for Uncle George gave it to her when it was a calf. She also mentioned the new dress she was making, which was for Sunday only, and so the time was taken up till they reached her aunt's. He waited till she was ready to start home, and insisted on being her company for the trip.

It was nearly time for supper when old John Scott saw Abe Howard riding up the pathway to his cabin, and to his surprise his daughter was riding behind him.

"What on earth," said the old man, looking to see that his gun was handy.

"Uncle John," said Abe, as he rode up, "I come to ask you for Mandy."

"For Mandy?"

"Yes, daddy, we've fixed it up," said his daughter, as she slid to the ground. Then she related the incident of the afternoon.

The old man grinned approvingly and remarked:

"That's something like it. 'Light, Abe, put up your hoss and come in and have some supper."

Hates Visiting Cards.

If you want to insult a visiting countryman ask him to send up his card to the person upon whom he desires to call. His antipathy to cards must have been born of experience with bunco steerers and gold bricks. Here is a typical denizen of the fields and woods come to New York to see a friend living in a big apartment house, fifth floor. To the bellboy: "Mr. Franklin live yere?" "Yes." "Tell 'im I want to see 'im." "Give me your card, please." "Card? Who said anything 'bout card? Jes' tell Mr. Franklin I want to see 'im." "What name shall I say?" "Name? What business you got asking my name? I tell you I want to see Mr. Franklin; he's expectin' me, and I don't want none of your blamed foolishness." The elevator ascends and descends, the boy returning with this message: "Mr. Franklin says what is your business; he is very much engaged just now. He wants to know who you are." "Yo jest tell Mr. Franklin he can go to —! He invited me to eat dinner with him, and now pretends he don't know me. That's New York all over." He goes away in a huff, and it takes Franklin a week to make peace.—N. Y. Press.

Increased Output of Gold Coin.

United States mints turned out coins to the amount of $8,160,401 in September, as against $6,440,938 in the same month of 1900. The increase was chiefly in gold coins, for the coinage of silver and nickel and bronze pieces was less last month than in September, 1900. The coinage of gold was $4,100,177, as against $2,293,335 in the corresponding month of last year. Last month's silver coinage was $3,899,524, as against $3,932,185 in September, 1900, and the coinage of nickels and one-cent pieces $160,700, as against $215,418 in the same month last year.

A girl may not think a certain young man is good enough for her, but she always considers him too good for any other girl.—Chicago Daily News.

BULLET PROOF CLOTH

Genuine Life Protectors for Rulers and Public Men.

Had President McKinley Worn One of Szczepanik's Undershirts No Anarchist Could Have Killed Him.

"An undergarment of this material," said Dr. Szczepanik, of Vienna, "would have rendered the bullet of that Buffalo anarchist entirely harmless. A month from now all rulers and a great many public men the world over will be wearing them, that is, if we can supply the demand."

The Austrian Edison pointed to a woven fabric cut in the shape of a high waistcoat, and drawn over a lay figure possessing just as much elasticity and power of resistance as a live human body.

"Have you got your revolver with you?"

The correspondent protested that he never carried such a thing.

"Pardon me," cried the inventor, "I thought every American did."

He opened a drawer containing an assortment of six-shooters of all calibers and makes. The correspondent selected a well-known pattern registered "seven millimeters caliber," loaded it carefully, and took a position near the door.

"No, no," said Szczepanik, "nowadays assassins come up quite closely to their intended victims."

"What is the proper distance?"

"Suit yourself. Stand six feet, or twelve, or fifteen, or two, or four. It's all the same."

The bullet, which was of considerable size, rebounded the instant it struck, and fell upon the floor. Three more shots fired in quick succession, and well aimed, had the same negative result. The correspondent was given full liberty to investigate. He sounded the lay figure, handled and punched it. Szczepanik does not care at present to reveal the nature of its material. However, the writer feels certain that it has no metallic substance. It is pliable and as little resisting to the touch of one's finger as the swelling of a woman's arm.

SHOOTING AT A DUMMY.
(Testing Mr. Szczepanik's Bullet-Proof Underclothes.)

On the covering there were four dark spots, the impressions of the bullets fired on to it, not into it. The material is white silk-like and about four millimeters thick. "One could make a nice winter coat out of this," said the inventor, "if it was not so expensive, but a shield of this stuff worn under the shirt will suffice for the purposes for which it is intended—the protection of rulers and public men in general. The shield should cover all vital parts. The head could be protected by a skull cap, and the face, if necessary, by a fan or an umbrella of this material.

"And if you want to go still further, the cover of the carriages used by the executive, as well as the curtains and hangings of his box at the theater might be manufactured of this bullet and dagger proof material."

So sure is Szczepanik of the invulnerability of the cloth that he offered himself as a target to the correspondent, who declined. "There are more than a dozen men in the factory who feel as strongly as I on the subject," he said.

"President Carnot and the unhappy empress of Austria died by the assassin's knife," continued the inventor. "Indeed, at one time the European secret police gathered information to the effect that anarchists had decided to abandon altogether revolver, shotgun and infernal machines for the dagger. Hence, a life protector of this kind would not be perfect unless responding to all possible emergencies. There," pointing to a drawer, "you will find an assortment of stilettos, bowies, butchers' knives, and several other sorts of knives. Select any weapon you please and perforate my cuirass if you can."

A brigand's knife was used first, then a bowie was used, bread knife, and a shoemaker's knife afterwards, but the point of neither penetrated the silk material by one hundredth part of a millimeter, even though the newspaper man did the stabbing with all the force and strength at his command.

As to the why and wherefore, Szczepanik would only say this: "It's all in the weaving. The method of weaving adopted paralyzes concussion by distributing the shock over the entire area of the garment. Of course the material is especially selected for the purpose."

Szczepanik is sure that his invention will at last furnish rulers and public men with the necessary life protector necessary as long as there are anarchists and other lunatics in the world. As intimated, the price of the cloth is great, for the present at least, but that cuts no figure. Eventually the dagger and bullet proof material may become cheap enough to revolutionize warfare, but that is a long ways off.

THOMAS GOODE JONES.

Eminent Alabama Democrat Given a Seat on the Federal Bench by President Roosevelt.

Former Gov. Thomas Goode Jones of Alabama, whom President Roosevelt has just appointed United States district judge, is a distinguished democrat, with distinctly modern ideas of southern progress and southern political necessities. Descended from an illustrious family of old Virginia, he is beyond dispute a conservator of the south, while his free and advanced opinions in the matter of negro rights and promiscuous lynching place him in the very forefront of the newly awakened state builders of Dixie. Judge Jones was born in Ma-

THOMAS GOODE JONES.
(Appointed to the Federal Bench by President Roosevelt.)

con, Ga., 57 years ago, and was brought up in Alabama. He fought nobly on the field of battle for the confederacy and received the personal thanks of Gen. Lee. After the war he took up the practice of law and was at times a journalist, a legislator, an officer of militia and an orator whose eloquence thrilled those who heard it. In 1890 he was elected governor of Alabama, and in 1896 he led the movement for sound money in his state, presiding at the convention which sent its delegates to Indianapolis. He is known as a progressive, yet conservative, and eminently forceful and patriotic citizen.

PRINCE OF BULGARIA.

The Duodecimo Ruler Who Is Held Responsible for the Abduction of Miss Stone.

Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, who finds himself deeply involved in the responsibility for the abduction of Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, is closely related by blood to several of the royal families of Europe. He is the son of Prince Augustus of Saxe-Coburg and of Princess Clementine, a daughter of King Louis-Philippe. He was elected to the throne of Bulgaria after the death of Prince Alexander in 1886, and one year thereafter the young man accepted the trust. He was 25 years old when he took the constitutional oath of office which made him

FERDINAND OF BULGARIA.
(Held Responsible for the Abduction of Miss Stone.)

the ruler of Bulgaria. His sovereignty was formally recognized by the porte and by the powers in February, 1896. Up to the present time the people of Bulgaria have been very happy under his regime, and the realm has been in peace, save for a brush with Servia, which amounted to nothing. In 1893 Prince Ferdinand was married to Princess Marie Louise of the house of Bourbon. They had two sons, the eldest of whom, Boris, the heir apparent, was admitted to the Greek church in 1896. The princess died in 1899.

McKinley and Macduff.

A Scotch genealogist announces that he has traced the descent of the late president McKinley back to Macduff, thane of Fife, who slew Macbeth. The line, traced through the MacIntoshes and the Farquharsons, of Braemar, to one Finlay Farquharson, called Finley Mor, on account of his great size and strength. Finlay Mor was killed at the battle of Pinkie while bearing the royal standard in 1547. His four sons took the name MacFinlay or MacIonnly, which in English is MacKinley. The MacKinleys settled at Annie, in Perthshire, and about the end of the seventeenth century a MacKinley, of Annie, known as "James, the trooper," went to Ireland, where the spelling of his name was changed to McKinley. The descendants of "the trooper" came to this country and the late president's descent in that line is traced in his biography written by Robert P. Porter.

Horses for South Africa.

The steamship European cleared from New Orleans recently with 1,100 horses for the British army in South Africa.

Mrs. Emma E. Felch, Treasurer Fond du Lac, Wis., Social Economic Club, Tells How She was Cured of Irregular and Painful Menstruation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for irregular and painful menstruation, and was entirely cured after using two bottles. I can truly say it is a boon to suffering women, and I would recommend all suffering from the above troubles to try a few bottles and be cured. Very thankfully yours, EMMA E. FELCH, Division St., Fond du Lac, Wis."

$5000 FORFEIT IF THE ABOVE LETTER IS NOT GENUINE.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

No other medicine for female ills in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Neglected His Opportunities.

"So you were struck by lightning?" queried the Willoughby street lawyer of the cripple asking for alms.

"I was, sir."

"How did it happen?"

"I was walking along the Jamaica road when a storm came up and I got under a tree. A bolt struck the tree and hurt me as you see."

"And what have you ever done about it?"

"Why, nothing, sir. What could I do?"

"Do? Do? Why, you could have found out who the tree belonged to and scared him out of $50 by threatening a damage suit for $10,000. Here's a nickel for you, but you don't seem to be a man of much energy."—Brooklyn Citizen.

Wrenched Foot and Ankle Cured by St. Jacobs Oil.

Gentlemen: A short time ago I severely wrenched my foot and ankle. The injury was very painful, and the consequent inconvenience (being obliged to keep to business) was very trying. A friend recommended St. Jacobs Oil, and I take great pleasure in informing you that one application was sufficient to effect a complete cure. To a busy man so simple and effective a remedy is invaluable, and I shall lose no opportunity of suggesting the use of St. Jacobs Oil. Yours truly, Henry J. Doirs, Manager The Cycles Co., London, England. St. Jacobs Oil is safe, sure and never failing. Conquers Pain.

Getting Even with Her.

"You may tell him," she said, haughtily, "that I do not care to meet people who deal in dressed beef."

Naturally this proud eastern aristocrat thought she had him properly put down, but she was in error.

"You may tell her," he said by way of reply, "that whatever I put on the market is at least dressed."

Then he looked long and fixedly at her decollete daughter.—Chicago Post.

Nothing Equals St. Jacobs Oil

For Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Cramp, Pleurisy, Lumbago, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Soreness, Stiffness, Bruises, Toothache, Headache, Backache, Feetache, Pains in the Chest, Pains in the Back, Pains in the Shoulders, Pains in the Limbs, and all bodily aches and pains, it acts like magic. Safe, sure and never failing.

Mollie's Mistake.

A Cleveland woman named Mollie McGuire picked up a stove lid, mistaking it for an apple pie. What she thought was pie turned out to be only a hot-to-Mollie.—Denver Times.

Bad lives am like pipestems—hollow, foul an' easily wrecked.—Arkansaw Thomas Cat.

An apt quotation is as good as an original remark.—Johnson.

Unnecessary lying is not only wrong, but is extremely injudicious.—Puck.

Do not begin smoking, boys, and you will never have to quit.—Atchison Globe.

Appearances are not deceitful enough to suit some people.—Chicago Daily News.

People are quick enough to recognize the mantle of true greatness when it is a shroud.—Puck.

The man who has time to think of his troubles has entirely too much spare time on his hands.—Atchison Globe.

The "story" that sounds funny to you may not be funny to other people. Don't repeat it too often.—Atchison Globe.

All things come to him who waits, but they aren't nearly so valuable as those that come to him who works.—N. Y. Herald.

Gladys—"Ferdy's rich uncle is dead." Her Brother Jack—"Was it expected?" Gladys—"Oh, not at all. Why, only last week Ferdy asked me to marry him!"—London King.

Mrs. Guinnivoice—"I never have any trouble with baby. I've only to sing to him and he goes right off to sleep." Mrs. Phaser—"What a knowing child!"—Boston Transcript.

"What's the proper season for rabbits?" inquired the man who thought of going in for gunning. "Oh," replied the gourmet, "just a little pepper and salt, and a dash of sauce when the cheese is melted."—Philadelphia Press.

The Other Fellow.—Mrs. Grogan—"My, oh, my! Phwere did yez git th' black eye, Pat?" Grogan—"Oh, 'twas wan o' thim anarchistis thot had some wurds wid me an' Clancy." Mrs. Grogan—"O! the murderin', black-hearted, dirthy—" Grogan—"Sh, darlint, don't shpake hard av the dead."—Philadelphia Press.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

"Money can't buy happiness, but it can buy a first-class imitation of it.

Also the sins of the second and third generations are visited on the first.

We repent so as to be able to do the same thing over again with a clear conscience.

It is a wise man that never praises the beauty of another woman to his own wife.

In taking a hand in straightening out love affairs the best way is to take your hands off.—N. Y. Press.

Polite Request.

Anxious Father (from top of stairs)—Say, Mary Jane!

Mary Jane—Yes, papa.

"Is it 11 o'clock yet?"

"Yes, papa."

"Well, give the young man my compliments, and ask him to kindly close the front door from the outside."—Chicago Daily News.

Piso's Cure cannot be too highly spoken of as a cough cure.—J. W. O'Brien, 322 Third Ave., N., Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 6, 1900.

Have you a fool spot? Ever notice how much trouble it causes you? Why not cut it out?—Atchison Globe.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES are easier to use and color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye.

Brotherly Assistance.

Rodrick—They say that Beaker was held up by masked men the other night.

Van Albert—Yes, it was at the masquerade ball. If they hadn't held him up he'd never got home.—Chicago Daily News.

Actors, Vocalists, Public Speakers praise Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. Pike's Toothache Drops Cure in one minute.

What you would do with a million dollars may be guessed by a study of what you do with one.—Good Cheer.

$3.00 W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES $3.50
UNION MADE.

For More Than a Quarter of a Century

The reputation of W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes for style, comfort and wear has excelled all other makes sold at these prices. This excellent reputation has been won by merit alone. W. L. Douglas shoes have to give better satisfaction than other $3.00 and $3.50 shoes because his reputation for the best $3.00 and $3.50 shoes must be maintained. The standard has always been placed so high that the wearer receives more value for his money in the W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than he can get elsewhere.

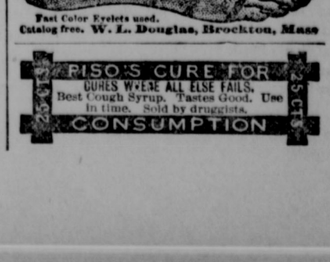
W. L. Douglas sells more $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than any other two manufacturers.

W. L. Douglas $4.00 Gilt Edge Line cannot be equalled at any price.

W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes are made of the same high grade leathers used in $5 and $6 shoes and are just as good.

Sold by the best shoe dealers everywhere. Insist upon having W. L. Douglas shoes with name and price stamped on bottom.

How to Order by Mail.—If W. L. Douglas shoes are not sold in your town, send order direct to factory. Shoes sent anywhere on receipt of price and 25 cts. additional for carriage. My custom department will make you a pair that will equal $5 and $6 custom made shoes, in style, fit and wear. Take measurements of foot as shown on model; state style desired; size and width usually worn; plain or cap toe; heavy, medium or light soles. A fit guaranteed. Try a pair.



Fast Color Eyelets used.
Catalog free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION
25 CTS.

LAST GREAT BATTLE.

Sheridan's Ride from Winchester, Twenty Miles Away.

It Marked the End of the Confederacy—Interesting Comments by Leaders on Both Sides of the Conflict.

[Special Washington Letter.]

WHEN the distinguished soldier-statesman and orator first announced his lecture, Gen. Dan Macauley, of the treasury department, said: "So Gen. Gordon is going to lecture on 'The Last Days of the Confederacy,' is he? Well, I must surely attend. It would never do for me to miss it. I heard the first part of that lecture on the morning of October 19, 1864; and it was exceedingly interesting and eloquent, although a little loud at times, and also very harrowing.

"I was commanding a brigade in the Nineteenth army corps that morning, when there was a sound of rattling musketry away off on the left which surprised me very much, because I knew, or thought I did, that the confederates had been so badly defeated at Winchester that they would never dare attack us. Soon, however, there was a booming of cannon also that sounded like business and battle. I had a dandy on my staff—Lieut. Rundlette—who was always the best-dressed officer in our brigade. No matter where we marched, nor how long, Lieut. Rundlette was always free from dust, because he carried a wisp broom with him and used it. He was brave enough, but always scrupulously neat in appearance.

"Well, I sent Rundlette off in hot haste to find out what all the firing meant. He soon came back excitedly telling me that the confederates were attacking in force. I mounted, had the long roll sounded, and said: 'Go back, lieutenant, form a line of stragglers, make them stand their ground, and do not report to me until that has been thoroughly done.' Inside of 15 minutes I was shot into the midst of the biggest pension roll on earth and awakened to find myself cared for by relatives and friends in home, sweet home at Indianapolis. That was the first part of this lecture, and I must surely go and hear the conclusion of it.

"Seven years later, while I was holding court as mayor of Indianapolis, proceedings were interrupted by the appearance of a handsome young man, slight of figure, faultlessly attired, who came up to the bar, saluted in true military style, and said. 'Gen. Macauley, I have come to report that there is nothing over there on the left but Gordon's whole division, fighting like devils.'

"'Court is adjourned,' said I, immediately. It was Lieut. Rundlette, whom I had not seen since that morning of October 19, 1864. Court remained adjourned for three whole days while Indianapolis was painted redder than it had ever been painted. The little cuss had been shot in seven places, left for dead, but finally was picked up and nursed back into life and health."

The recurrence of the anniversary of that battle which was made memorable by the gallant soldier and brilliant poet, because of the ride "from Winchester, 20 miles away," caused Capt. Patrick O'Farrell, of this city, to say: "I remember a good many things about that battle. I remember that Grant was commander in chief of all our armies, but he was not present in that battle. He claimed no credit for the great victory, but gave all praise to Sheridan. He telegraphed gallant little Phil, saying: 'I have ordered a shotted salute of 100 guns at the enemy's lines at Petersburg, in honor of your glorious achievement.' That was what Grant did.

"I remember how our army was scattered and almost shattered before ordinary breakfast time. It was a wonderful surprise for us, and would have been the end of that army, for the time being, but for the work of our signal corps. Sheridan was full of confidence. He had gone to Washington, supposing that his work had been practically completed by the victory at Winchester and Fisher's Hill, in September. But our signal corps men, on October 17, had taken from the confederate signal lights the message to Early: 'Remain where you are until I arrive, and we will crush Sheridan.' This was signed Longstreet. The fact was telegraphed to Sheridan at Washington. The great cavalry corps was on its way to Petersburg, but Sheridan ordered it back, and hastened himself to join his army. He arrived just in the nick of time. If Sheridan had not been there disaster would have been complete."

JUBAL EARLY IN CHURCH.

In a book, published soon after the conclusion of the civil war, Whitelaw Reid wrote: "At a glance Sheridan comprehended the disastrous situation and proceeded to organize victory from chaotic panic. The battle has been fitly likened to Marengo. The French had been driven back at sunrise. So had the federals. Napoleon arrived upon the field at noon. So did Sheridan. At three o'clock the French army moved forward. At four o'clock the union army commenced its advance. Marengo was saved by the arrival of Dessaix's corps of veterans. Cedar Creek was saved by the arrival of—a general."

Several years ago the writer visited Maj. Beverly Randolph, at Millwood, Va., who had been chief of ordnance to Jubal Early. Together we went over the historic field, and the gallant confederate explained many features of the battle. The narrator who had handled many official documents in the war department, and who was familiar with the movements of all union troops, remarked: "If it hadn't been for the Sixth corps, major, you would have swept this field and destroyed Sheridan's army before he arrived."

THEIR NOSES IN WHISKY BARRELS.

"You are mistaken," was the surprising reply. "It was the Nineteenth corps that whooped us. Of course the Sixth corps did lots of good fighting, but it was your Nineteenth corps that did the business."

This produced a brief argument, the narrator asserting that the Nineteenth corps had run away from the field early in the morning, the Eighth corps was driven back soon afterwards, and the Sixth corps formed an unyielding line along the turnpike, and thus gave Sheridan a nucleus for his subsequent formations The major ended the matter by saying positively, with his Virginia accent: "I tell you I was thar, and I knowit was the Nineteenth corps that licked us. We surprised the union left, and there was the Nineteenth corps which ran away. If they had stood firm, we could have swung onto the others all right. But the Nineteenth corps guarded all of the Yankee commissary stores. When all of those stores fell into our hands our soldiers went pillaging, and we couldn't stop them. They were hungry and thirsty. They ate up everything they could grab, and thousands of them buried their noses in the whisky bar'ls so that by noon they were stupid with their bellies full of food and drink. They thought the whole union army had run away, and they were just having a hell of a time. The officers could do nothing with them. Besides, hundreds of our officers got full, too. I don't want to say anything to detract from Sheridan's work, for it was the work of a good soldier and a great general anyway. But the army he whooped that afternoon was an army of drunken men. It was the flight of the Nineteenth corps that knocked us out."

That version of the story had never been heard by the writer, and it is probably the true story. Maj. Randolph was graduated from the naval academy, but went with his state into the confederacy. There being no navy, he entered the army and rendered service of value to his cause on many fields. At that time he told a story about Gen. Early, which was interesting, and also true. After the disastrous battle at Winchester, Gen. Early had moved back to Staunton where he attended church one Sunday evening. Maj. Randolph sat beside him. Although Early often attended church he was an irreverent man. The preacher delivered a sermon on the resurrection, in the course of which he told the hearers that all of their friends lying in the churchyard would arise. Early turned to Randolph and whispered: "I wish they'd rise now. I'd conscript every mother's son of them, for I need men."

Lieut Gen. Longstreet, almost 90 years of age, is still living and resides in this city. He is vigorous for his age, but very deaf. He has said to the writer: "I was bitterly disappointed and Gen. Lee was heartbroken with our failure. The plan was perfect and was perfectly executed. Maj. Randolph tells the correct story. It is useless for soldiers, or any other men for that matter, to cry over defeat or to blame others than themselves. But if our army had been amenable to discipline, if the officers and men had remained sober during that morning, Sheridan would have found no army which he could organize when he reached the field."

However, nothing succeeds like success; and Sheridan succeeded. The chances of war were all against him in the morning. The chances were but slight when he reached the field. He took the remaining chances. With marvelous energy and ability he reorganized a defeated army on the battlefield, and hurled it like a thunderbolt against the enemy. Victory was inevitable, because of the arrival of a military genius. It was with the stern purpose of victory that he made that terrific ride "from Winchester, 20 miles away." SMITH D. FRY.

ROMANCE AND REALITY.

Surprising Experience of a Humorist Who Believed in His Own Jokes.

He was a professional humorist and was making his first call upon a young lady whom he had met at a social gathering. Mr. Farfech was high up in his profession, but his duties were so arduous that he had no time for the social amenities of life, and this was his first experience in that line, says the Chicago Tribune.

The girl happened to be looking out of the window as the visitor reached the gate, and she observed his movements with considerable curiosity. He opened the gate carefully, paused and then whistled softly. Then he came up the path slowly, looking to the right and left over his shoulder at short intervals, and when he reached the porch and laid his hand on the doorbell he heaved a great sigh of relief.

"You are ill, Mr. Farfech?" said she, apprehensively, as she took his hat and coat.

"No—o," he replied, promptly, "but I confess I was a little afraid of the dog."

"The dog?" She looked surprised. "Why, we have no dog."

"No dog!" he repeated, blankly. "Why, I thought—that is— Ah, yes—to be sure."

Hardly had he seated himself when a voice from a distance called "Mary!"

He gave a little jump, and then smiled.

"Your mother, I presume," said he. "She is coming in to—er—make a few remarks."

"Ma? O, not at all. Why should she?"

She went out of the room, and during her absence a bright boy of about 12 made his appearance in the hall.

"Ah," said the visitor, "you are Miss Dolliver's brother."

"Yes, sir," said the boy, politely.

"I am Mr. Farfech. I suppose you have heard your sister speak of me. Come, now, my little man."

"I do not remember hearing her mention your name," replied the boy, as he passed on, leaving Mr. Farfech staring in a puzzled way.

Presently the young lady returned and Mr. Farlech was surprised to notice that she did not turn down the gas, and when, after some conversation, he asked her to sing for him, she did so without any excuse or complaining of a sore throat.

After an hour of singing and conversation an idea suddenly dawned upon him, and he began to paw under the sofa.

"What is the matter?" asked the young lady, in apparent astonishment.

"Hush! not a word!" said he, with a chuckle. "I'll snake him out in a minute."

"Snake him out? Really, Mr. Farfech—"

"That's all right. I'm on to these tricks. Your young brother is under the sofa, and is going to jump out presently and say something rude. They always do."

"Mr. Farfech," said the young lady, with dignity, "I have only one brother, and he has gone to a meeting of the Philomathean society. As for hiding under a sofa, I never heard of such a thing."

Mr. Farfech passed his hand over his brow and murmured: "I do not understand this at all."

Another half an hour passed. The young lady's mother did not come in, and he felt as one in a trance. Then he brightened up as he heard a gruff voice in a back room.

"Your father?" he asked, inquiringly. "Putting on his heavy boots, I suppose?"

"Why should he put on his boots at this time of night?" asked Miss Dolliver, wonderingly.

"Or, perhaps," he suggested, "he is getting down his shotgun?"

"Shotgun? I never knew pa had a gun. Really, Mr. Farfech, you have the most extraordinary ideas."

"Pardon me," he muttered, "but all this is so strange—so different from what I—. Will you sing again?"

She did her best to entertain him, but it was plainly to be seen that he was ill at ease. He talked almost at random, and she wondered where was that brilliancy which she had so much admired in his writings. Finally, it drew on to 11 o'clock, and, as his eye caught the timepiece, he brightened up for the last time.

"Well, Miss Dolliver," he said, as he arose, "I suppose here is where you sing 'Five O'Clock in the Morning' or 'There Are Moments When We Wish to Be Alone.'"

"I am not acquainted with either of those songs, Mr. Farfech," she replied, calmly. "Are you really going? Why, it is not late. O, well; if you must. I hope you will call again soon."

As he passed down the walk, he said, feverishly: "No gun—no kick—no bad brother—no meddlesome mother—gas up high—no hints to travel—. This is—this must be a dream."

Delicious Apple Salad.

Take half a dozen rather tart apples, peeled and sliced, and add a Spanish pepper, chopped fine; place in your salad bowl the tender leaves of a large head of lettuce, and upon that the apple slices sprinkled with the chopped pepper; over all pour a dressing composed of six tablespoonfuls of olive oil, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a little salt. Serve with cold meats.—People's Home Journal.

A True Hero.

She—I shall marry no man who is not a hero.

He—Say you'll be mine and I'll prove that I am one.

"Oh! Adolphus, how?"

"I'll go right in and 'ask papa.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

IBSEN'S WHISKERS.

An American Gentleman's Experience in Entertaining the Well-Known "Master."

One enthusiastic Ibsenite, while still rabid, will content himself in future with admiring the "master" through his works, writes Henry Dick, in New Lippincott. Officially called upon to reside in Norway for a season, he, after meeting the playwright on several occasions, invited him to pay him a visit. He found Ibsen a most difficult guest. He was extremely sensitive and sentimental and his feelings were constantly being hurt. The morning after his arrival the guest did not appear at breakfast. Instead a message arrived that he wished to see the eldest son of the house. As the eldest son was not present, the puzzled host went to see what the difficulty might be. It seemed that Ibsen desired the eldest son to act as a barber, that being the custom of the country. His host explained that, in the first place, the eldest son was absent, and, in the second, that had he been present the operation would have been fraught with peril, for the eldest son was conspicuously unskilled. Ibsen was advised, therefore, to seek professional assistance. As there was nothing else to do, Ibsen, weeping, departed and had his upper lip attended to professionally.

LESSONS BY PHONOGRAPH.

A New Device in Teaching Correct Pronunciation in Foreign Tongues.

Teaching modern languages by means of the phonograph is a new device. It is employed by some of the many correspondence schools that have sprung up all over the country in the last year or two.

At the headquarters of the school the teacher speaks the lesson into the funnel of the machine. These records are then mailed to the student, who may live a thousand miles away, together with a phonograph and several blank records.

In his own home the student sets the phonograph going and listens while it repeats as pure German, Italian or French as the teacher knows how to speak. Having learned the lesson he repeats it to the talking machine and sends the record back to the school, where the teacher criticises it for his benefit.

Printed lessons are sent out also, but from the phonograph it is asserted the pupil learns correct pronunciation as he never could from books, and almost as well as he would from the instructor at first hand.

MISS MAY PALMER.

Senator Chauncey M. Depew has announced that his marriage to Miss May Palmer will take place at Paris at a date not yet set. Miss Palmer is a daughter of Mrs. Henry Palmer, who was one of the three Herman sisters of New Orleans, famous for their beauty. Her family is an old one in New York, but owing to her having lived much abroad she is little known at home. She was educated abroad, speaks French, German and Italian fluently, and is a cultured musician. The portrait is from a photograph taken in London and reproduced in the New York Herald. The bride-to-be is 25 years of age.

GREAT ROCKING STONE OF TANDIL.

The largest rocking stone known is that of Tandil, near Buenos Ayres, in Argentine. It weighs about 700,000 pounds and has been rocking for centuries. Its pendulous movement, however, is so slow as to be imperceptible to the eye, but if a bottle be placed under it near the point of support the ponderous mass soon crushes it. Science maintains that the rocking is due to the unequal heating of the stone by the sun, causing unequal expansion of the different parts. This "piedra enobediza," as the natives call it, is one of the greatest curiosities of the Argentine republic.

MONGOOSE AND SNAKEBITE.

Blood of the Animal Contains an Antitoxin Which Is Destructive to the Poison.

There is probably no casualty more appalling than snakebite, by reason of the usually fatal result which follows the injury when the snake is of a highly venomous species, says the Lonron Chronicle. Even a minute quantity of the virus injected into the blood will prove death dealing within a very short period of time. Remedies for snakebite have hitherto been limited to attempts made to prevent the spread of the poison through the system and to the fortifying of the patient against collapse. But till within very recent times nothing in the way of antidote or specific cure for snakebite was known. True, there have been "snake stones"—still used in the east—which have been vaunted as specifics, but from an examination of specimens one finds them to be either pieces of ordinary mineral or bits of bone or pieces of plant roots. It is fairly safe to say that if any case of snakebite is said to be cured by the application of a "snake stone" the bite was not that of a poisonous species. Also it has been said that the immunity of the mongoose, the renowned snake killer, was due to the animal eating some herb or other which counterbalanced the effect of the bite. Nobody, however, has ever been able to discover this herb, and it happens that a much more scientific explanation of the power of the mongoose to resist the virus of the serpent is forthcoming. That explanation rests on the fact that the blood of the animal contains a principle (or "antitoxin," as it may be named) which is destructive to the poison of the snake, or which, at any rate, renders the body of the mongoose resistant to the action of the venom.

Flowing of Metals.

It is, perhaps, not generally known that one of the most important properties of metals employed in striking coins and medals, and stamping and shaping articles of jewelry, is that of flowing under pressure. Standard silver is remarkable for this property, which precisely resembles the flowing of a viscous fluid. The flow takes place when the metal is subjected to rolling, stamping or hammering, and the particles of the metal are thus carried into the sunken parts of the die without fracturing, and a perfect impression is produced.

Virginia's Educated Negroes.

Virginia has more educated negroes than any other state in the south in which disfranchisement for race reasons has been adopted or proposed.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

The United States supreme court has issued an order assigning Hawaii to the Ninth California circuit.

Vitellius, the glutton, who for a short time ruled the Roman empire had a waist measure of 62 inches.

Most of the medieval manuscripts have the important initials in red ink, hence the term rubries, from rubrica, red.

The original word translated apothecary in the Bible is believed by some authorities to be better translated by perfumer.

The Orinoco is only 1,600 miles in length, but is much larger than might be supposed, owing to the heavy rains of the tropics.

The city of Pensacola, Fla., now claims to be the third in commercial importance on the Gulf of Mexico, being excelled in exports only by New Orleans and Galveston.

A Japanese firm has leased an old brewery in West Berkeley, Cal., and proposes to manufacture liquors for the Japanese residents of this country. Japanese beverages made here can be sold at a price much lower than the cost of the imported liquors at San Francisco.

When an Arabian horse finds itself wounded and perceives that it will not be able to bear its rider much longer, it quickly retires from the conflict, carrying its master to a place of safety while it has still sufficient strength. But if the rider is wounded and falls to the ground, the faithful animal remains beside him, unmindful of danger, neighing until assistance is brought.

TURNED THE FAUCET.

And Then This Fair Young Daughter of Eve Had Her Curiosity Satisfied.

A daughter of Eve who was visiting in New York learned a valuable lesson the other day, but whether she profits by it remains to be seen, says the New York Times. She is visiting at the house of a friend, and with her hat on was about to go out one afternoon. But first she went to a big set bowl in the dressing-room to wash her hands. The house is a large one, and the bowl sets in a big slab of marble, with a formidable array of faucets above it. There was one strange feature about two of these faucets. They were those at the extreme ends on each side of the bowl, and they were tied with strings as if to warn the unwary against touching them. But of course there could be no reason, when there was a faucet over a set bowl, for not using it, so the young woman, with her curiosity well aroused, turned on the water from the extreme right-hand faucet.

Probably Eve herself had not her curiosity so quickly rewarded. As the young woman reached for the faucet she leaned well over the bowl, when whist! from the center of the bowl there came straight up in her face, in her eyes, her nose, her mouth, over her hat, and over her collar a strong, fine spray which soaked everything it touched. It did not take long to get out of it, but it was a very wet young woman who sat down to gasp and rose up again to recurl her hair, dry her bedraggled feathers and put on a fresh collar. Those are delightful sprays and do the complexion no end of good, but they must be taken in homeopathic doses and without hat or collar.

A UNIQUE RAILROAD.

Is in Maryland and Is Twenty Miles Long—Conductor Is Also General Manager.

A railroad owned by one man is Maryland's latest contribution to the chapter of unique things. This road is 20 miles long and runs from Brandywine to Mechanicsville, in the southern part of the state, says Golden Days. Its corporate name is the Washington & Potomac Railroad company. The single train which runs each way daily is made up of the engine, one freight car, and one combination baggage and passenger car. The schedule is liberal, and no hurry is manifested in train movements. The conductor of the train, who also acts as baggage master upon occasion, is general manager of the road. He issues orders as general manager and obeys them as conductor. When, as conductor, he thinks the schedule should be changed, he notifies the general manager (himself), who, if he thinks it advisable, makes up a new schedule and issues running orders accordingly to the conductor (also himself), and the latter obeys. There are no ticket agents along the route, and the conductor collects fares as on a street railway, punching a hole for each fare in a slip of cardboard. Then he goes into the baggage car, sees that the trunks are properly delivered, and looks after express and mail packages. Although the road cannot boast the accommodations of trunk lines, it is really a great convenience to the county through which it passes. It has been kept going almost entirely through the efforts of the young manager-conductor, who is hard working, untiring and popular. He has been busy improving the roadbed recently.

Moonlight and Complexion.

Doctors have provided the women with another source of worry. A physician claims to have discovered that the sun in all his glory is not as fatal to complexion as bright moonlight. As might have been expected, it was a Frenchman who made the discovery. Hardly had he announced it before shopkeepers had on exhibition cute little moonshades of double thickness of mousseline de soie which in Paris are now considered indispensable at moonlight parties.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1901.

THE ELECTION.

As this page goes to press, the control of the Legislature is in doubt. Returns from the counties are far too meagre to permit of a trustworthy conclusion. As has been the case upon all previous occasions of a close contest, counties from which practically no reports have come are being claimed as carried by the Gorman ticket. The Legislative vote in Baltimore city shows an aggregate net gain for the Republicans of about 13,000 over the corresponding vote in 1899, and this remarkable result is likely to be reflected in a greater or less degree in many of the counties of the State. Until further returns shall have been received, the Republicans have no reason whatever to concede to Gorman the control of the Legislature upon joint ballot.

GARRETT still leads.

THE increased Republican majority in Garrett speaks well for the splendid organization of the party under the guiding hand of Chairman Laughlin.

WE HAVE delayed the publication of THE REPUBLICAN several hours in order to place before our readers the official returns of the county and the result of the election on Tuesday throughout the State.

THE PRESIDENT'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

President Roosevelt Saturday issued his proclamation designating Thursday, November 28, as the national Thanksgiving Day. In his proclamation the President alludes to the tragic death of his predecessor, which, he says, "should awake in the breasts of our people a keen anxiety for the country and at the same time a resolute purpose not to be driven by any calamity from the path of strong, orderly liberty."

The American people have cause for profound thankfulness and gratitude that their govenment is so firmly established that the assassination of Mr. McKinley, shocking and deplorable as it was, served to strengthen our institutions rather than to weaken and impair them in any way. A calamity which might have produced a revolution among a people less accustomed and less adapted to what President Roosevelt calls "strong, orderly liberty" made Americans more determined than ever to preserve the institutions which wisdom and experience have proved to be the best, most liberal and most satisfying the world has ever known. The United States has cause not only for thankfulness but pride in that at a time of intense excitement, when the eyes of all the nations were centered upon it, it gave the world convincing evidence of the stability of republican institutions, as well as a striking illustration of the soberness and self-restraint of a democracy. It is the fashion nowadays not only among monarchists but among some reared under a republican form of government to assert that democracies are inherently weak and cannot have a permanent existence. The American people proved in the recent crisis that they possess the spirit and determination which assure the perpetuity of a republican form of government in the United States. The monarchists of the Old World have had an object lesson in the dignity and self-restraint of a democracy which they will not soon forget.

The United States has abundant reasons for thanksgiving in the material prosperity of the nation. Our industries are prospering in exceeding great measure. The products of American industrial skill find a ready sale in the markets of the world. There are few unemployed—the workingman sharing to a notable degree in the prosperity of the country. Drouth has decreased to some extent the productivity of the farms of the West and Southwest, but it is probable that while the farmers of those States will not have as much to sell as in a "good year," they will get better prices and thus be compensated for the smaller harvests. Since last Thanksgiving Day the United States has made a new record in the export of its agricultural and manufactured products. Europe is more dependent upon our farms and factories than ever before. While a state of war exists in the Philippines, peace prevails at home and our relations with other nations are of a friendly character. The country has been relieved of a part of the burden of war taxes, and, although those which remain are far from acceptable, there is cause for thankfulness that the situation is not worse. The nation has escaped plague and pestilence, and there have been no overwhelming disasters by fire and flood, like those of previous years. On the whole, the American people have every cause to give thanks out of grateful hearts for the blessings they have enjoyed in this first year of the twentieth century.

In the concluding sentences of his proclamation President Roosevelt indicates that he has no faith in a thanksgiving which is mere lip service. He believes that deeds should be linked with the words with which we express our gratitude. "We can best prove our thankfulness to the Almighty," says the President, "by the way in which on this earth and at this time each of us does his duty to his fellowmen." That is a large phrase, to be sure, including the whole question of human conduct and human relations. But it is not a "glittering generality," and an individual application can be given it by all of us, unless, as a people, we are so self-complacent that we can see no room for improvement in ourselves, either as a nation or as individuals.

DEMOCRATS HAVE NO POLICY.

There is no national Democratic party. There is an aggregation of political leaders with diverse views and antagonistic interests. It is called by the people at large the Democratic party, but no one knows for what the Democratic party stands.

It is doubtful if at the next national convention there will be a single state east of the Mississippi River which will have a delegation calling for the reaffirmation of the platform of 1896 or 1900, unless such delegation come from the Southern States.

And yet, should the next national Democratic platform abandon the principles of 1896 and 1900, should it declare for the maintenance of the gold standard; in other words, should the party place itself in harmony with the influences which are advancing the commerce of the United States at an unprecedented rate, there would be a division in the party as marked as that of 1896. It is manifest to everyone that the Democratic party cannot be unified under the leadership of Mr. Bryan on the one hand or the leadership of Mr. Hill or Mr. Croker or Mr. Watterson on the other. Therefore, we say that the Democratic party as a national organization stands for no definite policy. It has no definite program. Its exponents in one state contradict the declarations of its exponents in other states. So we have in the political field simply a guerrilla warfare, each command following its own chosen leaders, but incapable of formulating a great campaign or uniting under one commander.

Why should the people of the South, with undeveloped mines, with vast sources of wealth, looking for capital to build factories and ships and cities—why should the South throw itself politically across the path of progress? Why should it make its alliance with these guerrillas? Why should it make war upon the very influences that are doing most to develop its resources and to make good what the South has lost by the Civil War and that long era of isolation which followed the reconstruction?

HIGH SCHOOLS INCREASING.

The late census returns show that the number of public high schools in the United States increased from 2526 in 1890 to 6005 in 1900. It is evident from this statement that our public school authorities are not content with the mere learning of the "three R's" by the rising generation. The daily multiplication of inventions and the constant increase in the number of discoveries add thousands of new occupations to be followed by young men and young women entering upon their life work. Improvements in machinery demand more skill. The development of electricity requires more scientific knowledge. Transportation by railroad and steamship call for more intelligence than transportation by stage coach and sailing vessel. The concentration of population into the large cities makes competition sharper and more exacting. The trades and most all other avocations are divided and subdivided into specialties, each offering good wages to skillful workmen, but very meager compensation to common laborers.

Church Dedication.

The new church recently completed by the members of the Methodist congregation near Thayerville will be dedicated on Sunday, November 17. Rev. E. P. Idleman and probably other ministers will be present. All are cordially invited.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

President Refers to Mr. McKinley's Death. Names Thursday, November 28.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—President Roosevelt has issued his proclamation fixing Thursday, November 28, as a day of national thanksgiving. The proclamation is as follows:

A PROCLAMATION.

The season is nigh when, according to the time-hallowed custom of our people, the President appoints a day as the especial occasion for praise and thanksgiving to God.

This thanksgiving finds the people still bowed with sorrow for the death of a great and good President. We mourn President McKinley because we so loved and honored him; and the manner of his death should awaken in the breasts of our people a keen anxiety for the country, and at the same time a resolute purpose not to be driven by any calamity from the path of strong, orderly, popular liberty, which, as a nation, we have thus trod.

Yet in spite of this great disaster it is nevertheless true that no people on earth have such abundant cause for thanksgiving as we have. The past year in particular has been one of peace and plenty. We have prospered in things material and have been able to work for our own uplifting in things intellectual and spiritual. Let us remember that as much has been given us, much will be expected from us; and that true homage comes from the heart as well as from the lips, and shows itself in deeds. We can best prove our thankfulness to the Almighty by the way in which on this earth and at this time each of us does his duty to his fellowmen.

Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, do hereby designate as a day of general thanksgiving Thursday, the twenty-eighth of this present November, and do recommend that throughout the land the people cease from their wonted occupations, and at their several homes and places of worship reverently thank the Giver of all good for the countless blessings of our national life.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this second day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and one, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-sixth.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

By the President:

JOHN HAY,
Secretary of State.

Winter Tourist Tickets, Season 1901-2. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has placed on sale at all principal offices East of the Ohio River, Winter Tourist Tickets to points in Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Carolina and Texas; also Havana, Cuba, and Nassau, N.P., at reduced rates. For additional information call on Agent Baltimore & Ohio R.R.

Barnum's Monkeys

"All well—all happy—lots of fun". That is the regular report from the monkey cage of Barnum's Circus ever since the keepers began dosing the monkeys with Scott's Emulsion. Consumption was carrying off two thirds of them every year and the circus had to buy new ones.

One day a keeper accidentally broke a bottle of Scott's Emulsion near the monkey cage and the monkeys eagerly lapped it up from the floor. This suggested the idea that it might do them good. Since then the monkeys have received regular doses and the keeper report very few deaths from consumption. Of course it's cheaper to buy Scott's Emulsion than new monkeys—and that suits the circus men.

Consumption in monkeys and in man is the same disease. If you have it or are threatened with it can you take the hint?

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle.

Send for free sample.

SCOTT & BOWNE,
409 Pearl St., New York.
50c and $1. all druggists.

Official Statement of Returns of Election Held in Garrett County Nov. 5, 1901.

CANDIDATES.	No. 1—Swanton	No. 2—Friendsville	No. 3—Grantsville	No. 4—Bloomington	No. 5—Accident	No. 6—Sang Run	No. 7—Oakland	No. 8—Ryans Glade	No. 9—Johnsons	No. 10—Deer Park	No. 11—The Elbow	No. 12—Bittinger	No. 13—Blaine	No. 14—Oakland	Total	Majorities
For Comptroller of the Treasury:
Herman S. Platt, Republican	113	187	168	67	132	122	134	121	48	110	54	102	55	176	1589	812
Joshua W. Hering, Democrat	78	69	112	48	111	26	62	40	28	37	23	26	8	109	777
For Clerk Court of Appeals:
Thomas Parran, Republican	117	195	174	67	130	126	143	126	48	111	56	107	59	190	1649	861
Joseph F. Turner, Democrat	76	69	118	47	112	28	64	43	24	36	23	27	8	110	788
For State Senator:
Robert A. Ravenscroft, Republican	117	175	174	72	149	108	149	126	58	117	56	112	59	193	1665	717
John W. McCullough, Democrat	81	165	128	43	102	49	76	49	21	47	25	27	8	127	948
For House of Delegates:
Charles A. Ashby, Republican	116	197	177	69	132	121	143	129	47	119	51	110	58	227	1696	899
Patrick E. Finzel, Republican	113	186	173	70	131	121	134	123	57	116	53	109	52	177	1615	818
William R. Offutt, Democrat	74	81	125	44	114	31	86	48	22	43	25	28	8	121	850
E. C. W. Ryland, Democrat	74	117	110	41	107	28	53	37	10	31	23	27	8	79	745
For Sheriff:
W. A. Maffett, Republican	124	223	181	70	129	127	141	124	49	117	54	109	57	178	1683	788
Edmund Jamison, Democrat	76	89	122	48	118	32	76	53	19	51	26	30	10	145	895
For County Treasurer:
James W. White, Republican	121	212	184	71	135	123	168	140	49	125	56	111	58	227	1780	1026
Edward H. Bartlett, Democrat	73	86	117	44	110	31	57	33	17	36	23	27	8	92	754
For County Commissioners:
Taylor Friend, Republican	105	239	176	63	137	123	130	126	44	117	56	107	58	175	1656	804
Jacob Stump, Republican	124	171	172	91	133	125	128	120	40	112	53	111	54	146	1580	728
Floyd Crowe, Democrat	77	73	124	38	111	31	64	42	33	38	26	28	8	110	803
Charles Whitmore, Democrat	76	82	126	40	111	32	93	51	17	34	25	28	8	178	901
For Register of Wills:
Edwin E. Friend, Republican	114	202	179	72	132	128	151	130	50	117	58	109	59	200	1651	833
Thomas E. Flanigan, Democrat	84	94	124	45	115	26	63	41	19	39	23	28	8	109	818
For County Surveyor:
Franklin P. Green, Republican	108	200	183	65	129	105	113	111	47	112	55	107	57	143	1535	518
Edwin L. Mitchell, Democrat	88	106	118	51	117	52	108	65	25	47	24	30	10	176	1017
For Constitutional Amendment, Chap. 185	13	12	6	11	5	3	23	4	6	8	3	2	6	26	128
Against Constitutional Amendment, Chap. 185	12	80	59	34	99	73	80	73	8	47	24	61	25	61	736	608
For Constitutional Amendment, Chap. 432	18	15	7	15	5	4	19	7	6	9	3	3	6	27	136
Against Constitutional Amendment, Chap. 432	13	78	58	30	99	70	77	68	21	45	24	61	26	60	730	594
For Constitutional Amendment, Chap. 469	19	14	6	12	5	3	21	7	6	10	3	9	5	25	145
Against Constitutional Amendment, Chap. 469	12	79	60	33	97	74	82	78	8	50	27	60	26	61	747	602

The Prohibition ticket received 47 votes in the county and the Union Reform ticket 16 votes.

A Great Cash Bargain Sale

AT

Dixon & Kelso's

For 2 Days only, November 12th and 13th.

See Below a Few of the Many Bargains that will be Offered:

GROCERIES.

20 lbs Granulated Sugar (when bought with $5.00 worth of other goods)	$1.00
Arbuckles', Lion or Levering Coffee (when bought with $5 worth of other goods)	.10
Ceresota Flour per bag	.53
Matchless Flour per bag	.50
16 Bars 2-for-5 Soap (6 extra bars given) for	.25
Best Corn per can 7 cents, four cans for	.25
Bartlett Pears, A, 3 lb. can, 7c. four cans for	.25
Good Baking Powder, pound can	.07
Good Mixed Tea per lb	.39

DRY GOODS.

Best yard wide Brown Muslin per yard	.04¾
Indigo Blue and all best Calicos per yard	.04¾
Good Outing Cloth per yard	.04½
Good Canton Flannel per yard	.04¾
Large 10-4 Cotton Blankets per pair	.57
All Wool Factory Blankets per pair	2.69
Best Apron Ginghams per yd.	.04¾
A large lot Ladies' Coats at $2.69, $4.25 and	5.99
15 Ladies' Plush Capes at	2.49
5 dozen Children's and Misses Coats at $1.25, $1.99 and	3.29
Ladies' Heavy Wool Hose per pair	.23
The Black Cat Leather Stockings for Boys and Girls	.23

SEE OUR PRICES ON CLOTHING!

Boys' Reefer Overcoats, sizes 6 years to 15 years	$1.89
Boys' Cape Overcoats, sizes 7 years to 10 years	2.39
50 Men's Overcoats, worth from $4.50 to $6.00	3.99
47 Men's Beaver Overcoats, worth from $6.50 to $9.00	4.99
20 Men's Raglan Overcoats, worth from $10 to $12	7.99
29 Boys' Heavy Suits, age 9 to 15, worth $1.50, for	.89
34 Boy's Heavy Suits, age 8 to 15, worth $2.00, for	1.19
42 Boy's All Wool Suits, age 9 to 15, worth $3.00, for	1.69
37 Men's All Wool Suits, worth $3.75 to $4.50, go at	2.49
75 Men's All Wool Suits, worth $7.50 to $9.00, go at	4.99

This is Your Chance to Buy Underwear Cheap!

Boys' Heavy Fleece lined Shirts and Drawers, age 5 to 18	.23
Misses Union Suits, worth 35c. to 45c	.23
Good Heavy Undershirts for men	.23
Men's best fleece lined Undershirts and Drawers	.39
Ladies' best fleece lined Vests and Pants	.23
Men's Heavy Winter Overshirts worth 75 cents	.49
Boys' Heavy Winter Overshirts worth 65 cents	.43
A LARGE LOT LADIES and MISSES SHOES worth $1.50 to $1.75	1.13

Everybody come and take advantage of this sale. We mean to make it worth your time to come. Yours respectfully,

DIXON & KELSO.

Married.

MARTIN—KELSO.—On November 3, 1901, John A. Martin, of Green county, Pa., and Alta S. Kelso, of this county, by Rev. J. M. Davis, at the home of the bride.

Stops the Cough and Works off the Cold.

Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets cure a cold in one day. No Cure, no Pay. Price 5 cents.

Preaching at Hoyes.

The first quarterly meeting of the Friendsville circuit will be held at the Hoyes Methodist Episcopal church next Saturday and Sunday. Rev. L. A. Rudisill, of Mountain Lake Park, will preach Saturday evening at 7 o'clock and Sabbath morning at 10.30.

"The Deacon."

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the land of the undersigned lying in District No. 2 of Garrett county either for the purpose of fishing, hunting or passing through the same with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. C. W. FRIEND.

15 Minutes

sufficient to give you most delicious tea biscuit using Royal Baking Powder as directed. A pure, true leavener.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

"The Deacon."

Quite a number of Halloween parties were given in Oakland last week.

Lloyd Shaffer, of Cumberland, was in Oakland for a few days last week.

H. C. Sincell made a business trip to Martinsburg, W. Va., on Thursday last.

Mrs. E. E. Ison is in Washington where she is residing with her son H. A. Ison.

Mr. Lee Williamson, of Baltimore, spent several days last week in Oakland as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Sincell.

Mr. Harry Loar and his mother, who spent five or six weeks in Kansas and other Western States, returned home Tuesday morning.

Election Supervisor Welch, of Selbysport, was in Oakland Saturday and Sunday where he was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Brown.

Messrs. W. H. Perine and McHenry Howard, of Baltimore, were in Oakland a few days this week on a hunting excursion.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets cure biliousness, constipation and headache. They are easy to take and pleasant in effect. For sale by all druggists.

Mrs. R. E. Sliger and son Robert, who have been in Lonaconing for three weeks on a visit to relatives and friends, returned to Oakland last Friday afternoon.

The roads are in the finest condition that they have been this year. A spin over them is soul stirring. Many people have been taking advantage of the ideal conditions to get on the roads.

Mrs. Fundenberg, of near Deer Park, returned home on Friday last from an extended visit to friends and relatives at Cumberland. Her daughter Miss Tekla, who visited friends in Wheeling for a month, also returned home that day.

Mr. C. F. Kimmell, of Wolf Summit, West Va., has been in this section for several days visiting his mother. Mr. Kimmell has become a cash-in-advance subscriber to this paper and we trust that the weekly visits of the journal to his home may be a source of pleasure to him.

The plant of the News-Standard at Uniontown, Pa., was burned out on Saturday last entailing a loss of about $8,500. The News-Standard is one of our most valued exchanges. We expect to see it rise out of its ashes and become more popular than ever. Mr. Sturgis, the owner, is well known at the Park, where he spends a portion of each season.

Grant's "West Virginia Illustrated" is the finest work of its kind yet gotten out. Mr. Grant is the B. & O. Railway photographer and he is getting out in six parts photographic illustrations of railway and historic scenes in the state. Each part contains fifty superb pictures. The scenes are taken along all the railway lines of the state and contain some of the famous battle fields of the civil war. The work will enable one to preserve many historic scenes that can be had in no other way.

When a man goes into business he has some cards printed, and when he meets an acquaintance thereafter he pokes out a card and says: "When you are down my way, drop in" That's advertising. The trouble is that you can't repeat the operation often enough—personally. What you can do is to put the card and the remark, more or less elaborately expressed, into such a paper as the one you are reading now and have it handed to a great number of people all in one day.

Messrs. Dixon & Kelso, one of Oakland's progressive mercantile firms, evidently believe that when they have anything good to offer their customers in the way of bargains is to call the attention of the public thereto by means of printer's ink, which they do in to-day's REPUBLICAN as witness the display advertisement which will be found elsewhere in this issue. Some good values are offered and we advise our friends to take advantage of the sale which will be for two days, next Tuesday and Wednesday.

"The Deacon."

Mr. Harry Hebden, of Baltimore, was in Oakland last week on business.

Just received, a big car white middlings, or red dog, at Dixon & Kelso's 33-2t*

The members of the Oakland Cotillion Club gave a dance in Offutt's Hall on last Friday night.

Mr. W. H. Jacobs, of District No 11, was in town yesterday on business before the County Commissioners.

Henry Beitzell, one of Bittinger's substantial citizens and staunch Republicans, was in town to-day on business.

Mrs. E. E. Flowers and family have removed from the Felty house on Water street to the Davis property on Second street.

Attorney Thomas J. Peddicord returned home yesterday morning from a week's professional visit to Hamilton, Ohio.

Mr. George W. Snyder, of Cumberland, was in Oakland yesterday on business and made this office a very pleasant visit.

Messrs. Charles Brown and Ross Compton, two Grantsville citizens whom the people of Oakland are always glad to meet, were in Oakland to-day on business.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Delawder have shipped their household goods to Washington, their future home, and will leave to-night for the above city.

Among those who took advantage of the low-rate excursion to Clarksburg on Sunday were Mr. George H. Fulmer and daughter Miss May and Miss Blanche Flowers.

The hunting season has opened but no serious accidents have been reported. This is different from the opening of the season in other places and indicates a woeful lack of enterprise on the part of our hunters.

Bible lecture by Bro. Sampson, of Zion's Watch Tower, Allegany, Pa., will be given at Loch Lynn Hall on Wednesday evening, Nov. 13, at 7.30, and at Oakland, Sturgiss' Hall, on Thursday evening, at 7.30. All cordially invited. No collection.

As predicted the old town presented a sorry sight on Friday morning—the day after Halloween. Second street was piled high with wagons, drays, carts, etc. A few disreputable sidewalks were ripped up and thrown into the streets which may in time prove to be a blessing in disguise—after the new sidewalks are laid.

Rev. Dr. H. Scott met with a mishap yesterday which will probably keep him in bed for several days. He was out making calls on some of his parishoners and stepping upon a rolling stone he twisted his ankle quite severely. Yesterday he suffered very much and was confined to his bed much of the day.

The New Germany road, particularly on the Meadow Mountain slope, near C. J. Otto's, has long been a source of danger to travelers. Recently Mr. Augustus Durst, an efficient road supervisor, with the aid of the good people of his neighborhood, have re-located about one-half mile of the heaviest grade on this road with little aid from the county. They have done some of the most skillful engineering and built a piece of the best road in the county. The Board of County Commissioners should at least provide half the money they have expended. These public-spirited citizens should be encouraged by being partly reimbursed. They have expended about $200.

The Board of County Commissioners are now in session transacting routine business. This will be the last meeting of the Board as now constituted, Messrs. Garey and Kelso retiring to give place to Messrs. Taylor Friend and Jacob Stump, who were chosen by the people at the polls on Tuesday to serve as public servants. The members of the new board, who will assume their duties on January 1st, will be composed of the two last named gentlemen and Mr. Peter J. Stephens, the hold-over member of the present board, who will be president of the incoming body. The duties of the County Commissioners are onerous at all times, and having so many persons to deal with in the regular routine work of a position of this character it was not expected that any body of men could give perfect satisfaction to everybody. Nevertheless we have no hesitancy in saying that we believe the board acted conscientiously in everything brought before them and they leave a record clear of arduous work well done. The incoming board will no doubt be just as conscientious, as painstaking and exert the same degree of energy in looking after the interests of the entire people whose public servants they are abont to become.

"The Deacon."

Lloyd Wilburn, of near Hoyes, was here one day last week on business.

GAME.—H. Creutzburg buys game of all kinds for cash.

Services in St. Mark's Lutheran church Sunday morning and evening. A cordial welcome. GEO. I. UHLER.

Hon. and Mrs. John A. Swope, of Washington, are in Oakland the guests of their daughter, Mrs. Kerler.

Go to Hinebaugh's Restuurant for meals, lunches, oysters, etc. Ladies' dining room in connection.

The Knights of St. John are making arrangements for a ball to take place on Thanksgiving night.

The vote cast on Tuesday was canvassed to-day by the Board of Supervisors of Elections.

We regret to say that election Supervison C. E. Ellithorp is lying very ill at his home near Bittinger.

Mrs. Fred. C. Allen (nee Miss Effie Orcutt), of Grafton, is visiting her parents in this place. Her husband spent Sunday here also.

Mr. and Mrs. John Johns, of the Park, will leave to-day to spend the winter with their son, Samuel B. Johns, at Brooklyn, New York.

Capt. James W. White, Lafayette K. White, I. W. Abernathy and Chas. E. Hilleary, all of District No. 8, were Oakland visitors yesterday.

Lee Hayden, son of Capt. and Mrs. Jas. A. Hayden, of the Park, has gone to a point near Pittsburg where he has secured work at good wages.

In our report of the High School examination last week we inadvertently omitted the name of Roy H. Hamill, who passed the examination with a creditable percentage.

When you feel that life is hardly worth the candle take a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They will cleanse your stomach, tone up your liver and regulate your bowels making you feel like a new man. For sale by all druggists.

A new time table will be made up and will take effect on Sunday, November 17th. Two or more trains will be taken off when the new schedule takes effect, both being accommodation trains, one each way morning and evening.

Since the hunting season came in there have been hundreds of pheasants and woodcock shipped from this point to markets east and west. Pheasants brought here are disposed of at from sixty to seventy-five cents each. Woodcock bring about the same price.

James Graham, an eccentric old man who lived in the Whetsell settlement, near Eglon, in Preston county, W. Va., is dead at the age of 83 years. Just before his death he told some member of the family to go to an old barrel in the granary, take a number of things therefrom and they would find some money. They did so and found nearly a hundred dollars in silver and nickel coins.

J. B. Williams Co., Frostburg, have secured from Mr. J. C. Markwood, Oldfields, W. Va., an order for which will be, when erected, the finest monument in West Virginia. The shaft will be set up in the Markwood cemetery at Greenland Gap. The material to be used is Quincy granite. The Williams Company feel very proud over securing this order.

Should fires break out in the mountains now the results would be most disastrous as everything has become as dry as tinder owing to the drouth which has prevailed all over this section of country for the past six weeks or more. If fire should break out nothing but long continued rains could stop the flames, unless everything should be consumed before the rains came. There is very little water in the streams and many never-failing springs and wells are already dry.

Forest fires are raging all around us earlier than we usually have them, extensive enough, however, to keep farmers always on the alert to protect their fencing. A dwelling house at Empire, occupied by the Mr. Sol Harvey, burned to the ground on Friday, including his household goods. It is supposed that the fire caught from a spark from an engine passing. It took considerable work to save the adjoining house, occupied by Mr. Pritts. The property belonged to Mrs. Daniel L. Jones, of Philadelphia, and was not insured.—Bloomington Corr. Piedmont Independent.

A MAN KILLED.

A Bridge Gives Way With a Team Heavily Laden With Lumber in District No. 2.

WM. RECKARD VICTIM OF THE ACCIDENT.

He Was Crossing Mill Run When Two Girders of the Bridge Broke and Precipitated Him to the Bed of the Creek, the Wagon and Lumber Falling Upon and Killing Him.

This morning news reached this office of a fatal accident which occurred in District No. 2 yesterday afternoon whereby a man named William Reckard, of near Addison, Pa., was killed and two horses of his team of four animals were hurt very badly

The details of the fatality are about as follows: Reckard was employed in hauling lumber from the Neil Mill, situated on Mill run, about five miles from Selbysport, and was transporting a load of the lumber from the mill to the railroad station. The team was composed of four horses and was heavily ladened. The approach to the bridge over Mill run where the accident took place is down a slight hill and it is thought that Mr. Reckard was either on the rear of his wagon or walking alongside of it holding the brake. The horses did not go on the bridge in the centre but to one side, throwing the weight of the team entirely upon two girders or support of the structure. The strain was two heavy and as a consequence the timbers gave way and threw the wagon over the side, the driver falling underneath. The lumber and wagon were piled upon him and also the two wheel horses of the team. When found the man was dead and two of the horses badly hurt.

The bridge was repaired but a short time ago and was thought by the road supervisor and County Commission Geary to be perfectly safe.

The body of the victim of the accident was taken to Addison, Pa., yesterday for burial.

JUDGE DAVID W. SLOAN.

Fine Picture and Interesting Sketch of Cumberland Jurist.

The Baltimore Sun one day last week contained a splendid picture of Judge David W. Sloan, of Cumberland, and the following sketch:

"Associate Judge David W. Sloan was elected November 5, 1895, as a successor to Judge Henry W. Hoffman. He is 51 years of age and his term of office does not expire until 1910. He resides in Camberland, Md. Judge Sloan was born in Allegany county and was 45 years of age on the very day he was nominated for judge by the Republican convention of the Fourth circuit, September 26, 1895. He was a St. John's College man at Annapolis and a graduate of Princeton College in 1873. He studied law in the office of Hon. Lloyd Lowndes in Cumberland and graduated from the law department of the Maryland University in 1876. He was three times elected State's attorney for Allegany county, namely, 1879, 1887 and 1891. He nominated Lloyd Lowndes for Governor at the Cambridge convention of the Republican party in 1895. His successor as State's attorney was Hon. George A. Pearre, now a member of Congress from the Sixth district of Maryland."

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Grantsville, Md., on or about the middle of July last, 5 head of sheep, 4 yearlings and one older, 4 being ewes and one a weather. Four of said sheep having crops off left ear and slit in right ear; one with left ear cropped off.

The owner or owners are hereby notified to come forward, prove property, pay costs and take them away.

Dated Oct. 1, 1901.

CHRISTIAN M. LIVENGOOD,
30 Grantsville, Md.

The Month of November.

We have entered upon the eleventh month of the year, drawing towards the end of 1901, the first year of the twentieth century. According to prediction it will be an eventful month. Paramonnt to all, it will witness the entire vindication of the hero of Santiago. Secular societies and churches will have numerous entertainments and Thanksgiving will be joyously observed. November, of the fall months, is the nearest approach to winter, and no matter how long the autumn may be prolonged there is always a change to winter about Thanksgiving. With all the task of summer accomplished, the crop all housed, the frost king begins to hover around right heavily. "November, the morning looks upon thy jewels; and they perish while it gazes. In the night time thou lieth down and the messengers of winter deck thee with hoar frosts for thy burial."

BUSINESS LOCALS.

FOR SALE:—The Lutheran parsonage, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

A FATALITY AVERTED.

As it Was Two Men and a Woman Were Very Badly Burned.

Michael Legeer and Alfred Groves, residing near Bittinger, where the former owns and operates a coal mine, were both badly burned last night by an explosion of powder which took place in the room in which they, with Mrs. Legeer, her two children and W. A. Olcher, were sitting. Mr. Legeer and Mr. Groves were engaged in filling squibs with which to blast out coal. Seven of these had been finished and were lying on the floor near them. Nearby was a box containing a hundred fuses and a can with five pounds of powder enclosed. Mr. Legeer was explaining how the blasts were placed and set off and to make the matter plain he took from the box one of the fuses and touched it off. The whole box took fire and in an instant the squibs on the floor and the can containing the powder exploded, blowing out the windows in the room and springing the walls and ceiling some two inches. The clothes of both Legeer and Groves were set on fire. Prof. Olcher retained presence of mind enough to throw the two children out of the window and then ran into a room adjoining where he got two buckets of water with which he extinguished the flames, thus probably saving not only the lives of the two imperilled men but also Mrs. Legeer and the childreen. Mrs. Legeer sustained a number of burns but none very serious. The men were badly burned about the face and hands. Prof. Olcher escaped with no injuries.

Fortunately when the explosion took place a door which led to a room where a can of powder containing twenty-five pounds was blown shut thus preventing it from exploding also.

Dr. R. A. Rayenscroft was called as soon as the accident took place and alleviated the sufferings of the victims as much as possible.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Clarence Michael and Lee Hayden have gone to Pennsylvania to work.

Postmaster Jarboe, of Oakland, was a visitor at the Park last Saturday morning.

John Waugh, of Cumberland, was at the Park Sabbath last. He took in the Sunday school convention.

Our school house has a capacity of about 34 students and has an enrollment of 64, and "more to come."

Messrs. Shirer, of Oakland, are putting the roof on the new addition to Hotel Chautauqua. Contractor Brown is laying the floors.

E. E. Friend visited Gorman last Friday afternoon. He will certainly carry that district.

M. M. Schrock is preparing for his annual trip to the forests for Christmas trees for the Pittsburg market.

Mrs. Hamill, of near Swanton, was at the Park Monday. She says that Miss Mollie is delighted with Washington city and the Deaconness Training School, of which she is a student.

William Combs enlisted in the marine corps instead of the regular army.

C. F. Dawson is painting Charles Washington's house. It is as "neat as a pin."

A car of sewer pipe was received by the Community last week.

The old bridge on Philadelphia avenue has been torn down and a fill is being made.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT

Miss Elvina Hayes, who has been visiting relatives in the southern part of this county during the summer, has returned here for the winter. Her sister, Mrs. M. C. Reinhardt, who has been running the Maryland Home so successfully for the past three summers, is now on a trip, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Droege, of Deer Park, to the Pan-American exposition and Niagara Falls. They were met by Mr. Droege's son Albert, a prominent railroad official, with his private car and taken to his home. We are always glad to hear of the success of our Maryland boys.

The beautiful fall weather has greatly favored the building here. The three large ones are about ready to close in for the winter.

F. P. Arnold has about completed the exterior of his addition and is now plastering some new houses at Dobbin, W. Va.

Jennings Bros. R. R.

Jennings Bros. railroad up the Casselmam Valley in Garrett county, is now completed to their large lumber plant at Bevansviile and the work of putting in their plant is now going on. They will have one of the most complete lumbering and manufacturing plants in this state. Their timber will be manufactured up to the smallest stick and the mill will be in operation as soon as completed. The railroad has already proven a great blessing to that section of Garrett county and will be more so as the recent developments progress.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in Chicago.

Hisgen Bros., the popular South Side druggists, corner 69th street and Wentworth avenue, say: "We sell a great deal of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and find that it gives the most satisfactory results, especially among children for severe colds and croup." For sale by all dealers.

WITH CLARION CALL.

(A RONDEAU.)

With clarion call, across the way,
Old chanticleer awakes the day;
Exultant notes so loud and shrill
Their echo sounds upon the hill
Where gleams of morning stray.

In bed no longer may I stay;
Stern Duty hurries to the fray,
And bids me rise and do his will
With clarion call.

Then come, my soul, with spirits gay,
Arise and meet the world's array—
Old chanticleer in tones that thrill
Bids me the round of life fulfill,
And courage gives my heart alway—
With clarion call.

The insolence of sudden wealth—
You'll know it by its manners:
It never does a thing by stealth,
But always shows its banners.
Cold ostentation is its cue,
Where e'er it proudly passes—
A bitter phrase, but, then, 'tis true:
It stands for blooming asses.

August, 1901. —T. L. L.

A Timber Plant To Employ 500.

Bond Bros., of near Pittsburg, Pa., who recently purchased 13,000 acres of timber land in Garrett county, lying on Savage river, near Piedmont, from Armstrong, of Philidelphia, after much difficulty secured a right of way from 34 Water Station, on the Baltimore and Ohio 17 mile grade, to the Mrs. Mary Wilt farm, a distance of about three miles, where they have selected a mill site, and expect to commence grading a standard-gauge railroad next week.

When completed this will be the largest timber plant in the State and will employ about 500 men. This road will also furnish an outlet from the west side of Savage Mountain for the large body of coal recently purchased by Reakirt Bros., of Philadelphia, and enable them to ship their coal by the Baltimore and Ohio without paying transfer charges to the Cumberland and Pennsylvania. The junction will be two miles west of Piedmont.

The Casselman Valley Coal and Mineral Development Company.

A chartered company has been formed in Grantsville, known as "The Casselman Valley Coal and Mineral Development Company," Wm. T. Stanton, president; Ralph Engle, vice president; W. R. Getty, treasurer; Ross Compton, secretary. One thousand dollars has been raised to bore a hole with a diamond drill 400 feet deep, near Jennings' mills in the Castleman Valley, five miles south of Grantsville, near the Jennings railroad. The State of Maryland has contributed $250. Prof. W. B. Clark, State Geologist, has charge of the work, and has contracted with a Scranton, Pa., firm to do the drilling. This company proposes to sink a hole at least 400 feet deep, the core to be taken in charge by Prof. Clark. The coal veins and minerals are to be analysed and tested and the result published. The drill is now on the ground, and work will begin in a short time. The Casselman Valley coal field will be thoroughly investigated and the actual character and value of our minerals known.

Garrett Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Rev. J. E. Moffatt, of Cumberland, will preach next Sunday evening, Nov. 10th, at 7.30 o'clock. All are cordially invited to attend.

Died.

MENHORN.—The six months' old infant of Mr. and Mrs. John Menhorn died in Oakland Wednesday morning of diphtheria. A few hours later their daughter Clara, aged 5 years, also died of the same disease. The funerals of both children took place this morning.

BRENNEMAN—At her home near Bittinger on Wednesday morning, after an illness of a few days of pneumonia, Mrs. Daniel J. Brenneman, aged about forty-eight years. The deceased was a member of the Lutheran church and was a consistent christian lady. She leaves several children and a husband. She was a sister of Emanuel Custer, Esq., of near Hoyes. Her funeral will take place Friday.

Seventeen-Year Locusts.

State entomologists are already admonishing farmers to prepare for the coming, next year, of the seventeen year locust. The direction, if followed, may keep the ravages of the pest down to the minimum. To avoid injury, growers are advised not to set out young orchards, either this fall or in the spring. If they do set them, they should leave as many shoots and branches as possible on which the insects may lay eggs without harm to the tree itself. The branches may be trimmed out early in July, when all danger is past. Fruit and shrub trees should be trimmed as little as possible, and it will be better not to trim them at all. No budding or grafting should be done either in the fall of 1901 or next spring, as growing buds and grafts are especially apt to be injured.

Call For Your Letters.

Henry May (2), Geo. E. Bishoff, George Smith, W. H. Hoy, Tom Stayley, S. C. Jackson, Miss Bridget Conell, Miss Pearl Shaffer, Miss Louise S. Dabney, Miss Nellie C. Wise, Miss Cathern Males, Mrs. Josephine S. Dixon, Mrs. Geo. L. Rhodes.

A Great Medicine.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. Phipps, of Poteau, Ark. "It cured me of bloody flux. I cannot speak too highly of it." This remedy always wins the good opinion, if not praise, of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects even in the most severe cases make it a favorite everywhere. For sale by all druggists.

THE DINNER HORN.

The dinner horn, the dinner horn,
The sweetest sound that e'er was born;
It winds away so loud and clear,
And none so deaf but he can hear.

New life it puts in man and boy,
And lights each face with new-born joy;
The lad who scarce before could crawl
Now lightly vaults the orchard wall.

The hired man who droned along
Now cheerily carols the latest song,
And steps are swift that were slow before,
As straight he strides for the kitchen door.

The tramp, too, hears; his nap it breaks;
With hungry sniff his way he takes
To where looms up the farmhouse gable
To take his chance at second table.

O dinner horn! O dinner horn!
Sweetest of sounds that e'er was born;
I'd sing your praises some more, I vow,
But I've got to quit; I hear it now!
—Will S. Gidley, in Farm Journal.

Grit That Was In Him

By WILLIAM WENDHAM

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

"THIS is the end, sir—do you hear, the end! Leave the house and never enter it again. I will pay these infamous bills, but they are the last. To-morrow I will advertise your shame to the world and warn all men that I will never again pay a debt that you contract. Not one dollar of mine will ever go into your hands." So spoke Godfrey Whitford to his only son and heir, Earl.

"Where would you suggest that I go?" suggested Earl in his lazy drawl, crossing his aristocratic legs and leaning back in the chair. "As you know, the present state of my finances does not permit of a trip abroad nor a suite at the Union."

The old man flashed one blazing glance at the younger from his keen gray eyes and the square jaw became more set than was usual.

"You may go where you please. Perhaps the disreputable companions with whom you have chosen to consort can make some appropriate suggestions."

"In other words, I may go to the devil," remarked Earl.

"Exactly—or where you please," replied the other. "Good day."

It was the climax of a long season of wild oats by the boy, and which had been borne with more or less impatiently by the hard-headed millionaire. He had long realized that Earl was going rather a swift pace and was spending more money than was good for a young man, but he had reflected that his son had been brought up in an atmosphere of wealth and luxury and he did not wonder that he did not know the value of money. He had hoped all along that he would settle down after his college days and take hold of his business with him. But when he returned from a few months' trip abroad and was faced with bills run by Earl during his absence he was appalled. The bills ran high into four figures, and the boy began to show signs of dissipation. There had been a stormy scene, and Godfrey Whitford had laid down the ultimatum.

This had been but four months before, and now again came another batch of bills—only this time they were all combined in one loan from a money-lender, and the total exceeded the amount that had so scandalized the old man upon his return from Europe.

Earl Whitford, after calming his nerves with a series of cocktails, took account of stock and sized up the possibilities. It resulted in his calling on a favorite uncle, and laying the case before him. His uncle gave him a good dressing down, and plenty of good advice, and ended by letting him have a thousand dollars.

The papers the next day gave the city two distinct shocks. Society read in the morning issue that Earl Whitford had been disowned and disinherited by his father, and that Godfrey Whitford would no longer be responsible for any debts he contracted. The evening issue related in big headlines the story of the most sensational "killing" in the history of the local racetrack, which "killing" had been accomplished by Earl Whitford, who had appeared on the track with a thousand dollars which he placed on a "thirty-to-one shot" and won; afterwards placing the entire $30,000 winnings on a favorite in another race, and doubling his money.

This was but the beginning of the sensations Earl Whitford gave the papers. With $60,000 in his pocket he gave the staid old city an illustration of "painting the town." Fast horses, desperate gambling at race track and gaming rooms, where the stakes caused the modest gambler to gasp; wine suppers so elaborate and so free as to become common talk; midnight orgies—every form of dissipation that would burn money—all these things were spread daily before the people in the newspapers, and the strange thing was that Earl's money did not diminish. His marvelous luck clung to him, and the more reckless were his bets the more he seemed to win.

After awhile the young man received a letter which startled him a bit. It was from Irene Dawson, his second cousin, a sweet little girl who lived down in the country, and to whom he was engaged. She had been summoned to town by his father and told the circumstances of Earl's dismissal from home and advised to break off the engagement. She had arrived in the middle of his great debauch, and she wrote him immediately. She told him how shocked she was and that her heart was broken; that she had loved him thoroughly, and never could love another, but now it was manifestly impossible to marry him; and she hoped he would find in the life he had chosen enough of happiness to compensate for a woman's broken heart and for the family name he had dishonored and the respect of the world which he had forfeited. The letter sobered him a trifle. He had a genuine affection and respect for the girl, and the thought that he had lost her staggered him at first. But he only plunged the harder into debauchery.

After he had exhausted his ingenuity in finding fresh ways to shock the community and humiliate his father, he went to New York taking with him a more or less brilliant train of satellites. There his fast life was continued. His luck did not follow him and as the months went by his store of cash grew less and less. One day something over a year after he left the home city he awoke to the realization that he was practically at the end of his pile. This news he gently broke to the satellites who had been feeding off him, with the effect that there was a great scurrying of rats to get away from the sinking ship. All were more or less hurt at his lack of consideration at going broke and all accepted a last little loan from the dregs and faded away.

One night he turned into a popular roof garden, heavy with liquor, and came directly face to face with his father and Irene Dawson. The old man looked him full in the face and without sign of recognition. Irene with an expression of disgust drew in her skirts that they might not touch him. A smile came into his flushed face.

"I could show them a thing or two yet—and the others, too, if it were worth the while. Is it worth the while? This sort of thing surely is not."

Some months later Godfrey Whitford, president of Consolidated Traction system, sat in his private office bending over his papers when the door opened and a man entered. The man came close to his desk before the old man looked up. He faced his son plainly dressed, perfectly sober and with clear eyes and steady hands.

"Well, sir?" he said, frowning.

"Pardon my intrusion, sir," said the son, "I have not come to ask for anything nor to make apologies. I simply want to say to you, that I am through. I have had all the fun I want and am now going to work. I have decided that I will work out my career here where I had my fling and I have a curious desire to begin it in the very business in which I could have started near the head. I come only to tell you of my plans so you may not think I am doing anything except in the open. I can doubtless get a job down at the barns washing cars or oiling tracks or something. I will apply to the foreman—unless you object. I will do so under my own name, but without any reliance on your favor. Good day, sir."

"Good day," and the old man turned to his papers. After the door closed he looked out of the window long and thoughtfully. Then he sighed and returned to his work.

About this time Irene Dawson received a letter from Earl Whitford in which he said that he appreciated fully how dastardly he had acted and that he realized what he had lost; that the only reparation he could make was to live a decent life and try to make something of himself; that he asked nothing from her—indeed he realized he could not, but for his own sake he proposed to show her that she need not draw her skirts away when she passed him.

Earl Whitford pursued his lowly work in the barns with the same ardor of spirit which he had thrown into his dissipation. His identity was not known, but his quiet industry and application told and he was advanced rapidly, within a few months being placed on a car as conductor. There the great test came. As luck would have it he was given the run penetrating the most aristocratic section of the city and was compelled to collect fares from those with whom he had associated in the days of his prosperity. But he stuck it out and made no sign.

Then came the great strike. One terrible day when everything was at the worst there was a fearful clash at Fifth and Plutarch streets and the issue depended on the motorman, who deserted. The conductor rushed through the car, grabbed the lever and amid volleys of bricks, cobblestones and bullets won the day—then was carried senseless to the hospital. Godfrey Whitford when asked what should be done about it (it being known by his subordinates at that time who the hero was) said:

"Follow the usual course," but it was observed that the old man was in high feather that night.

But he never relented and Earl won his way from one place to another until he became assistant superintendent. Then one fine day the old man died and lo, and behold, there was no will and Earl inherited the entire estate. There was only one sealed note from the father to the son. It read:

"My boy: you did it your way and I am proud of you."

Earl Whitford is now the president and general manager of the Consolidated Traction system and in his heart of hearts he knows that he was the arbiter of his own fortune.

P. S.—The author forgot to relate that when Earl was in the hospital a lady whose face was concealed by a heavy veil visited him daily and as soon as he was convalescent knelt by his bedside and buried her face in his bosom. And that she forgot and forgave all the past and that they were quietly married one spring morning before he returned to work.

HE SAID "NO."

A Ranchman's Righteous Stand Turns a Western Community from Drunken Carousals.

The great Young Men's Christian association convention recently held in Boston brought delegates from all parts of the world to testify to the value of the Christian religion as the highest rule of conduct for a practical life. It was natural, as the delegates met each other, for them to exchange vital experiences. The following was told by one who had traveled 8,000 miles to attend the meetings:

"My father was a rancher on a small scale in Australia. He had only 1,000 sheep or so and a couple of square miles of run for pasture. He was an English emigrant of sturdy yeoman stock, and while the free life of a shepherd had taught him tolerance and kindness, he remained true in principle to the strict lessons of his early years.

"The nearest neighbor or station was ten miles away, but the ranchmen used to think nothing of riding 20 or 40 miles to a centrally located farm on Saturdays to spend the night in carousal, and ride back on Sunday.

"The isolation was so depressing and the heat so exhausting that when the men came together once a week in this way, drinking and gambling seemed inevitable. In the kindled passion and excitement of these coarse pleasures they thought they might forget for a few hours the suffering and privation of their lot.

"THERE WILL BE NO CARDS OR LIQUOR."

"At last it was my father's turn to entertain. He must invite the herders of the kraals and ranches within a radius of nearly 50 miles.

"'Boys,' he said to his two sons, my brother and myself, 'it's the parting of the ways. We either live as we have lived, simply, in the fear of God, minding our business, paying our debts if we can, saving our money if possible, and being cut by every man round here, or we fall into the ways of our neighbors, and drink and gamble ourselves into perdition. I am not going to break your mother's heart, and I say "No," even if they burn us down.'

"It was the critical moment of our lives. I could have fallen at my father's feet and worshiped him when he made that decision. He looked like a god—determined and invincible.

"So it came about that my brother and I divided the circuit between us, and I rode to the north and he to the south. To every ranchman this message went: 'Father invites you for Saturday and Sunday as usual. There will be no cards or liquor—only a quiet talk about old England and the welfare of the colony.'

"We waited that Saturday afternoon with trembling, not expecting a single guest. But suddenly one rode up, and then another, and another, until the whole section was represented. There never had been so large a gathering. They came in curiosity and with respect.

"With mother opposite him, father said grace at table, and we boys saw tears flow down rugged cheeks. That night the men talked long about bushmen and rabbits and fences and drought, and how to stand by each other.

"The next morning, as he did every Sunday morning, father conducted prayers, this time before 50 of the roughest men I had ever seen assembled; and there was singing of hymns, broken here and there by sobs and by tears. When they parted, my father, although a recent comer, was the acknowledged leader of the community.

"That section became the most prosperous section in all the country round. And I thought if Christian courage could accomplish that, it was good enough for me to live and die by. My father's 'No' was the one thing needed to save the community, and it saved it."—Youth's Companion.

Subterfuge of the Drinker.

P. J. Moebius, M. D., famous nerve specialist of Leipsic, says: "The fact is, all this talk about the nutritive value, the strengthening and curative properties of alcohol, is nothing but a cloak the drinker employs for concealing his appetite. If people did not care about drinking, nobody would concern himself about the trifling nutriment claimed for alcohol."

Temperance Crusade in Indiana.

The temperance societies of Indianapolis, Ind., have begun a crusade against the liquor-law violators and it is expected that within a few days affidavits will be filed against 200 or 300 saloonkeepers who have been keeping their places of business open on Sundays, after hours, and on holidays.

THE SLOT MACHINE.

Things to Eat and Drink Furnished to Customer's Taste—Aid to Temperance Reformer.

The German inventor intends to come to the aid of the English temperance reformer. His idea is to replace the public house as a medium for general refreshment by a large buffet worked on the automatic supply principle. Many inventions—mostly German, and all strictly patented—promise to insure the mechanical side of the new refreshment business. That is sufficiently familiar since London drew hot coffee from a lamppost in Leicester square.

Its aim in the direction of reform is not the provision of "quick lunches," but the elevation of the public house. The promoters anticipate no difficulty in obtaining the license necessary for the sale of intoxicating liquors, and dream of a day when these automatic buffets will be general.

The tariff is then to offer a combination of tea shop and the saloon bar, under such conidtions that women and others who prefer to enter an ordinary hotel can obtain refreshments without offense or discomfort. Every beverage to be automatically on draught, and the choice of food will be varied.

The mechanism disposes with barmaids, insures proper measure and the exact article advertised, and returns any other coin but the one required. Thus, a florin, put in by mistake instead of a penny is obligingly returned—and so is a French penny.

Those who would judge this possible factor in public house reform can now do so at the Earl's court exhibition, where an automatic buffet was opened to the public. It presents an imposing frontage, some ten feet high, of white and red marble, polished mahogany and mirrors, with rows of bright metal taps.

About 30 non-alcoholic beverages are supplied through the coin-in-the-slot medium. Two only call for remarks. Soda water and a cordial to flavor it are ingeniously obtained from the same tap by the use of a lever attachment, and, as to tea, four pennies place at one's disposal a little tray bearing a teapot with dry tea, milk, sugar, and a cup and saucer. A tap close by gratuitously provides boiling water, so that the customer wets his tea to his own particular taste. Bread and butter, cakes and fruit are released from glass receptacles by the required coins.—London Express.

MANY YOUNG GIRLS SMOKE.

Astounding Confession by Thirteen-Year-Old Annie Neff in New York Court.

An astonishing confession was made the other day by Annie Neff, a 13-year-old girl cigarette fiend, in Yorkville court. She said that all the girls in her neighborhood on the East side smoke cigarettes; that dealers continually violate the law compelling them to sell cigarettes in unbroken packages, and that parties of boys and girls gather on the docks and have "inhaling parties," the one holding the smoke in the lungs the longest collecting a tribute of a cigarette from each of the other contestants. She tells of her experience as follows:

"Us girls wanted to play with the boys in the block, but the boys wouldn't let us unless we smoked cigarettes. It did not take me long to learn to smoke and inhale, and when the boys saw that I could they let me play with them. I used to save up all the pennies I could get and buy cigarettes with them. We bought them two for a cent and could get them in almost any store in our neighborhood. There are some cigarettes that you can get four for a cent. They are not as good as the others and I never bought them except when I was short of pennies.

"About a month ago my throat got bad and I went to Bellevue dispensary. They told my mother I was a cigarette fiend and the throat would stay bad if I didn't stop. I could have stopped all right, but it was pleasant to smoke, and I said: 'What's the use?' I am going to stop now and be a good girl, but I'm not the only girl that smokes in New York. All the girls on our block smoke cigarettes. Nearly every girl in school used to smoke, I guess. The boys teach them."

PROGRESS.

The new Presbyterian church at Christiana, Pa., is to have a "temperance" window, the money being raised by local temperance workers.

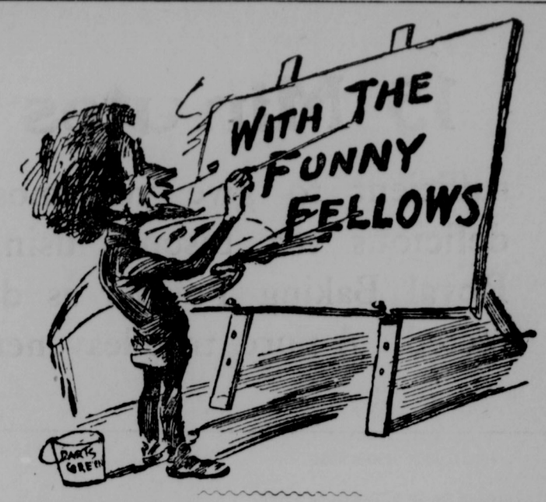
Sunday closing is strictly enforced by order of the mayor at Hampton, Va. Even soda fountains and cigar stands are tightly closed, according to Mida's Criterion.

The St. Luke's society, of Chicago, proposes to establish an inebriates' home on the farm where Abraham Lincoln was born, 50 miles south of Louisville, Ky. The farm has been donated to the society.

Nearly all the men and women in Japan smoke tobacco. The ladies have pipes with longer stems than the men and if one of them wishes to show a gentleman a mark of favor she lights her pipe, takes a whiff, hands it to him and lets him smoke.

Must Be Clean Men.

At a recent session of the grand lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars, at Syracuse, N. Y., the report of the prohibitory committee indorsed the abolition of the army canteen, and the juvenile templary committee recommended that among the qualifications of grand lodge lecturers freedom from the use of tobacco, profanity and gambling be required.



Told Him the Reason.

Deacon Scrimp—Humph! Think you've got to have a vacation, eh?

Struggling Pastor—Yes, the doctor says I must go off until this cough is cured.

Deacon Scrimp—Well, I'd like to know why preachers are always getting bad coughs.

Struggling Pastor—Well, you see, we have to visit around a good deal, and we are always asked to hold a little service before leaving, and I think our throats become affected from breathing the dust that flies from the family Bibles.—N. Y. Weekly.

Too Cautious.

"Yes," said the thoughtful theorist, "it certainly is possible to be too cautious and painstaking. Now, there was young Grubb, for instance. He knew nothing about love-making and he realized it, so when he fell in love he decided to practice a little in order that everything might be done in such a way as to make success practically assured."

"Well?"

"Well, the girl he selected for practice sued him for breach of promise."—Chicago Post.

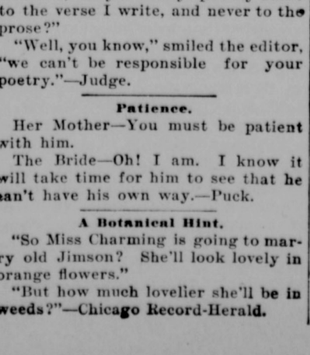
Woman Fashion.

They evidently loved each other, for they called each other dear and were most affectionate in manner; and the one with the picture hat remarked, after they were seated in the car, that it seemed an age since they had taken an outing together, and the one with an orchid in her buttonhole said: "Yes, indeed! All of five weeks!" And when the conductor came around each paid her own car fare.—Leslie's Weekly.

His Rejoinder Omitted.

The colonel, brave veteran and hoary,
Had feasted and drank of our wines,
And told how he fought for "Old Glory"
At the battle of Seven Pines.
Then Dick, before all there assembled,
Looked up with expression sublime,
And said (the rest of us trembled):
"Now, colonel, which pine did you climb?"
—Chicago Daily News.

WAS NOT HIS PETERSON.



"Porter, have you seen Herr Peterson here to-day?"

"Yes, sir; he just paid his bill and eft."

"Paid his bill? O, not that one."—Tondags-Nisse.

Wherein They Differ.

The average woman dearly loves
To receive presents nice;
But the average man's pet hobby
Is giving fool advice.
—Chicago Daily News.

Women Would Know.

Knapp—I see a great statistician says that considerably more than half the population of the world is feminine.

Snapp—Ridiculous! If that were so how would he account for the fact that "one-half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives?"—Catholic Standard and Times.

She Knew It.

"Darling," exclaimed the happy husband, after the minister had pronounced them one, "I am not worthy of your love."

"Of course you're not," she replied, "but at my age a girl can't afford to let even an opportunity like this go by."—Tit-Bits.

Not Responsible.

"Why, may I ask," said the contributor, "do you always put my name to the verse I write, and never to the prose?"

"Well, you know," smiled the editor, "we can't be responsible for your poetry."—Judge.

Patience.

Her Mother—You must be patient with him.

The Bride—Oh! I am. I know it will take time for him to see that he can't have his own way.—Puck.

A Botanical Hint.

"So Miss Charming is going to marry old Jimson? She'll look lovely in orange flowers."

"But how much lovelier she'll be in weeds?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Tale of a Tender Heart.

The boy in tears naturally attracted the attention of the sympathetic man.

"What's happened, my boy?" the latter asked. "Perhaps I can help you."

"I lost a quarter," answered the boy, "and when I go home I'll get licked for it."

"Oh, well, don't cry," returned the sympathetic man. "Here's another quarter. How did you lose the first one."

"Matching," promptly replied the boy. "I have no luck at all."—Chicago Post.

The Use of Cloves.

De gem'man wif de clover hoof,
You'll find, as 'tho' as deaf,
A-keepin' comp'ny wif de man
Dat's got a cloven breaf.
—Philadelphia Press.

THE REAL BITTERNESS.

Mamma—But, darling, why should you object to taking the good doctor's advice?

Bobby—It isn't his advice, mamma, it's his horrid old medicine that I hate to take.—Chicago Daily News.

The Reason, Perhaps.

We often praise the faithful dog
Whose friendship will not balk.
He never ilies nor gossips; but
He never learned to talk.
—Washington Star.

One.

"Mary," said the girl's mother, rather sternly, "what time did your young man leave last night?"

"It must 'a' been exactly one o'clock, ma," volunteered the younger brother.

"How can you say such a thing?" exclaimed Mary, indignantly.

"Well, ma," said the boy, "when he was leavin' he asked Mary some question, and she said: 'Just one. Only one.'"—Catholic Standard.

An Advantage of Matrimony.

"I don't believe," said Mr. Meekton, pensively, "that married men ever get to be burglars."

"Have you looked up statistics?"

"No. But it seems impossible that a married man would ever dare to walk into a house the way a burglar does, without stopping at the front step to wipe his feet."—Washington Star.

Cupid's Court Plaster.

Cupid deals in healing lotions,
Which are far too dear for spurning;
Cures for wounds the jealous suffer,
Hurts to pride and sad heart burnings.
For two lovers who have quarreled
(Where's a remedy that's faster?)
To their lacerated feelings
He applies his own court plaster.
—Philadelphia Bulletin.

PROOF TO THE CONTRARY.

"O, it's very hard nowadays to get servant girls!"

"I don't find it so—last month I had six different ones."—Heitere Welt.

An Autumn Chant.

The leaves are turning yellow,
The porch's charm has died,
And Mabel and her fellow
Now lallygag inside.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

She Knew Him.

He—Have you nothing to say to me, now that I am leaving you forever?

She—Au revoir.—Detroit Free Press.

In the Boarding School.

"Give me a synonym for success," said the teacher.

"Marriage!" cried the demure little girl in the back seat.—Chicago Post.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

HANDY ARRANGEMENT.

How to Operate a Pump by Wind Power Where Pump Is Some Distance from Mill.

It often happens one wishes to operate a pump by wind power when the pump is at a distance from the windmill. Sometimes the pump is at the foot of a hill, while the mill must be placed at the top, or two pumps could often be worked by one windmill if there was any way of transmitting motion from one to the other. It is a matter of little trouble and expense to construct an arrangement for this purpose. Get a blacksmith to make a device shown at a, which is to take the place of the usual pump handle. The device (b), which is somewhat similar to a, is bolted on a post at the windmill in such manner as to have the reciprocal motion of the mill applied to it. The two devices are connected to each other by wires fastened in the holes in ends of each arm. The motion of b at the windmill tower is therefore communicated to a on the pump standard, which may be at any distance from the windmill. The holes in each device can be about two feet apart. When wires are to be run an extra long distance, or over very uneven ground and other obstacles, they are supported by posts on which are bolted movable arms similar to a or b. By using long posts the wires can be raised out of the way.

WINDMILL AND PUMP.

Another excellent device is shown. The crank or handle (c), on one end the rod or the shaft takes the place of the pump handle, while d, on the other end of the shaft, receives the motion from the mill. The rod on which these two contrivances are placed can be of almost any length. Where it is not possible to run it direct from the mill to the pump, it can be joined by means of a universal joint, and run around or over any obstacle. This joint is shown at e, and consists of two shafts or arms, each terminating in a semicircle, and connected by means of a cross upon which each semicircle is hinged. When one shaft is turned, either to the right or left, the other shaft turns in the same direction. Any good blacksmith will be able to make it. The material used in the rod connecting pump to mill can be either one-half or one-inch iron, or common inch gas pipe.—Farm and Home.

NOT GENERALLY KNOWN.

Legs of the Hog Perform the Function of Discharge Pipes for All Sorts of Waste Matter.

The hogs' legs perform a function not known to any other animal, and that is an escape pipe or pipes for the discharge of waste matter or sweat not used in the economy of the body. These escape pipes are situated upon the inside of the legs, above and below the knees in the fore lgs and above the gamble joints in the hind legs, but in the latter they are very small, and the functions are light. Upon the inside of the fore legs they are always active, so that moisture is always there about and below these orifices or ducts in the healthy hog. The holes in the legs and breathing in the hog are his principal and only means of ejecting an excess of heat above normal, and when very warm the hog will open the mouth and breathe through that channel as well as the nostrils.

The horse can perspire through all the pores of its body, same as a man, and cattle do the same to a limited extent, but the hog never. His escape valves are confined to the orifices upon the inside of his legs. People often wonder why it is that the hog dies so suddenly when he runs rapidly or takes quick and violent exercise by fighting. But when you consider the few escape pipes, their small capacity and remoteness from the cavity where the heat is generated, the wonder is that he does not die quickly when overheated.—American Swineherd.

Disposing of Dead Animals.

The bodies of dead animals are converted into fertilizer by some farmers, but something depends upon circumstances as to the advisability of so doing. If an animal dies of some contagious disease and is buried the earthworms will bring to the surface the germs of the disease. This fact was demonstrated by Pasteur, the famous French chemist, who made tests in that direction. Disease was communicated to animals that ate grass which grew over the body of a buried animal. The better plan is to consume the bodies of diseased animals, or subject them to a bath of sulphuric acid after death, in order to destroy the germs of disease.

FEEDING A SKELETON.

An Old Scotch Story from Which Scores of American Farmers Can Draw a Lesson.

A story is told of a Scotch physician who was in search of a boy with sufficient nerve to assist him when difficult surgical operations were on hand. The doctor, by the way, was a ventriloquist, and he hit upon the following plan to enable him to secure the boy he was looking for: Each candidate was set to work to feed gruel to a skeleton which stood in an adjacent room. No sooner had the boy got to work than the doctor would call out in sepulchral tones: "More, give me more." The voice sounded to the boy as though it came from the skeleton. A number of those first tried, as soon as they heard the sepulchral tones, dropped the bowl of gruel and ran. At length a boy was found who continued to feed the gruel, notwithstanding the repeated cries of the skeleton for more. When the gruel was all fed he struck the skeleton on the side of the head with the spoon, saying as he did so: "My, Bony, but you are hard to satisfy." This boy got the position.

We laugh at the idea of feeding a skeleton, but are not some persons engaged in just about as profitable a business? They feed live stock all the winter, that is to say, young and growing stock. The animals go out in the spring just about as they went into the yard in the fall. The chief difference is that they have a little more bone and hair in the spring and a little less flesh. Sometimes they have considerably less in the spring than in the fall. Those persons have been about as profitably employed as the boy who was feeding the skeleton, and the food fed to those animals accomplished about as much for those who fed them as the food fed to the skeleton accomplished for the owner of the same. So it is with all growing animals. The food fed to them is wasted when they make no growth.—Farmer's Guide.

HARD COUNTRY ROADS.

When Properly Built, Cost of Repairs Is Slight Because the Damage Is Inconsiderable.

Inasmuch as the good roads movement is to be furthered only by the most persistent agitation, it is a pleasure to note that many of the country newspapers are enlisted in the work and propose to keep up the fight. It is not a difficult task to meet the argument that such roads are expensive. In the townships in which permanent roads have been built it was found that saving in the wear and tear of vehicles, the longer life and better health of men and horses, and the increased value of adjacent properties much more than atoned for the outlay required for the construction of the roads. Once the base is laid the rest is easy. Science has provided for that. The cost of repairs is slight, for the obvious reason that the damage is inconsiderable. The ordinary rain digs no trenches through the best material of which roads are built. Even narrow-tired vehicles cut them but slightly. The iron of horses' shoes is as nothing upon the surface. Rightly constructed they are what they purport to be—roads which with the least possible repairs are permanent. These are the facts which the newspapers engaged in the improvement of our road system are impressing upon our people, and it is a pleasure to note that some of them realize alike the importance of the work and the necessity for more than usual vigor in advocating its performance. —Golden Days.

DRAWING GREEN CORN.

Description of a Rack That Makes Transportation from Field to Silo Very Easy.

The illustration represents a rack for drawing green corn from field to silo. Low wheels on a common wagon gear is what we use it on. It is made of two posts about 16 feet long, with four pieces bolted across on under side. Let the two in center be long enough, say 18 inches on either side, to support a board, b, on outside of poles. The eight dots, a, represent holes for stakes, which are to keep the corn from the wheels. Lay on one or more boards to walk on. In loading fill between the hind stakes lengthwise to top of wheels, then lay corn on crossways. The short boards on outside keep the corn from dragging on ground. Load with butts all one way. —Orange Judd Farmer.

HANDY CORN FODDER RACK.

The Pigs and Their Dams.

There is a great difference of opinion in regard to the time that young pigs should be allowed to remain with their dams. If we only desire to raise one litter a year they may be allowed to remain with their dam until they are about ten weeks old, but if two litters are to be raised, it will be necessary to wean them when six or eight weeks old. We may also be guided largely by the way the young pigs are thriving. If the milk of the dam does not agree with them it may be wise to wean them early, but if they are doing well it is better to let them remain with the dam some eight or ten weeks. —Rural World.

New England apple orchards seven years from planting out ought to produce two barrels a tree, or 80 barrels to the acre. Fruit-growing there does pay.

To Cure a Cold in One Day
Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund money if it fails to cure. 25c.

The Way Out.
She (scornfully)—I despise you from the bottom of my heart!
He (cheerily)—Oh, well, there is always room at the top.—Puck.

Hoxsie's Croup Cure
The life saver of children. No opium. 50 cts.

The man who has a character that mud will stick to is always uneasy.—Elijah P. Brown.

Sozodont Tooth Powder 25c
Good for Bad Teeth
Not Bad for Good Teeth
Sozodont Liquid 25c Large Liquid and Powder 75c All stores or by mail for the price. Sample for postage 3c.
HALL & RUCKEL, New York.

MAGAZINE GIVEN AWAY
That everybody may become familiar with the best fiction magazine published,
10 STORY BOOK
We make the offer to send a sample copy absolutely free. We ask only that you cut out this ad. and enclose it with a 2-cent stamp to pay postage. It contains 10 copyrighted stories by the best known living writers each month. 120 stories in a year, and the subscription price is but $1 per year. Less than 1 cent per story. Single copies 10 cents.
10 STORY BOOK, 167 Dearborn St., Chicago.

READERS OF THIS PAPER DESIRING TO BUY ANYTHING ADVERTISED IN ITS COLUMNS SHOULD INSIST UPON HAVING WHAT THEY ASK FOR, REFUSING ALL SUBSTITUTES OR IMITATIONS.

PILES ANAKESIS gives instant relief and POSITIVELY CURES PILES. For free sample address "ANAKESIS," Tribune building, New York.

RHEUMATISM Van Buren's Rheumatic Compound is the only positive cure. Past experience speaks for itself. Depot 85 S. California Ave., Chicago.

FAVORITE HYMNS OF PRESIDENT McKINLEY:
"Nearer, My God, To Thee," "Lead, Kindly Light," Etc.
ABSOLUTELY FREE
ALL THE WORDS. Write for them. ALL THE MUSIC. No cost to you.
McKinley Music Co., CHICAGO, 203 Wabash Ave. NEW YORK, 74 Fifth Ave.

AT ONCE WITH RIG
To sell our Poultry Mixture; straight salary $15 per week and expenses; year's contract, weekly pay. We furnish bank reference of our reliability. EUREKA MFG. CO., Dept. 5, East St. Louis, Ill.

A. N. K.—C 1887

STARK TREES best by Test—77 YEARS LARGEST Nursery. FRUIT BOOK free. We PAY CASH WANT MORE SALESMEN Weekly STARK BROS, Louisiana, Mo.; Dansville, N. Y.; Etc

THE BEST POMMEL SLICKER IN THE WORLD
BEARS THIS TRADE MARK
TOWER'S FISH BRAND
THOUGH OFTEN IMITATED, AS A SADDLE COAT IT HAS NO EQUAL.
ON SALE EVERYWHERE.
CATALOGUES FREE SHOWING FULL LINE OF GARMENTS AND HATS.
A. J. TOWER CO., BOSTON, MASS.

MEMORIAL LIFE OF McKINLEY BIOGRAPHY
by Colonel A. K. McClure, the noted journalist and author. Over 600 pages; over 100 illustrations. Positively the most authentic book. We give best terms. Our book will contain a full account of Assassination, Death and Funeral. Send to us for the best book. Prospectus for 10 stamps to pay postage. Address KEELER-RALEIGH CO., 56 No. 6th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

DROPSY NEW DISCOVERY; gives quick relief and cures worst cases. Book of testimonials and 10 days' treatment Free. Dr. H. H. GREEN'S SONS, Box D, ATLANTA, GA.

FREE FOR TOBACCO TAGS

NOV. 30TH

FROM

1902.

"STAR"
"HORSE SHOE"
"SPEARHEAD"
"STANDARD NAVY"
"J. T."
"PIPER HEIDSIECK"
"BOOT JACK"
"DRUMMOND" NATURAL LEAF
"OLD PEACH & HONEY"
"NOBBY SPUN ROLL"
"JOLLY TAR"
"E. RICE, GREENVILLE"
"GRANGER TWIST"

2 GRANGER TWIST TAGS being equal to one of others mentioned.

"Good Luck," "Cross Bow," "Old Honesty," "Master Workman," "Sickle," "Brandywine," "Planet," "Neptune," "Razor," "Tennessee Cross Tie," "Ole Varginy." 3

TAGS MAY BE ASSORTED IN SECURING PRESENTS.

Our new illustrated CATALOGUE OF PRESENTS FOR 1902

will include many articles not shown here. It will contain the most attractive List of Presents ever offered for Tags, and will be sent by mail on receipt of postage—two cents.
(Catalogue will be ready for mailing about January 1st, 1902.)

Our offer of Presents for Tags will expire Nov. 30th, 1902.
CONTINENTAL TOBACCO COMPANY.

Write your name and address plainly on outside of packages containing Tags, and send them and requests for Presents to

C. Hy. BROWN,
4241 Folsom Ave.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Hicks' Forecasts For November.

The stars in connection with Friday and Saturday, the 1st and 2nd, indicate that a reactionary disturbance will be central on those dates, causing a rise in temperature, falling barometer and scattering storms and squalls of rain and snow from about the 1st to the 3rd.

A sharp, sudden rise of the barometer and change to colder will follow close after these disturbances, but as sudden change back to storm conditions will come about the 5th in western extremes.

The regular Vulcan storm period begins on the 5th, is central on the 7th and extends to the 10th. The moon is on the celestial equator on the 5th, passing to its south declination. Hence a marked rise of temperature, with a corresponding fall of the barometer, followed by possible thunder storms southward, will set in early in this Vulcan period. About Wednesday, the 6th, to Sunday, the 10th, storms of wind, rain and snow will make their transit from west to east across the country. Remember, storm centres, like railroad trains, do not cover the whole country at once, but make their passages across it; hence storms will begin in western parts days before they reach extreme eastern sections, being in middle parts of the country on intermediate days. A decided cold wave will be well advanced from the northwest before the low barometer and storms of this period reach the Atlantic.

Only a brief intermission will intervene between this Vulcan period and the reactionary change due from the 11th to the 14th. Conjunction of the moon with sun and earth, or new moon on the 11th, will check the tendency to high barometer and cold, and a sudden return to warmer, low barometer and rain and snow will be natural about Monday, the 11th, to Thursday, the 14th. These reactionary storms will be followed by a more persistent and general change to wintry conditions, and sharp cold will be general over central and northern sections for several days leading up to the Vulcan storm period central on the 18th. This Vulcan storm period extends from the 16th to the 20th, the 20th being the central day of the Venus period, with the moon again on the celestial equator in her passage from south to north declination. Some of the most decided storms of month may be expected from about Sunday, the 17th, to Tuesday, the 21st. These storms will reach a crisis on and touching the 20th, rain, wind and thunder, being followed in many sections within a few hours by northwesterly gales, driving snow and change to freezing. Note this prediction and heed it, or suffer discomfort and loss in all regions to the northward. Danger may be apprehended at this time all over the northern lakes and on the north Atlantic seas. The north Pacific ocean will not wholly escape severe boreal storms at this time.

The freezing weather following the last storms will react to warmer from the 23rd to 26th. On the 25th the moon is full and in perigee, or nearest to the earth. It is also in direct opposition with earth and sun on the 25th, causing an eclipse of the moon in other parts of the earth. Look for many more storms, largely of a blizzardous character, not more than 48 hours before or after sundown on the 25th, followed rapidly by a great rise of the barometer and a rushing cold wave that will be felt far to the south. Let shippers and navigators on the north Atlantic and lakes beware of dangerous gales and change to hurtful cold during and behind these storms.

A regular Vulcan storm period, reinforced by Mercury, Venus and Jupiter periods, is central on the last day of November. This means that marked autumnal storms will be brewing, if not already in progress, as the month goes out. The climax of this period will most likely fall in the opening days of December, but the first stages will be attended by very low barometer and change to much warmer, followed at first by general and heavy rains. Later the rain will turn to a general and destructive sleet, and this in turn to a real snow storm and blizzard over northern parts of the country.

Wise readers of these forecasts and students of our storm charts and "Foundation Facts" will not suffer themselves to be overtaken by heavy autumnal storms and change to winter cold unprepared during the last week in November and the first week in December. Such preparations as would prevent suffering to man and beast and probable loss of property and life at this time would not be labor loss, and even if storms and weather should not be so extreme, the average man needs a prodding or spur, just about this time, to urge him into getting ready for the winter so soon to settle down upon him. Let our readers take heed and act wisely and in time.

Wanted.

One hundred men for general woods work and grading railroad.

PRESTON LUMBER & COAL CO.,
2 tf Oakland, Md

The Preacher-Editor Reforms.

The Rev. Preacher-Editor Kildow, who edited the Tucker County (Dem.) Herald at this place during the last campaign, is now running the Inter-Mountain, a red-hot Republican paper, at Elkins. The preacher-editor had many trials and tribulations while in Tucker. He came over here in the wrong sign of the moon and both he, his editorials and his party shrunk up. When the votes were counted he came to the conclusion that the thing was entirely too one-sided here. So he abandoned the Herald to its fate and concluded he would preach a little while. He took his bible and went forth for a short season, but soon returned to his old haunts in Randolph. While keeping his weather eye to the windward he got a job of running the Inter-Mountain. His conscience is now at rest and he sleeps like a babe of nights. He is no longer troubled with the terrible nightmares that haunted him and made his life miserable. His eyes now shine like two sattelites and his countenance beams like a full moon, notwithstanding that he still wears his Populistic whiskers and drinks milk. We think his reformation is complete. The winds may blow, the thunder roar and the heavens weap, but the reverend preacher-editor has builded on a foundation of granite upon the mountain heights that will withstand the trials and tribulations of this life and land him where all good preacher-editors ought to go.—Parsons Advocate.

How Coal Is Found.

Mr. Thomas Brown, of Vale Summit, Allegany county, to a recent issue of the Frostburg Gleaner, contributed the following interesting communication explaining how coal is found, its ingredients, etc.:

"As carbon is the main ingredient of plants, in fact it is the basis on which the cellular vegetable structure and growth depends—an atmosphere so rich in carbon as to contain all that there was of it was exceedingly favorable to vegetation. Add to this a greater heat of the earth's surface, being partially supplied from below, and a very moist atmosphere and it is no wonder that vegetation did flourish in a manner so luxuriant that is is hard for us to form a conception of the same except by visiting the tropical forests of the present day. Great changes in the different levels of the earth's surface have swept the piled up remnants of such forest vegetation into lower basins where they were covered with water, afterwards with deposits of this water containing lime and other ingredients, other layers of vegetable matter with other layers of earthly deposits, and in this way many strata were piled on the top of one another and the different coal measures formed. These only required the solving agency of water, exclusion from air, proper temperature and pressure to be slowly changed into the black diamonds. Not only does coal show itself of vegetable origin but chemical experiments have succeeded in making coal artifically by placing wood in the condition which it was supposed that Nature placed fragments of the ancient forests when coal was formed and practically verifies the correctness of the above theory by experiment. Thus it shows the wisdom and power of a providential Providence.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by all dealers.

His Conscience Hurt Him

The Kingwood Argus contains the following: "Sheriff J. A. Linehart, of Preston county, W. Va., has just received over $20 conscience money from a young man, who 12 years ago taught school in Pleasant district, but was turned out in the middle of the month. The young man made out the monthly report for the full month and drew pay for it, which was $12 more than he earned and then left the county and was never heard from until Sheriff Lenhart received a draft for the $12, with interest from the time it was taken.

Showers of Stars May Soon Be Seen.

On the nights of November 13, 14 and 15 astronmers and others interested in astronomical matters anticipate that there will be a brilliant meteoric display. These star showers are usual in November and may be generally expected to occur about November 13, 14 or 15, or from the 26th to the 28th of the month. The meteors which fall during the first period are termed leonids, because they appear to come from the constellation known as that of Leo, and the second star showers rejoice in the name of andromedas, as they seem to form in the constellation of Andromeda. The earth, it appears, comes in contact with the leonids head-on, and the meteors therefrom drop with more swiftness than those from Andromeda. It is a fact that astronomers know less about meteors and comets than of any other detail of their great sience. The great fall of the leonids, roughly computed, occurs every 33 years, and one of the great falls is, therefore, about due this year and may occur on November 13, 14 and 15. The leonids were due last year, but they did not materalize, despite the fact that scientists had made extensive preparations to observe their descent. Therefore, this year the northeastern skies will be eagerly scanned for the expected visitors on the date named.

The Garrett County Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:

DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MD.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.

Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.

F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

Examiners' Notice.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the following proposed new county road to be located is to run, viz: Beginning for the same at the south end of Garrett V. Moon's lane and running thence down Laurel creek and through the lands of the Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company, James L. Harvey and J. B. Lipscomb and along the lines of said Lipscomb and Charles Cooper and through the lands of the said Manor Mining and Manufacturing Company to the town of Schell, a distance of three miles, and examine whether the proposed new road should be located, will meet on the 11th day of November, 1901, for such purpose and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said proposed new county road to be made, and, if so, to locate the same, and perform their duty in the premises.

J. H. WILSON,
JOHN W. HARVEY,
ANDREW J. LEE,
Examiner.

CONSTIPATION CURED!

Nearly everyone suffers in a greater or less degree from this dreadful disease. It is dangerous to neglect the bowels, and often by doing so a foundation is laid for serious ailments.

Those suffering from Constipation suffer from slow Poison.

OUR NATIVE HERBS cures Constipation quietly and permanently.

No Pain. No Griping. No Binding effect afterwards. Its action is pleasant and sure.

200 DAYS' TREATMENT $1.00.

A CURE GUARANTEED OR THE MONEY BACK.

"When a girl I had Small Pox succeded by Typhoid Fever and Measels. I was left with Constipation and Sinking Spells. Sometimes I felt that I could not live. After having various physicians treat me with no benefit I bought a box of Our Native Herbs, which seems to be the only medicine that suits my case. I believe it saved my life." Mrs. M. MILLER, Crellin, Md.

No Case Too Stubborn for Our Native Herbs To Conquer.

THE ALONZO O. BLISS CO.,
SOLE PROPRIETORS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

A. C. BROOKE,
Local Agent. Mountain Lake Park, Md.

A box of Tablets or Powder mailed to any address upon receipt of $1.00.

SHERIFF'S SALE

OF AN INTEREST IN

Valuable Real Estate

Situated in Garrett County, Md.

By virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett county at the suit of G. S. Hamill, executor of William W. Bray, deceased, against Harriet B. Paugh, the same being No. 5 Judicials to December term, 1901, of said Court, I, the undersigned Sheriff, by an actual entry upon the premises hereinafter described, did seize, levy upon and take in execution all of the right, title and reversionary interest of the said Harriet B. Paugh, in and to all that property situated in District Number Fourteen, Garrett county, known as the

William W. Bray Farm,

containing one hundred and sixty acres, more or less, which said real estate is more particularly described in a deed from Joseph Friend of John to the said William W. Bray, dated the 6th day of June, 1872, and recorded in Liber H. R. No. 36, folio 482, &c., one of the land records of Allegany county, especial reference to which deed is herein made for a more complete description of the interest hereby intended to be sold, which is an undivided one-sixth interest of the above defendant in said property subject to the life estate of Amanda Bray, and I hereby give notice that on

SATURDAY,

The 23d Day of November, 1901,

in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, at the hour of eleven o'clock a. m. of said day, will offer the interest of the said Harriet B. Paugh in the aforesaid real estate at public auction to the highest bidder for cash on the day of sale to satisfy the aforesaid execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on the day of sale.

ANDREW J. OESTER,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

133½ acres coal land on Youghiogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale. House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187½ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 26½ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 300 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ miles southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoroughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north o Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swauger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to

JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

E. W. Grove

This signature is on every box of the genuine Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets the remedy that cures a cold in one day

THE

SECOND NATIONAL BANK

of CUMBERLAND, MD.

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000

Additional Security to Depositors..$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
John Sheridan, A. Hunter Boyd,
David W. Sloan.

NOTICE OF First Meeting of Creditors.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, in Bankruptcy.

In the matter of Henry Achenbach and Harry E. Achenbach, trading as H. Achenbach & Son and as individuals, Bankrupts.

In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of H. Achenbach & Son, partners and as individuals, of the county of Garrett and district aforesaid, bankrupts:

Notice is hereby given that on the 15th day of October A. D., 1901, the said H. Achenbach & Son, partners and individuals, were duly adjudicated bankrupts and that the first meeting of their creditors will be held at my Law Office, No. 6 Washington street, in Cumberland, Maryland, on the 9th day of November, A. D. 1901, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupts and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Oct. 24, 1901. ALBERT A. DOUB, Referee in Bankruptcy.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT MAY 19, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 19, 1901. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily	2.42 A. M
No. 3—Daily	7.25 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday	10.01 A. M
No. 65—Daily	4.52 P. M
No. 1—Daily	10.07 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 8—Daily	5.50 A. M
No. 2—Daily	6.52 A. M
No. 46—Express, daily	4.41 P. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun	5.12 P. M
No. 12—Daily	5.35 P. M
No. 4—Daily	12.37 A. M

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.

IN EFFECT SEPT. 29, 1901.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	SOUTHWARD No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	NORTHWARD No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15	7 00 lv	Cumberland ar	12 00	7 15
3 41	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. Junc.	10 51	6 01
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 15	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	5 15
6 00	9 50 ar	Elk Garden	*8 10	*4 25
5 40	9 35 lv	Gorman	10 35	4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 58	10 27	Thomas	8 38	3 53
7 10	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 15
6 48	10 35 lv	Coketon	8 25	3 50
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 15
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 10	12 00 ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	*2 15
	NOON			P. M.
8 46	12 52 ar	Beverly	lv	†1 44
9 10	1 15	ar Huttonsville	lv	†1 20
M. P.				P. M.
	3 15 ar	Bealington	lv	*11 45
	P. M.			A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, Gen. Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agen

Treasury Department.

OFFICE OF
THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., August 20, 1901.

Whereas, by satisfactory evidence presented to the undersigned, it has been made to appear that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, has complied with all the provisions of the Statutes of the United States, required to be complied with before an association shall be authorized to commence the business of banking.

Now therefore I, Charles G. Dawes, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, is authorized to commence the business of Banking as provided in Section Fifty-one hundred and sixty-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

SEAL. In testimony whereof witness my hand and Seal of office this twentieth day of August, 1901.

(Signed) CHARLES G. DAWES,
Comptroller of the Currency.

No. 5943.

I HAVE PURCHASED

THE OAKLAND COAL YARD

of Mr. D. L. Conneway and will continue the business. I will keep constantly on hand a large supply of

HARD AND SOFT

COAL,

KINDLING WOOD, Etc.

All orders will receive prompt attention. Leave orders with the weighmaster or at my residence, the Glessman Hotel.

35-2 GEO. GIESSMAN

Cure That Cold

And it can be done for 25 cents—a dose or two and relief is instant—a few doses more and the cure is complete.

Pine and Terpin Cough Syrup

Is a new remedy—contains new drugs and new chemicals—a trial will convince anyone of its merit—it cures where all else fails.

LOGAN DRUG COMPANY,
At all Druggists. WHEELING, W. VA.

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY,
ARCHITECT,
Office 7 North Liberty St.
CUMBERLAND, MD.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.

Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.
Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Money loaned on Mortgage.
Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.
Agent for the Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Co, of Hartford, Conn.
Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in McComas's Building, Main St.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. 1e14-1y

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD.
Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients, 45—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. 38 10 ly

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.
Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 18-'99

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office opposite Garrett County Bank.
Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 6 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER,
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.
Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by anerold barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26*

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate.
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.
Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats, descriptions and estimates furnished. 40-1yr.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!

I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 20,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.

All trespassing will be prosecuted to the ullest extent of the law.

Call on or address:
C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1901. NUMBER 36.

GOLDSBOROUGH ON THE SITUATION.

Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee to the People of Maryland.

Mr. Phillips Lee Goldsborough, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, has made the following statement, addressed to the citizens of Maryland, in reference to the present political situation in this State:

The final act in the election conspiracy has taken place. It began with the extraordinary session of the Legislature held in March last and ended on November 7, when the willing and pliant tools of the Democratic bosses of this State did the bidding of their master and disfranchised in Maryland not less than 20,000 men who had cast honest ballots which should have been counted but were thrown out on the fraudulent plea that they were improperly marked, or that they had upon them some mark other than the crossmark which should have been placed there by the voters.

And again because ballots were not properly folded when returned by the voter to the judges.

In a great many instances hundreds of these ballots were declared void by reason of printer's marks thereupon and by marks having been designedly placed upon some part of the ballot, particularly in and around the constitutional amendments, before they reached the hands of the voter. In other instances these ballots so rejected were thrown out upon the mere pretense that one prong of the cross extended slightly outside of the box or square.

In 1899 there were cast and counted in Baltimore city, the year in which Governor Smith was elected, 104,825 votes. In the presidential election of 1900 there were cast and counted in the same city 112,737 votes. Under this Gorman election law there were counted 81,750 ballots. Thus it will be seen that this law, instead of bringing out in full the "real expression of the will of each and every voter," as claimed in the Democratic platform of 1901, this law has disfranchised many thousands of registered voters who, under the Constitution of the State, were entitled to the right of suffrage. Though the citizens had complied with all the requirements regarding registration and had had their names enrolled upon the registry books, nevertheless, by reason of the operation and of manipulation of this iniquitous law, these citizens of Maryland had no voice in the government of Maryland, and were disfranchised on Tuesday last by the Legislature of this State.

The following are the steps in the conspiracy:

First. The calling of the extra session of the Legislature in March last.

Second. The enactment of the State Census Law, at an expense of $40,000 to the taxpayers of the State, whereby a thorough and complete political poll of the voters of the State was given the Democratic managers, which poll of voters was taken, as it was claimed, by the officials of the State for the express purpose of purging the registration books of the State and adding thereto the names of those who were not on the books, but entitled to registration, and though this was claimed to be a defense of this act, nevertheless when application was made to the Governor for a copy thereof to be furnished without cost to the State, and then to the superintendent of the census, both of these distinguished officials and servants of the public denied any knowledge of the possession of these lists, and it required an order of the court before access to these lists could be had by the public.

Third. By reason of the provision of this census act, which had no earthly connection with the election law of the State, thousands of the voters of the State were compelled, at great expense and inconvenience on the day of revision of the registration books of the State, to appear in person and show cause why their names should not be erased from the registry of voters.

Fourth. The illegal act of many of the supervisors of election in the counties of the State, delegating to the president of the Board of Supervisors of Election the power to decide upon, arrange and make up the style of ballot and type to be used thereon, denying to the minority member of the board all participation and information in the making up of the official ballot, this act being in direct conflict with section 52 of chapter 2 of the acts of 1901.

Fifth. The refusal by the Supervisors of Election to place the party appellation upon the official ballot as set forth in the certificate of nomination by the Republican party, as required by statute, in many instances placing the party designation as to be very confusing, to-wit, "nominee of the Republican party," and removing it far away from the square in which the voter's mark is placed and putting it hard by and close up to the names of the candidates. Then, again, ballots were printed in type in which no capitals were used, not even for names of the candidates or of party, and style of type dissimilar from that in ordinary use—in fact, some of it has not been used in many decades.

Sixth. The premeditated disfigurement of the ballot by those who had charge of printing them, and in at least one county placed opposite the name of the Prohibition candidate the party appellation "Republican," for the distinct purpose of confusing the voter and having two Republican candidates under one group for the office of Comptroller of the Treasury, and which, should both Republicans be marked, would nullify the ballot.

Seventh. After the closing of the polls the systematic and premeditated manner of the Democratic judges in throwing out all ballots that had any marks on them when they themselves had delivered them to the voter, and which character of votes so rejected and thrown out amounted to more than 20,000, as above stated, and which resulted in the counting out of over 25 to 30 Republican members of the General Assembly and the counting in of many Democrats whom the voters of Maryland had defeated at the polls. A more gigantic steal than this, open and barefaced, has never been known in the annals of political history.

The Republican party promises the people of Maryland that this matter is not ended, and we shall follow the perpetrators of these criminal acts through the courts until they shall have been punished.

The Republican party in Maryland is stronger and more determined this hour than ever in its existence, and from now on it will strive to restore to the citizens of this State the priceless heritage of manhood suffrage.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Mountain Lake Park will soon assume her winter habits, and while to the majority they are disagreeable, we bow in submission to our fate, trusting that he who feeds the ravens will feed us.

The workmen here, but lately so busy and rushed, are assuming their normal walks and moves.

Merchant Garthright is connecting his Loch Lynn store room and large feed and flour apartment by an addition between the two.

William Landon went to Pittsburg on Saturday, where he will remain for some time.

Rev. Fisher, of Loch Lynn, has moved into Herbert Furgeson's house in the Park for the winter and Herbert moved to Loch Lynn over the Hustling Store.

Mr. John E. Rule and family still remain in their comfortable and commodious dwelling here.

C. M. Rathbun & Son's mill is still in operation with apparently plenty to do.

F. P. Arnold is it Dobbin finishing up the plastering of two large houses.

Wiley Welling will go to Deer Park to work for Contractor Philip Walsh, who is preparing to erect a large building for Mr. Frick.

Thomas Browning, of Thayerville, was in our own and neighbor town on Monday and made some of the people financially glad and others socially pleased by an invitation to attend the dedication services of the new church at Thayerville on Sabbath, 17th inst. and refreshing entertainment at his home and hospitable table after service, the hour between 10 and 12 a. m.

The cutting down of K street and Philadelphia avenue and filling of the hollow at the old bridge will lend new attractions to Mt. Washington home.

Miss Lorilla Pope took charge of one branch of our school here on Monday morning as assistant to Mr. Teats. They will occupy two different apartments. Thanks to whom due.

The hauling and shipping of mine props from our station here is quite an extensive business now.

Stephen Grimes came over from Gorman with Mrs. Cornwall on Monday and took some of her transient goods which will be sent to Douglas, where she will conduct a boarding house for the winter. S.

When the Stars Put Out Their Light.

When the stars put out their light,
When sun and moon grow dark,
When Ararat yields up the ashes
Of old Noah's ark,
When spirits of just men made holy
Walk the streets of gold—
Then honest Gorman politics
The angels may behold.

THE FALLS OF DEEP CREEK, NEAR OAKLAND.

ESAU BUCK AND THE BUCKSAW.

The Bucksaw, the Seesaw and the Buck That Saw Esau Saw—A Weird Tale.

An old farmer of Arkansas whose sons had all grown up and left him hired a young man by the name of Esau Buck to help him on his farm, says the Hartford Times. On the evening of the first day they hauled up a small load of poles for wood and unloaded them between the garden and the barnyard.

The next morning the old man said to the hired man: "Esau, I am going to town today and while I am gone you may saw up that wood and keep the old ram out of the garden."

When the old man had gone Esau went out to saw the wood, but when he saw the saw he wouldn't saw it. When Esau saw the saw he saw that he couldn't saw it with that saw. Esau looked around for another saw, but that was the only saw he saw, so he didn't saw it. When the old man came home he said to Esau: "Esau, did you saw the wood?" Esau said: "I saw the wood, but I wouldn't saw it; for when I saw the saw I saw that I couldn't saw with that saw, so I didn't saw it." The old man went out to see the saw and when he saw the saw he saw that Esau couldn't saw with that saw. When Esau saw that the old man saw that he couldn't saw with the saw Esau picked up the ax and chopped up the wood and made a seesaw. The next day the old man went to town and bought a new bucksaw for Esau Buck, and when he came home he hung the bucksaw for Esau on the sawbuck by the seesaw. Just at this time Esau Buck saw the old buck in the garden eating cabbage, and when driving him from the garden to the barnyard Esau Buck saw the bucksaw on the sawbuck by the seesaw, and Esau stopped to examine the new bucksaw. Now, when the old buck saw Esau Buck looking at the new bucksaw on the sawbuck by the seesaw, he made a dive for Esau, missed Esau, hit the seesaw, knocked the ssesaw against Esau Buck, who fell on the bucksaw on the sawbuck by the seesaw. Now, when the old man saw the old buck dive at Esau Buck and miss Esau and hit the seesaw and knock the seesaw against Esau and Esau Buck fall on the bucksaw on the sawbuck by the seesaw, he picked up the ax to kill the old buck, but the buck saw him coming and dodged the blow and countered on the old man's stomach, knocked the old man over the seesaw onto Esau Buck, who was getting up with the bucksaw off the sawbuck by the seesaw, crippled Esau Buck, broke the bucksaw and sawbuck and seesaw.

Now, when the old buck saw the completeness of his victory over the old man and Esau Buck and the bucksaw and the seesaw, he quietly turned around, went back and jumped into the garden again and ate up what was left of the old man's cabbages.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by all dealers.

"The Deacon."

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

Gov. Smith Sets Apart Thursday, Nov. 28, As a Day of Thanks.

WHEREAS, The President of the United States has by proclamation set apart Thursday, the twenty-eighth day of November, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer; and

WHEREAS, The people of Maryland have great cause to be thankful that through the mercy of Almighty God we have been free from pestilence and disaster and have been blessed with peace and prosperity.

Now, therefore, I, John Walter Smith, Governor of Maryland, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 28th day of November instant, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and ask that our people rest from all secular employment and devote the day to appropriate religious services, to family gatherings, social festivities and helping the poor and unfortunate.

Given under my hand and the great seal of Maryland. Done at the city of Annapolis this sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and one.

JOHN WALTER SMITH.

By the Governor,
WILFRED BATEMAN,
Secretary of State.

"Uncle Josh Spruceby."

The Reading, Pa., Daily Review has the following to say about the "Uncle Josh Spruceby" company which comes to Oakland Opera House for one night only Saturday, November 16th:

A treat was in store for those who attended the performance of "Uncle Josh Spruceby" last night, for instead of seeing an old worn out play "Uncle Josh Spruceby" proved to be one of the most pleasing rural comedy-dramas that has visited Reading in many a day. Both the production and the company presenting it are far above the average and judging from the continued applause the play certainly gave entire satisfaction. The piece is staged with every attention to detail, the saw mill scene in the third act being particularly realistic and the thrilling climax was greeted with a storm of applause. Several clever specialties were introduced during the first and second acts and were of a high order. The orchestra with this company is a fine one and their music is of the highest class. "Uncle Josh" is an unusually pleasing performance, bright, brim full of roaring comedy and thrilling situations.

The parade, as advertised, will not take place on account of the late arrival of the company.

The Maryland House of Delegates.

The following table shows the relative strength of the Republicans and the Democrats in the next Maryland House of Delegates, giving the latter party a majority of seven votes:

Counties.	Dem.	Rep.
Allegany	1	4
Anne Arundel	4	..
Baltimore City	3	15
Baltimore county	6	..
Calvert	..	2
Caroline	2	..
Carroll	2	2
Cecil	2	1
Charles	..	2
Dorchester	4	..
Frederick	..	5
Garrett	..	2
Harford	4	..
Howard	2	..
Kent	..	2
Montgomery	4	..
Prince George's	3	1
Queen Anne's	3	..
Somerset	1	2
St. Mary's	2	..
Talbot	2	1
Washington	..	5
Wicomico	3	..
Worcester	3	..
Totals	51	44

The Senate will be composed of 17 Democrats and 8 Republicans.

Stops the Cough and Works off the Cold.

Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets cure a cold in one day. No Cure, no Pay. Price 5 cents.

NEGRO EQUALITY

And How the Democratic Party Has Helped it Along.

The following was reprinted in the Cincinnati Enquirer of last week, from which paper we take it. The Enquirer, as everybody knows, is one of the leading Democratic journals of the country:

[New York Sun.]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN.—Sir: I have been considerably amused by reading the comments of several of the leading newspapers in the South relative to the President inviting Booker T. Washington to dine with him. Below is a copy of a short catechism on negro equality which I cut out of a newspaper 36 years ago.

A perusal of the catechism would seem to indicate that Richaard M. Johnson considered a colored woman the equal of a white one I have never seen the fact of Johnson's marriage disputed. H. B. SPENCER.

Holyoke, Mass., October 21.

SHORTER CATECHISM OF NEGRO EQUALITY

Who said all men are created equal?

Thomas Jefferson, the father of all Democracy.

Who gave the negroes the right of suffrage in New York?

The Democratic party.

Who presided over the convention which gave this privilege to negroes?

Martin Van Buren, a Democrat.

Who afterward elected Martin Van Buren to the Presidency of the United States?

The Democratic party.

Who married a negro woman and by her had mulatto children?

Richard M. Johnson, a good Democrat.

Who elected Richard M. Johnson Vice President of the United States?

The Democratic party.

If President Van Buren had died and Richard M. Johnson had become President who would have become the Democratic mistress of the White House?

The same negro woman.

Who made the negro a citizen of the State of Maine?

The Democratic party.

Who enacted a similar law in Massachusetts?

The Democratic party.

Who gave the negro the right to vote in New Hampshire?

The Democratic party.

Who permitted every colored person owning $250 in New York to become a voter?

A General Assembly purely Democratic.

Who repealed the laws of Ohio which required negroes to give bond and security before settling in that State?

The Democratic party.

Who made the mulattoes legal voters in Ohio?

A Democratic Supreme Court, of which Reuben Wood was Chief Justice.

What became of Reuben Wood?

The Democratic party elected him Governor three times and he is still a leader of the Democratic party.

Who helped to give free negroes the reght to vote in Tennessee under the constitution of 1795?

General Jackson.

Was Gen. Jackson a good Democrat?

He generally passed as such.

Who, with the above facts and many others staring them in the face, are continually whining about negro suffrage and negro equality?

The Democratic party.

Dentistry.

Dr. Edwin W. Green, dentist, will be in Friendsville from October 28 to November 3 inclusive.

PROPERTY WORTH MANY THOUSANDS

Destroyed By An Awful Conflagration at Thomas Tuesday.

The east side of Thomas, W. Va., was completely wiped out by fire which started at two o'clock Monday morning in the restaurant under the Geisberger Hotel. Thomas is a mining town, promoted mostly by the Davis Coal & Coke Company, and is situated on the West Virginia Central and Pittsburg Railway. The buildings are largely of frame and were rapidly eaten up by the flames which were fanned by a violent wind. The town was almost entirely without fire protoction, the water in the reservoir on account of the drouth being very low and besides the fire department is poorly equipped.

Three principal business blocks were entirely wiped out, also sixty-two dwelling houses, including eight belonging to the Davis Coal & Coke Company.

The Geisberger and Reynolds hotels, the opera house, the large Catholic church, the town lockup and the water station were all destroyed. The fine residence of E. J. Noon, assistant train master of the West Virginia Central and Pittsburg Railway, was included in the portion burned.

Following Geisberger's hotel was Mock's restaurant, McIntire's broker office, Schilansky's saloon, Joseph Schilansky's store with $12,000 in goods, James Tesla store, a boarding house, Charles Patsey's fruit stand, Cottrell's saloon, George Schartz's furniture store, Right's barber shop, McIntire's big opera house, in which building were also W. A. Jones' store and the postoffice, J. W. Duncan's residence and undertaking rooms, together with a restaurant, the council chamber and lockup, town pump station and water tanks, McGouglin Sapp's pool room, Rubenstein's saloon, Record office, Thomas & Ferris' store, Dr. W. Werner's office and residence and a number of smaller concerns, all of them burned.

A rain commenced falling after the fire and the Methodist church was opened for the shelter of women and children.

Scores of people were driven from their homes in their night clothes. Women with infants in their arms were obliged to stand along the railroad track in scant attire while the flames devoured their homes Many traveling men lost their sample cases, watches and money. The fire was either started by a rat gnawing matches or the explosion of a lamp.

The only houses left standing are several in the vicinity of the new railroad station. The windstorm that prevailed during the fire was one of the heaviest ever known in that section. The homeless families number nearly 150. The people of Davis, six miles away, are providing shelter for many of the people.

The fourteen-year-old son of a druggist named Schilansky, whose store was burned, was missing for a time, but he was later accounted for. A number of box cars of the West Virginia Central and Pittsburg Railway, some of which were used by Italians as sleeping quarters, were burned. The Italians made narrow escapes with their lives. Most harrowing scenes are reported and despite greatest efforts the work of relieving of the pitiful condition of the people is slow. The weather suddenly becoming cold has added to the general misery.

Plans are already afoot to rebuild the town.

According to latest estimates the loss will be about three hundred thousand dollars with sixty thousand dollars insurance. The postoffice valuables were saved. Thieves are on the ground and one opened the postoffice safe in the ashes on the pretense of being a postoffice inspector. The sixty-two dwelling houses back of the Geisberger hotel, some occupied by two and three families, burned first, followed by the business section.

Winter Tourists Tickets Now on Sale via Seaboard Air Line Railway.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway announces that, effective October 15, 1901, round trip Winter Excursion tickets will be placed on sale to resort points on its lines in North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. These low rates taken in connection with the superior service and fast schedules operated over this line, which is the shortest and best to Florida points, are brought to the attention of those who are planning Winter tours. It will be distinctly to their advantage to obtain definite information, which will be cheerfully furnished by an Agent or Representative of the Company.

J. C. HORTON, Eastern Pass'r Agent,
1183 Broadway, New York City.
W. H. DOLL, Gen'l Agt. Pass'r Dept.,
1434 N. Y. Ave., Washington, D. C.
C. L. LONGSDORF, E. E. Pass'r Agt.,
306 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
J. R. DUVAL, Passenger Agent,
Cont'l Trust Bldg., Baltimore, Md.
R. E. L. BUNCH, Gen'l Pass'r Agt.,
Portsmouth, Va

ROCKY MOUNTAIN ANEMONE.

Dainty, blue anemone,
Hiding on the mountain stair,
Where the sunshine lovingly
Falls in splendor rich and rare.

Dainty, blue anemone,
Hiding by the mountain way,
Gazing upward modestly
Like a nun about to pray.

Foundling of the sun and dew,
Child of mist and purple morn,
Lifting eyes of sweetest blue
From the bed where you were born.

Dainty, blue anemone,
Pressing close to Nature's heart,
On the wide-swept, upland lea,
Where the waving grasses part.

Lift to me your tender face,
Little nun of azure eyes,
Grant me just the fleeting grace
That within them deeply lies.

Satin, gray and filmy mist,
Wrap this maiden tenderly,
Whom the mountain dew has kissed,
Dainty, blue anemone.

—Charles F. Klingsley, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Belle of Bear City

By WM. PERRY BROWN.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate)

"TWO YEARS without sight of a woman? What a life! If one could have two years without sight of a man, now—"

She glanced at Sterling meditatively from the hammock, as he swung one long leg over the arm of his chair and twiddled a raw gold nugget doing dubious duty as a watch charm.

"Could you imagine such a horror?" he quizzed.

"It would be heavenly. Men grow wearisome when they fancy themselves in love.

"All of them—O, most sweet satiety!"

"Mum—tell me about your life up there," she said, briskly. "Of course the cold must have been terrific, and with no news, no papers, no women—"

"No anything desirable, you might add, except the 'grub,' the fires, the gold dust and—yes, there was one thing else which became to me, at least, more satisfactory than all the rest of our meager comforts."

This last with a steady, admiring stare that caused Miss Lamar to slowly drop her eyelids, as if the long lashes might veil the faint blush that seemed to ripple beneath the white down of the rounded cheeks below.

"And what was this eminently desirable thing?" she continued, imperiously.

"We called her the Belle of Bear City. Fun!" he chuckled to himself. "You would have thought it dizzily absurd could you have seen us line up every morning and make our bows. We even reserved our smartest small talk for her—seemed as if she could hear, you know."

"Why not, unless she was 'dizzily' deaf? So the most desirable thing turns out to be feminine after all. I might have guessed it, if there was a get-at-able woman inside the arctic circle. What was she—some Esquimau?" This last as a sort of debative challenge.

"Not on your life. Neither was she a Siwash, Chilcat—nor any other Alaskan monstrosity. Ah! how we did adore that girl!"

"Well, really!" Here Miss Lamar evinced kindry dignified symptoms of rising. "How do you reconcile this with your staying two years in that horrid hole without seeing a woman?"

"It is a solemn, lugubrious fact," he gravely asserted, "that we did."

"Wit is one thing, Mr. Sterling," said she, adding hauteur to dignity. "Mendacity is quite another. Even actresses are supposed to know that."

She rose, darting at him a fiery glance, neither meditative nor flirtative. Had he mistaken her look that very way at the successful suitor in "Hearts Are Trumps," her latest stage success? Was she really going? Appalled lest he had offended, yet thrilled indefinably that anything he might say could be of more than zephyr-like importance to move her, Sterling timidly put out a detaining hand.

"Please don't go," he ventured. "I had no idea of—of—you see, it was only a picture, after all."

Miss Lamar paused tentatively, with her hand on his chair back.

"You seem overburdened with conundrums to-day," she commented. "Why not solve them yourself?"

"But, do you not understand?"

"I am a poor hand at guessing. Besides, it is too much trouble." This with a sort of dry weariness which, however, seemed to impel her to forget her previous intention and sink languidly back in the hammock.

Sterling grasped his opportunity by linking his hands together around one drawn-up knee and gazing dreamily into vacancy, as if still mesmerized by the magic memory of the elusive Belle of Bear City.

"There were seven of us fellows caged in one large cabin that winter. Most of us, being college bred, we herded together—birds of a feather, you know. It was a dreary time. No sun at all for three months, the mercury 50 degrees below or worse, with an ever bellowing surf grinding the mush ice along shore, and not a scrap of news nor a woman nearer than Nome City, 130 miles away."

"Always excepting the mysterious Belle of Bear City," she interpolated, suppressing a strictly artificial yawn. "Poor thing! Alone among all those men—what did you say was the population?"

"I did not say, but there have been a hundred snowed in under the Tundra Bluffs, and every mother's son of us a man." He grinned feebly.

"Always except—" she began again, when his eyes caused her to relent.

"Don't," he pleaded. "You queens of the stage have your trials, of course, but they are apt to be those resulting from satiety rather than starvation. We seven got so that we hated the sight of each other only a degree less than we abhorred the average Bear Cityite cached in the other cabins. Fling a dozen society swells into a pig sty and they will herd together; not because they weary of each other less, but to avoid the pigs."

"No wonder she was popular." Satirical emphasis—feminine emphasis on the personal pronoun. "How and when did she arrive?"

"In an old newspaper some fellow unexpectedly fished from his chest. There she was on the front page, photogravured to the life. Rare and radiant she looked to us poor devils socially starving under the north star. A Tlinook squaw from St. Michaels with her hair done up in beads and fish oil would have soothed our eyesight. Imagine the effect this ravishing vision produced upon our esthetic sensibilities, as we tacked her up on the wall and worshiped. The golden calf of the Israelites was nothing by comparison.

"Dear me! All this masculine splutter over a mere picture?" And such is the divine perversity of the sex that she seemed vaguely disappointed.

"Sure. But such a picture! It grew upon us as a Botticelli Madonna is said to permeate your very being if you only look at it long enough. At least that was the way I came to feel."

"Yes?" Miss Lamar's lip curled; for little as she professed to care for man in the abstract it did not seem right that man as an individual should waste his adoration on a picture, while the real article abounded in other parts of the globe.

"Yes," he blandly continued, "I was the seventh man, you know. That is, I came into our mess as number seven, which, being considered a lucky numeral—I say!" he suddenly sat bolt upright. "Are you at all superstitious?"

"Of course, I am." She shuddered sympathetically. "If you had been No. 13 now—"

"I think I should have given up right there; but being the seventh man, I said to myself: I will find the original of this picture some fine day."

"Aha!" with a chilling accent, as if to show that her interest in the Belle of Bear City would relapse into indifference if that aggravating creature pushed herself beyond the photogravure stage of existence.

"I kept on saying it all winter," continued Sterling, abstractedly. "Later on, when we struck it rich and the others forgot, I would go up to her ladyship, after a wash and brush-up, and repeat my vow. Then the boys would satirically intimate that our belle had made at least one permanent mash."

As Sterling enthused himself over his words, Miss Lamar became ironically skeptical.

"This is good enough for a play. We must consult Fitch." Fitch was her manager. "But when luck evinced itself in a more solid way by making you suddenly rich, I suppose her ladyship had to take a gallery seat—"

"On the contrary, she became my 'bright particular' more than ever. I had named my claim 'Bear City Belle's, No. 7.' How the boys did laugh. But when I began to sluice out ten dollars to the pan, they said No. 7 was all right, and that the Belle was no flirt—"

Here Sterling, with a side glance at the actress, meditatively added:

"I have often wondered if they were right."

"I suppose you found that out long ago, if there was an original to that photo—or was it a newspaper? They print anyone's picture nowadays; literally anyone's. It is rather a distinction to be let alone. Mine, you ask? Look on the news stands, such caricatures!"

"Such divinities!" he interrupted, eagerly. "I loved your picture long before I saw you over the footlights. Then I made myself known—"

"By persecuting poor Fitch until he had to do something to rid himself of you."

"And now—am I not your slave? Dear Gertrude, if I may call you so; have you not guessed my riddle? Where are your intuitions? You know I love you deeply, devotedly—"

"Alas! Poor Belle of Bear City!" She raised her arms in a mock tragic gesture. "Has the magic seven failed her, who brought luck to you? Oh, faithless swain!"

He saw that she was not displeased, though it seemed likely that she had guessed but half his riddle. Rising, he made a sudden dash through the open window of a room near where they sat on the summer hotel piazza, but returning almost instantly, holding out a battered-looking newspaper print, framed in costly ebony, with an inscription, in Sterling's script beneath, on which Miss Lamar studiously fixed her eyes, while the faint rose tint on her cheeks deepened into a delicate glow.

"The Original Belle of Bear City," she read aloud. "God bless her! Where shall I find her?"

When their eyes met again, Sterling realized that she had guessed the other half of his riddle.

"Where shall I find her?" he echoed. "I want to tell her I am not faithless, but faithful—always."

"Here," said Miss Lamar, adding to her blush an even more convincing smile, as she resigned both hands to his eager clasp.

"English boy! You might have told me weeks ago."

"Old Omar Khayyam understood my feelings," returned Sterling. "Listen to the Persian sage:

"'Those whom with love we worship
In love we also fear.'"

WOMAN AND HOME

BATHROOM PORTIERE.

Materials That Are Effective and Useful in Working Out the Design Given Herewith.

A bathroom portiere should be of a material that will not spoil if splashed with water. Linen is very suitable, especially the heavier makes, and any of the rough kinds of oatmeal cloth, frieze or serge could also be used. A most effective working of the design given herewith may be carried out in the following way: Choose a heavy linen huckaback for the material, and darn the entire design in shades of sea green Harris thread. Thread is preferable to crewel, because, though there is nothing to equal crewel for bold, effective workings, it is not suitable in this instance, as it will shrink if wet. It may be safely used on frieze or serge, or any woolen material, as then the whole thing will be equally affected by the damp and hot steam of the bath.

If the entire design is darned, be sure that the darning all runs one way, as it never looks so well if done in different directions; but variety may be obtained by working the plants in half outline with heavy veining, and in this case a few extra veins should be added or the leaves will look meager. A good way of increasing the effect of veins is to make a series of small dots on each side by working two stitches one over the other. This may be done with the center vein only, leaving the others plain.

The water lines should be strongly defined and worked in a thick stem or rope stitch. The darned dolphins will require outlining, and for this and the reining of the fins, etc., a darker shade than that used for the darning should be employed. The coloring may be varied a little by using green for the plants, a bluer shade of green for the dolphins and a still bluer shade for the water. This design is rather massive for solid work, though a good solid effect may be produced in laid stitch, but an objection to this with some would be the necessity for doing it in a frame.

Lay the threads evenly from side to side of the space to be covered, and if you do this with the thread of the material there will be no difficulty in keeping the lines straight. The needle is passed through to the back, and brought up again, not quite close, but at a sufficient distance to allow an intermediate stitch being taken backward; thus the threads would be laid alternately—first, third, second, fourth and so on. This gives a better hold on the material than if they were laid consecutively.

BATHROOM PORTIERE.

When the whole space is covered in this way, lay other single threads across at regular intervals and sew them down with stitches at even distances. This work requires to be regular and even, both in laying the threads and also in the cross threads and the stitches that hold them down. It may be shaded by using various colors for the under layers of threads, and working them in after the manner of ordinary shading in stitches of various lengths, but let them be as long as possible, or it will look rough.

An embroidered portiere should not hang too full or you break the continuity of the design. For an ordinary doorway the usual double width material will be found sufficient, and in making up care should be taken that it is heavy enough to hang well. As it is to exclude draughts, it should hang to the ground, and it is sometimes well to sew weights at intervals along the hem. The brass rods which open with the doors are quite the best means of hanging a portiere, for if it has to be pushed back every time the door is opened in a very short time the material will become worn where the hand naturally catches hold of it.—N. Y. Tribune.

To Exterminate Moths.

Maria Parloa gives the following mixture, termed "moth essence," as a destroyer of moths: Mix together one quart of alcohol, one ounce each of carbolic acid crystals and camphor, a quarter of an ounce each of oil of cedar and oil of eucalyptus. Keep the bottle well corked, and when needed spray some of the mixture from an atomizer in the places where the moths appear.

Objects to Sitting on a Table.

Mme. Patti would never play in an opera where anyone has to sit on a table. This was because she had not made the success in Carmen that she had in other operas. She attributed this entirely to the fact that she had to sit on a table in the inn scene in the second act.

COURT PRESENTATIONS.

One Writer Says They Are No Longer a Mark of Standing, Another Asserts the Opposite.

Since it is the pleasure of King Edward VII. and his lovely queen to revive gorgeous court ceremonials, more than ever it will be the desire of all the moths in vanity fair to flaunt their beautiful costumes for one brief hour at the dazzling functions. Mabel Percy Haskell, describing the delights and difficulties attending court presentation at Buckingham palace, says in the Woman's Home Companion that, while it is a desirable privilege and a patent of respectability, it is no longer a mark of social standing nor a privilege attending a long pedigree.

ALEXANDRA, QUEEN OF ENGLAND.

A certain great lady said: "In court the word is 'hush,' and there is an awe-inspiring stillness in the throneroom when a drawing-room is being held. Everyone is rigid with dignity, and etiquette is carried out to the finest degree. No laughter, no conversation, nothing but the rustle of silken robes, and the voice of the lord chamberlain as he announces in grand stage tones the name of the lady moving toward the throne. No one is ever presented at court without a thorough training for the event. To make a mistake is a serious matter, and usually the name of a blunderer in the royal presence is erased from the books. Every step, every motion, is practiced by the debutante over and over again before the great day.

"The slow, gliding step, the profound courtesy before their majesties, and the deft management of the mass of court trains are things of serious moment."

Those folly-stricken American women who feel that life is nothing but a hollow mockery unless they can be "presented" at an English court, will doubtless go into deep mourning, says the Boston Transcript, when they hear that Queen Alexandra is drawing even more exclusive lines about her royal person than were the rule with her predecessor. Hitherto it has never been very difficult for an American woman to be "received" at court. The chief requisite was a "pull," and "pulls" are the chief stock in trade of the vast majority of the American society women residing in or visiting London. But the value of the "pull" appears to be threatened by the new queen, for it is said that henceforth people are to be "presented" only by special invitation, not merely to the lady who does the "presenting," but to the debutante as well. In consequence the "drawing-rooms" will be the exclusive of the exclusive, and "presentations" therefore will be in greater demand than ever.

SEEK A DESTINATION.

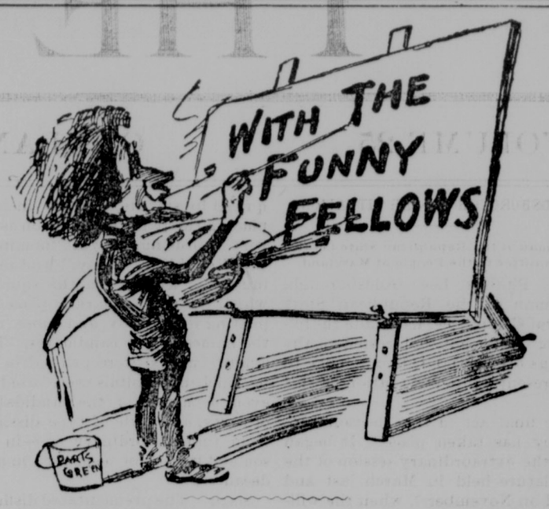
Johnny, Who Wanted to "Go Somewhere," Expressed a Great Truth in His Childish Way.

It was Johnny, the seven-year-old who tired of the "merry-go-round." The previous summer it had fascinated him, and he could not ride on it too often; this season a single trip satisfied him, and he declined another. "No, thank you, grandfather," he said, in his quaintly polite way. "You see, we ride and ride, but we stay under that old tent all the time. I guess when anybody gets to be seven years old they're too big to care about going and going that doesn't get anywhere."

"Now may the boy hold fast to his wisdom!" commented the grandfather, relating the incident. "Selecting a goal and traveling toward it would seem to be a reasonable theory of existence, but there are plenty of grown-ups who are content to spend a lifetime in the sort of 'going and going that never gets anywhere.' I don't know that it matters much whether it is an occupation or society or only a childish merry-go-round that carries us, if we are content with the mere round, and are seeking no worthy destination."—Wellspring.

Simple Little Beauty Hint.

Women as they grow older are troubled with the deposit of flesh about the neck and chin. This can be prevented, or at least decreased, by exercise with the head, especially with the backward motion, which stretches the neck muscles. After repeating these a number of times, the motion from side to side can be used, and also the rotation of the head. These muscles are seldom put into action by women, so that they become flaccid and the fat is deposited in them. A small amount of exercise daily regularly persisted in will accomplish much more than one would believe. It is unable to take as much general exercise as is necessary to keep in good bodily condition have massage twice a week, if not more. It would be better to deny one's self some other things in order to have this great aid to the maintenance of health, not to mention looks.—Chicago Daily News.



A "Trunkless" Body.

An explorer, lately returned from his travels, was relating his adventures.

"I peered," said he, "into the thicket, and there before me lay a trunkless body."

"Nonsense," remarked an interfering critic; "who ever heard of a trunkless body?"

"My friend," replied the traveler, quietly, "the body was that of an elephant."

He then resumed his story.—London Globe.

Brick.

When the Goose laid the golden egg, the Peasant did not hide his profound chagrin.

"I would rather that thou hadst laid a gold brick!" exclaimed he, for he was devoted to the traditions of his craft.

"I thought of that," replied the Goose; "but, you see, I am not a member of the Bricklayers' union!"

At this the Peasant stupidly lost his temper and killed the Goose.—Puck.

Something Yet to Learn.

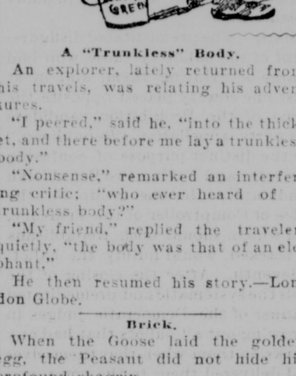
"Millie," said her elderly uncle, "has that Cooperative Cooking company you joined a few months ago declared any dividends yet?"

"O, yes," replied the young woman who was managing her own finances. "I got a circular from the secretary the other day telling me that the company was in splendid condition and had called an assessment of ten per cent. That's the same thing, isn't it?"—Chicago Tribune.

Commendation.

We greet the man who finds no fault,
With praise, and all the rest of it;
But the kicker whom we ne'er exalt
Still, somehow, gets the best of it.
—Washington Star.

SOFT ANSWER.



She—I hear that you were talking about me to the countess.

He—Could I have a finer topic of conversation?—Lestige Blaefter.

Worst of the Lot.

There's the woman with a mission,
And the woman with a fad;
Either makes the chap who weds her
Wish perhaps he never had.
But far worse than all the others
Of this freak-infested age
Is the bold ex-wife who imagines
She can elevate the stage.
—Chicago Daily News.

An Easy Way Out.

Maid (breathlessly)—Oh, miss, both the gents you is engaged to has called, and they're in the parlor, and somehow or other they've found it out, and oh, miss, I'm 'fraid there'll be trouble!

Miss Flirtie—Horrors! Oh, dear! What shall I do?

Maid (after reflection)—I'll fix it. I'll run an' tell 'em you're cryin' y'r eyes out 'cause y'r father has lost all his money.—Tit-Bits.

Willie's Case.

"I think," she said, "that Willie gave me more trouble when he was little than all of my other children together."

"And what about him now?"

"Oh, I never worry about him now. Sometimes I get to fretting for fear some of the others may be working themselves to death, but Willie's all right. He has a political job."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Why They Don't Marry.

Miss Leftover—You are a woman-hater, I hear.

Mr. Slimpurse—That is a mistake. I merely cannot afford to marry.

Miss Leftover—Cannot you support a wife?

Mr. Slimpurse—Oh, yes, I could support a wife easy enough, but I haven't income enough to support the two or three other women she would need to wait on her.—N. Y. Weekly.

A Modest Request.

"I'm sorry I took the horse," said the culprit, "but let's compromise this matter. If there's any hanging to be done, let me do it."

"Suicide?" queried the leader of the vigilantes.

"Oh, no. Suppose you allow me to hang my head with shame, and let it go at that."—Philadelphia Press.

Sticking to Etiquette.

"At last we shall have a chance," said Mrs. Newcomb, "to get acquainted with the Snipleighs."

"How?" her husband asked. "Has she finally seen fit to call on you?"

"No; but they're going to build a new and bigger house across the street from the one they occupy now, and when they go there to live I can call because etiquette gives the ones that live anywhere the right to call first on others that just move in, you know."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Great Unwashed.

The anarchist respects no laws,
Nor fears the hangman's rope,
Perhaps he courts death thus because
"While there is life there's soap."
—Philadelphia Press.

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

"The baby at your house is awfully small for its age!"

"Yes, but my mistress insists on bringing it up on condensed milk!"—Meggendorfer Blaetter.

The Editor's Mistake.

"I'll paste this fellow once," he said,
(He was the wily editor)
"I'll swat him fore and aft, by Jove!"
(The other was the creditor)
"I'll rip him up the back," he said,
(He grabbed his trenchant pen)
"I'll spare no lurid epithet;
(He grabbed some paper then)
"I'll swat him and I'll paste him."
(But he showed such reckless haste
That when he reached out for the ink
His pen stuck in the paste.)
—N. O. Times-Democrat.

Prettier Pictures.

A little girl went visiting one day, and after a time was given the album of family photographs to look at. She turned the leaves over carefully, and pretty soon closed the book.

"Well, dear," asked the hostess, "did you look at the album?"

"Oh, yes," answered the little maid, brightly; "and we've got one 'zacly like it, only the pictures are prettier."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Both Guilty.

He had stolen several Krs.
From a gay Chicago Miss;
And the lady, though she really was astounded,
Said she'd waive all prosecution
If he'd make due restitution,
And the felony was speedily compounded.
—Philadelphia Press.

POSSIBLE INDIGESTION.

Landlady (to Mr. Tutts, who has just engaged board)—Will you begin boarding immediately?

Mr. Tutts—No, I have some meal tickets which I must eat up first.—Chicago Daily News.

Lavishness.

The man who thinks he knows it all
Is a most generous elf.
He shares advice with great and small
And keeps none for himself.
—Washington Star.

No Taste for Mathematics.

"How many times did you vote in the recent election?"

The prisoner was silent.

"Answer the question! How many times did you vote?"

"Marse Tom," pleaded the prisoner, addressing the judge, "ain't you know me long enough ter know dat I don't know nuttin' 'tall 'bout 'rithmetics?"—Atlanta Constitution.

His Style of Culture.

Nell—Maude married a man of culture.

Bess—Why, I was under the impression she married a farmer.

Nell—So she did, but isn't a farmer a man of agri-culture?—Chicago Daily News.

A RACE FOR LIFE.

How a Wise Little Native Proved That Gin Was Harmful—A True Story.

"Drink it!" Lofanza shook his curly black head. "It will make you strong!"

"I am strong already. Look!" He sprang up, seized a bow lying on the sand and fitted an arrow. A moment later the arrow lodged in a distant palm tree.

"Good, good!" shouted his companion. "It is true. Lofanza is strong."

But Mukasa was not satisfied.

"You are strong," he said, "but if you drink this you will be stronger. Take it!"

Lofanza stretched out his black hand and took the cup. It was made of half a cocoanut shell and was full of gin.

With a laugh he turned the cup upside down, pouring the gin on the warm, dry sand.

Mukasa sprang up angrily.

"How dare you?" he began.

But at this moment an older man walked over to the boys.

"The goats are lost," he said in the boys' own language. "They have wandered away in the night. You must go and find them."

All four stood up unwillingly. Early morning as it still was, it was already very hot, and the sun was shining in a blue sky without a cloud. Not a breath of wind stirred the palm trees, under whose shade they had been lying.

"Where shall we look?" Mukasa's tone was sulky.

"Everywhere. Till you find them."

POURED THE GIN ON THE SAND.

Mukasa looked about him, and scowled angrily.

Behind stood the thick forests through which they had just come. In front lay a long stretch of dry, brown sand. Beyond that was a wide plain of high grass; so high that even Lofanza would be quite hidden by it.

"Where shall we look first?" Lofanza asked, tossing the skin of his last banana high up into the air.

"Here are the tracks," answered a younger boy, pointing to some small footprints in the sand.

"Lost in the grass, I suppose," grumbled Mukasa. But all his grumbling was of no use. The white man's goats must be found, and away went all four boys, carefully following up the tracks.

At last, when they were half-way across the sand, Lofanza's sharp black eyes spied one of the goats just disappearing in the high grass.

"I see them!" he cried, joyfully, "I see them!"

"Where?"

Lofanza pointed.

"You say gin makes you strong," he said, laughing. "Let's try! Who'll reach the goats first?"

He drew a line in the sand with his bare foot, and at a signal from Mukasa all four boys darted off across the sand. Two of them soon fagged, but for a few seconds Mukasa ran beside by side. Then Lofanza drew ahead, and in a few minutes had left all three of his companions far behind.

He looked back over his shoulder as he came to the high grass, and saw Mukasa standing still half a mile or more behind, waiting for the other two to come up.

He ran on and pushed aside the grass, and then for one moment stopped, horror-struck.

Right in front of him, hidden by the high, brown grass stood a lion.

Two of his wide, soft paws were planted on one of the lost goats, which he had half eaten, and at the noise Lofanza made by pushing aside the dry grass the lion turned and saw him.

For just one moment the boy stood spellbound.

Terrified beyond all words, he saw the lion, toss his rough brown mane, while his tawny eyes sparkled, as he loosed his hold of the goat. But as he moved, Lofanza's courage came back.

He would need all his strength, all his cleverness, all his swift running now, if ever he was to reach the camp alive.

Out of the grass he dashed, and his black feet flew over the hot, brown sand. Mukasa and the other two boys were far away ahead of him, running also for dear life to the camp.

On and on he flew, not daring to glance behind, fearing every instant he felt the lion spring.

But, for a little while, he kept ahead.

There were the palm trees! If only he could reach them, native spears, and the white man's rifle would be ready for the lion.

But now he could hear the noise of the lion's shaggy strength behind him.

It came closer and closer. His mouth grew dry, his breath came in gasps, big drops stood on his forehead.

Nearer and nearer came the lion. The palm trees were just ahead.

The lion was so close that the sand, flung up from his paws as he ran, flew on to Lofanza's bare back and lodged in his hair. He thought he could feel the fierce claws on his neck. Then came a flash, a report! On he ran, not daring to look behind. Another flash, another report, and with a roar of rage the lion fell, mortally wounded, as Lofanza fell also, exhausted and senseless, at the door of the white man's hut.

Two days after the four boys stood together admiring the lion's skin.

"But," said Lofanza, with a shudder, "if I had drunk your gin I should have been dead, not the lion! When people drink they cannot run." And for once Mukasa had nothing to say.—Band of Hope Review.

FATHER MATTHEW'S BADGE.

Gift to Lord Brougham and What the Latter Did with the Emblem of Temperance.

Brougham told Father Mathew, the celebrated Irish temperance worker, that he was extremely abstemious in the matter of wine. In 1844 Father Mathew amused a large party at the house of an Irish nobleman in London by his attempts to convert the noble lord to teetotalism.

"I drink very little wine," said Brougham—"only half a glass at luncheon, and two half glasses at dinner; and, though my medical advisers told me I should increase the quantity, I refused to do so."

"They are wrong, my lord, for advising you to increase the quantity," said Father Mathew, playfully, "and you are wrong in taking even the small quantity you mention, but I have hopes of you," and, despite the good-humored resistance of Brougham, he invested his lordship with the green ribbon and silver medal of the Total Abstinence society.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Brougham. I'll take the ribbon to the house of lords, where I shall be sure to meet old Lord ——, the worse for liquor, and I'll put it on him." This announcement was received with much merriment by the company, for the peer referred to was notorious for his deep potations.

A few evenings later Brougham met him in the house of lords. "Lord ——," said he, "I have a present from Father Mathew for you," and he passed the ribbon and medal rapidly over the old peer's head.

"Then I'll tell you what it is, Brougham. By ——, I'll keep sober from this night!" exclaimed the other, and, to the great amazement of all his friends, he remained faithful to his vow.—Good Words.

A SOLDIER'S APPEAL.

Writes to His Pastor to Use His Influence Against Reinstatement of Canteen.

A member of the Epworth league who has spent three years in the army and is now doing service in the Philippines, in a letter to his pastor, Rev. Nelson D. Sweeny, of Fenton, Ill., and printed in the National Advocate, makes the following appeal:

In the name of God and sacred humanity, use your influence against the reinstatement of the accursed canteen. Of all the curses that ever disgraced the nation the canteen in the army stands preeminent. If I chose to I dare not tell you what this canteen actually is. Some of the public presses, whose editors and publishers never spent five hours in an army post in their lives, prattle a great deal about the soldiers' club. Even some of the chaplains who are making an alliance with hell tell all about the good qualities of the canteen when under the supervision of army officials. I served in Camp Thomas (Ga.), Camp Hamilton (Ky.), and Fort Leavenworth (Kan.), where there were scores of canteens, and at Camp Hamilton I was told that I could work in the canteen or go to the guardhouse. So I worked as canteen clerk nearly three months. I served in five different posts in Cuba, and again was forced into the canteen to work about eight weeks. I have been where there were canteens in Fort Columbus, N. Y., in China, and in Manila, and if the canteen possesses one single good quality, I have never found out what it is.

ITEMS.

The British manufacturers are preparing to repel the American tobacco trust.

Of the 23,480 arrests made in the city of St. Louis, according to the police report for the year, 4,015 were for drunkenness. The report of the department also shows that the largest number of arrests for any one cause was for the disturbance of the peace.

Rev. Dr. Wilbur P. Thirkield, secretary of the Freedman's Society of the M. E. church, says: "The negro voter does not menace any state, but rum does. The open saloon and the whisky jug's store are the greatest enemies of our work. They corrupt and impoverish the people. Rum drinking by the whites and blacks is responsible for the great majority of race riots."

Caught.

It is always hard for a boy to smoke, but it is not often that the small smoker runs himself into difficulties as easily as one who was recently lounging about a railway station. Presently he went up to the ticket office and asked for a "half return" to a town a little distance up the line.

"What, a small chap like you smoking?" said the clerk, noticing the cigarette.

"Who are you calling a small chap? I'm 14," replied the boy, indignantly.

"Very well, full fare, please," was the clerk's only answer.

ANCHORING END POSTS.

One Method Which Has Stood the Test of Time and Fills All Needed Requirements.

In a back number a plan was given for anchoring the end posts of a wire fence, in which the line wires are fastened to the bottom of the last post. I do not think such an arrangement would stand a severe strain. In the last few years I have tried a number of different methods of end-bracing, and there is only one that has stood the test of time, and I can recommend it as filling all requirements, when properly put up. It is nothing new and may have been published before. The cut will give some idea of how it is put up. A is the end post, which should be eight inches or more in diameter, and set 36 to 40 inches deep. B is the brace post, which may be some smaller than the other post, and should be set eight or nine feet from it. C is the brace-rail, of four by four durable timber, or one inch gas pipe may be used. D is the anchor wire, preferably of three No. 10 galvanized wires, which pass from top of B down around the anchor E and upon the other side of end post A and the ends fastened together at top of B. The anchor E should be durable timber, six inches in diameter and two feet long. Or a suitable stone may be used. The hole for the anchor should be dug so that the timber will fit well against bank on the side next to the post, and should be two feet deep and three feet from the end post. After anchor wires are in place and the ends securely fastned, then, with a short, flat stick the wires should be twisted between the posts until quite tight.—Ohio Farmer.

ANCHORING END POSTS.

QUALITY COUNTS.

It Regulates Prices Quite as Effectively as the Proverbial Law of Supply and Demand.

We say that prices are regulated by supply and demand, but we are apt to lose sight of the important part which quality plays in stimulating consumption and thus maintaining prices. Breeders who have placed themselves in the van of the movement to improve the live stock of this country have not only raised the standard of production, but have stimulated the demand for the best. In other words, their work has been two-fold; it has educated the taste of the consumer, while it has striven to meet the demand thus created. Englishmen who came to America ten or fifteen years ago and who interested themselves in live stock statistics, expressed great surprise over the small consumption of mutton by our people, but after they had sampled the cooked article in the hotels of the United States they ceased to wonder that Americans had little appetite for that kind of meat. Farmers raised sheep for wool and the mutton disposed of was a by-product. The quality of the meat was on a par with the beef retailed in certain out-of-the-way dairy districts whose markets are supplied from the local stock of old cows fattened and sent to the shambles.

With an increased supply butchers and packers have learned that the best of mutton must be killed and dressed so carefully that no taint from the oil always present in the wool reaches the meat to give it the flavor so unpleasant to many fastidious palates, and this careful dressing has also helped the trade. The improvement of export facilities has likewise encouraged the raising of mutton sheep, and that, as Kipling says, is another story. Though the growth of this branch of live stock industry has been rapid it has been permanent. Mutton now holds high rank with other meats in the estimation of our people, and its popularity is increasing.—Farmers' Review.

Turkey in Popular Favor.

What I now plead for are large boned, well-marked turkeys of reasonable weights for exhibition purposes, but do not demand of us the over-fat exhibition birds for breeders, for if you do you will be disappointed in the fertility of eggs and the vitality of the stock hatched therefrom. If we were all fanciers, we might contend for the excessive weights as it would not be necessary to raise so many turkeys if only the fancier were interested, but the turkey is the national bird for the festive board, and the American people call every year for a greater and greater supply. Few demand a 40-pound turkey, while millions use the lighter weights for table purposes; hence I claim that even the fancier should be practical in his ideas, for the masses look to him as a teacher on these subjects.—Mrs. Bettie Glover Mackey, in Reliable Poultry Journal.

Bring the spring water to the kitchen and save the health and strength of the patient, plodding wife.

SYRUP OF FIGS

IS AN EXCELLENT FAMILY LAXATIVE—

(IT IS REFRESHING TO THE TASTE AND ACTS PLEASANTLY AND GENTLY.

IT ASSISTS ONE TO OVERCOME HABITUAL CONSTIPATION PERMANENTLY

With many millions of families Syrup of Figs has become the ideal home laxative. The combination is a simple and wholesome one, and the method of manufacture by the California Fig Syrup Company ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product, which have commended it to the favorable consideration of the most eminent physicians and to the intelligent appreciation of all who are well informed in reference to medicinal agents.

Syrup of Figs has truly a laxative effect and acts gently without in any way disturbing the natural functions and with perfect freedom from any unpleasant after effects.

In the process of manufacturing, figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinally laxative principles of the combination are obtained from plants known to act most beneficially on the system.

To get its beneficial effects—
buy the genuine—Manufactured by

California Fig Syrup Co

Louisville, Ky. San Francisco, Cal. New York, N.Y.

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS PRICE 50¢ PER BOTTLE

A MATHEMATICAL QUIZ.

Will of a Milwaukee Man Divides His Small Estate in Most Puzzling Manner.

Heirs of Peter J. Gergen, whose will was filed for probate at Milwaukee, Wis., the other day, probably will be forced to resort to higher mathematics to ascertain the amounts to which they are respectively entitled.

In its directions regarding the distribution of the estate, which is valued at $3,500, the will is a curiosity. The property is to be divided among the widow and eight children, and the allotment to the children is made in the following language:

"Mary to receive for her share $200 more than the other children, Nicholas to receive $50 less than the other children, John to receive $70 less than the other children, Anna to receive $30 less than the other children, Joseph, Peter, Gabriel and Frank to receive an equal share, which shall be $200 less than Mary, $50 more than Nicholas, $70 more than John and $30 more than Anna." Peter Gergen, one of the sons, was named as executor in the will.

Salisbury as a Saint.

It is not generally known that a statue of Lord Salisbury as a Christian warrior appears in one of the niches of the interesting and beautiful reredos in the chapel of All Souls' college, Oxford. About 40 years ago the premier was elected a fellow of this college, and about the same time an elaborate stone screen was erected in the chapel attached to the Fellows' house. The sculptor evidently preferred to make his own saints instead of accepting those canonized by the church, and Lord Salisbury was chosen to fill up the vacant gap, and is therefore immortalized as a Christian warrior.—Chicago Record-Herald.

One-half the world smiles at the frowns of the other half.—Chicago Daily News.

More haste, less speed. The quicker the lunch, the longer it is digesting.—Puck.

Every time a man does a fool thing, he makes for himself a ton of troubles.—Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

A man should not lose his temper oftener than once in ten years, and a politician never.—Atchison Globe.

When preachers get together they talk "shop" even more than lawyers or doctors.—Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

The gift horse does not possess a tender mouth. It has been thoroughly seasoned by frequent inspection.—Washington Post.

What He Smelled. "I smell something burning," said the husband after he had lighted his pipe and an odd look in the easy-chair for a comfortable smoke. "Isn't it delicious!" exclaimed his wife joyously; "I emptied a whole lot of rose leaves in your tobacco jar!"—Ohio State Journal.

Yacht Talk.

"It seems like such funny talk, and yet I suppose it does mean something. Now, right here it says that the Shamrock saved. How do you yaw, George?"

"I don't. And I don't care to learn."

"And then right afterward it says she luffed. Isn't that a funny word? Is luffing anything like yawing, George?"

"You may search me, my love. Luffing and yawing may be the same thing for all I know."

"And then she came up into the wind, George. Do you suppose she was dusty before she came up?"

"No, I don't think so, my love. It's some sort of a technical term, I fancy."

"Not technical, George. Here it says she went about in stays. What do you suppose that means?"

"That's easy, my love. It means she had mislaid her waist."—Cleveland Leader.

W. L. DOUGLAS

UNION MADE

OUR $3.50 MAJOR SHOES $3.00 THE WORLD'S GREATEST SHOE MAKER

W. L. Douglas $4 Gilt Edge Line Cannot be Equaled at Any Price.

For more than a Quarter of a Century the reputation of W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes for style, comfort and wear has excelled all other makes sold at these prices. This excellent reputation has been won by merit alone. W. L. Douglas shoes have to give better satisfaction than other $3.00 and $3.50 shoes because his reputation for the best $3.00 and $3.50 shoes must be maintained. The standard has always been placed so high that the wearer receives more value for his money in the W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than he can get elsewhere. W. L. Douglas makes and sells more $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than any other two manufacturers in the world. Fast Color Eyelets used. W. L. Douglas $2 and $2.50 shoes are made of the same high grade leathers used in $5 and $6 shoes, and are just as good in every way.

CATALOG FREE.

Sold by 53 Douglas stores in American cities selling direct from factory to wearer at one profit: and the best shoe dealers everywhere.

Insist upon having W. L. Douglas shoes with name and price stamped on bottom. Shoes sent anywhere on receipt of price and 25c. additional for carriage. Take measurements of foot as shown; state style desired; size and width usually worn; plain or cap toe; heavy, medium, or light soles.

W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

The Family Home Run.

The national game is frequently productive of "home runs," and one of the most interesting of this variety of tallies was made by a Philadelphia batsman in Chicago. He hit the ball squarely, and drove it over the right field fence. It entered the window in the second story of a house, rolled down the back stairs into the kitchen and lodged in a pan of dough under the stove. The natural inference is that the family partook the next day of ball-bearing bread.—Youth's Companion.

The Last Word.

Mrs. Jigsby (the discussion having become somewhat personal)—You may talk till doomsday, George Jigsby, but you'll never get me to admit that a wife is bound to do as her husband tells her.

Mr. Jigsby—By gravy, madam, if I outlive you I'll have it engraved on your tombstone that you were a good and obedient wife!—Chicago Tribune.

Poor Chumpleigh.

"Why, pa, this is roast beef," exclaimed little Willie at dinner on the evening when Mr. Chumpleigh was present as the guest of honor.

"Of course," said the father. "What of that?"

"Why, you told ma this morning that you were going to bring a 'mutton-head' home for dinner this evening."—Philadelphia Press.

Sea-sonable Sentiment.

"A romantic country, that!" "Yes," "Sure. All along the coast the buoys are hugging the shore!" He might have added that the sound of the fishing smack was heard now and then as the waves kissed the beach, and that an arm of the sea held encircles a sandy waste, but—Yale Record.

An Authority.

Johnnie—Say, pop!

Pop—Well, my son?

"What is a revenue cutter?"

"A revenue cutter, my son, is a well, ask your Uncle Fred. He has to pay alimony.—Smart Set.

Her Choice.

Doctor—My dear young lady, you are drinking unfiltered water, which swarms with animal organisms. You should have it boiled; that will kill them.

Patient—Well, doctor, I think I'd sooner be an aquarium than a cemetery.—What to Eat.

Worst Off.

"What is worse than a giraffe with a sore throat?" A centipede with chilblains.—Boston Christian Register.

Money-Money

FOR SALE—Small mortgages paying 6 per cent. interest on irrigated farms in the Great Platte Valley of Nebraska, where crops never fail. Write for information. JAS. H. CASSELMAN, President of The Irrigators' Bank, SCOTTSBLUFF, Nebraska.

PILES ANAKESIS gives instant relief and PERMANENTLY CURES PILES. Sent by mail, 50c. Druggists or prepaid on receipt of price. Address "ANAKESIS," Tribune Building, New York.

DO YOU WORK IN THE WET? THE ORIGINAL TOWER'S FISH BRAND OILED CLOTHING BLACK OR YELLOW IS SURE PROTECTION AND IS MADE FOR SERVICE.

ON SALE EVERYWHERE. TAKE NO SUBSTITUTES. LOOK FOR ABOVE TRADE MARK.

CATALOGUES FREE SHOWING FULL LINE OF GARMENTS AND HATS

A. J. TOWER CO. BOSTON, MASS.

FAVORITE HYMNS OF PRESIDENT McKINLEY:

"Nearer, My God, To Thee." "Lead, Kindly Light," Etc.

ABSOLUTELY FREE

ALL THE WORDS. ALL THE MUSIC. Write for them. No cost to you.

McKinley Music Co., CHICAGO, 203 Wabash Ave. NEW YORK, 74 Fifth Ave.

One Cent Buys the Best

Yes, when you subscribe by the year for

10 Story Book

you pay less than one cent each for new, high-sighted stories by such authors as Robert Barr, Israel Zangwill, Owen Chas. Kling, Opie Read, Mary E. Wilkins, Hallie Erminie Rives, George Ade, Meredyth Thadeus, Irving Bachellor, Elizabeth Phipps Train, Henry Gallup Paine H. S. Canfield, Julia Truitt Bishop. All of these and others write for the monthly magazine 10 STORY BOOK. 10 cents a copy—$1.4 year. 120 stories for $1. Less than one cent each. 10 STORY BOOK, 167 Dearborn St., Chicago.

STARK TREES best by Test—77 YEARS. Largest Nursery. Fruit Book free. We WANT MORE Salesmen. PAY CASH Weekly. STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo., Dansville, N. Y., Etc.

RHEUMATISM Van Buren's Rheumatic Compound is the only positive cure. Past experience speaks for itself. Depot 69 S. California Ave., Chicago.

DROPSY NEW DISCOVERY; gives quick relief and cures worst cases. Book of testimonials and 10 days' treatment Free. Dr. H. H. GREEN'S SONS, Box B, ATLANTA, GA.

A. N. K.—C 1889

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 5 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1901.

WE ARE left but not lost. Darkness may for a season overwhelm a portion of our land, but the light of reason that will break through the rifts, increased by the rising indignation of a people foiled in their honest intentions to seven-fold efulgence and the people begin to see as they are seen, the fire of their wrath will burn out the dross and corruption, darkness and gloom will be dispelled and honesty in Maryland elections will prevail.

A HUMILIATING RESULT.

Sooner than anticipated, "the expected has happened"—that is if the Democrats have really obtained control of the Legislature.

"Tray, Blanche and Sweetheart" of the servile Democratic press have already assumed that there is nothing else for the legislative majority to do in the matter of electing a United States Senator but to confirm the nomination of one man, himself being the nominator and nominee.

It is very sickening.

That the State of Maryland should fall so low in the scale of morality would be inconceivable in any province other than party.

Only party—blessed be all that is good!—can glorify the treason which the people punished in 1895.

And so it happens, or will happen.

And while the lackeys, footmen and flunkeys are engaged next winter in making illustrious virtues of "perfidy and dishonor," the rest of the State, to make good a long standing delinquency, should actually take some step toward rehabilitating the injured memory of Benedict Arnold.

Let us "go the whole hog."—Frostburg Mining Journal.

TAKE IT INTO THE COURTS.

The General Assembly will be controlled by the Democrats, and Wellington's successor will be named by the representatives of that party. The frauds in Southern Maryland and on the Eastern Shore "have nothing to do with the case" so far as the practical result that the Democrats will elect a Senator is concerned.

But those frauds should have a very important bearing on the action of the majority in the General Assembly as to who the Senator shall be and as to amendments in the election law. No man in any way responsible for the frauds should be made the beneficiary of them. The Democratic party has already suffered too much for the sins of the selfish in its leadership, and it should shake itself free from their dominion. Its choice of a Senator should constitute a repudiation of the election conspiracy and frauds of 1901.

The Republicans should never rest until they have laid bare the frauds and brought home the responsibility to the real authors. Charges of fraud are too easy to make to attract much notice. It will be necessary to drive the facts home in the courts. A prominent and able Democratic lawyer is quoted as saying that the responsible one for the trick ballots in Southern Maryland can be dealt with most severely under the law. Here is a good place to take hold; and if the conspiracy is as wide-reaching as many well informed in politics suspect, the evidence brought out in the criminal courts may not only result in bringing forward a new name in the Senatorial contest, but in insuring the passage of such an election law as will make the repetition of the frauds of 1901 impossible.—Baltimore News.

THE TEST AGAINST THE LAW.

In speaking of the new election law the Baltimore Sun of last Thursday wisely said:

Tuesday's trial of the new election law demonstrates conclusively that it will have to "go way back and sit down," in company with a good many distinguished statesmen, when the Legislature meets, no matter what party controls the General Assembly. Although in principle it is all that ought to be desired to promote an intelligent choice of candidates it is inherently defective in the practical operation of its electoral machinery, which, in a community where there are so many illiterates, must work slowly. In this fast age people cannot afford to wait for the slow people to fumble over a list of names and make puzzles for judges of election to quarrel over for 24 hours at a stretch. Public interests and convenience could not suffer such a law, even if it was framed wholly for the purpose of promoting political purity and fairness. In a presidential election hinging upon the electoral vote of a single State it is easy to see how the peace and safety of the whole country might be jeopardized by such delays and uncertainties as have characterized the count of the vote cast on Tuesday in Maryland. Nothing could more strikingly illustrate the defectiveness of the present law in this respect, for this latitude at least, than the fact that the result in New York City, with 3,000,000 inhabitants and over 300,000 voters, should have been known here before we had gotten the returns from a single precinct in Baltimore. They manage such things better, it seems, in Massachusetts. But here it is too slow and cumbersome in its operations, and the public will demand its radical modification, if not its absolute repeal, whether the majority in the Legislature be Democratic or Republican.

Continual tinkering with our election laws is to be deprecated, but after Tuesday's experience it is evident that simplicity in style will have to be the form of our ballot until some 50,000 ignorant voters or so have learned how to read. When an election is held the people want to know the result promptly. A law which keeps them in the dark for more than a day, when the count might be completed in two or three hours under better conditions, will not be tolerated by the voters of any party. Therefore, there can be no doubt that the coming Legislature will be called on to undo, partially, at least, the work of the extra session and to give us a law that will not be open to this criticism.

While very few genuine tears have been shed, even by white Republicans, over the disfranchisement of colored illiterates under the new ballot law, it seems pretty clear from Tuesday's election that the white voters of the State do not care to have their election laws framed in the interest of one or two men, and that while they may not object to proper restrictions on suffrage they are not in favor of election laws which may be used to assist tricksters in their political schemes. There are, doubtless, elements in the State which might, with advantage, be excluded from participation in politics and election, but it is evident that the new ballot law, as it stands, can be perverted to evil purposes, against which it provides no protection. What is demanded is a law devised in the interest of the public, not merely in the interest of a few politicians.

IN THE INTEREST OF GOOD ROADS.

The question of good roads is such a practical one and the economy of improved highways has been so unquestionably demonstrated wherever they have been constructed that citizens of a State like Maryland, which has done so little to secure them, may be excused by a feeling of impatience on the subject, says the Baltimore News. The Good Roads Congress, recently insession at Winston Salem, N. C., called renewed attention to this very important matter. The fact that in our State the average horse-load is from one-half to two-thirds of a ton, whereas on an improved roadbed it would be from four to six tons; that it costs now, on an average, about twenty-five cents to haul a ton a mile, whereas it should not cost more than ten, and that some of our roads are wholly impassable in winter ought to appeal to our legislators, irrespective of party.

North Carolina, considering its size and wealth, is one of the States which have been quite active in the matter of securing good roads, and the convening of this congress there shows the interest which obtains. Two of the most prominent points dealt with in the addresses were the lessons to be learned from the example of railroads and the value of convict labor on roadways. One of the most striking features of modern railway practice is the expenditure of great sums of money in lowering grades and abolishing curves in order to increase the hauling capacity of locomotives, the economy thus effected having been found to be far in excess of the cost of improvement. The same thing applies to improved highways. The use of jail labor in the betterment of public roads is a project that is growing in public favor, and it will be recalled that the Highway Division of our Maryland Geological Survey has spoken approvingly of the possibility of some day thus utilzing the labor of our jail prisoners.

The work of the Survey has been a good start to the realization of good roads in this State; but it is only a start. We hope that it will be followed up vigorously in the next legislature.

NO TARIFF TINKERING.

Gen. Charles H. Grosvenor, of Ohio, who is a prophet not without honor even in his own home, expresses the opinion that the result in Ohio on Tuesday eliminates all possibility of tariff revision by the approaching Congress. Further than that he declares that there will be no reciprocity treaty ratified that will impinge upon the protective policy. He bases his belief upon the fact that the fight in Ohio was fought upon National lines and that the verdict at the polls was overwhelmingly in favor of the recent economic policy of the Republican party as represented by McKinley.

There can be little doubt that Gen. Grosvenor's view is well grounded. Neither in Ohio nor in any other State was there a faltering in the Republican lines or the Republican faith, and of course the natural conclusion must be that the principles which have worked such marvels throughout the Nation during the past five years are acceptable to the people. The falling off in Pennsylvania had to do entirely with the misdeeds of a corrupt and unprincipled faction of the Republican party, and had no bearing whatever upon National issues. The Republican sky is clear over the land, which means that we are to have a continuance of pulic confidence in the National administration, that business men are taking a hopeful view of the future, and that we are to go on with undiminished prosperity.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Seaboard Air Line Railway to Florida, Cuba, Savannah, Camden, Southern Pines and Pinehurst.

Winter excursion tickets were placed on sale to resort points on this line in North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida on October 15th and will remain on sale during the season. Exceptionally low rates are in effect this year to Pinehurst and Southern Pines, N. C., Camden, S. C., Savannah, Ga., and all points in Florida and Cuba. To reach any of these points the service of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, "Capital City Route," will be found the best and most attractive. In addition to the superior service now operated, it is announced that Cafe cars will be placed in service on the Washington-Atlanta Line about November 1st and on the Florida Lines about January 1st, 1902. Following this the Florida & Metropolitan Limited will be inaugurated about January 15th, 1902, with sumptuous appointments and superb equipment, including dining and club cars, constituting it beyond a doubt the peer of any train in the world.

The service of the Seaboard Air Line Railway to Cuba is most attractive. Its Cafe car service and many other features present advantages commending it to the favorable attention of all travelers.

LOW RATES FOR HUNTING AND FISHING PARTIES VIA SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY.

This popular route, whose lines penetrate some of the best country for game, birds and fish to be found anywhere in the South, has on sale reduced rate tickets from Norfolk, Portsmouth and Richmond to all points in Virginia, North and South Carolina, for the benefit of hunting and fishing parties, moving individually or otherwise. One dog is carried free with each passenger and others are transported at a small cost.

Full information as to most desirable points, rates, schedules, etc., furnished upon application to any agent or representative of the Company. nov 30

BUSINESS LOCALS.

FOR SALE:—The Lutheran parsonage, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

Stop the Blight

It is a sad thing to see fruit trees spoiled by the blight. You can always tell them from the rest. They never do well afterwards but stay small and sickly.

It is worse to see a blight strike children. Good health is the natural right of children. But some of them don't get their rights. While the rest grow big and strong one stays small and weak.

Scott's Emulsion can stop that blight. There is no reason why such a child should stay small. Scott's Emulsion is a medicine with lots of strength in it—the kind of strength that makes things grow.

Scott's Emulsion makes children grow, makes them eat, makes them sleep, makes them play. Give the weak child a chance. Scott's Emulsion will make it catch up with the rest.

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle.

Send for free sample.

SCOTT & BOWNE,
409 Pearl St., New York
50c and $1. all druggists.

WILL APPEAL TO THE COURTS.

The Course to Be Adopted By Maryland Republicans With Election Frauds.

BALTIMORE, MD., Nov. 13.—The Republican State Committee met at Rennert's Hotel at noon today and decided to insist on an investigation of the frauds believed to have been committed in connection with the recent election in this State. To that end a committee was authorized to be named by Chairman Goldsborough to have charge of the investigation, and to prosecute the offenders where possible in the criminal courts.

Among those present at the committee meeting were Senator McComas and all the members of the House of Representatives of Maryland, as well as a large number of other influential Republicans from different parts of the State. Many instances of election frauds were reported by the committeemen assembled.

Death of Peter Mehen.

Peter Mehen is dead at Gladesville, Preston Co., W. Va., which fact recalls a heartrending scene that he was compelled to witness years ago.

About 40 years ago Mehen located at Gladesville and cleared out a farm, out of the then woodland of that section. One day soon after he had located, his wife, desirous of assisting her husband, left their two little children in the house and went over a hill, to where her husband was at work. While working they saw smoke rising from their dwelling and at once ran to the house, but too late to rescue the children, who were too small to escape of their own accord. Mrs. Mehen was so grief stricken that she watched an opportunity and threw herself into the flames and was cremated along with her children. The awful affair caused the husband's hair to turn white as snow.

Winter Tourist Tickets, Season 1901-2. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has placed on sale at all principal offices East of the Ohio River, Winter Tourist Tickets to points in Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Carolina and Texas; also Havana, Cuba, and Nassau, N.P., at reduced rates. For additional information call on Agent Baltimore & Ohio R.R.

Great Meteoric Display Scheduled for To-morrow Night.

The great meteoric display which has been looked for during the past two or three years is likely to take place on to-morrow night. The last appearance of these meteors was in 1867, at which time the shower was exceedingly fine. The Leonids, by which name they are known in scientific circles, were looked for in 1899, and their failure to appear disappointed many astronomers. It is now explained that a mistake was made in computing the time of their appearance and that they may be expected with reasonable certainty this month.

A Great Medicine.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. Phipps, of Poteau, Ark. "It cured me of bloody flux. I cannot speak too highly of it." This remedy always wins the good opinion, if not praise, of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects even in the most severe cases make it a favorite everywhere. For sale by all druggists.

GORTNER.

Mr. H. K. Bradford, of Washington, D. C., has recently returned to his home there. Mr. Bradford spent the greater part of the summer and autumn with Messrs. O. S. and H. U. Miller on the "Twin Hill Farm." He left a number of friends here.

Miss Lizzie Lichty, who has been very ill for several days, is improving.

Some of the young people of this place attended prayer meeting last Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Buncutter at Sunnyside.

Mr. Samuel Slabach is improving his residence.

Our school is progressing nicely under the management of Miss Sadie Weimer.

We hear very favorable reports from the Cherry Creek school. Miss Ida DeWitt is the teacher.

There will be preaching services in the Union church next Saturday evening and Sunday morning at 10.30 by a Mennonite minister.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in Chicago.

Hisgen Bros., the popular South Side druggists, corner 69th street and Wentworth avenue, say: "We sell a great deal of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and find that it gives the most satisfactory results, especially among children for severe colds and croup." For sale by all dealers.

Call For Your Letters.

Chas. Shofferman, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Barneby, Anthony Emmerson, L. W. Townshend, W. E. Beeghley, J. W. Shaw, Mrs. M. S. Young, Mrs. S. S. Rosenberger, Mrs. A. M. Graham, Mrs. Sarah E. Kesner, Mrs. W. E. Boyer, Miss Anna D. Gage (3).

TO CURE LAGRIPPE IN TWO DAYS

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE TABLETS. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature on every box. 25c.

CEDAR RAPIDS LEADS

REMARKABLE GROWTH OF THIS THRIVING CITY.

Population Nearly Doubled In the Last Decade—Center of a Populous Region—Causes of Its Rapid Advancement—Natural Advantages.

Referring to the six cities of Iowa that have each a population in excess of 25,000, the census bulletin No. 23, issued at Washington, Dec. 24, 1900, says: "The entire growth of all these cities was rapid, but for the last decade the most noticeable rate of increase is that of Cedar Rapids, which shows a gain in population of 42.4 per cent. Davenport is next, with a gain of 31.2."

According to size, Cedar Rapids is the one hundred and fifty-seventh city in the United States, while in the matter of postoffice receipts it is the eighty-second city, passing sixty-five cities of larger population. It is said that there are 1,000,000 people within a radius of seventy-five miles of Cedar Rapids, something that cannot be said of any other center of population in the west, not even St. Paul and Minneapolis.

This city is located almost at the geographical center of the eastern half of Iowa, on the Cedar river. This is the largest river in the state. It affords valuable power and good water.

From Cedar Rapids lines of railway radiate in every direction. Four great railway systems compete for business—the Chicago and Northwestern; the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern; the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul; the Illinois Central.

The railroads give direct communication with seventy-eight of the ninety-nine counties in Iowa and have 798 stations on their lines in the state. The general offices and shops of the B., C. R. and N. are located in the city.

There are more than eighty factories. There are rye mills, flour mills, canning factory, cracker and candy factories, brewery, soap works, overall factory, cloak factory, cutlery works, carriage factories, fence works, three large pump factories, planing mills, foundries and machine shops and others.

There is a large volume of wholesale business, especially in dry goods, groceries and drugs.

Seventy-five leading manufacturers of agricultural implements make the city a distributing point and headquarters. This immense business supports the only exclusive transfer house in the state and the largest one west of the Mississippi river.

Conventions and large gatherings are amply accommodated.

Ninety-nine trains that regularly carry passengers arrive and leave every twenty-four hours. Hotel accommodations are ample, having recently been greatly increased and improved. The new auditorium, built especially for conventions and expositions, seats over 3,000. Greene's Opera House, a thoroughly equipped theater, seats 1,600.

There are three national banks, four savings banks, one trust company, two building and loan associations. Home office of Farmers' Insurance company and headquarters of the Order of Railway Conductors of the United States, Canada and New Mexico are located there.

There are two daily newspapers, The Republican and Evening Gazette; one semiweekly, the Slovan-America; five weeklies—The Republican, The Gazette, The Saturday Record, The Svit and the Deutsche Zeitung—and one monthly, the Kvinden og Hjemmet (70,000 circulation).

The city library will soon be conducted in a new building provided for by Andrew Carnegie's recent donation of $50,000. The 20,000 volumes of the Masonic library and the fireproof building in which they are contained belong to the grand lodge of Iowa, though they constantly attract the attention and patronage of Masons in every quarter of the globe.

Coe college, under Presbyterian auspices, though nonsectarian in its teaching, is a growing institution of elevated character, devoted to the higher education of both sexes.

St. Joseph's academy is a well known Catholic school.

The Cedar Rapids Business college has students from all parts of the United States.

The high school is beginning to overcrowd a recently constructed $60,000 building. There are twelve other school buildings, having an aggregate value of $300,000.

The following organizations have fine buildings:

St. Luke's hospital, on Episcopalian foundation, though under nonsectarian management; Mercy hospital (Catholic); Home For Aged Women; Home For the Friendless; the Y. M. C. A.

There are thirty-six churches, representing sixteen denominations.

The city has fourteen miles of paved streets, a complete system of sanitary sewers and a paid fire department, with four stations and twenty-two men.

The water supply is abundant and pure and comes from the Cedar river by the Holly system through the gravity system of filtration. The streets are lighted by 236 arc lights, and there are thirteen miles of electric railways.

The interests of the city are promoted by the Cedar Rapids Commercial club, which is always prepared to furnish facts relating to the city.

Recreation Parks For Chicago.

Unless the plans of a number of wealthy men go astray the poorer classes of Chicago will soon be provided with a large number of parks, swimming pools and other places of recreation. Henry E. Weaver is at the head of the movement, and he hopes to associate with him enough men of means to carry his plan to a successful termination.

WHY THEY FRET.

For some reason we notice that the women do not take as kindly to the work incident to the care of their homes as men do to the work of providing for their families. For instance, there will be ten times as much kicking and jawing about washing the dishes and the like among a lot of girls as there will be among boys who have much dirtier work to do in caring for the stock on the farm. Men put more enthusiasm into their work, no matter if it be hard, drudging and every way unpleasant, while so many good women seemingly resent the fate which compels them to perform the drudgery of the home. Why cannot women accept their limitations, and invest homemaking and housekeeping with the same enthusiasm that men put into their business? One reason is that so few girls are ever taught how to care for a home in a business-like and intelligent manner and so work all their lives at a disadvantage, doing work in the hardest way and ignoring a hundred economies and methods which would make their work easier and more pleasant. We will put it this way—the average American girl is allowed too much liberty, is not sensibly and practically trained and is taught that the chief end of her existence is to secure some man who will take care of her and provide for all her wants. Reform on these lines is needed not only for the sake of the woman herself, but for the sake of her husband and children.

SOIL ROBBING.

The very choicest elements of soil fertility from hundreds of thousands of farms in the great Mississippi valley in almost inconceivable quantity are yearly dumped by this river into the gulf of Mexico. The process of erosion goes on all the year round and particularly in the winter in the south, while it is suspended during the frost period in the north. Every hillside placed under cultivation contributes year after year its quota of fertility through the medium of the little runs, creeks and streams to this tremendous waste. Because this process is continuous in the south is one reason why the soil of the south is less fertile than that of the north. There is no one thing which should be so closely watched by the owner of rolling and hilly land as this loss of fertility by erosion; the grand larceny committed by the pilfering waters carrying off the farmer's wealth little by little in solution. Grass and trees are the best remedy.

SOME DRY WEATHER LESSONS.

We have learned a few lessons as a result of the drought of the past summer. One thing, it does not pay to sprinkle every day or two; it is better to really irrigate by flowing the water on the ground and give it a good soaking instead once in two weeks. Another is that mulching will do almost as much good as irrigation. We have also demonstrated that constant surface cultivation of any crop which will permit of its being done is just as good as irrigation, and that by this means a continuous and healthy growth can be obtained even in the driest time. The benefits of deep cultivation—subsoiling—have been very noticeable also.

CAN'T ENJOIN PROVIDENCE.

During the late drought a spring of nice water broke forth of its own accord upon a man's farm in a western state where there had never been any sign of a spring before. He was more pleased than were three of his neighbors, whose springs went dry and wells gave out simultaneously with the coming of his good fortune. The question of whether his spring could be made the subject of legal proceedings in the shape of an injunction was seriously considered by his neighbors, who concluded that the injunction papers would have to be served upon Providence and so gave up the job.

THE WILLOW HEDGE NUISANCE.

A willow hedge epidemic struck a certain western county thirty years ago, the farms and highways being lined with these hedges. If the trees had never grown to exceed ten feet in height, the scheme would have been all right, but when the trees got to robbing a strip a hundred feet wide of the cultivated fields and giving the public a perpetual mudhole for a highway the planters of the trees began to realize how big a blunder they had made, and today nothing interests them more than to find out the cheapest and easiest method to get rid of all willow hedges.

A WRONG THEORY.

The secretary of agriculture is credited—wrongly, we think—with the assertion that the forests which once furnished windbreaks for the hot winds of the southwest have been cut away, thus making these winds more destructive than they used to be. The facts in no way justify such claim, for there is far more timber in Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota now than there was twenty years ago, while Colorado, New Mexico, western Texas and Arizona never had a stick of timber growing on their desert plains.

THE FIRST HIRED MAN.

The first hired man on record was Jacob, who worked for Laban seven years for a girl, and then the old man palmed off on him another girl whom he did not want. He then worked another seven years to get the right one. Hired men who kick on $25 a month, board and washing and the privilege of sitting up with the hired girl three nights in the week should read the story of Jacob, the first hired man.

HOT TEA BISCUIT

Royal Baking Powder

Perfect, Delicious, Appetizing.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

"The Deacon."

Masonic lodge to-night. Members are requested to be present.

Dressed poultry is coming into market and commands fair prices.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

Mr. Parley DeBerry and two children, of Terra Alta, were in Oakland Monday.

Daniel Turney, Esq., of Accident, was in town a day or two this week on business.

Mrs. Fred. A. Thayer and Mrs. Lou Waters have returned from a visit to friends in Clarksburg, West Va.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Jamesson, of Piedmont, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. King Delawder on Second street.

"Cheap John" Michaels is in Baltimore and Philadelphia this week where he is purchasing a Christmas stock of toys, candies, etc.

Dr. W. Ravenscroft, of Accident, came up to Oakland Friday and went from here to Allegany county where he visited his parents for a few days.

If you want one of the best cutting boxes made either power or hand, see the ones Naylor has for sale for corn fodder or hay. It shreds the fodder. 36 3t

Judge Stake, in his charge to the Washington county jury, called attention to the misprinted ballot which caused so much excitement in Washington county at the recent election.

Cashier Scott T. Jones went to Baltimore Tuesday night to be present at the annual meeting of the State Bankers Association which convened in that city yesterday morning.

Dixon & Kelso as usual want all the FAT DRY PICKED turkeys they can get delivered Nov. 20th to 24th. Have craws empty and leave head and feet on and entrails in. Chicken and ducks must be full dressed.

A wild white swan measuring six feet from tip to tip was shot on last Friday by John Davis near town. The bird was a magnificent specimen and will be sent to a taxidermist for mounting.

The extremely dry weather which prevailed in this section for over six weeks was broken Tuesday morning when rain fell nearly all day. Toward nightfall the wind veered around to the northwest which brought a considerable fall of snow for a few minutes.

Wild geese have been going southward for several days past in large bodies. One night last week a flock got bewildered while passing over town and flew so low to the ground that their "honk" could be distinctly heard. After a while they got straightened out and went on their way.

Arthur White, salesman in Loar & Poe's store, went to Oakland, his home, to vote on Tuesday. It will be interesting for our readers to know that Mr. White's father, Mr. Jas. W. White, was that day elected treasurer of Garrett county, on the Republican ticket, Garrett being one of the staunch Republican counties of Maryland.—Grafton Sentinal.

Dr. W. L. Davidson, superintendent of the Chautauqua, came up to Oakland Tuesday from his home in Washington and spent the day here at a meeting of the directors of the Mountain Lake Park Association. During the fall Dr. Davidson spent two or three weeks in London and several days in Paris, arriving home on October 7.

Work on the new Catholic church in Oakland is being pushed as rapidly as possible. The side walls are complete and a portion of the rear gable is up. There is considerable work, however, yet to be done before the building is turned over to the carpenters. The spire, which is to be of stone to the height of ninety feet, and the front gable, also of stone and brick, have hardly been begun. The building will be a handsome structure and one which our town and community may well feel proud.

"The Deacon."

Attorney Chas. D. Smith, of Terra Alta, spent Sunday in Oakland.

Miss Minnie Lantz, of Davis, West Va., is here as the guest of Miss Alice Kepner, her consin.

Attorneys Fred. A. Thayer and E. H. Sincell are down in the lower end of the county on business this week.

County Commissioner E. W. Kelso was at Frankville Monday inspecting one of the county's bridges there which is in need of repairs.

Rev. George I. Uhler, the pastor, will preach in the Deer Park Ev. Lutheran church next Sunday morning and evening.

Getty Browning brought to town Tuesday four wild turkeys and some sixteen pheasants which he had killed the day previous.

Mrs. Andrew Shartzer, of near town, is lying dangerously ill of Bright's disease. Yesterday her condition was precarious with but slight hopes of her recovery.

Mrs. Offutt, mother of Mr. D. E. Offutt and Mrs. George W. Legge, fell down a stairway at the residence of her daughter and sustained slight injuries. The lady is over ninety years of age.

The butchering season is on and we may expect to have reports from many of our farmer friends claiming to have killed the largest porkers in the county. Already a number of large hogs have been butchered.

Rev. Dr. Scott, who met with a mishap one day last week by which he received a very painful injury to his ankle, is improving slowly and may be able to preach to his congregation Sunday.

Joel Orendorf, trustee, Mr. Fred. A. Thayer, solicitor, advertises in this issue of the Republican the sale of a tract of land in Bittinger district comprising two hundred acres. The sale will take place on Saturday, Dec. 7th.

Messrs. Michael Legeer and Alfred Groves, who were so seriously burned one night last week at the home of of the former near Bittinger by an explosion of blasting powder, are recovering slowly. Mr. Legeer was the more seriously burned of the two men, his injuries being principally confined to his hands and arms.

The bound volumes of Mr. Morton's book entitled "Winning or Losing?" which was printed in this office during August have been received from the bindery and will be distributed to the subscribers within a week or two. Already the author has received a number of letters congratulating him upon the general appearance of the book.

To remove a troublesome corn or bunion: First soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it, then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily; rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn for a few days, to protect it from the shoe. As a general liniment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequaled. For sale by all dealers.

Messrs. Weber & Sons, the florists, are now shipping the largest chrysanthemums of the most beautiful colors they have ever grown. The flowers go to the large cities where prices ranging from $5 to $15 per dozen are realized. Thousands have already been shipped and as many more will be sent away before the season ends.

Mr. Robbins, manager of the Oakland, was here one day this week. He will be engaged at Clarksburg during the winter and expects to return to Oakland about April 1st to put the Oakland Hotel in condition for the season of next year which promises to be even more prosperous than last year.

Every one in this community cannot know every one now as they once did. Other means of communicating with each other than "passing the word around" must be used. The only way this can be done is through the local papers. That is the only way the business man can reach all the people. Through them a man can be known to every one in a very short time. The merchant who does not advertise is confined to very narrow limits.

There are a great many people in every small town who like to crack pale emaciated jokes about their home papers, says an exchange. They like to ridicule it and laugh at it and hold it up for facetious comparison with the metropolitan newspapers. They expect their home paper to lie for them, laugh for them and weep for them, and the only time it really is ridiculous is when it does this. If these same people lived in a city the only way they could get their name in one of the big papers would be to go out and lie down in front of a street car or jump off the roof of a high building. They could become a father a dozen and one times or they could preside as chief mourner until they had enough crepe tied around their hat to lasso a horse, and they wouldn't get any consolation out of the boasted city paper but a few misspelled names among the vital statistics.

"The Deacon."

GAME.—H. Creutzburg buys game of all kinds for cash.

Mrs. King Delawder went out to Fairmont Monday evening for a visit of a week to relatives in that city.

Go to Hinebaugh's Restuurant for meals, lunches, oysters, etc. Ladies' dining room in connection.

Dr. Moffat, of Cumberland, preached to a large audience in the Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church in Oakland Sunday night.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets cure biliousness, constipation and headache. They are easy to take and pleasant in effect. For sale by all druggists.

The Board of County Commissioners adjourned Friday afternoon last after a session of three days at which general business was transacted.

Last Sunday was the 418th anniversary of the birth of the great reformer, Martin Luther. The day was appropriately celebrated in Lutheran churches generally throughout the world.

When you feel that life is hardly worth the candle take a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They will cleanse your stomach, tone up your liver and regulate your bowels making you feel like a new man. For sale by all druggists.

Hon. A. F. George, who spent several weeks in Missouri where he was engaged in the rural free delivery service, came home a few days prior to the election and is now in Frederick county, this State, where he is inspecting rural free delivery routes. Mr. George was in Oakland Monday and informed us that he expects to be sent to Georgia within the next few weeks where he will be stationed for some time.

Reports have been in circulation for some time to the effect that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company has made an offer to the owners for the purchase of the Bradley lands adjoining Oakland. Should this report be true and the railroad company obtain possession of these lands it will mean much to Oakland. The ground is comparatively level and would make an ideal situation for large shops or manufacturing plants of all kinds.

Dust from the paved streets is an almost intolerable nuisance. Why can we not take a pointer from the following from the National Oil Reporter: "The cost of oil as a street sprinkling liquid is less than water when everything is considered. Further, it kills thousands of germs of all kinds, besides the small bugs and other insects that chance to fall in reach of its spray and hundreds are caught daily. When the first application of oil was applied in the town of Brenham a few months ago hundreds of electric light flies and cotton worm moths were killed. Millions of grasshoppers were spreading all over the city. These were killed and driven away by the oil and in less than a week not one was to be found."

The Result of Advertising.

Messrs. Dixon & Kelso, the merchants of Oakland, had published in these columns last week a display advertisement announcing a special sale for Tuesday and yesterday. Both days their store was packed and jammed with eager buyers, notwithstanding the intensely inclement weather. Mr. Dixon was asked if he thought the money expended for printers' ink proved to be a paying investment. "Most positively yes," was his answer. "Our cash sales on Tuesday amounted to a large sum—four times as much as they ordinarily are. The amount invested for the advertisement is insignificant compared with our increased volume of business. Yes, it pays to advertise." Other merchants in Oakland would do as well if they patronized the columns of this journal.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Grantsville, Md., on or about the middle of July last, 5 head of sheep, 4 yearlings and one older, 4 being ewes and one a weather. Four of said sheep having crops off left ear and slit in right ear; one with left ear cropped off.

The owner or owners are hereby notified to come forward, prove property, pay costs and take them away.

Dated Oct. 1, 1901.

CHRISTIAN M. LIVENGOOD,
30 Grantsville, Md.

Prizes Won.

At the flower show now being held in Baltimore the floral firm of H. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, came off with a number of prizes, among them being three first and one third prize for chrysanthemums; four first and one second prize for carnations; three special premiums as follows: The Baltimore American prize of $25 for best vase 50 blooms pink chrysanthemums; the Perine prize of $5 for best 50 Lawson carnations, and the Griffin & Turner premium for 12 Golden Wedding chrysanthemums. No other competitor at the Baltimore show carried off half as many prizes as did the Oakland firm.

Wanted.

One hundred men for general woods work and grading railroad.

PRESTON LUMBER & COAL CO.,
2 tf Oakland, Md

HIS CONDITION SERIOUS.

Detective Calvin Crim's Condition Considered Desperate.

Police Detective Calvin Crim, of Cincinnati, Ohio, who was shot some weeks ago by an alleged crook whom he endeavored to arrest, is in a very precarious condition. Yesterday morning's Cincinnati Times-Star is authority for the following:

Detective Cal. Crim remains in a critical condition and is about the same as he was Monday morning. Tuesday morning there was the usual slight improvement, but this does not mean much in his favor. His pulse was still away up to 140 and his temperature 101. Only liquid food is now given him. Mrs. Crim was allowed to see her husband Tuesday despite the fact that he is near death's door. He shook hands with her and she took a seat at his side. Only a few words passed between them. While the nurse took his pulse Crim seemed to doze and when she had finished he looked around and asked: "Has my wife gone?"

But she was still sitting at his side.

"Mr. Crim looked splendid this morning and told me he felt much better," said Mrs. Crim.

A large gathering of friends held a vigil nearly all night at the hospital. Mrs. Crim was there till midnight, and Mr. and Mrs. McDermott and two children and Crim's brother George kept a long watch. Officer Shaffer has been at the hospital every day and night for hours since the shooting. Monday Crim's father at Oakland, Md., was telegraphed to come on, and the sad news was received that he himself is sick and unable to come. Since Crim's shooting his nephew in Maryland had died and father taken sick—a strange series of misfortunes befalling the family. Dr. Griess, who, with Dr. Walker, is attending Crim, did not sleep in his usual room Monday night, but on account of the critical condition of the patient slept in a room next to Crim's.

A Good Show.

For the first time in several years we are to have a medicine show at the opera house for an entire week, commencing next Tuesday. The German Medicine Co. takes this way of advertising their remedies. They have more than fifty comedy companies on the road who give a first-class evening's entertainment. They will engage nothing but the best talent money can procure. No salaries are too high if the act is a pleasing one. The medicines of this well known company are used extensively all over the country and the testimonials they have from prominent people prove that their remedies are all that they claim for them.

They have a novel way of opening up their week's engagement by only charging 2 cents admission for the first night. No reserved seats; first come, first served. They do this to assure themselves a packed house for the first night and the merits of their company assure them a packed house for the balance of the week at the small admission of 10 cents. A handsome gold watch is given away every Saturday night to the most popular young lady of the city. This is decided by voting, which at times gets very exciting when two or three young ladies are each struggling for this prize. Other presents are given away by the company to the holders of the lucky numbers. So if you enjoy good singing, good dancing, funny acts, ariel acts, lots of fun, lots of laughs, don't miss going to the opera house next week to see the German Medicine Co.

Large Sums of Money Expended.

At the annual meeting of the directors of the Mountain Lake Park Association held in Oakland on Tuesday when the full board composed of Messrs. Dr. Baldwin, of Washington; Chas. Conner, of Wheeling; Rev. J. M. Davis, D. E. Offutt and L. A. Rudisill, was present, a report was submitted by a committee appointed for the purpose showing that up to June 1st last the sum of $170,000 had been expended by the association in erecting buildings, improving the grounds, etc., since the formation of the corporation. This amount is distinct from the amount expended by property owners upon their grounds for buildings and other improvements, which is in round numbers something like $300,000, showing that within the past twenty years a half million dollars have been expended in this one town of Garrett county alone and all for permanent improvements.

Among other business transacted at the meeting was the donation of an acre of ground to the Garrett Power and Light Company upon which will be erected an electric light plant for the purpose of furnishing light and power to the Park and its residents.

After the meeting of the directors of the Association a meeting of the Community officials was held when an order was passed directing the removal of all electric wires from trees within the limits of the Park by January 1st. This directly affects the company now furnishing light, the service of which for the past year or two has been eminently unsatisfactory.

The ground donated by the Association to the new light company is situated below the dam at the Park and adjoining the railroad siding. The stock is being subscribed rapidly and within a short time the erection of the building and the installation of a new electric plant will be commenced.

Returned From Nome, Alaska.

There arrived in Oakland Monday morning last from Nome Messrs. John Shartzer and Marshal M. Ashby, who went from this place early last spring to the gold fields of Alaska in company with Dr. Chas. Beachy, Michael Nathan and John O'Brien. At Seattle, Washington the party was joined by Clarence Compton, of Grantsville, who accompanied them to Nome. R. S. Browning, son of Senator Browning, did not arrive at Nome until late in July. After spending a few days at Nome Dr. Beachy, Mr. Nathan and Mr. Compton returned to the States. Messrs. Shartzer, Ashby, Browning and O'Brien remained until late in October, arriving at Seattle, Washington, on Oct. 30. Messrs. Browning and O'Brien are now in Idaho, where they have been joined by the Casteel brothers and are engaged in a bear hunt.

In Memoriam.

Virginia C. Kuykendall was born in Barbour county, W. Va., April 26, 1856, and departed this life October 27, 1901, aged 45 years, 6 months and 3 days. In April, 1878, she was married to Wm. Junkins. Of this union was born one daughter. She was a loving mother and a considerate and true wife. She was converted in childhood and united with the U. B. church in which she proved to be a faithful worker. The patience which she exhibited during the last month of her earthly pilgrimage, which was shrouded with great suffering, was truly marvelous. She knew in whom she believed and was wonderfully kept in the embrace of the everlasting arms. In the triumphant finish of her earthly course God's power to save was gloriously manifested. She was free from the bondage which is through fear of death and rather anticipated it as her release from a weary body. She requested the following hymns to be sung at the funeral: "Asleep in Jesus, Blessed Sleep," "There is a Spot and to Me More Dear." She suffered intensely, but was never known to murmur or complain. Her pastor visited her and found her sick room to be a very Bethel. Her faith was strong and she died, as she had lived, in the triumphs of a living faith. Our memories of her will always be precious.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. A. Fisher, of the U. B. church, assisted by Rev. Geo. I. Uhler, of the Lutheran church, at the home of the deceased near Deer Park. She was laid to rest in the Oakland cemetery.

She leaves a husband, a daughter, two sisters and a brother, namely, Mr. William Junkins and Mrs. Eva B. Clark, of Deer Park; Mrs. Thomas Dickson and Mrs. Garrett Teter, of Philippi, W. Va., and Jacob Kuykendall, of Kansas.

While they are sad they sorrow not as they who have no hope, for they know that their loss is her eternal gain. A FRIEND.

Resetting Boundary Stones.

Workmen in the employ of the government who are engaged in resetting the boundary stones on the Mason & Dixon line between this State and Pennsylvania are at State Line, Pa. They average about one stone a day and the work will require some time to complete. There are three men doing the work.

Church Bell Cracked.

The large bell in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church in Oakland has never emitted a very musical sound which led many to suspect that it was defective in some part. Last Sunday morning as the sexton was ringing the bell for service a very peculiar sound was heard, the cause for which, upon investigation, proved to be two cracks, one on either side where the clapper came in contact with the lip of the bell. The cracks measure nearly a foot each and will eventually render the bell useless. Already there is talk of replacing it with a set of chimes.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the land of the undersigned lying in District No. 2 of Garrett county either for the purpose of fishing, hunting or passing through the same with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. C. W. FRIEND.

A Great Opportunity.

The burned district of Jacksonville, Fla., is to be rebuilt at once, offering an opportunity of employment to workmen, and excellent prospect to contractors and capitalists. Jacksonville is reached from all directions by the Seaboard Air Line Railway System, which offers unexcelled facilities in the way of schedules and through car service to that point. nov 14tf

Your Best Fellow

Will like you better for having white, smooth hands, free from chaps and such like detracting things—

GIRLS GET
LILY CREAM

An article that cures skin—soothes and feels good—dries instantly and is perfectly invisible.

LOGAN DRUG COMPANY
WHEELING, W. VA.
15 and 25 cents. At your Druggist.

Oakland Opera House!

SATURDAY, NOV. 16th.

DAVE B. LEVIS'
BIG PRODUCTION

UNCLE JOSH SPRUCEBY.

20 People "Hayseed" Band

Grand Operatic Orchestra!
Car Load Special Scenery!
Novel Mechanical Effects!

The Great Saw Mill Scene!

ALL NEW SPECIALTIES!

NOTE THE PRICES..... 25, 35, 50 Cts.

SEATS ON SALE AT HARNED'S DRUG STORE.

Trustee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court of Garrett county, Maryland, passed in a cause wherein Noah Brenneman and others are plaintiffs and Paul Beachy and others are defendants, the same being No. 1115 Equity in said Court, the undersigned, as trustee, will sell by public auction, on the premises near the town of Bittinger in said county, on SATURDAY, The 7th Day of December, 1901,

AT 10 O'CLOCK A. M.,

all that valuable fee simple piece or parcel of land of which the late John Brenneman and Benedict Beachy died seized and possessed, and on which Paul Beachy now resides, the same being

MILITARY LOTS NOS. 2417, 2418, 2419 and 2420, lying in one body and comprising a farm of

200 ACRES.

About 150 acres of said place is cleared and in cultivation and the balance in timber. It is improved by a barn and fair-sized dwelling house, together with other outbuildings, and has an ordinary apple orchard thereon. Taxes adjusted to day of sale. (For title see deed from Samuel Brenneman and wife to John Brenneman and Benedict Beachy, dated February 5th, 1881, and recorded among the land records of Garrett county in Liber No. 5, folio 548, &c.)

TERMS OF SALE:—One-third cash, one-third in six months and one-third in twelve months from day of sale (or all cash, at the option of the purchaser), the credit payments bearing interest from the day of sale and to be secured by the note or notes of the purchaser or purchasers, endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustee.

JOEL ORENDORF, Trustee.

FRED. A. THAYER, Solicitor.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE

CALIFORNIA

Via New Orleans & the Sunset Route.

THE ONLY TRUE WINTER ROUTE.

No Snow Blockades or Blizzards.

The only line operating double daily service between Cincinnati and New Orleans, carrying Pullman Palace Drawing Room Sleepers, free Reclining Chair Cars and Buffet, Library, Smoking Cars, Cafe Dining Cars (meals a la carte).

FASTEST and FINEST TRAINS in the SOUTH.

Pullman Excursion Sleeping Cars through to San Francisco from Chicago, via Omaha and the scenic line of the world.

Pullman Excursion Sleeping Cars through to San Francisco from Cincinnati and Chicago, via New Orleans and the Sunset route. These cars are personally conducted by competent agents to look after the welfare of patrons. Quickest and best line to

OKLAHOMA AND INDIAN TERRITORY.

Fastest train service to the famous

BEAUMONT, TEXAS, OIL FIELDS.

Through Sleeping Car from Chicago without change and through Sleeping Car reservations from Cincinnati via Memphis, Tenn., to

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

SPECIAL HOMESEKKERS' EXCURSIONS TO ALL POINTS SOUTH, WEST AND NORTH WEST.

For FREE descriptive matter and full particulars regarding above, address

E. A. RICHTER,
Traveling Passenger Agent.
812 Park Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

WANTED—Several persons of character and good reputation in each state (one in this county required) to represent and advertise old established wealthy business house of solid financial standing. Salary $18.00 weekly with expenses additional, all payable in cash each Wednesday direct from head offices. Horse and carriage furnished, when necessary. References. Enclose self-addressed stamped envelope. Manager, 316 Caxton Building, Chicago. 28 13t

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Publisher.

OAKLAND, : GARRETT CO., MD.

THE SEARCH FOR HAPPINESS.

I traveled wide for happiness,
I climbed a lofty hill;
Below me spread a wilderness,
A forest dark and still.
"Here find," cried one, "in solitude
The cure for thy distress;
The crowd ne'er seek yon quiet wood,
'Tis for the wise, the pure, the good,
And far from Life's wild press."
Stay" cried the voice, "end here thy quest.
In yon dun shades find peace and rest."
The silence filled my soul with fear—
Still cried the voice: "'Tis here! 'Tis here!"

I fled and sought the busy mart—
I heard the city's roar;
The dreadful discord smote my heart,
Which shuddered to the core.
Again, as erst upon the hill,
The voice I heard before,
Cried loud, in vibrant tones and shrill:
"Here drink of happiness thy fill,
Nor ever wander more."
But many tear-filled eyes were there,
And furrowed brows, cheeks shrunk with care
Through the vast crowd stalked staring Fear,
Nor rest nor happiness were near.

With weary feet I sought a home,
And here I found my quest;
For love forbade to farther roam,
And promised joy and rest.
Health filled the jocund, buxom breeze,
And Beauty stood confest.
Laughed loud the fields, and all the trees,
And songs of birds did never cease
Above the happy nest.
Sweet flowers with fragrance filled the air,
And pure and full content was there.
"Here," cried my heart, "is Love's fair shrine,"
And rest and happiness were mine.
—Edward Bamford Heaton, in Chicago Advance.

A Newsboy's Love

By HENRI CHEVALIER.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

FROM his seventh year Felix Marteau had been forced to make his own living in the streets of Paris. His stock of merchandise consisted of matches, shoestrings, daily newspapers, pencils and a nerve-killing voice. His education was also forced on him.

When Felix was four years old he was given the privilege of accompanying his mother to the workhouse. She had been committed for habitual intoxication. The benevolent matron of the institution took a deep interest in him. She taught him to read and write and the elements of arithmetic. He needed no more in his business, which presented few arithmetical problems. The transactions hardly ever exceeded 30 sous per day, the profits of which would give him a comfortable lodging. When business was dull the ragged, bare-footed urchin was compelled to make his bed of papers under stairways.

When his father and mother were finally sentenced to a long term of imprisonment for robbery, Felix was left alone in the world. For ten years he led the same aimless life with little variation in his fortune. Then love came even to this forsaken nomad.

Near the crossing where Felix carried on his trade was a large toy store. It had a beautiful display window and the endless variety of playthings always had a magnetic attraction for him. For hours he would stand and look through the large plate glass, eagerly coveting one of the treasures.

"WHY DON'T YOU OPEN YOUR PACKAGE?"

One Christmas eve, when he was 16 years old, Felix stood enchanted at the window, to the neglect of his business. He seemed to forget all—shoestrings, newspapers, pencils and matches. At last he was awakened from his dream by the sweet voice of a very pretty girl who stood in the doorway.

"Don't you get tired looking at those things?" she asked.

Felix looked confused, and stammered: "There are so many things here to-day, mademoiselle."

"Which do you like best of all?" she asked.

Felix made another survey of the fairy world. Finally his eyes were held by a fine bagatelle table with sticks and balls. One of his chums, the autocrat of the newsboys' home, had one just like it. He looked up into the girl's face and, pointing with his dirty finger to the toy, simply said: "That."

"That costs two francs," she said. Then, seeing the look of despair on the boy's face, she added: "Wait a minute till I come back."

Felix had hardly time to reflect on the strange interview when the girl returned with a package in her hand.

"Take this," she said. "It is my Christmas present to you. Think of me when you play with it."

Felix could hardly believe his eyes. His fairy ran back to her counter in the store without waiting for his thanks. It was an inclement day and he had not taken in enough to pay for his lodging. An old gentleman with large gold spectacles and a benevolent face had witnessed the scene. He patted Felix on the shoulder.

"Why don't you open the package?" he asked.

"I have no time now; I must make a few sous first," was the reply.

"Here is a five franc piece," said the old gentleman, "now have a jolly Christmas and play bagatelle."

Tears rolled down the boy's cheeks as he murmured his thanks to his benefactor, who disappeared in the throng of shoppers. "Think of me when you play" were the words that rang in his ears all through that glorious Christmas. How could he forget that celestial beauty, with peerless complexion and honest blue eyes? She was far beyond the ideals of the novels he had read. He felt that he could die for her.

For two years Felix continued his trade on the crossing. He spent many a leisure moment at the toyshop window, but it was love that attracted him now, hopeless love for the sweet faced clerk. All he had learned about her was that her name was Elise. He had been employed by her to bring billets-doux to a fine-looking young officer who lived in a near-by hotel. He hated the very sight of the dudish soldier. Once he looked over his shoulder when he penned a reply and caught the words: "Ma Chere Elise."

Felix obstinately refused to take pay for these services and his heart filled with jealousy every time he saw Elise's sweetheart. But he was careful not to betray his sentiments either to her or the young officer.

One day Felix was surprised to find Elise in agitated conversation with an aged couple and the proprietor of the store. At times he saw her turn red with anger and then she burst out in tears. Finally he saw her put on her hat and cloak and follow the old couple into a waiting carriage. The thought suddenly occurred to him that he would never see her again.

In a jiffy Felix, leaving his basket on the sidewalk, was stationed on the rear of the landau which was driven rapidly through the streets. It stopped in front of a young ladies' seminary, a large old structure, surrounded by a high wall.

Felix saw Elise alight and with tear-stained face she was led through the gate by the old couple. For an hour he waited across the street. Then the old people returned and were driven away in the carriage.

How to gain an entrance into the seminary, how to help Elise in her apparent plight were the thoughts prompted by Felix' love. He resolved to ask for any kind of employment, pleading to be homeless. Fortunately the gardener's assistant had been discharged on the previous day, so he was engaged on the spot.

On the following morning Elise could hardly suppress her joy when she saw Felix at work in the garden. He slipped a note he had carefully prepared into her hand. It simply asked what he could do for her.

That very evening Felix was reading her reply in his little bedroom over the stable. It said:

"My Dear Felix: How did you find the place where they have taken me? I thank you beforehand for what I know you will do for me. My father is a poor notary in the suburbs. He wants to force me to marry an old, rich baron, the gentleman who gave you the five-franc gold piece one Christmas eve. But though he is a good old soul I love only Julien Broulade, the young officer to whom you have taken my notes. My parents have learned my secret. As I am not of age, I am given the alternative of remaining in this horrid school or marrying the old baron. Dear Felix, go to Julien and tell him where I am. You alone can save me. Yours gratefully,

"ELISE."

Every word in the letter was a blow to Felix. "She only loves this young officer and I must save her for him," he said to himself again and again. He worshiped the ground she stepped on. He could do anything, even lay down his life for her. But his soul struggled against this request. Then he would grow angry at himself for presuming that the son of convicts dared to covet the possession of this pure soul. For hours he writhed in agony on his cot. Then his heroic spirit conquered and he determined to save her.

In the morning Felix went to Julien Broulade and told him where they had carried his sweetheart. As he had not heard from her for three days the young officer's anxiety was greatly relieved and when he learned how Felix had made his way into the seminary he could not find words to express his gratitude.

"I will do anything in the world for you," he said. "I am going to take Elise far away from Paris and I want you to go with us."

"Make Elise happy," replied Felix, "and I will feel sufficiently rewarded."

The officer looked surprised at Felix, who had turned suddenly very pale.

"Are you ill?" he asked.

"No, I am not ill. I have not slept since last night and was much worried over this affair."

Julien and Elise eloped and were married. Two days later they bade farewell to Felix before sailing for America. They never learned that anything but gratitude prompted the newsboy to save Elise from an objectionable match, but they could not understand why he persistently refused all rewards for his services and to sail with them to the new world.

Fable.

Once upon a time there were two boys, of whom one, John, was extremely parsimonious, while the other, William, was a spendthrift. But one day William saved a cent, and at this his father fell over dead, whereupon William came into the property. In the meanwhile, John's father lived on and on, and had finally to be shot. This fable teaches that it is sometimes better to do things in moderation.—Puck.

RACES FOR AMERICA'S CUP.

Long Continued Supremacy of Yankee Yachts Over the English Boats.

Fifty years ago the schooner yacht America sailed to England and in a race especially arranged to accommodate the visitor defeated a fleet of opponents so easily as to set new standards in water racing. She bore home with her a silver cup offered as a prize and since then that trophy has been an object of the most ardent desire on the part of English yachtsmen. But to no avail, says the Chicago Chronicle. Half a century after the victory of old America, Columbia, latest and best of a long line of cup defenders, defeated the latest and best of challengers by winning the third straight race in the series and thereby closing the contest for the season. American pride in American yacht builders and sailors was never higher than to-day, for this last victory is the best of all, won from the smartest candidate for the cup that was ever brought here, and with a boat which had already served its turn in the defense of the cup.

The three races won from Shamrock II. constituted the closest series of all between the cup yachts. The first and the third were sailed on especially narrow margins, while the last, the deciding one, was the closest ever known in this great competition. The first race was won by Columbia by 37 seconds actual time and one minute and 20 seconds corrected time. In that race Shamrock beat Columbia to windward by 39 seconds, but the American yacht more than made up the difference in the run home before the wind. In the third race the conditions were reversed, Shamrock beating Columbia in the run before the wind by 49 seconds in the official records and nearly one minute and ten seconds actually, Columbia having crossed the line about 20 seconds ahead of Shamrock, but both yachts, being behind the handicap gun, were scored as on even terms. In the windward work Columbia pulled up to within two seconds of her rival's time and thus regained her lost ground and won out, with slight aid from the time allowance, taking the heat by 41 seconds corrected time.

Those two races, however close, were not as satisfactory from all points of view as the second, which put the yachts through their paces over a triangular course and gave them ample opportunity with a smart breeze to show off in all kinds of work save clear running. In this race Columbia emphatically proved herself the better boat, overhauling Shamrock steadily on all three legs, and though starting considerably later, crossing the finish line ahead and winning by 2 minutes 53 seconds actual time and 3 minutes 35 seconds corrected. That one race was enough to convince yachtsmen on both sides that England has not yet mastered the sport to the point of successful competition with American designers, skippers and sailors.

The paramount question now is whether there will soon be another race for the cup. The fact that Lipton could not win a single race serves to discourage the British sportsmen, but that he came so near to winning in all three is reassuring. The two sides are closer together than ever before in the matter of models and rigging. It may be that the cup is held here now mainly because of the requirement that the challenger must be brought over under her own sail, thus perhaps handicapping her through the need of greater care for strength than for lightness and ease of line in her construction. With so narrow a margin remaining between England and the coveted cup it may confidently be assumed that it will not be many seasons before some enterprising Briton will challenge. It is not characteristic of the Anglo-Saxon to yield to defeat.

BREAD MATERIALS.

The Various Meals and Vegetables That Are Used as Well as Wheaten Flour.

A great many different materials besides wheaten flour have been used for bread. Beans, peas and other vegetables, as well as barley, Indian meal, oatmeal and other grains, have been tried at different times in place of wheat. Even turnips boiled until soft and mashed with the greater part of the water pressed out of them have been used for bread. When mixed with one-half its weight of wheat meal, this preparation of turnips is said to make a palatable loaf. It is raised with yeast, like any wheaten loaf, and when the bread is properly raised, baked and cooled it is said that the odor and flavor of turnips is scarcely perceptible.

Potato bread is made of one part potatoes boiled and mashed dry and two parts of wheaten meal. It is then raised with yeast and kneaded like any other loaf, says the New York Tribune.

Rice bread is made of three parts wheat flour and one part rice. The rice is boiled tender and drained free from water and mixed with the flour. It is then mixed into a loaf and raised with yeast and thoroughly baked.

Barley used to be extensively used for bread of a coarse quality, but it is inferior to wheat, and, though used extensively in Europe, is seldom seen in this country.

The World at Her Feet.

"I have been a housekeeper for 12 years," remarked one of the fair guests at the chafing dish supper, "and the only thing I can do is to mash potatoes."

Obviously there was only one reply for the polite host to make. "Madam," he said, "you could mash anything."—Chicago Daily Tribune.

A RACE AGAINST TIME.

Graphic Account of the Record-Breaking Journey of the Australian-London Mail.

"Transportation," said a speaker recently before the international commercial congress at Philadelphia, "underlies material prosperity in every department of commerce; without transportation commerce would be impossible; those states and nations are rich, powerful and enlightened whose transportation facilities are the best and most comprehensive; the dying nations are those with little or no transportation facilities."

Then the speaker uttered these two memorable sentences:

"Trade follows the flag."

"Trade follows the mail."

If these statements be true, too great importance can hardly be placed upon the recent achievement of an American Pacific liner and of the five great railroads making up the transcontinental system between San Francisco and New York, of which Mr. Charles Barnard gives a graphic account in the "Four Track Series."

At the post office of Sydney, N. S. W., there lay, early in the morning of August 13, 1901, 367 sacks of the most important mail matter ever sent from Australia to England. There are two routes by which such mail could go. One is an all-British route by way of the Suez canal. The other is practically an all-American route, by way of Samoa, Hawaii, San Francisco, New York and thence to London. Of course, under the present arrangement, the last lap, on the bosom of the broad Atlantic, is sailed under the British flag. The British route is the older one and also the shorter, being 12,500 miles, while the distance the other away around is 13,557, a difference of over a thousand miles.

That morning, the 13th of August, the American flag was flying on a new ship, fresh from the American ship yards on the Delaware. She was the best available ship that day in the South Pacific. The only thing to do was to place the important mail on board the new American, twin-screw steamer "Ventura," of the Oceanic Steamship company, which was done at ten o'clock in the morning. From Sydney the Ventura steered straight for Auckland, and entered that harbor on the 17th. Taking on freight, mails and passengers she again set sail, making for the beautiful and poetic islands of Samoa, thence for Hawaii and San Francisco. At seven p. m., September 2, she anchored at quarantine in San Francisco harbor, having made the voyage in 20 days and 9 hours. Had the Ventura been urged it is possible she could have arrived a few hours earlier and landed those precious mail bags that day. As it happened they could not be landed till 8:30 on the morning of the 3d. They were at once transferred by teams to the Market street station of the Southern Pacific (Ogden route), and at ten o'clock they began their eventful journey across the continent to New York, 3,388 miles away. The officers of the Oceanic Steamship company and of the Southern Pacific were naturally anxious that the mail should make good progress and were kept informed by telegraph of the progress of the train during that day and evening.

Suddenly the unexpected happened. The train arrived at Ogden, Utah, two dreadful hours late.

The mail was transferred to the mail car of train No. 2 of the Union Pacific. It was still late when it reached Omaha. The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy put the single mail car containing his majesty's mail behind a special fast engine. It was a night run against time for No. 1086. On and on, 60 miles an hour steady. The train entered Union station, Chicago, at 9:08 a. m., on the 6th. Five hundred and eight miles in 555 minutes.

No. 6 is the Lake Shore—New York Central "fast mail"—the heaviest fast mail train in America. She had left at 8:30. That train had to be overtaken. A new special, two cars and No. 566, would try if it had to chase it all the way into Buffalo. At precisely 9:59:30 a. m. she pulled out from the Lake Shore station—and No. 6 one hour and 29½ minutes ahead. As the special ate up the miles, it became evident that she was making up the lost time. She would overhaul No. 6 at Toledo. Two hundred and forty-four miles in 265¼ minutes. The thing had been done. The two hours lost 2,000 miles away had been made up.

At Buffalo, the precaution was taken to make up the New York Central's No. 6—the fast mail—into two sections, sending on those mail bags from Australia, together with Uncle Sam's mail, in the first section. This was the fifth and last of the railroad lines forming the route across the United States. The train pulled into the Grand Central station the morning of the 7th at 9:57—three minutes ahead of time.

The Campania sailed at noon, with his majesty's mail on board, 25 days and 2 hours out of Sydney. At seven o'clock Saturday morning, September 14, the Australian mail was delivered at the post office in London, assorted and ready for the carriers. Instead of the old time of 35 days and some hours by way of the Suez canal, it was done in 32 days less some hours, by using the American route. This is the natural way from London to the South Pacific, best and natural because it is nearly all within the temperate zone. It crosses the tropics, while the Suez route keeps within the tropics, as torrid Aden testifies, as oColombo and Port Said warmly prove. The great run with the Australian mail settled forever the question of the speediest route between the new commonwealth of Australia and Europe.

ADULTERATION A SCIENCE.

Detective Work of the English Government Laboratory During the Past Year.

The principal chemist of the government laboratory has presented his report on the work of that department for the past year. Of the samples of tea submitted 252, representing 2,662 packages, were refused admission for home consumption on the ground that they contained exhausted leaves, were unsound or were mixed with sand or other substances within the meaning of the act, says the Leeds Mercury.

The 3,828 samples of finished beer taken from 1,586 publicans were analyzed, and 598 or 15.6 per cent. of the samples were found to have been tampered with, either by having been diluted or by the illegal addition of sugar. The present year shows an increase of 1,442 samples, but the result of the analyses, generally, affords no evidence of any falling off in the practice of diluting beer.

The quantity of tobacco cleared for home consumption and the average amount consumed per head were 81,116,999 pounds and 2 pounds in 1899; 80,955,037 pounds and 1 pound 15¾ ounces in 1900, and 83,561,083 pounds and 2 pounds ¼ ounce in 1901. Figures of exported cigars and cigarettes are remarkable as showing how increasingly popular is the practice of smoking cigarettes, and they also show that the consumption of British made cigars is increasing abroad. Eleven adulterated samples of tobacco were found to contain licorice or glycerine.

Legal proceedings were taken in 35 cases in respect of samples analyzed for the protection of the revenue. The penalties imposed amounted to £3,766, in addition to which tobacco to the value of £277 was forfeited as containing an illegal ingredient or an excessive percentage of oil or water; 142 of the cases were disposed of in court, and in 139 resulting in penalties amounting to £1,689, the analysts attending to give evidence. The other cases were settled by the board of inland revenue for compromise fines amounting to £2,077, the defendants in 15 cases preferring to pay the full penalty.

For diluting or adulterating beer 130 persons paid penalties amounting to £2,574.

The considerable increase in the number of samples examined for the home office was largely due to the work in progress in connection with the use of lead compounds in the manufacture of pottery. The total samples examined under this head numbered 195, of which 91 samples were fruits submitted by various firms under home office regulations for the determination of the proportion of readily soluble lead.

A Little Knowledge, Etc.

The possession of a little legal law is like the possession of a revolver; its timely use may be a great protection to a man, while its abuse, on the other hand, may get him into the most serious kind of trouble. But, if he applies discreetly, and carefully, his knowledge of the law, he will not only be relieved of the necessity of employing a lawyer, in many instances where one would otherwise be needed, but he will be able to greatly facilitate the work of the lawyer when he is called in.—Gen. B. F. Tracy, in Success.

Plenty of Chance for Her.

He had been reading about the woman who kept house on $2.70 a week and still had so much trouble with her husband that she was about to apply for a divorce.

"Do you believe it?" he asked.

"Why not?" inquired his companion.

"Oh, it looks to me a good deal like a matrimonial advertisement. A young woman—and she is young—who can keep house on $2.70 a week certainly won't have to be without a husband long."—Chicago Post.

Paradise for Sportsmen.

To him who knows not where to go, there can be no better place suggested than the Pocono mountains, lying in the northeastern part of Pennsylvania, along the beautiful Delaware river. Whether you go for health, or sport, you can hardly experience the latter without acquiring the former. The elevation of the mountains varies from 1,600 to 2,000 feet, and are one dense growth of pine and fir trees. Deer, bear and other large game are plentiful, and though the region is visited by thousands of sportsmen every year, there seems to be no noticeable decrease in the attractions offered. The Pocono mountain hotels, camps and game preserves are readily accessible by the Lackawanna Railroad, the great trunk line between New York and the Great Lakes.

Truth in Advertising.

Mr. Gettit—Well, that place where we boarded this summer advertised the truth, anyway.

Mr. Hazzit—Indeed? That was a novelty.

"Yes, sir; it advertised: 'Summer boarders taken in.'"—Detroit Free Press.

An Incomplete House.

We run wild over the furnishings of a house; its furniture, carpets, hangings, pictures and music, and always forget or neglect the most important requisite. Something there should be always on the shelf to provide against sudden casualties or attacks of pain. Such come like a thief in the night; a sprain, strain, sudden backache, toothache or neuralgic attack. There is nothing easier to get than a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, and nothing surer to cure quickly any form of pain. The house is incomplete without it. Complete it with a good supply.

Knowledge and Speech.

"One great trouble," said Uncle Eben, "is dat when a man is smaht enough to say anyfing wuf hearin' he is also smaht enough not to talk much."—Washington Post.

Care of the Complexion.

Many persons with delicate skin suffer greatly in winter from chapping. Frequently the trouble arises from the use of impure soap and cheap salves. The face and hands should be washed only in clear, hot water with Ivory soap. A little mutton tallow or almond oil may be used after the bath to soften the skin. ELIZA R. PARKER.

A Smart Dog.

A gentleman advertising for a lost dog says the animal answers to the name of Nancy, living or dead. That's a smart dog.—Tacoma Ledger.

Best for the Bowels.

No matter what ails you, headache to a cancer, you will never get well until your bowels are put right. Cascarets help nature, cure you without a gripe or pain, produce easy, natural movements, cost you just 10 cents to start getting your health back. Cascarets Candy Cathartic, the genuine, put up in metal boxes, every tablet has C. C. C. stamped on it. Beware of imitations.

It Seemed So.

Strawber—Was her father willing to help you out?

Singerly—That's the way he acted.—Town and Country.

To Cure a Cold in One Day

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund money if it fails to cure. 25c.

His First Hour in the Country.

Mother—Why, baby, what's the matter?

Baby (who has been stung by a bumble-bee)—The automobile-bug bit me.—Judge.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar relieves whooping cough.
Pike's Toothache Drops Cure in one minute.

Foreigner—"In American politics I understand the office seeks the man." American—"That's all wrong! A representative American wouldn't have an office that sought him."—Ohio State Journal.

A kind heart is a fountain of gladness, making everything in its vicinity freshen into smiles.—Washington Irving.

I am sure Piso's Cure for Consumption saved my life three years ago.—Mrs. Thos. Robbins, Maple Street, Norwich, N. Y., Feb. 17, 1900.

It is easy to convince a woman, but she will not stay convinced.—Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES color silk, wool or cotton perfectly at one boiling.

A boy's idea of revenge on his parents is to refuse to get his lessons at school.—Atchison Globe.

The friend that fails us is better lost.—N. Y. Sun.

Bronchitis Can Be Cured

With Hoxsie's Croup Cure, speedily. 50 cts.

An old-fashioned remedy—sending for the doctor.—Puck.

Mrs. Ellen Ripley, Chaplain Ladies Aid, Grand Army of the Republic, No. 7, 222 10th Ave., N. E., Minneapolis, Minn., Strongly Endorses Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Your Vegetable Compound cured me of ulceration of the womb, and getting such a complete cure I felt that the medicine had genuine merit and was well worth recommending to other sick women.

"For fifteen years I have been your friend. I have never written you before, but I have advised hundreds of women to take your medicine, in fact it is the only real reliable remedy I know of for a sick woman.

"I have not yet found a case of ovarian or womb trouble which has not been relieved or cured by the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"You have brought health to hundreds of women in Minneapolis as you have no doubt to others over the country."—MRS. ELLEN RIPLEY.

$5000 FORFEIT IF THE ABOVE LETTER IS NOT GENUINE.

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine.

HAS RICH RESOURCES

Why Capital Is Invading the Little Isle of Cape Breton.

One of the Rarest Spots on the Atlantic Coast—How a Brave Yankee General Captured Louisburg Citadel.

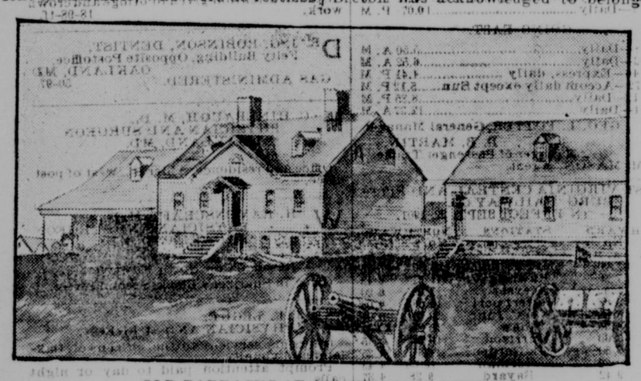
[Special Boston Letter.]

PERHAPS no piece of land embracing the same number of acres presents more varied attractions to the sightseer than the island of Cape Breton, and few are more neglected by tourists. Its coast line divides it from various bodies of water and it is indented in every direction by large bays and inlets.

Fogs from the Atlantic ocean, the Gulf of St. Lawrence, Gut of Canso, Cumberland strait, and, last but not least, over the neck of the peninsula of Nova Scotia from the Bay of Fundy, drift over it, enriching and deepening the color tones of its vegetation.

Certain portions of the coast stand out in bold grandeur. Everywhere the scenery is fine. In winter, the dark pines outlined against sea and sky and contrasted with the purity of the snow give an impression of great solemnity. This is heightened by the roar of the surf. In spring and summer, when maple, birch and oak trees furnish variety to the forest coloring, the effect is less severe. In autumn, when the frost has touched the leaves with glorious reds and purples, the island is magnificent. The atmosphere softens and blends everything. Grain grows in abundance, although the inhabitants draw more or less on the United States for food supplies. Fish, of course, are used in large quantities, for the surrounding waters contain the finest fishing in the world, but the great wealth of the island has always consisted of coal, which is now being mined in great quantities.

Cape Breton lies between Newfoundland and the mainland of Nova Scotia, to which it was annexed in 1829, much to the disgust of its turbulent inhabitants, who were as restless as the waves that surrounded them. French and Spanish settlers superseded the Indians; these were followed by English and more French, then more English. After these came, in 1800, Scotch Highlanders, driven from their homes by unjust laws. These latter settled in Nova Scotia and Cape Breton.



OLD BARRACKS AT SIDNEY, CAPE BRETON.

On the island the influx came chiefly from the inland districts of Inverness and Argyleshire, Roman Catholic and Presbyterian making common cause and rendering the little island the Scotchiest of all Scotch districts outside the old country. Many amusing anecdotes are told of their manner of standing by each other, casting religious prejudice to the winds. Any kind of a Scotchman was better than one being representative of another nation. These different nationalities have never entirely amalgamated, and not the least of the attractions of Cape Breton are the speech and customs of its people.

After many years of neglect, public attention is being directed toward Cape Breton on account of the development of its mines. It has been called the "long wharf of America," and for about eight years past it has been regarded as a future great distributing center. It is well situated for the purpose and coal crops out prominently in various localities, notably on the east coast cliffs from Morien Bay to North Sidney. During the reign of Queen Elizabeth the coal trade of Cape Breton flourished, and Champlain, in 1812, drew a map of the island. But Nicholas Denys, of Toupe, was the first to make reference to the coal. A grant of the island was made to him in 1654, by Louis XIV. Its possession was furiously contested with him and he finally returned to France in 1672, and wrote a work concerning his troublesome possessions, with a title as long as his years of disappointment. The mines since that time have been worked in a desultory way. An English company, the General Mining association, had a monopoly of the coal trade from 1827 to 1858, when their charter was amended, so that the legislature resumed all portions but the North Sidney part of the eastern coal field. Leases were at once made to different companies. The Dominion Coal company has been methodically handling the output for the last few years, and now the Dominion Iron and Steel company intends to join in making Louisburg a headquarters.

This venerable town, from having been an obscure fishing village for a century and a half, is liable to regain an importance equal to that of the distant past, though differing from it in kind. Wharves are being built into the waters of the harbor, looking down through which fish may be seen flashing around sunken cannon. In 1893 a Boston capitalist consolidated all the mines not belonging to the old company. Old shafts have been enlarged, immense new ones dug and modern machinery put into use. The Nova Scotia Steel company is equipping a large steel plant. At different points large mines are being worked, and in 1899 the Dominion Steel & Iron company at Sidney was founded with a capital of $20,000,000, being a veritable Prince Charming to the sleepy little village, which is as yet hardly awakened to the fact of its future importance.

Cape Breton is a land of splendid harbors. Several railroads are expected to terminate at Louisbourg, and it is mentioned as the probable future landing place for British vessels. This little town is full of historic interest. Although Leif Ericson is said to have been the first white man to view these shores, there is no history of their having been trodden except by the feet of Indians until John and Sebastian Cabot landed there in 1497. All the nations after this sent boats to the surrounding waters for the fishing, Spain and France taking the lead. In 1713, by the treaty of Utrecht, Cape Breton was acknowledged to belong to France, and during the following 30 years about $5,000,000 was expended on the fortress at Louisbourg. This town became most important to the French fishing interests as well as a key to French possessions in America. Authorities differ as to whether it was named after Louis XIV. or his successor. It was established on the south side of a commodious landlocked harbor, and is about 25 miles from Sidney, with which it is now connected by rail. The mouth of the harbor is about a mile in width, but a continuous reef reaching from the main shore to a large island in the center reduces the entrance to about one-third of a mile. On this island the French mounted a battery as soon as the governor in 1745, was ordered to attack Louisbourg. In defiance of the British government, which expected success to and precautions against it, he placed his confidence in the strength of his own arms, and in the face of orders from home, under the command of Col. Sir William Pepperill, of Massachusetts, a brilliant band of volunteers and untrained New England men, without siege artillery, attacked the best equipped fortress in the country upon which and its outworks were mounted 170 guns, and which contained a garrison of 1,500 trained militia and 750 regulars. Pepperill, knowing nothing of war, possessed a good fund of Yankee common sense, which stood him in good stead at this time. Louisbourg surrendered June 16. By keeping the French flag flying the victors were enabled to capture the ship Notre Dame de Deliverance, containing a cargo of cocoa, $700,000 in Peruvian gold and a large sum in gold and silver ingots. A garrison was left which occupied the town until 1748, when Great Britain turned it over to France. During the next ten years convicts were employed in strengthening the defenses. In 1758 an attack was made by the British under more imposing, if less romantic circumstances than the former one. Frigates, 32 ships of the line with 12,000 troops, came against 4,200 French and 12 ships. A landing was forced, and although the place was ably defended, the women, even, headed by Commandant Drucour's wife, assisting the soldiers, Louisbourg surrendered on July 27, but not until after a determined resistance had compelled Wolfe to defer his attack on Quebec until the following year. The town was dismantled two years later; even the cut stone of the houses, brought from France, was carried to Halifax. Grass grows on the site of the old fortifications, and but little is left to indicate former importance. But modern progress has touched Louisbourg with its magic finger and strangers are treading the ground once familiar to the feet of a vanished civilization.

EDWARD JULIAN.

LOUISBOURG MONUMENT.
(Erected in Honor of the Yankee Heroes of 1745.)

THE MASTICATION CURE.

A German Scientist's Remedy for Indigestion on the Gladstonian Principle.

Mastication is the latest cure for the ills which afflict mankind, says a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle. A German scientist has discovered that indigestion and all the complaints arising from it can be either prevented or cured by obliging patients to bite up thoroughly everything that enters their mouths. Even liquids, such as water, must be chewed to some extent, and soup must receive as much mastication as if it were composed of dry bread crumbs. According to the scientist who advocates this method, 85 per cent. of the stomach troubles of mankind are caused by improper methods of consuming food and drink. The human mouth, he points out, is neither a mere receptacle for food, nor is it designed solely for tasting. It is as much a digestive organ as the stomach itself. More than half of the process of digestion, he says, should take place in the mouth. It is when the work which should have been performed by the teeth is thrown upon the stomach that indigestion and other troubles ensue. Animals do not have indigestion, says the German discoverer, because those which have been given ruminant teeth never think of bolting their food, as mankind does. The dog bolts its food and does not suffer from indigestion simply because nature has provided it with a digestive apparatus which renders chewing more or less superfluous. Nature, however, stopped with the animals. No man yet investigated has been found to possess the dog's digestive abilities.

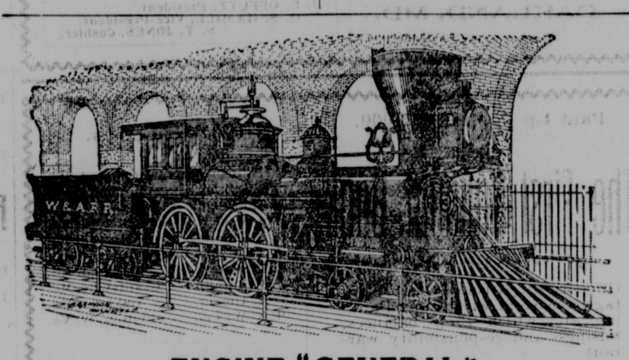
Dogs That Never Bark.

There are varieties of the dog that never bark—the Australian dingo, the Egyptian shepherd dog and the "lion-headed" dog of Thibet.

EXPERT DEER TRAINERS.

The Natives of Lapland Are Adepts in the Handling of the Unbroken Animals.

Even more expert than the Siberians in the care and training of reindeer are the natives of Lapland. Accordingly a score of full-blooded Lapps have been induced, by liberal offers, to emigrate to Alaska, where they form a little colony. With them have come a number of their dogs, remarkably intelligent animals, who not only herd and guard the reindeer, but also assist in training and breaking them to harness, says an exchange.



ENGINE "GENERAL."

The famous engine, "General," which played such an important part in the Civil War, has been sent to Chattanooga by the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway and given a prominent place in the Union Depot, where it will remain as a permanent monument to American valor.

On the morning of April 12, 1862, Capt. W. A. Fuller left Atlanta in charge of the passenger train, on the W. & A. R. R. When he reached Marietta a party of strangers, dressed in citizens' clothes, boarded the train and paid their fares to different points. They claimed to be refugees from the Yankee lines joining the Confederate Army, but were disguised soldiers, volunteers from Sill's Brigade, Mitchell's Corps, U. S. A., commanded by Capt. Jas. J. Andrews.

At Big Shanty the train stopped for breakfast, and most of the passengers and train crew left the train. The passengers had taken their seats at the table, Capt. Fuller facing the train. He saw through the window some strangers get on the engine in an excited manner and start off rapidly. He remarked to his engineer, Jeff Cain, and Anthony Murphy, then foreman of the W. & A. shops, that "Some one who has no right to do so has gone off with our train." All three arose and hurried out of the house, just as the engine passed out of sight.

Capt. Fuller, Murphy and Cain commenced pursuit on foot. They soon secured a hand-car and, in spite of the obstructions placed on the track by the raiders, made rapid progress. At Etowah they found the engine "Yonah," and the pursuit then was at such a rapid pace that serious damage to the railroad by the raiders was impossible.

The "General" was abandoned by the raiders at a point about half way between Kingston and Graysville, on account of lack of fuel and the close pursuit of Fuller and his party. When the fugitives abandoned the engine their leader, Jas. J. Andrews, took care of himself, and they left in squads. Four of them were run down in the forks of the Chickamauga River at Graysville, and one was forcibly persuaded to tell who they were. Later there was a trial by military court, and eight of the raiders were executed in Atlanta as spies, six were exchanged, and eight escaped from Libby prison.

The object of the raid was to burn the bridges on the line of the Western & Atlantic Railroad and thus cut off the Confederate Army from its base of supplies.

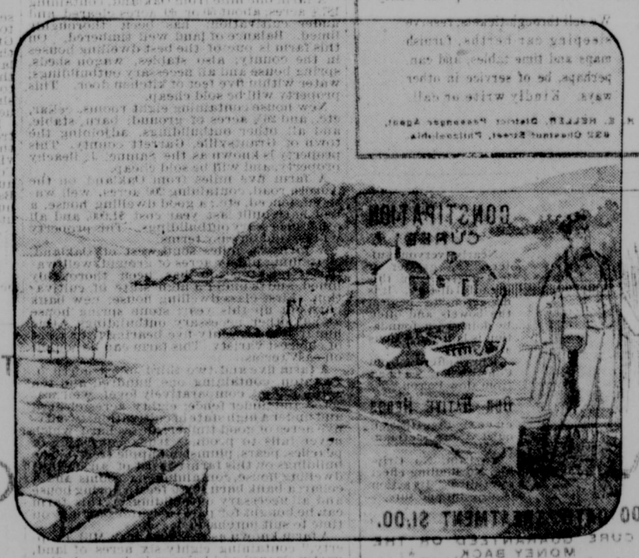
The survivors of the Andrew Raiders have erected a monument to their fallen comrades, and it stands to-day in the National Cemetery at Chattanooga. Two tablets have also been erected by the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway, one marking the spot at which the "General" was captured and the other where it was abandoned. A third tablet has been erected in front of the engine "General" in Chattanooga.

Reindeer have been the real heroes of the most thrilling enterprises in the history of Alaska. One was the carrying of relief supplies to the destitute miners in the Yukon valley when untold hardships and privations were endured in driving across an unknown wilderness without roads or trails or guides. The reindeer were frequently stampeded by wolves and mountain lions, but in the end they accomplished a journey which could not possibly have been made with other dogs or horses. In conjunction with the revenue cutter Bear—which vessel, by the way, has been employed more extensively than any other in the transportation of reindeer—300 deer carried supplies and the famous relief expedition to the whalers imprisoned in the ice at Point Barrow. In this case the overland journey exceeded 1,500 miles in length.

A Kangaroo Ranch.

An Arkansas pioneer is making arrangements to start a kangaroo ranch. The hides are valuable and the tendons much more so. The latter can be split extremely fine, and are the best thing known to surgeons for sewing up wounds, and especially for holding broken bones together, being much finer and tougher than catgut.

WELSH VILLAGE RULED BY WOMEN.



The little town of Langum, in South Pembrokeshire, Wales, is remarkable for its oysters and its women. Not that the women are more attractive than elsewhere, but because they rule the village with a firm hand, while the men take the less strenuous positions of housekeepers and assistants to the female population. The women of Langum begin their work early in life, and by the time they are 16 they are expert oyster fishers, an industry which is exclusively in their hands. In spite of their hard life they retain their health and strength for many years.

TWELVE-MILE TUNNEL.

The Length of the Simplon Now Being Put Through—Other Mammoth Bores.

When the state of Massachusetts many a long year ago took up the task of digging out the Hoosac tunnel, and the work dragged along in the most tedious manner imaginable, the wits of New England, and especially Oliver Wendell Holmes, made countless jests about "that dreadful bore," which it seemed at one time would never be completed. But with an ample margin before the end of the last century it was opened to railroad traffic, and it has been useful ever since. The railroad companies all over the continent have been spending millions upon millions of dollars in the construction of tunnels since the first excavation was thrown open for the Hoosac subway. But several of the most difficult and costly tunnels of the globe have not been finished by private corporations. Governments have decided in a number of instances that public interests made it advisable that huge amounts should be expended out of the public funds for the piercing of mountains and the building of railroads far below the surface of the earth. And note, says the New York Tribune, how the scope and extent of such enterprises have been enlarged and developed!

Before the first blast at the foot of the Hoosac hills was exploded the drilling out of a passageway of not more than a mile in length, under a considerable hill or a peak of moderate height, was regarded as a formidable task. The Hoosac hole was about five miles in length, and so many years were spent before trains were sent through it, and so many millions of dollars were thrown into the pit, that several moss-grown sages of the old Bay state were inclined to boast of it as one of the seven wonders of the modern world. But the Hoosac is no mighty affair in comparison with the tunnels under great mountain ranges in our western territory and elsewhere. Under the Alps especially has engineering skill accomplished great things. The Arlberg tunnel is a half dozen miles in length, the Mont Cenis nearly eight, the St. Gothard more than nine, while the Simplon, now under way, is almost twice as long as the Arlberg, a half longer than the Mont Cenis and almost a third longer than the St. Gothard. It is expected that the Simplon will be open for traffic in 1904. The barrier of the Alps as an obstruction to swift and easy travel to and from Italy is almost done away with. What obstacles will discourage the engineers of future generations when those of to-day are so eager to dig out tunnels 12 miles long thousands of feet beneath the summits of snow-capped mountains?

HAS A KINDLY HEART.

King Edward Cares for His Old and Faithful Servants in All Departments.

King Edward VII. of England has a heart as kindly and tender as ever beat in a human breast, says an eastern exchange. Other faults he may have, but he never forgets one who has done him or his family a long and loyal service. One of the most efficient and faithful officers, Capt. E——, on a certain royal yacht, is or has been a man of very moderate means. To hold a commission in the British navy is an expensive proposition, which calls for an independent income many times in excess of the actual pay. Especially is this so in the case of the royal craft, on which during the season there is one continuous round of entertainments. The officer in question had a growing family, a home that befitted his social station and little more than his pay. For some years he battled with the situation, but at last, worn out and heart sick, determined to resign and enter the merchant marine. In some way or other the king heard of his resolve. Less than a couple of months ago Capt. E—— was surprised and even alarmed to receive a peremptory command from the king ordering him to report at Buckingham palace forthwith.

Although he knew that his skirts were clean he felt perturbed nevertheless. But his reception by his majesty was of a most cordial nature. After some preliminary the king said: "I think you are entitled to a holiday in return for your years of work on the ——. So that you better take this." The astounded officer was handed an admiralty order granting him a year's leave of absence on captain's full pay. "You can renew that at the end of the year if you so desire," added Edward VII., with a significant laugh. "And, by the way, this may interest you!" Capt. E—— was here given a letter offering him command of a superb and newly built liner, one of several running between London and an English colony. The letter was to the effect that the personal recommendation of the king was the cause of its being written. The overwhelmed captain never quite remembered how he got out of the palace. But he is now the monarch of the ocean that he is.

Good Forgotors.

Giles—Old Scurvey is awfully absent-minded, isn't he?

Miles—Really, I never noticed it.

"Well, he is just the same. Why, he actually fell into the river one day last week and forgot to drown."—Chicago Daily News.

Empty Handed.

Royal Servant—Your majesty, there is another creditor without.

Sultan of Turkey—Tell him to go without.—Ohio State Journal.

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

"Elsie says there was only one drawback to her wedding." "What was that?" "She says her father looked too cheerful when he gave her away."—Indianapolis Journal.

She—"So you don't like these Wagner concerts?" He—"Well, they have one redeeming feature. They're so loud you can't hear the man next to you whistling his accompaniment."—Philadelphia Record.

"It's real nice since Ella got an idea that she's such a grand singer." 'How's that?" "Why, she has such an exalted opinion of her ability that she won't sing when you ask her."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Friend—"What, Pat, not learned to ride that bicycle yet?" Pat (who has been practicing for a week)—"Sorra a bit, sorr. Shure Oi can't aven balanee mesilf standin' still, let alone roidin'!"—Glasgow Evening Times.

Mrs. Von Blumer—"It seems a pity that the Smith wedding should be on the same day as the Jones funeral." Von Blumer—"Can't you go to both?" Mrs. Von Blumer—"Oh, no. I won't have time to change my clothes."—Town Topics.

Candid.—"Conductor," inquired the timid old lady, "ain't you afraid o' bein' killed by the 'lectricity in these trolley cars?" "No, ma'am," said he, as he pocketed four fares and rang up only two, "I'm not exactly a good conductor."—Philadelphia Press.

How He Won Her.—"Yes, it suddenly dawned on her that she loved me." "When did the revelation come to her?" "When she noticed that I refrained from smiling the first time I saw her on the street in her new automobile coat."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

First Partner—"That new man seems to be a conscientious fellow. He appears to be intent upon earning his wages." Second Partner—"But aren't you afraid he is a man not to be trusted?" First Partner—"Why do you ask that?" Second Partner—"When the clock strikes 12 he waits until the last stroke before quitting work. Doesn't it look rather suspicious that he doesn't throw down his tools at the first stroke?"—Boston Transcript.

THE "SEA LADY."

Queer Tales of a Mysterious and Beautiful Girl on the Lonely Coast of Scotland.

The name, at any rate, has at last been discovered of the mysterious and beautiful lady who, as recorded in the London Express some time ago, has been making her home on the seashore in a lonely spot on the Argyllshire coast. She is a Miss Margaret MacDougal. But at that point information ceases. Young and singularly attractive, with great masses of brown hair worn loose over her shoulders, or lightly tied with a piece of ribbon, she has been residing on the Ardmaddy beach at high water mark without shelter and without food of any kind save shellfish. She sleeps on the grass, and declines all offers of food, clothing or money. The most extraordinary stories are current about the fair unknown, of which the following—supplied by a local correspondent—are a fair sample:

"When at leisure," the correspondent says, "she knits and knits; and the ball of worsted never seems to decrease in size. She talks English and Gaelic fluently, and even converses in several other languages, to suit the person talking to her. She has been photographed several times, but none of the photographs seem alike, and she does not appear to everybody the same.

"To some she appears to be about 24 years of age and to others about double that age. She gives her name as Margaret MacDougal, but nothing is known as to where she comes from. Ardmaddy, where she resides, has been always famous as the rendezvous of fairies. Near by is Dunna-teime and Creag-an-Fharaidh—places famous as the haunts of those spirits that influence men for good or ill. To this place it is believed," adds the correspondent, "she retires at night. There she gets news of all that will transpire the following day. She has a thorough knowledge of the Scriptures, and has a great hatred of the clergy."

Dasher's Repartee.

Dasher came to tea and mentioned a brilliant repartee made by himself. He had been lecturing on the church's seasons and how to observe them, when a crude man in the audience asked what was the best way to observe All Fools' day. Dasher replied: "It should be spent in self-examination," and the gainsayer was silenced. After Dasher was gone, my wife said she thought she had heard this story before, though with a different tourniure. I have often noticed that the same stories are told by different persons as having happened in their own experience. The thing that struck me as so curious that I made a note of it for my Psychical Society Cornhill

His View of It.

"In these old plays," she said, "the characters are always saying 'Marry,' but 'Elbo this' or 'Marry, but I'll do that.'" "What of it?" he asked. "I mean, upon a funny word to use." "Not at all," he answered. "You see, in the old days 'marry' was a swear word, and," he added, thoughtfully, "it sometimes think that it still ought to be."

Later, he apologized. He had to do it or else eat at a restaurant. It is said that the road to a man's heart lies through his stomach, but the resourceful woman knows that that is not the only goal that can be reached by that route.—Chicago Post.

Yoked With a Horse

Terrible Punishment Inflicted By a Russian Peasant on His Girl Wife

That savagery and ignorance still prevail to an alarming extent among the Russian peasantry is illustrated by a recent bit of realism from the pen of Maxim Gorky, a new Russian literary genius, whose work is said to possess even more virility than that of Tolstoi. All his work is infused with passionate human interest of the struggle for life among the poor of Russia. The following story is not an effort of the imagination, but a vivid picture of an actual occurrence witnessed by the author:

This is no fiction—more's the pity.

I witnessed the scene of horror and savageness here described in the village of Kaneybowka, government of

"GET UP, WITCH."

Cherson, Russia, on July 15, 1901. It's a twentieth century tragedy, more's the pity, I repeat.

In the village street, past the dust covered huts, a procession. Slowly it moves along, this peculiar procession, attended by howls and frantic yells and catcalls.

After it, like a great wave, the people stream and surge over the highway. At the head walks a little horse, and a comically worn out jade he is. His head is bent as if in sorrow. When he raises one of his fore legs, his chin sinks down still lower, as if the mouth was to lick the dust. When he raises another leg, his hind quarters tremble and come down. The sorry brute looks as if he would fall over and expire any moment.

At his side and like him chained to the thill pole ambles a woman with uncertain step. A woman? No, a girl rather. She is small, sparsely developed and entirely naked.

Her head, wreathed by masses of thick, dark blond disheveled hair, is held high and thrown back, her wide open eyes stare into space with a look that has nothing human in it.

Her body is a mass of blue and black and red and yellow stains and blotches, of round and oval welts, knots and lumps, the left breast is cut in several places, and blood trickles from the wounds, marking her path.

The blood has made a reddish stain running from the heart across the body and down the left leg to the knee; blood has also accumulated on the top of the foot, but there merciful dust hides humanity's disgrace.

It looks as if some vandal, some bully rough had risen from a mediæval torture chamber, had begun to flay this poor little body, but had sickened at the task after tearing off one strip of quivering skin. Still, mercy was only a spasmodic dweller in his black soul. Dropping the knife, he seized a knout to work off his fury on God's own likeness.

The girl couldn't have been an ordinary peasant woman born and bred in poverty and degradation, for her feet were small and slender. They didn't seem to touch the ground. There was indeed no visible support to her swaying, bleeding body. God's will alone held it up—I think saved it from falling and dragging along the dusty, sun burnt ground a prey to stones and wheels.

The driver was a tall, stalwart peasant in a white blouse and black sheepskin cap, allowing portions of his red, straight hair to escape.

His left hands held the reins, in his right he swung a terrible scourge. Hide thy face, humanity! Beloved Christ, didst thou die for a beast such as this?

The woman born brute lashes alternately horse and woman, front or back, haunches or head, it is all the same to him. He acts methodically, machine-like. A buzzsaw, I warrant you, harbors finer sensibilities in its heart of hearts if we could only read in it.

The eyes of the redhaired peasant are bloodshot; they sparkle with mischief, cruelty, triumph. The eyes are green, and their color is intensified by the red of his hair.

His blouse sleeves are rolled up, leaving his strong muscular arms free, the arms of a gorilla, thickly covered with short red hair.

The peasant's mouth is wide open, showing long, yellow, sharp canine teeth. Every little while he cries in a hoarse voice:

"Get up, witch that thou art! Faster; don't be all day about it. We must finish our twenty miles before dusk. Ah, this" (meaning a stroke with the whip), "was a good one. It struck the right spot, dost think so, brother horsy?"

And behind this wagon to which the biped beast of burden is chained, together with the sorriest of jades, roams and runs and straggles on crutches when necessary a vast multitude, yelping and howling, screaming and whistling.

The thirst for blood, I am ashamed to say, seems to animate particularly boys and young girls. To them the tragedy enacted is as good as a circus. Every now and then some lad or girl runs up to the bleeding woman to shriek words of contempt and hatred, threats and reproaches, into her scared face.

Plenty of women in the procession. They couldn't run faster, couldn't stick closer, if a new hat or frock was to be seen. Their faces are red with excitement, while their eyes gleam with pleasure and malice.

I repeat the above is gospel truth, more's the pity! I witnessed the scene myself sitting at the window of a hut while illness paralyzed my limbs. They call it "the show," and it is a popular amusement thereabouts, hallowed by tradition. The state winks at it, the church closes its eyes against it.

A husband who discovers his wife's faithlessness may yoke her with his cattle for twenty miles and lash her as much as his cattle. If he exceeds the run by a yard only or if he doesn't divide the punishment equally between woman and beast, he is liable to arrest and to a fine of 15 kopecks, the value of a half pint of schnapps.

Rode on the Back Of a Big Shark

Herr Eastwood of San Francisco was recently the guest of Commander Hobson of Honolulu in a shark hunt in Pearl harbor. Sharks are plenty in the waters of the Hawaiian Islands, and shortly after setting their line they hooked a big one. They brought him alongside and made him fast and turned in for the night.

The boys were pretty tired and sleepy and not inclined to turn out early the next morning, but with the first peep of dawn in the blushing east Herr Eastman slipped on deck and, securing a pair of marlin spikes from the mate's bag, securely wired them together, fastened a heaving line to the eyes in each end and was ready for his experiment. Carefully hauling the shark alongside, he slipped the marlin spikes between its jaws and secured by them a noose over the horn of its nose so that they could not be displaced. The shark bucked considerably, but Eastwood gave it plenty of line until it quieted down again, when once more he hauled it alongside and, after slipping off his shoes and stockings, took a firm grip on the lines, cast off the stake rope and then stepped boldly on to the shark's back.

The first move of the startled shark was to try to dive, but a sharp pull on the impromptu bit opened his mouth so wide that he had to get his head above water to breathe. It is a well recognized fact that a fish will drown if his mouth can be kept open for a few minutes under water, and Eastwood had taken advantage of this.

The shark seemed badly frightened for a short time and made it pretty difficult for his rider to preserve his equilibrium, but his bare feet clung tightly to the back of the big fish, and after a number of unsuccessful efforts to dive or shake him off the shark became quite tractable, and he could turn him about and steer him in any direction he wished. When he was fully satisfied that the finny steed was under control, he rode alongside the yacht and called the boys on deck, and if ever there was a surprised lot he had them. Their shouts and exclamations brought the entire Punlo settlement to the beach to see what was up, and they would not at first believe their eyes, but finally concluded there was a new kahuna in town and that he was a dandy. Many of them paddled out in their canoes to get a good look at the kahuna and returned to the beach to report and increase the wonderment of their neighbors.

Captured by Her Pirate Crew.

What has been the fate of Captain Gilmore, his wife and the officers of the Chilean bark Latona, which sailed last fall from Port Blakely, Chile, for Eaton, Peru? Have they been killed by their own crew or have they been captured by pirates? One fate or the other must have befallen them, for it is pretty certain that the bark Leonora, wrecked in the Philippines in January, was the missing Latona.

Shipping men of San Francisco and the Pacific coast say they feel sure that the wreck on the Philippine shore is the missing Latona and that the crew must have mutinied and killed the captain, his wife and all the English officers and then started to find the pathways to the south Pacific, where the cargo could be sold at good prices. If this is correct, then the reticence of the survivors of the wreck is explained.

The Garrett County Bank
OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank
OF OAKLAND, MD.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.

Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.

F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

Some Reasons
Why You Should Insist on Having
EUREKA HARNESS OIL
Unequaled by any other.
Renders hard leather soft.
Especially prepared.
Keeps out water.
A heavy bodied oil.
HARNESS
An excellent preservative.
Reduces cost of your harness.
Never burns the leather; its
Efficiency is increased.
Secures best service.
Stitches kept from breaking.
OIL
Is sold in all
Localities
Manufactured by Standard Oil Company.

Burlington Route
It costs no more to ride on this beautiful train than on any other.
Chicago-St. Paul Minneapolis Limited Express
It is electric lighted and heated by steam, carries a library-buffet-smoking car, a dining car à la carte and everything there is to make one comfortable.
Leaves CHICAGO 6.30 p. m. Daily
We sell through tickets, reserve sleeping car berths, furnish maps and time tables, and can, perhaps, be of service in other ways. Kindly write or call.
H. E. HELLER, District Passenger Agent, 632 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

CONSTIPATION CURED!
Nearly everyone suffers in a greater or less degree from this dreadful disease. It is dangerous to neglect the bowels, and often by doing so a foundation is laid for serious ailments.
Those suffering from Constipation suffer from slow Poison.
OUR NATIVE HERBS cures Constipation quietly and permanently.
No Pain, No Griping, No Binding effect afterwards. Its action is pleasant and sure.
200 DAYS' TREATMENT $1.00.
A CURE GUARANTEED OR THE MONEY BACK.
"When a girl I had Small Pox succeeded by Typhoid Fever and Measels. I was left with Constipation and Sinking Spells. Sometimes I felt that I could not live. After having various physicians treat me with no benefit I bought a box of Our Native Herbs, which seems to be the only medicine that suits my case. I believe it saved my life." Mrs. M. MILLER, Crellin, Md.
No Case Too Stubborn for Our Native Herbs To Conquer.
THE ALONZO O. BLISS CO.,
SOLE PROPRIETORS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.
A. C. BROOKE,
Local Agent. Mountain Lake Park, Md.
A box of Tablets or Powder mailed to any address upon receipt of $1.00.

Car load feed and flour just arrived at Eagle Store, Grantsville.

SHERIFF'S SALE
OF AN INTEREST IN
Valuable Real Estate
Situated in Garrett County, Md.

By virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett county at the suit of G. S. Hamill, executor of William W. Bray, deceased, against Harriet B. Paugh, the same being No. 5 Judicials to December term, 1901, of said Court, I, the undersigned Sheriff, by an actual entry upon the premises hereinafter described, did seize, levy upon and take in execution all of the right, title and reversionary interest of the said Harriet B. Paugh, in and to all that property situated in District Number Fourteen, Garrett county, known as the

William W. Bray Farm,

containing one hundred and sixty acres, more or less, which said real estate is more particularly described in a deed from Joseph Friend of John to the said William W. Bray, dated the 6th day of June, 1872, and recorded in Liber H. R. No. 36, folio 482, &c., one of the land records of Allegany county, especial reference to which deed is herein made for a more complete description of the interest hereby intended to be sold, which is an undivided one-sixth interest of the above defendant in said property subject to the life estate of Amanda Bray, and I hereby give notice that on

SATURDAY,
The 23d Day of November, 1901,

in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, at the hour of eleven o'clock a. m. of said day, will offer the interest of the said Harriet B. Paugh in the aforesaid real estate at public auction to the highest bidder for cash on the day of sale to satisfy the aforesaid execution and costs.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on the day of sale.
ANDREW J. OESTER,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

183½ acres coal land on Youghlogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale. House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187½ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 26½ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 200 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ miles southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoroughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north o Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swanger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to
JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

E. W. Grove
This signature is on every box of the genuine Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets the remedy that cures a cold in one day

THE
SECOND NATIONAL BANK
of CUMBERLAND, MD.
Designated United States Depository
SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.
This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000
Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
John Sheridan, A. Hunter Boyd,
David W. Sloan.

NOTICE OF First Meeting of Creditors.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, in Bankruptcy.

In the matter of Henry Achenbach and Harry E. Achenbach, trading as H. Achenbach & Son and as individuals, Bankrupts.
In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of H. Achenbach & Son, partners and as individuals, of the county of Garrett and district aforesaid, bankrupts:

Notice is hereby given that on the 15th day of October A. D., 1901, the said H. Achenbach & Son, partners and individuals, were duly adjudicated bankrupts and that the first meeting of their creditors will be held at my Law Office, No. 6 Washington street, in Cumberland, Maryland, on the 9th day of November, A. D. 1901, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupts and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
Oct. 24, 1901. Referee in Bankruptcy.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT MAY 19, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 19, 1901. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily	3.42	A. M
No. 3—Daily	7.35	A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday	10.01	A. M
No. 55—Daily	4.52	P. M
No. 1—Daily	10.07	P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 8—Daily	5.50	A. M
No. 2—Daily	6.52	A. M
No. 46—Express, daily	4.41	P. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun	5.12	P. M
No. 12—Daily	8.35	P. M
No. 4—Daily	12.37	A. M

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT SEPT. 29, 1901.

SOUTHWARD No. 3 P. M.	SOUTHWARD No. 1 A. M.	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2 NOON	NORTHWARD No. 4 P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June.	10 51	6 01
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 15	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	5 15
6 00*	9 50* ar	Elk Garden	*8 10	*4 25
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 38	10 27	Thomas	8 38	3 53
7 10	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 15
6 48	10 35 lv	Coketon	8 35	3 50
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 15
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 10†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 15
8 46*	NOON 12 52† ar	Beverly	lv	†1 44
9 10*	1 15† ar	Huttonsville	lv	†1 20
P. M.	3 15* ar P. M.	Bealington	lv	P. M. *11 45 A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, Gen. Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agen

Treasury Department.

OFFICE OF
THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., August 20, 1901.

Whereas, by satisfactory evidence presented to the undersigned, it has been made to appear that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, has complied with all the provisions of the Statutes of the United States, required to be complied with before an association shall be authorized to commence the business of banking.

Now therefore I, Charles G. Dawes, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that "The First National Bank of Grantsville" in the village of Grantsville, in the County of Garrett, and State of Maryland, is authorized to commence the business of Banking as provided in Section Fifty-one hundred and sixty-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

SEAL

In testimony whereof witness my hand and Seal of office this twentieth day of August, 1901.

(Signed) CHARLES G. DAWES,
oct 31 Comptroller of the Currency.
No. 5943.

I HAVE PURCHASED
THE OAKLAND COAL YARD
of Mr. D. L. Conneway and will continue the business. I will keep constantly on hand a large supply of
HARD AND SOFT
COAL,
KINDLING WOOD, Etc.
All orders will receive prompt attention. Leave orders with the weighmaster or at my residence, the Giessman Hotel.
35-2 GEO. GIESSMAN

Rough, Red Hands
made to look white as the driven snow and so soft to the touch as the skin of a baby—
LILY CREAM
imparts a velvety smoothness to the skin—it's insantly and is perfectly invisible—it's healing, soothing, protective.
LOGAN DRUG COMPANY,
WHEELING, W. VA.
25 and 25 cents. At your Druggist

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY, ARCHITECT,
Office 7 North Liberty St.
CUMBERLAND, MD.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.
Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.
Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Money loaned on Mortgage.
Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.
Agent for the Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.
Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
OAKLAND, MD
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in McComas's Building, Main St.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET,
Particular attention given to Conveyancing investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. je14-1y

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD.
Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients, 48—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. '88 10 6

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.
Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 16-'99

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office opposite Garrett County Bank.
Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 6 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER,
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.
Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by aneroid barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26t*

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate.
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.
Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats, descriptions and estimates furnished. 40-1yr.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!
I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 20,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.
All trespassing will be prosecuted to the ulliest extent of the law.
Call on or address:
C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1901. NUMBER 37.

Women's Underwear.

Extra Heavy Undervests..... 23c
" " Pants..... 23c
Silk Finished Vests, worth 65.... 43c
" " Pants, " 65.... 43c
All wool & Silk Vests worth $1.25 98c
" " " Pants, " $1.25 98c

UMBRELLAS.

26 inch steel rod, fast black, gloria, regular value 75c, 39c

26 and 28 inch patent self-opening, paragon frame, worth $1.50, for 98c

26 and 28 inch rod, paragon frame, natural handle, silk cover, worth $2.25, for $1.69.

Ladies (special) black silk cover, pearl handle, steel rod, worth $3.00, for 1.98.

Ladies' Dress Skirts.

5 Dozen all wool fine dress skirts made up in Venician, Broadcloth and Cheviot. Some of these goods are very handsomely trimmed while others are made plain, but they are all lined with the best of Percaline. These goods were made to sell for $5.00 to $15.00, your choice at from $3.48 to $7.48.

WAISTS.

We can not describe the many styles of waists we are offering in this sale and would ask that you call to see them. They are made in the new styles. These goods we must sell and will do so if the low price will have anything to do with it. They are made in Flannelett, All Wool Flannel, Brilliantine, Satine, Pou de soir and Silk, prices range from 39c to $3.48 for the best silk waist in the house, some are worth $12.00.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.'S THANKSGIVING SALE!

Over $4,000 of high class merchandise that must be sold. We have over bought ourselves and we are now compelled to sell at a loss in order to make room for the great line of Holiday Goods that will arrive the first of the following month. This sale will go down in history as being the Greatest Bargain Sale ever offered the public of this section, a saving of about 50 cents on the dollar.

We have just received for this special sale a big line of WOMEN'S TAILOR-MADE SUITS, which were bought for less than it cost the manufacturer to make them. They are made in the new raglan coat style as well as many other attractive styles, the colors are in black, blue, brown, grey and tan, all lined with the best of taffeta silk, a great many of them are trimmed with satin, taffeta and velvet while others are made plain or stitched. These goods were made to retail at from $18.00 to $30.00, but, as stated, we have bought them at a price that enables us to sell them to you for $12.48, others at $9.98, $7.48, $5.48. To see these goods you will appreciate their value.

MEN'S CLOTHING.

100 heavy weight most all wool suits, size 34–42, worth $8.00, $3.98

75 heavy weight all wool suits, size 34–42, worth $10.00, now $5.98

100 heavy weight all wool suits, size 34–42, worth $12.50, now $7.98

150 Fine Clay Worsted and French back suits made up in the most attractive styles, they are neat and dressy, the best value you could obtain anywhere for $15.00 now offered at $8.98

OVERCOATS.

We have just received for this special sale, from one of the largest manufacturers in the country, a heavy consignment of the Newest Style Overcoats, made in the swell yoke effect, half or loose back, the colors are in Oxford, brown blue and black, short, long, or extra long. These goods are worth $12.50, $15, $18, $20, but we are going to sell every one of them for $7.48, $8.98 and $10.98.

CLOTHING FOR THE BOYS.

Double Breast Suits, ages 8 to 16..... 98c
" " " all wool, ages 8 to 16..... $1.48
" " " " " 2.25
3 Piece Vest Suits, " ages 3 to 8..... 1.48
Russian Blouse Suits, all wool, ages 3 to 8..... 3.98
3 Piece all wool Suits for boys, ages 8 to 16..... 3.98

LADIES' COATS.

Raglan Coats full length for $10.00.

27 inch Coats, the very newest length, in blue, black, tan and castor, for $4.98.

Our coat stock is complete, but time and space does not permit us to go into detail. Come and see them and you will appreciate their value.

MISSES' WINTER WRAPS.

Misses All Wool Kersey Coats, made in the three-quarter length, with yoke effect, in green, blue and tan, regular value $7.98, now $3.98.

Misses' Automobile, plain and yoke effect, in blue, tan and green, value $7.98, for $5.48.

Children's Short Length Coats in tight and loose back, age 4–12, $1.98 to $3.48.

LACE CURTAINS.

30 Dozen Fine Lace Curtain Ends, worth 48 cents, your choice 16 cents. In this line we can match any quantity you should want.

The above Special Sale goes into effect FRIDAY, NOV. 22, and lasts until THURSDAY, NOV. 28.

Children's Underwear.

Heavy ribbed vests and pants, ages 1–2.....12c
ages 2–4.....15c
ages 4–6.....20c
ages 6–14.....23c
Boys' heavy ribbed drawers, ages 16–18.....23c
Boys' heavy wool drawers, ages 16–20.....23c

High Class Shoes for Men

The famous Walk Over Shoes, regular price $4.00, now $2.98.

Heywood Shoes, regular price $4.00, now $2.98.

Heywood Shoes, regular price $3.50, now $2.48.

All America Shoes, Patent Leather or Enamel, $4.00, now $2.98.

Goodyear Welt, Plain Toe, Vici Shoes, $3.25, now $2.19.

Box Calf Goodyear Welt, Cap Toe, $3.75, now $2.49.

Colt Skin Enamel Shoes, worth to make them $4.00, now $2.98.

Colt Skin Patent Leather, worth to make them $4.00, now $2.98.

Boy's School Shoes, worth $1.50, now $1.19.

MEN'S TROUSERS.

All Wool fancy stripe trousers, the best to be had for $5.00, now 3.48.

All Wool fancy stripe trousers, heavy weight, value $4.50, now 3.25.

All Wool fancy stripe and plain trousers, value $4.00, now 2.98.

All Wool Clay Worsted trousers in blue and black worth $3.75, now 2.25.

Half Wool trousers, in blue and black, good quality, worth $1.50, now 98c.

Men's Underwear.

Extra heavy fleece lined shirts and drawers, regular value 50c, now 42c.

Extra heavy fleece lined shirts and drawers, regular value 75c, now 50c.

Wright's Health Underwear, regular value, $1.00, now 79c.

Switz Conde all wool under shirts and drawers, regular value $1.25, now 79c.

Fine all wool under shirts and drawers, regular value $1.25, now 98c.

Mr. A. P. Gorman and the Presidency.

Divers political vaticinators are now looking into the seeds of time and selecting the Democratic candidate for President in 1904, says the New York Sun. They wave away Mr. Bryan airly. They assume that the elections in Nebraska and Iowa have cooked his goose for good and all. Some of them find the new Democratic man of destiny in the Hon. Arthur Pue Gorman. A very fine man to look at is Mr. Gorman, a benevolent, handsome, saintly sort of face. He might be one of those polished courtly Abbes of the eighteenth century. No, there is something ascetic in his countenance. Is he not painted, or somebody wonderfully like him, in Assisi or Perugia with a rope girdle around his waist and a brown gown that becomes him wonderfully? At any rate, a choice figure of a Roman senator of the days after the introduction of razors. A man much liked in the Senate of the United States, to which body he expects to return on March 4, 1903. A man of good appearance and civil and even engaging manners. What are his other qualifications and gifts for the honor which some guessers have prophetically bestowed upon him?

Well, he is a burrower, a worker in the dark, old true penny in the cellarage. He is an expert in making the straight crooked and the light darkness. He has all the small arts of the small politician. He knows how to thimble-rig. By legal means and by subterranean expedients more congenial to him, he can bilk the voters sometims and win a temporary success. Among his Maryland allies are some of the toughest citizens extant. Among his habitual opponents will be found some Maryland Democrats. Democrats of distinction and high character. He has helped make Maryland a Republican state. For such it really is; such it will be. The Gormanites have to steal it to get it. There is no security in Mr. Gorman's new lease of politican power. His attempt to cripple the Republican party by making it difficult for the colored Republicans to vote is an admitted failure. The edge tools that he has handled so jauntily are sure to be turned against his own party. In any real and lasting sense Mr. Gorman is far from being the shrewd political manager he has the name of being. He knows how to keep his mouth shut. He has an excellent gift of silence. He understands the mechanical part of the business; and by contrast with such a comic opera chairman as Jones of Arkansas, he is as Machiavelli to the village idiot. But he doesn't allow enough for ideas. He doesn't understand the generous enthusiasm which men have even for obviously mistaken political principles. Principles don't bother him; why should they bother anybody else? So in politics he plays essentially a cutthroat game, a small and short-sighted game, the winnings in which cannot be great.

Among the Democratic opportunists who are not his rivals, there is considerable admiration for Mr. Gorman. The impulsive candor and ardent faith of Mr. Bryan has not been rewarded at the polls. By a natural reaction some of the opportunists are turning to the Maryland Mole, supposed to be so long-headed, so deep-revolving, so wise to organize; known to be a cold and temperate Democratic believer, if not actually an infidel. Bryan was the Democratic romanticist; Gorman is the Democratic realist. To the age of chivalry succeeds the age of calculation.

It is not expected that any fury of popular applause will roar for Mr. Gorman. Oh, no; he is to be the safe, prudent candidate, in whom business interests can trust. For the retirement of Mr. Bryan, if he is retired, means that "commercialism" reigns over the Democrats as well as the Republicans. But how much can business interests trust in a candidate who was able to swallow silver, against his supposed convictions, if he has any? How far can Mr. Gorman's party trust him? We don't mean that he is other than trustworthy in private life, but in politics he seems to be a cynic.

Cynic or no cynic, how can he be nominated? In spite of his formal support of Mr. Bryan, Mr. Bryan's friends, a numerous and powerful class, are not likely to forgive Mr. Gorman. If any olive branch is to be brought, some other bird must bring it. A new name and a new deal are the Democrats' only chance. They must break with their recent past so far as they can. As a matter of the most ordinary prudence they must steer clear, if they can, of the enmities of the last five years. Nothing can do them any good, if the present temper of the people continues; but their only glimpse of hope is to find a man with none of the dust and heat of the great schism upon him. An ambiguous candidate may sometimes be or seem to be an advantage to the party in opposition, but Mr. Gorman's ambiguity has simply made him pretty generally distrusted. With his record of opposition to the army and to the treaty of Paris he would be a suitable candidate for the Democrats so long as they choose to continue in the gall of bitterness, but he has too many enemies among them.

A Great Medicine.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. Phipps, of Poteau, Ark. "It cured me of bloody flux. I cannot speak too highly of it." This remedy always wins the good opinion, if not praise, of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects even in the most severe cases make it a favorite everywhere. For sale by all druggists.

GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT.

Question Just Now is at White Heat in a Number of States.

Sentiment among the citizens of several of the Southern and Middle Western States, notably Louisiana, Mississippi, Illinois and Tennessee, in favor of improving the highways, is just now at white heat. Under the direction of the National Good Roads Association mass meetings and conventions are held in many of the cities and towns, and the subject of good roads is discussed and dilated upon everywhere by champions of the movement with earnestness and understanding. On the strength of the benefits which, unmistakably, have resulted from smooth and permanent highways wherever they have been built, the good roads agents are striving to impress upon the people that the maintenance in their respective localities of roads that are sensibly, not to say scientifically, constructed is a duty they owe to themselves and to succeeding generations. The agitation is certainly producing important results.

Leading newspapers in the states mentioned are doing much to help along the work. The New Orleans Times-Democrat, for example, has printed a series of interviews with representative citiens in various parts of Mississippi and Louisiana and they leave no doubt of the sincerity and vigor with which the good roads movement is conducted. We quote some extracts from interviews with residents in three large towns of Louisiana. A progressive landholder says:

"It is for the agricultural interests to realize that they can haul twice as much of their products over a good road as over one poorly kept. I don't know anything better for this parish than the inauguration of a movement of this kind."

A prominent physician expressed himself thus:

"Good roads, like good schools, are the most inviting objects to immigration. Coupled with the fertility of our soil, good roods will surely result in bringing hither capital and immigration."

A large Louisiana planter takes this view of the matter:

"Good roads are an object lesson to the capitalist, home-seeker and man of moderate means. Wherever he sees good roads he is assured that it is a community in which he can safely invest, satisfied that he will have good schools, quick and easy transportation of produce to and from market, and everything which can be desired in an enlightened and Christian community."

Here is the opinion of a wide awake farmer of the same state.

"There is no surer, safer or more expeditious way of building up and developing the resources of a country than by the construction and maintenance of good roads. They will always invite the home seeker as well as the capitalist, each of whom is assured of easy transportation to market for his produce, as well as of educational, religious and other advantages incident to such a combination of happy circumstances."

A prominent lawyer and planter says:

"The absence of good roads frequently means a lower market when products reach their destination; loss and delay from the failure to receive articles promptly when needed and a large loss resulting from the wear and tear of vehicles and horses and payment of increased time and teamsters."

We might go on quoting almost indefinitely similar opinions gathered by the Times-Democrat from citizens of Louisiana and Mississippi—municipal officers, bank presidents, clergymen, wholesale and retail merchants, farmers and others.

The good roads sentiment in the part of the country referred to has been greatly stimulated by the recent undertaking on the part of the National Good Roads Association and the Illinois Central railroad to run a train, especially equipped for practical road making, from New Orleans to Chicago. The "Good Roads Special," as it is called, has already given demonstrations in road building at New Orleans, Natchez and Vicksburg. It is now proceeding northward and is schednled to stop at fifteen or more places before it reaches Chicago. At each place a specimen road at least a mile long will be constructed and left as an object lesson to people who would like to have open highways twelve months in the year.

Enjoyable Reception.

The reception tendered by the members of Cumberland Council No. 179, United Commercial Travelers, at the lodge rooms in the Sprigg building on Saturday evening, was an event of unusual enjoyment, the guests in attendance numbering fully two hundred. The rooms were beautifully decorated, palms and flowers being scattered about in every available nook and corner. The exercises, literary and musical, opened with an overture by the Cumberland Concert club, which was followed by a prayer by Rev. C. A. Hauser. John W. Young, recently elected clerk of the circuit court, delivered an address of welcome and greeting to the members of the order and their friends.

Then followed an instrumental selection by the orchestra, a recitation by Miss Maud Dolan, a vocal number, a recitation by F. G. Pugh, an instrumental number by the orchestra, a reading, "The Kicker and His Kick," by Dr. E. T. Duke, another vocal selection, a dialect recitation by W. D. Hicks, instrumental music by the orchestra, address by Mr. Starr, Columbus, O., the exercises concluding with a farewell song. There was an intermission in the program of exercises to admit of the serving of delicious refreshments.

This lodge has very handsome quarters, which have recently been refurnished and redecorated, and few, if any, fraternal organizations in this city have more beautiful habitations.—Cumb. News.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL. Publisher.

OAKLAND, : GARRETT CO., MD.

OPEN MART FOR PLUNDERERS.

Thieves Sell What They Steal in Mexico with Knowledge of Public and Police.

In the City of Mexico there is a place known as the thieves' market that has a large patronage, some of it coming from presumably respectable and honest citizens. That such a place should exist in any city appears almost incredible, yet it conducts business with the full knowledge of the police, and with that of every resident of the city. What is more, says the Chicago Chronicle, it is directly opposite one side of the national palace, the winter home of President Diaz, and is only one block from the offices of the city administration. And it is no small establishment, either, such as might be overlooked, for it occupies a court as large as a city block, and is crowded from morning to night with persons who are looking for bargains, and know that the place to find them is in the "thieves' market."

Naturally, the thieves themselves do not act as the salesmen for the stolen goods. They keep out of sight, and either dispose of the stolen goods for a lump sum to the hucksters or allow them to sell for them on commission. In either case the thief gets little, the dealer is content with a small profit and the goods, whose original owner is unknown, can be obtained for a tenth of their value.

To the visitors to Mexico the market is well worth a visit, even if scruples of conscience should prevent the purchase of what are admittedly stolen goods. There will be no trouble in finding the place.

Any policeman or any citizen will direct you to it. It is just east of the Zocalo — the park of the peons — and across the street from the south front of the national palace. Even with this knowledge you might pass but a high wall, such as surrounds many of the private homes. But at the end of the wall is a huge gate, large enough to drive a loaded truck through. Passing through this gate you enter the market. It is a big, open court, stone-paved and surrounded by buildings on three sides and by the wall on the fourth. Scattered over this, arranged in streets, are the booths, where the stolen goods are displayed for sale. These stalls are crude affairs. Usually they consist of a few boards, laid on supports which raise them two or three feet off the ground. Sometimes the goods are piled up carelessly on the stone pavement. But over each of them is the awning of coarse cotton cloth, supported on rough poles, which the Mexican huckster invariably has.

Crockery, tinware, cutlery and cooking utensils form one of the staples of the market. There is always a demand for these among the poor, and so the ratero gathers them in wherever and whenever he can, knowing that they will find a ready sale. And it is not only the poor who buy these things. One restaurant proprietor in the city whose place is one of the largest there, admitted that nearly all his table knives and forks as well as the pots and pans used in the kitchen were bought by him in the thieves' market. He is a regular visitor to the place, and not long ago he picked up a bargain in the edible line for his customers in the shape of a young pig, which some enterprising theif had gathered in.

How long the thieves' market will exist as it does now there is none to tell. It is an old institution, and no one thinks of interfering with it. Now and then a stranger, hearing of its nature for the first time, wonders how the city authorities can allow it to do business as it does. But the native Mexican and the acclimatized foreigner accept it as it is, and instead of objecting to it find it a very convenient place in which to pick up a bargain and save themselves considerable money.

New Papal Decoration.

In future all Roman Catholics who go to the Holy Land will have the right to wear a special decoration which has just been created by the pope. It contains a cross which resembles the cross of the holy sepulcher, to which is attached a small medal bearing the effigy of Leo XIII. and the words "Leo XIII. creavit anno MCM." On the cross itself there are also several other inscriptions. The pontifical decree says that this decoration is to be worn on the left side of the breast, and is to be held in position by means of a red and white silk ribbon. It also says that the decoration will be conferred on pilgrims by Father Giannini, guardian of the holy sepulcher, who has been authorized to do so by the sacred congregation of the propaganda. A diploma will be given with each decoration, and no applicant who is a Roman Catholic and who is really going to the Holy Land will be rejected. Pope Leo has ordered that no one is to wear this decoration in public except in his presence or on the occasion of solemn church festivals or while making a pilgrimage.—Chicago Tribune.

Done in Colors.

Clara—I was surprised to see so much paint on your face last night. I never saw anything like it in my life.

Maude—Well, if you can't afford to buy a mirror I'll lend you one.—Chicago Daily News.

The Other Woman's Hand

A Studied Offense and Its Penalty.

By GWENDOLEN OVERTON.

THE young man who would make for himself a name and fame goes east. By the same token, he who would hide those both betakes himself west.

Henesly went west because the girl he was in love with jilted him, out of hand, for a richer fellow, and he was very hard hit. He went west and was lost to sight, and the places where he had been knew him no more. If anyone chanced to mention him to the girl, she smiled the smile of pitying contempt, which is most women's tribute to the memory of a man they have treated abominably, and said: "Poor Dick." She was as mean as she was beautiful—which is not the fairy-tale formula; but she got her punishment in the end—which is.

This is how it came about:

Circumstances and physicians over which she had no control sent the rich man she had married—whose name was Kent—to spend a season on the Pacific coast. Kent's fancy lighted upon a seaport town, the only objects of interest in which were a break-water, in course of construction, and a spit of land upon which, tourists were assured, the skeletons of dead and gone pirates might yet be dug up. Neither these nor the adjoining shipping village, which only awaited the appropriation of a delinquent congress to become the harbor of the Pacific slope, offered to Mrs. Kent that variety and excitement which alone could make existence palatable to her. So she decided that if there were to be any such, they must come from within herself. Therefore, as the most unlikely thing that she could happen upon, she determined to try what it might be like to lead that which is known as a normal and healthy life—going to bed when the frogs began to sing in the dismal marshes about, and getting up with the sun. "I will take plenty of exercise," she explained to her husband; "I will row for a couple of hours before breakfast, on the lagoon, I think."

At daybreak she made her way across the strip of land that divided the lagoon and the sea. The hotels and cottages faced the sea, but the lagoon was the inner harbor, and there were upon it only wharves and rickety boathouses and fishermen's huts. It was not exactly a picturesque outlook, ordinarily, but the sunrise lights cast a sort of glamour over it now. Even the deep, loose sand was cool and tinted, and all traced over with fine cabalistic lines where the lizards had dragged their tails and no one had as yet stepped. Later on, it would be blistering hot and the marsh weeds would give out a choking smell; but this early, their stunted yellow and pink blossoms had a fresh and pungent scent.

She followed a path that led to a rough board shack, standing on stilts over the ebb-tide mud, where a sign advertised that boats were builded and for rent. When she stopped in the small doorway, her figure shut out most of the light, and she could barely discern the man who was moving about inside. He came toward her. Her back was to the low rays of the sun, so her face was in the blackness, and only her form was as glistening white as the Angel of Apocalypse.

Had he a row-boat, she asked; one not too heavy, and with oars of a moderate sweep? He was taciturn—a 'long-shore character, probably—for he did not even answer, only took a pair of spoon oars from their rack on the wall, and led the way out to the landing pier. She followed, running against strange shapes of wood, and stumbling over piles of lumber in the gloom. When they were out on the landing, he turned about and faced her suddenly. She was quite close behind him, and she gave a quick start back.

"I thought so," he said, steadily; "I thought the voice was like yours."

He had had that much warning, but she had had none at all, and it might have been a full two seconds before she got control of herself. Then the beauty of the situation and all its possibilities floated upon her suddenly, and she decided that her movement of impulse had been the best she could have made. So she followed it up. She shrank back into the doorway farther still. "Richard!" she said, cowering.

He stood resting upon the oars and scrutinizing her stolidly. He flattered himself that he was calm, not to say cool, but Mrs. Kent had a deeper than surface sight. She knew that he appeared cool for very much the same reason that a circular saw appears still when it is going fast enough. For herself and for the major part of mankind she was a very light scoffer at love; but she was no such fool as not to know that the heart which has truly loved and never forgets does have its existence in the flesh as well as in the lines of Erin's bard. So, summing up the situation with the aid of observations upon his character, made rather exhaustively some five years gone by, she came to the conclusion that, when she should be ready, it would take perhaps half an hour at the outside to have him at her feet as a tiger is at the feet of a trainer with a whip.

Henesly spoke at last. "You did your work pretty thoroughly while you were about it, you see," he said. "I went to the devil and to bed-rock in something less than a year. Then I married a Portuguese fisher girl when I was drunk, and she and I are living together in that shanty over there." He nodded in the direction of a little unpainted board shack some 50 yards off among the sands.

Mrs. Kent covered her face with her palms while she gained time to try and think of something as dramatic and concise. But her own appearance did not lend itself to narrative of the kind. She made a broken murmur, vague with hints of her own deep wretchedness, do instead. Henesly did not answer; only turned on his heel and led the way to the landing steps.

He was there to help her out when she came back. When she asked if she might use the boat next morning he told her yes. He explained it to himself as being proper pride, and that she should not fancy him afraid. After a day or two he altered the explanation to that it couldn't matter any way, and often that he did not try to explain. He let things go. At this point she lingered, sitting upon the keel of a yawl up for repairs, and talked about herself in hopeless vein. The ensuing steps were talk about himself. He responded fairly easily, and showed his drawings, his tools and the new gasoline engine band saw which was his especial pride. He taught her how to start the engine up, and to cut along traced lines through the hardest wood with the toothed band of steel.

It was inevitable, thereafter, that they should—having had herself and himself—come to themselves. And when that happened—it was about the tenth day of her "normal and healthy" life—much more did as well. So that when she started to go at last, and stood, beautiful, in the midst of all the roughness around, his head went completely, and he caught her hand against his lips and held it there. It was delight and bliss and temporary oblivion to him. It was the success of an experiment with her, and the point beyond which she did not mean to go, for her wisdom was of this world.

But to Maria, Henesly's Portuguese wife—who was under the boathouse, peering up through a knothole—it was rage and jealousy of a very savage kind. She had had her suspicions of the woman who came so often and for so long at break of day, and now she was verifying them. As for what they said, the two, she could neither hear nor understand all of that. Her English was limited. But she saw Henesly kissing the shapely hand, and there was nothing incomprehensible about that.

If Henesly had had the slightest idea of what Maria had seen, he would have been justified in being uneasy and in recalling the warning of one of those poets of his better days, anent mute natures which punish you in deeds. For Maria made no sign at all. She only waited her time. It came very soon. That same night Henesly was called upon to repair the hull of a launch, and he had to be up until long past midnight, working with lanterns, to take advantage of the tide. The consequence was that he overslept himself the next day. Maria, however, did not. She arose early and went out.

When Mrs. Kent came, humming a snatch of song that she knew would be calculated to awaken memories in Henesly, Maria was hidden behind a pile of lumber in the dark corner where the gasoline engine was, lying in wait, with a big knife up her sleeve. Mrs. Kent had no suspicion of that. She wandered around the boathouse, playing with various things, and finally, as the time grew long, she went over to the corner and amused herself by starting the band-saw up, as Henesly had shown her how to do. The gasoline engine began to spit and hiss, and the shiny contrivances, whose names she did not know, to clatter and turn. The saw-edged band itself began to whir so very fast that it seemed to be quite still. She held a scrap of wood against it and watched it cut smoothly in two without a jar.

When she looked up she could see Henesly hurry over along the path through the dunes from his shack. She stopped playing with the saw, and stood waiting for him, beginning the strain of song again. Her hand was lying close to the moving band. Maria raised herself up in the shadow and looked at it. It was so white, so small, so near the turning saw. It was the same hand that Henesly had kissed the day before.

The whir of the machinery was in Mrs. Kent's ears. The light of the low rays falling through the open door was in her eyes. She did not hear the boards behind her creak. She did not see that some one was coming nearer and nearer, with hot eyes watching that white and careless hand.

The engine was spitting and clattering unconcernedly when Henesly stepped into the place, and in the gloomy corner near it, something white and huddled was on the floor. It was a woman's figure fallen on the face and with arms thrown out. On the end of one arm there was a hand. On that of the other—there was none.

Mrs. Kent's tale, to Henesly and to her husband, was never quite clear. Perhaps she had moved; perhaps she had swayed; perhaps some one had pushed her arm against the saw. She had thought that some one had gone past her, just as she reeled and fell—and, besides, the hand, cut clean at the wrist, was gone.

And Maria, too, was gone. Henesly never saw her again. But that night as he sat alone in his cabin, his head dropped on his folded arms, a voice came in at the window above his head—came in with the croaking song of the frogs in the swamp outside and with the drifts of the thick, gray fog.

"Kess it," it said from vacancy, almost in his ear; "kess it, ef you like to, now." And something fell on the table near his forehead, with a thud. He groped and touched it. It was soft and cold. He felt it over. It was a small, stiff hand.—San Francisco Argonaut.

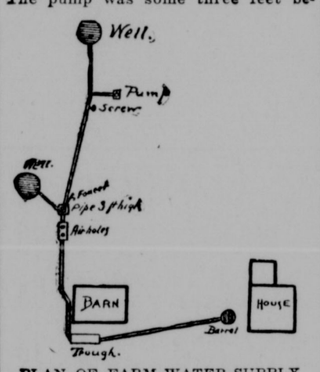
A rough pencil sketch made by Queen Victoria 35 years ago was sold in London the other day for $300.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

FARM WATER SUPPLY.

Unique System Adopted by a Man Who Could Not Afford a Windmill and Tank.

Father did not like to pump water for stock and could not afford a windmill and tank. He dug a well 200 yards from the house, and the bottom of the well was considerably higher than the house, and the house was 18 or 20 feet higher than the ground at the barn. A pipe was let into the well which nearly reached the bottom, the open end being protected by a wire screen, covered, so no mice or foreign substances could obstruct the flow of water. A trench was dug a few feet deep and the pipe laid from the well to a pump some 20 feet away. This pipe was connected with the perpendicular pipe in the well by a round elbow. The pump was some three feet below the top of the well, which was 18 feet deep. A short pipe, a foot long, was laid from the main pipe, and a round elbow connected it with a small iron pump. Near the pump was a screw in the short pipe to shut off or turn on the water from the well. On the main pipe, just beyond the place where the short pipe was joined, and below, was another screw.



PLAN OF FARM WATER SUPPLY.

Half-way down to the barn was a perpendicular pipe about three feet high and furnished with a faucet. Below this the pipe was fitted into a short plank board the size of the pipe, with one one-half-inch hole bored down into the passage and some three inches below a small hole, each fitted with a plug. These, with the faucet, were for the escape of air. When ready to start the water, the faucets at the house and water trough were closed. A large, strong barrel furnished a tank for the house. Then the two plugs were removed from the block of wood near the faucet, midway to the well, the faucet opened and they were ready. The screws at the pump must be in perfect order and not a bubble of air be allowed to enter the pipe anywhere but where indicated. The screw next the pump must be opened to let water flow from the well through the pump, and the screw in the main pipe just below the short pipe to the pump must be tightly closed.

To start, pour water in the pump, a half-bucketful, say, and hold the hand over the nose of the pipe and pump. In a short time the water will flow readily from the well, but let it come freely so the pipe is full, then lower the handle to the pump, close the screw at the foot in the short pipe, open quickly the screw in the main pipe and if your pipe is not laid too deep you will hear the water gurgling away down the hill to the barn. Now go to the block and faucet. The water is forcing out the air, and in a short time you will see it running through the block on its way down to the barn. Wait until the pipe is full, which you may know by the water overflowing from the air holes in the block. Then put in the large plug, then the small one, then close the faucet, and your syphon will draw water as long as there is any in the well, or a break in the pipe lets in air. When you do not want it to run, close the faucets at barrel and trough.

We have had water run for months without starting anew, but when water is low, as it often is in our long, rainless summer, we have to start it as often as it stops running. The pipe must, of course, be protected from frost, but that is no difficult matter here, where ice is seldom seen. We have had this well in operation since '84. The side well is connected by a screw and joint below the faucet. By starting the water when the pipes are full and the screw open to the side well, the water from the main well will back up there and fill it. Of course such things must be watched.—Mrs. L. R. Littlejohn, in Farm and Home.

Marketing the Milk Supply.

Over the seven electric roads centering at Cleveland, O., is a stroke of enterprise. The specially constructed milk cars pass barns, pick up the milk and deliver to the dealer at any point in the city. These same lines run parcel freight cars, and the amount of farm produce they carry daily is astonishing. With good roads, free rural mail delivery and 1,500 telephones in the farm homes of this dairy district, the economic changes and methods of living that have occurred are indeed wonderful—and the end is not yet.—Farm and Home.

Reflections of a Spinster.

To love is only to be unhappy.

Many men are courteous to all women save their wives.

Confidenitally, all business women would rather be married.

Matrimony is death to the ambition of nine women out of ten.

A husband's first deception leaves an ineffaceable scar on his wife's heart.

Other women's husbands make life bearable for many wives.

No husband ever lived who was at all times the apple of his wife's eye.—Vada Agnew, in Judge.

A Queer Fraternity.

I asked an old colored man to tell me something of his history. He said that he had been born in Virginia, and sold into Alabama in 1845. I asked him how many were sold at the same time. He replied: "There were five of us, myself and brother and three mules."—From Booker T. Washington's "Up from Slavery."

An Evolution.

"Do come home with me to dinner. I want you to meet my eccentric old uncle, John."

"Eccentric! It was only a year ago that you said he was an old boor."

"I know, but that was before his brother left him a fortune."—St. Louis Republic.

The Modern Elopement.

"Are you sure there will be no hitch in our elopement?" anxiously asked the beautiful maid.

"How could there be a hitch," assured the ardent lover, "when we are going in an automobile?"—Chicago Daily News.

Best for the Bowels.

No matter what ails you, headache to a cancer, you will never get well until your bowels are put right. Cascarets help nature, cure you without a gripe or pain, produce easy, natural movements, cost you just 10 cents to start getting your health back. Cascarets Candy Cathartic, the genuine, put up in metal boxes, every tablet has C. C. C. stamped on it. Beware of imitations.

Mrs. Wanterby—"Really, you must excuse the appearance of our house. It's so dirty and so upset." Mrs. Kauler—"Why, it seems to me to be just the same as ever."—Philadelphia Press.

You Can Get Allen's Foot-Ease FREE.

Write to-day to Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y., for a FREE sample of Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder. It cures sweating, damp, swollen, aching feet. Makes new or tight shoes easy. Always use it to Break in New Shoes. At all druggists and shoe stores; 25c.

Life's Little Frictions.

"Are you getting ready for winter?"

"Oh, yes; we've had our last scrap with the ice-man, and have begun to quarrel with the coal man."—Detroit Free Press.

To Cure a Cold in One Day

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund money if it fails to cure. 25c.

The average man's guardian angel hasn't time to take a vacation.—Chicago Daily News.

Piso's Cure for Consumption is an infallible medicine for coughs and colds.—N. W. Samuel, Ocean Grove, N. J., Feb. 17, 1900.

The old-fashioned genius thrived on compliments. The genius of to-day is judged by its cash balance.—Washington Post.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES do not stain the hands or spot the kettle (except green and purple.)

Vanity sometimes assumes the guise of modesty for a purpose.—Chicago Daily News.

Love is the perfume of life.—Ram's Horn.

A twisted conscience is a poor business guide.—Ram's Horn.

The uglier you are, the more amiable you should be.—Atchison Globe.

Morally you cannot look one way and walk another.—Ram's Horn.

The accumulation of money is merely a habit—that's all.—Chicago Daily News.

Indisposed people blame everything but their appetites.—Atchison Globe.

Betting on horse races reveals two classes of people—lucky ones and fools.—Indianapolis News.

To be sure, faint heart never won fair lady, but, on the other hand, discretion is seldom sued for breach of promise.—Indianapolis News.

A colored citizen entered a book store recently and asked for "Bunyan's Pullgram Politics."—Atlanta Constitution.

Johnny—"Ma, gimme some more pudding?" Hostess—"Sh! Wait! Do have some more pudding, Mr. Hoamley. O! do, I must insist." The Guest—"Well, then, just a mouthful." Johnny—"O! Ma, there won't be none left for me then."—Philadelphia Press.

Mr. Greene—"You said you never would look that woman in the face again, and yet you say she looked as spiteful as she could look. How do you account for that?" Mrs. Greene—"Why, you simpleton, I happened to turn around after she had passed, don't you see?"—Boston Transcript.

Faint Praise.—Towne—"I hear Jack Fligher was arrested for running his automobile at the rate of ten miles an hour." Browne—"Yes, and he's fighting mad about it." Towne—"Why, does he deny the charge?" Browne—"Yes, he considers it a gross libel upon the speed of his machine."—Philadelphia Press.

EVERY MAN WOMAN AND CHILD who suffers from Rheumatism

should use

St. Jacobs Oil

It Conquers Pain, acts like magic, and has no equal on earth as a pain killer.

Price, 25c and 50c.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS IN MEDICINE.

MRS. IDA L. ROSER

Grand-Niece of Ex-President James K. Polk, Writes to Mrs. Pinkham Saying:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been married for nearly two years, and so far have not been blessed with a child. I have, however, suffered with a complication of female troubles and painful menstruation, until very recently.

MRS. IDA L. ROSER.

"The value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was called to my attention by an intimate friend, whose life had simply been a torture with inflammation and ulceration, and a few bottles of your Compound cured her; she can hardly believe it herself to-day, she enjoys such blessed health. I took four bottles of your Compound and consider myself cured. I am once more in fine health and spirits; my domestic and official duties all seem easy now, for I feel so strong I can do three times what I used to do. You have a host of friends in Denver, and among the best count, Yours very gratefully.—MRS. IDA L. ROSER, 326 18th Ave., Denver, Col."—$5000 forfeit if above testimonial is not genuine.

If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free.

Meanest Man in Kansas.

Not long ago the wife of a western Kansas politician asked him to lay aside politics long enough one day to dig the potatoes in the garden. He agreed to do it. After digging for a few minutes he went into the house and said he had found a coin. He washed it off and it proved to be a silver quarter. He put it in his jeans and went back to work. Presently he went to the house again and said he had found another coin. He washed the dirt off it. It was a silver half dollar. He put it in his jeans. "I have worked pretty hard," said he to his wife. "I guess I'll take a short nap." When he awoke he found that his wife had dug all the rest of the potatoes. But she found no coins. It then dawned upon her that she had been "worked."—Kansas City Journal.

Board of Public "Imps."

"The abbreviation fiend is a nuisance and ought to be suppressed by law," said a man in the office of the board of public improvements, "but the limit was reached the other day when a letter came in here addressed: 'Mr. So-and-So, Board of Public Imps.'"

"Maybe that was neither a joke nor the result of carelessness," returned one of his associates. "Perhaps the man meant it, 'on the level.'"—N. Y. Times.

That Settled It.

Brinkerhoff—I thought you intended to become a piano virtuoso.

Beecroft—I did; but my barber says that I will be prematurely bald.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Neighbor—"Why do you jog the baby so hard when she's crying?" Proud Mother—"Sure, it makes her cry with such a beautiful tremmlyo."—Chicago Tribune.

ABSOLUTE SECURITY.

Genuine

Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Must Bear Signature of

Brent Good

See Fac-Simile Wrapper Below.

Very small and as easy to take as sugar.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

FOR HEADACHE.
FOR DIZZINESS.
FOR BILIOUSNESS.
FOR TORPID LIVER.
FOR CONSTIPATION.
FOR SALLOW SKIN.
FOR THE COMPLEXION

GENUINE MUST HAVE SIGNATURE.

Price 25 Cents | Purely Vegetable. Brent Good

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

Money-Money

FOR SALE—Small mortgages paying 6 per cent. Interest on irrigated farms in the Great Platte Valley of Nebraska, where crops never fail. Write for information. JAS. H. CASSELMAN, President of The Irrigators Bank, SCOTTSBLUFF, Nebraska.

READERS OF THIS PAPER DESIRING TO BUY ANYTHING ADVERTISED IN ITS COLUMNS SHOULD INSIST UPON HAVING WHAT THEY ASK FOR, REFUSING ALL SUBSTITUTES OR IMITATIONS.

RHEUMATISM Van Buren's Rheumatic Compound is the only positive cure. Past experience speaks for itself. Depot 85 S. California Ave., Chicago.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

THE CAN AND THE CANNON.

An Incident of the Civil War—Commodore Foote Delivers Short But Powerful Temperance Sermon.

At a farewell banquet given to a company of our soldier boys just before they left to fight in the Philippines this true incident was related by a veteran of the civil war, says a writer in the Christian Endeavor World.

"In 1862, when Commodore Foote with his gunboat fleet was on the Tennessee, I had in charge the provisioning of one of the boats, and it was my duty to see that necessary supplies were constantly on hand.

"At that time it was the general belief that the man behind the gun could not be expected to go successfully into a sea fight unless he had plenty of whisky to keep his courage up. So twice a day every seaman in the service received a regular whisky ration, furnished by the United States government. On our boat were 200 navy jacks, who every morning at 11 and every afternoon at five would line up on deck while the allowance was dealt out. The liquor stood in a huge tin can, and beside the can was a wooden frame in which were set 20 little measures called 'tots.' Each tot contained about three swallows. As the men filed slowly past the can, the tots were filled with a dipper, and each man drank his share.

"One noon our whisky gave out. More was ordered; but the time came for the evening ration, and still the expected supply had failed to arrive. This was trouble. The boys had been known to take short rations of beans and bacon without grumbling, but to do without whisky was another thing. 'Row over to the flagship and borrow whisky enough for the evening ration,' was the order given me. So with our great tin can in the stern of our boat and four men to row, I started for the the commodore's vessel, the Black Hawk.

"IT MEANS DEATH AND DESTRUCTION."

"As we came alongside her in the dusk, she loomed up high above our heads; and, glancing up, we found ourselves directly under the savage muzzle of a monster cannon. The load of whisky was readily granted, and soon our can was filled and lowered carefully into the boat. As I dropped to my place and gave the order to pull away, from the deck of the Black Hawk, high overhead came a voice: 'Young man!'

"I looked up. There, gazing down at me, with rebuke in his eyes, stood the commodore of the fleet, Commodore Foote. I saluted.

"'Young man, what have you got in that can?'

"'Whisky, sir.'

"'I thought so;' then, after a pause: 'Young man!'

"I saluted again.

"'Look up here.' I looked.

"'What do you see?'

"'A cannon, sir.'

"'What does that cannon mean?'

"Now this questioning made me decidedly uncomfortable, and I scarcely knew how to reply; but those eyes demanded an answer. 'It means death and destruction, sir,' I ventured.

"He bent down over the guard rail, and stretched out one forefinger toward the can in my boat as if he were taking aim at it; while with the other he pointed to the cannon's mouth directly over my head. 'Young man, this cannon here does mean death and destruction. It discharges a shot that weighs 64 pounds. Yet you, in that can of whisky there, are carrying more death and destruction to our own soldier boys than this big gun will ever carry to anybody.'

"I waited. 'That's all,' said the commodore; 'remember it.'

"I saluted again, and we rowed away. But I remembered it. I was only a boy then, but many a time in the years that followed I remembered the true words our commodore spoke that day. For I saw scores of our boys—young, strong and splendid fellows they were, clean in heart and life when they marched away to war—I saw them come home, untouched by ball or bullet, yet so scarred in soul and cursed in character that their after lives were more sorrowful than were the early deaths of their young comrades who died on the battlefield. Many of these had taken their first taste of liquor from the tots furnished and filled by our government.

"It was a fearful wrong that this danger should constantly be thrust upon our young soldiers by the government they risked their lives to save. This wrong, Commodore Foote set himself to attack, for he was a moral hero as well as a hero of war. In 1863 his efforts and the efforts of other brave souls prevailed, and the national congress abolished the whisky ration in the United States navy.

"Some dangers no true soldier ever tries to escape. You will face the fighting bravely, I know, and the fever, too, if you must, and, if death will meet death as a soldier should. You will never falter in the face of the cannon. Yet one danger you will meet, that you may well dread and avoid. The danger that lies in the can and the canteen—to shun this is not cowardice, but rather courage, moral courage, and moral courage is a more splendid quality in any man than is even that soldierly courage which is the record of the American soldier."

ARSENIC IN BEER.

Discovery in England Shows That Alcohol Is Very Serious and Obscure Source of Disease.

A remarkable revelation of the most serious injuries occurring in beer-drinkers has come to light in the neighborhood of Manchester, England, in the past two years. As far back as 1884 attention was called to the numerous cases of alcoholic paralysis in this vicinity. A few years after a noted expert described similar cases which seemed to be very numerous in that section. From that time on these peculiar cases have increased, until last year an examination was made and it was found that in the neighborhood of Manchester and the mill districts about, alcoholic paralysis was almost an epidemic. Three hundred cases were noticed at Manchester, and nearly five per cent. of all the cases seen in the hospitals in this region, and extending to Liverpool, and even to London, showed this kind of palsy. A careful inquiry revealed the fact that nearly all these victims were beer-drinkers. An analysis of the beer showed the presence of arsenic in sufficient quantity to account for this peculiar palsy. Experts visited breweries and obtained specimens of beer, finding arsenic in nearly every instance.

More careful examination showed that sulphuric acid entered into the manufacture of glucose used in the beer. This acid was made from iron pyrites, and contained quantities of arsenic. It was used on account of its cheapness, and in large quantities by many of the leading brewers. The symptoms following corresponded to arsenic poisoning, and many of the cases died. Others suffered from palsies and diseases of the nervous system which practically incapacitated them for all work in the future. It was found that a large number of brewers used in their beer this cheap glucose containing arsenic, and while the quantity was very small the accumulated effect in persons who drank large quantities of beer was apparent in very serious and obscure diseases of the nerves of motion. Over 500 cases have been noted, and this probably does not include more than a small part of the actual number. Parliament appointed a royal commission on arsenical poisoning in beer, and evidence is now being taken. Of course, the brewers were ignorant of the injury which followed from their beer, and were anxious to assist all efforts to find out the cause and to remove it. Other sections of England have become alarmed, and a very general inquiry is being made as to the cause of this new disease wherever it is noticed. It is found that alcohol is responsible for a great many of these palsies.

The forms of paralysis, from both alcohol and beer, called neurites, are the same, and are inflammations of the nerves of the extremities. A great deal of interest has been created in England, and it is confidently asserted that the disease is due largely to beer poisoned with arsenic, alcohol and mineral waters where carbonic acid is used to make them effervescing. This disease is well known in this country, but is not very common. Whether the brewers use glucose prepared from sulphuric acid containing arsenic is not known, but neurites, or palsies of the extremities, among beer and alcohol drinkers, can be found in many sections.

The common term describing these cases is "rheumatism." Persons who have used beer and spirits to excess call these nerve defects "rheumatic." It is probable that long before these nerve diseases appear the disorders of the brain occur which attract attention, and the other symptoms are supposed to follow. In reality the breaking down of the brain is the result of the obscure inflammation of the nerves rather than otherwise. The stiffness of the lower extremities and difficulty of walking noticed among inebriates is no doubt a very common symptom of this distinct affection, which may not go on to extreme stages.

The conclusion from this very startling discovery is evident, that alcohol in any form is a very serious and obscure source of disease, and that in the future we shall be able to trace many diseases to this source that are now unrecognized. Beer used in large quantities and continuously is a very serious destructive agent, not in its intimate effects but in its cumulative action. Beer drinking in England has received a very severe blow with this revelation, and it is to be hoped that its influence may extend to this country and break up much of the fascination which this drink has in the mind of many persons who do not use strong spirits.—T. D. Crothers, in Union Signal.

He who cannot rule his own appetite is unfitted to run his neighbor's affairs.—Ram's Horn.

A HARD WATER YARN.

Absalom Nailed His Boat to It to Keep from Floating Away—So He Said.

"I find it pretty hard work," I said, as I stepped out of the flat-bottomed boat, "to row this thing along, although it is not very heavy."

"It ain't the boat," replied the owner, from whom I had hired it; "it is the water what makes it. You see, some water's thicker'n others, an' the thicker it is the harder it is to pull through it. Now, I've seed water out onto a certing western lake what was so thick an' heavy sometimes that wild ducks what lit onto it broke their legs tryin' to swim. They couldn't get out of it to save their lives, an' whenever we seed them in this fix we'd go an' grab them by the heads an' pry them out with a oar."

"That must have been pretty thick, hard water," I ventured to remark while the old man was clearing his throat, relates a writer in Judge.

"Thick!" he said; "thick! Well, I should say it was thick. Why, you could pick up a handful of it an' throw it up like a ball an' ketch it comin' down. Why, I've seed fishes a-layin' on top of it, tryin' to take a sun bath, an' just when they was a-sunnin' theirselves nice an' warm something would startle them, an' they'd have to burrer like rabbits to get down under it. I have often stood at the stern of the boat an' dug them up while they was a-tryin' to escape."

"What! dig up water like dirt?" I asked, in dismay.

"Yes, dig up water like dirt," he persisted. "You could dig post holes in that water, an' the holes would stay there long enough to give you a show to build a dock. I remember once when I was out in my flat-bottomed boat a hard wind came up, an' it was so hard that it began to make the boat move along, an' I wanted her to stand still. I hadn't no anchor with me, so what do you think I did?"

"I can't imagine," I replied.

"Of course you can't, so I'll tell you. I took a big nail out of my pocket an' drove it down through the bottom of the boat right about the middle. Yes, sir; I nailed that boat right down to the water, an' the first thing I knew the wind began a-blowin' her around, fer she was on a pivot. Round an' round I went, an' never moved a inch forward or backward, until I got so tired of it that I had to pull up the nail an' go ahead. While I was a-rattlin' around, a fish that I had pulled out of the water with a pair of tongs jumped out of the boat and landed on his tail, an' stood in that there position a-gaspin' fer wind. By a most awful effort he flopped his tail out an' turned a somersault, and landed right onto his tail again. Then, somehow or other, instead of gettin' out of breath, he got his second wind, which is mighty uncommon fer a fish, fer I never knowed one to get it before; an' he ran somersaultin' away until the wind sort of flopped a wave over onto him, so's he could swim. Then the wind got a-blowin' higher an' higher an' harder an' harder, an' all that blamed thick, tough water was blowed up into high waves. Just before it got a-blowin' so hard a flock of wild ducks lit on the water what was bein' blowed into waves of all sizes. The next mornin', when I went out, there wasn't no wind anywheres around; but what do you think? The waves was all there, just as solid as if the lake had been plowed up an' was all full of furrers; an' right along on top of the highest one them wild ducks was a-sittin' like a lot of clothespins, laughin' fit to kill theirselves, but stationary an' unable to get off, an' I just sent my water spaniel out after them—"

"How in the world could he swim when the water was so thick and solid?" I asked.

"Swim, swim?" repeated the old man, contemptuously. "He didn't swim at all—he ran along on the water, an' he had to stick his claws in to keep hisself from slippin', an' just then—"

"Absalom!" shrieked a feminine voice from within the shanty, "won't you never get through talkin' an' split them kindlin's?"

And Absalom excused himself, and I wandered back to the hotel to marvel at the wonders of the hard, thick water on which Absalom had also told me people used to spread the weekly wash to dry.

"Jack Harkaway" Dies.

"Jack Harkaway" (Mr. Bracebridge Hemyng), has just died in England. Twenty years ago "Jack Harkaway" was the hero of the boy world of the United States. "Jack Harkaway" first appeared in the world of fiction in 1867, the early youth of the wonderful boy being chronicled in a weekly paper called the "Boys of England." "Jack Harkaway's School Days" was the most widely circulated of the series, the sale reaching millions. Seventeen "Harkaway" books have been published, and Mr. Hemyng, who was a barrister, was the author of all but two or three of them. They carried Jack through Oxford and then round the world, recording his wonderful adventures in America, Cuba, China, Greece, Australia and the Transvaal. "Jack Harkaway" did not greatly enrich his creator. Mr. Hemyng usually sold his copyrights outright for a by no means extravagant sum.—Chicago Tribune.

Big Orders for Steel Rails.

According to the New York Tribune, orders for 1,300,000 tons of steel rails for delivery in 1902 have been placed with the various manufacturers, to which must be added 350,000 tons held over from this year's orders, making the total amount actually on the books 1,650,000 tons. The aggregate orders for next year, it is estimated, will be about 2,800,000 tons. The output of rails in 1900 was 2,383,650 tons. It is understood that the price is at present being maintained at $28 a ton.

NAVIGATOR OF THE AIR.

Wonderful Feats of M. Santos-Dumont in His Efforts to Perfect a Steerable Airship.

An authorized article on the Brazilian aeronaut, M. Santos-Dumont, appears in the Century from the pen of Sterling Heilig:

This young Brazilian inventor works for the love of the thing, not for lucre. He has never felt moved to apply for a single patent. He is a son of the "coffee king" of Brazil, the proprietor of the Santos-Dumont plantations of Sao Paulo, the friend of the former Emperor Dom Pedro and the benefactor and adviser of whole populations. Santos-Dumont, the father, although a Brazilian by birth and nationality, was French by descent, and had his technical education at the Ecole Centrale (arts and industries) in Paris. Thanks to his education, he was the first to apply scientific methods to Brazilian coffee-culture, so that his plantations became the most flourishing in the land, having 4,000,000 coffee-plants, occupying 9,000 laborers, comprising towns, manufactories, docks and steamships, and served by 146 miles of private railroads. It was on these railroads that the young Santos-Dumont, before he was 12 years of age, drove locomotive-engines for his pleasure, and developed the taste for mechanics and invention which saved him, coming young and rich to Paris, from a life of mere sporting leisure. Until 18 years of age, when he completed his education at the University of Rio de Janeiro, he remained in Brazil, always returning in vacation-time to the wild back-country of the plantation, where he became a mighty hunter, killing wild pigs and small tigers by preference, and great snakes out of a sense of duty.

Arriving in Europe in 1891, he made a tourist trip, and ascended Mont Blanc. A part of 1891 and 1892 he spent between London and Brighton, perfecting his English, which he now speaks as well and as often as French; but he always returned to Paris, where in 1892 he was already driving automobiles. In 1894 he made a short trip to the United States, visiting New York, Chicago and Boston. He did not begin ballooning until 1897, in the summer of which year he made his first ascent in company with the late M. Machuron. In the same year he made 20 other ascensions, a number of them unaccompanied, and became a reliable pilot of spherical balloons. He has, indeed, an ideal figure for the sport, uniting remarkable strength, agility and coolness to his jockey's weight of scarcely 100 pounds. For this reason he was able to lower the volume of the "Brazil," his first spherical balloon, to the unusual minimum of 113 cubic meters. The little "Brazil" was always filled with hydrogen, and after each ascension he never failed to bring it back with him in his valise.

This Brazilian has neither the structure, the complexion nor the exuberant gestures of the men of his country. He is pale, cold and phlegmatic, even, if the words may be applied to one so active. In his moments of greatest enthusiasm and of most lively disappointment he is always the same; and he is as free from affectation as a child. He has a weakness for driving dog-cart tandems, and — something which has had a vital influence over his career as a balloonist—he has been an intrepid automobile chauffeur from the first.

He began with a Peugot roadster of 2½ horse-power. He has since owned and driven half a dozen automobiles of continually increasing speed and power, his longest trip without stop being taken in 1898, between Nice and Paris, and accomplished with a six horse-power Panhard in 54 hours. Latterly he has abandoned petroleum in favor of electricity, in a dainty light-running American buggy manufactured in Chicago. It serves him, he says, better than the more troublesome teuf-teuf for his morning spin through the Bois and his afternoon errands from the balloon-maker's at Vaugirard to his apartment in the Avenue des Champs-Elysee, and from the Aero club's ground at St. Cloud to the Automobile club in the Place de la Concorde. "I was once enamoured of petroleum automobiles, because of their freedom," he explains. "You can buy the essence everywhere; and so, at a moment's notice, one is at liberty to start off for Rome or St. Petersburg. But when I discovered that I did not want to go to Rome or St. Petersburg, but only to take short trips about Paris, I went in for the electric buggy.

"I got my first idea of putting an automobile motor under a cigar-shaped balloon filled with hydrogen gas while returning from the Paris-Amsterdam automobile race in 1897," he said, when he began giving me this interview. "From the beginning everybody was against the idea. I was told that an explosive gas-engine would ignite the hydrogen in the balloon above it, and that the resulting explosion would end the experiment with my life. Lachambre, my balloon constructor, went to work without enthusiasm. So far from others 'convincing me that their notions were worth taking up,' as has been said, I met with nothing but discouragment."

Fixing the Limit.

He (rather diffident)—Er—now that we are engaged, I suppose you—er—won't object to my kissing you.

She (much less so)—Certainly not; help yourself. And when mamma comes in I want you to kiss her also.

He—S—say, let's b—break the engagement!—Chicago Daily News.

Lots to Learn.

Kind Lady—How did you like your dinner?

Handout Hank—Well, de chicken wuz cold an' dere wuz no frostin' on de cake, but den I reckons youse hain't bin married long, an' has got lots ter lern.—Ohio State Journal.

FEMININE FINERY.

Some of the New Trimmings for Early Winter Costumes—The Latest in Hats.

Navy blue is used more than it has been recently, and a soft yet bright red with tints of yellow in it is attractive.

New trimmings are many. Irish lace is stylishly acceptable for any and every place where it can possibly be used, not only on gowns, but hats and fur garments as well.

Silk escurial lace is another revival and appears as dress trimming in the colors of the materials upon which it is used. It looks very well on tan and brown, and the latter is very fashionable from pale biscuit to dark brown, says a fashion authority.

A new and handsome trimming employed chiefly for evening gowns consists of pompadour wreaths of roses. Then those who like spangles may indulge their fancy to the extent of wearing spangled hosiery and gloves, for novelties in this line have made their appearance, and there are almost countless more sensible ways of using them.

Two-toned colors appear in novelty ribbons, sage green on one side and turquoise on the other, representing one combination, black and red another. To the polka dot and coin velvet ribbons have now been added a two-toned variety, the satin lining being in lighter tint than the velvet. Cashmere and Persian colored ribbons are also used very extensively.

Pretty shirt waists in shepherd's plaid are seen with silk collar and cuffs, and there are very dainty effects in gray and white, gray and black and red and white. Shirt waists of handsome striped Louisine silk are also seen, and usually show the delicate colors, such as pink and green, pale blue, green and white, or red, white and blue. They are made perfectly plain, with a few gathers at the neck in front, and fasten with hooks and eyes.

Taffeta and velvet will be used for many of the new long coats this winter, and will be made warm by lamb's wool interlining. Black and the dark, rich shades of red, blue and green will be the colors employed. A handsome taffeta cloak seen recently was of the deep ruddy tint that was once called wine color, with kimono collar and cuffs of black satin.

Many of the gowns by fashionable dressmakers have waists that open in the back and are perfectly straight in front, with a point. The skirt in many instances is put on the belt, with the back fullness confined in small box plaits flowing away from the waist. Art nouveau embroidery is frequently used and chenille also in delicate tints is applied in embordered designs.

The popular tailored hat is charming for all ordinary wear, and is generally made of camel's-hair felt, draped over a wire frame, and is flat and broad in effect. The hat is seldom worn just as made, for the wearer bends it to suit her particular type of face and style of hairdressing. Bending does not hurt it in the least. It is made with that in view. Velvet is much used for binding these hats, as well as for loops and bows.

Cranberry Pudding.

Wash a quart of cranberries, place in a two-quart granite ware saucepan with a pint of water, stew until tender, then add sugar to taste. Take a little more than a half-pound of flour, add to this a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder and a tablespoonful of sugar, mix well together while dry, then add sufficient milk or cream to make a stiff batter, and with this cover the boiling cranberries. Put on the lid of the saucepan and let the pudding cook briskly until the crust is done. Any acid fruits, such as plums, gooseberries, currants or stewed rhubarb, can be used when cranberries are out of season. One of my bachelor girl friends calls this pudding a "dream." It is equally good baked.—Good Housekeeping.

Hash.

Of all culinary terms the word hash has come to have about as much opprobrium attached to it as any. Nevertheless, hash itself remains popular, with reason, for when properly made it is one of the best of dishes. As generally used the word indicates a mixture of cold corned beef and cold boiled potatoes cooked together, and the opprobrium comes in because of the fact that the sinewy bits of meat are those that fall to the hash. But hash can be varied. It can be made of various kinds of meat and of various sorts of vegetables; it can be stewed or fried, it can be served with eggs or without. It can be improved with tomato sauce.—Washington Star.

A Delicious Confection.

When peaches are extremely scarce and one wishes to utilize every bit possible of them, a delicicus confection may be prepared from the skins; for every quart of parings allow one cupful of water; cook until very soft, then press gently through a fine sieve, extracting every bit of the pulp. Allow one pound of sugar for every pint of this thick juice, put all together over the fire, and simmer until very thick.—Ladies' World, New York.

A Clove in the Olive Oil.

Put a clove of garlic in the bottle of olive oil when it comes from the grocer, and see what a palatable flavor it will impart. It should only remain about 24 hours, which will be sufficient time to do its work.—N. Y. Post.

Telegrams in New Zealand.

A telegram of 12 words is sent to any part of New Zealand by simply affixing to it a 6d stamp—12 cents.—N. Y. Sun.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

The New Zealand government is raising the wages of its railway employes to the extent of $100,000.

What is said to be the first factory for the manufacture of oxalic acid is being built near Cheboygan, Mich.

In the year 620 the mulberry tree was first cultivated in Greece and the Levant for the benefit of the silk worms.

The nest of the wasp shows a degree of engineering skill and adaptation of means to end which rival the same talents of the bee.

Exports of steel rails for the first eight months of 1901, though less by 6,995 tons than in 1900, was 90,244 tons greater than for the period in 1899.

Irrigation has converted the South American desert valleys near the city of Mendoza into some of the most productive vineyards in the world.

The broom must go! A French hygienic journal states that in Tunis the mortality from tuberculosis is 11.3 per 1,000 among the Arabs, and only 0.75 per 1,000 among the Jews, who lead pretty much the same life as the Arabs, except that they daily clean all their furniture with moist cloths, and never stir up the germinfected dust with brooms.

The skunk first appears in history in the year 1636, when he was described in Theodat's History of Canada. He had been a long time on the earth before that time, however, for there are species of fossil skunks. The skunks of the genus Chinca range over the greater part of North America and as far south as Mexico. Other skunks are found in Central and South America.

PRAYERS FOR A STIPEND.

French Abbe Who Has Made a Town Prosperous by a Novel Traffic.

There is a small village in the department of the Sarthe, in France, that has arisen from poverty to affluence by means of prayer furnished on demand for a consideration. The cure of the village, a certain Abbe Buguet, was as poor as his flock. But he was not content to stay that way and, being a man of imagination, he looked around for some means by which he could better the condition of his people and incidentally his own. He finally hit upon an idea, says a London exchange. He learned to set type, bought a secondhand hand press and set up, printed and published a leaflet in which he discoursed upon the efficacy of prayer. Then he made a business proposition to his flock. He would pray for them, for their children and for their dead for an annual subscription of one sou. In other words, he would take charge of all their prayers for one sou a year. The idea appealed to his parishioners, and all of them subscribed. With the little sums thus acquired he printed more leaflets and distributed them throughout the neighboring country and every leaflet seemed to bring in a new subscriber.

To-day he has many thousands of subscribers who live in all parts of the world, and Montligeon, which was once little more than a collection of hovels, is a prosperous town. It has a church that is a cathedral. It has wide streets lighted by electric lights, a post office, waterworks and cab service. And in the center of the town is a large white building where Abbe Buguet, with eight almoners, 15 interpreters, 20 secretaries and a crowd of clerks, proceeds with his work of supplying prayers. More than 1,500 letters come each day, each of them containing at least the required sou, and most of them having a much larger sum. A part of these letters ask for prayers and these are divided among various needy priests in the neighborhood, who thus are able to add considerable to their meager incomes. All the voluntary offerings go into the general treasury and are used for the benefit of the town and the valley in which it is situated. The mayor of the town is the cashier and the principal councilors are the secretaries or chief accountants and Abbe Buguet is manager of all. It is the most profitable prayer factory in the world.

Hit by the Recoil.

Lawyer (examining accused pickpocket, testifying in his own behalf)—You deny this special charge, and yet admit that you have committed similar offenses. Perhaps you'll be good enough to tell the court just how long you've been in this business?

Pickpocket (nonchalantly)—Oh, not more than two or three months.

Lawyer—Only two or three months, eh? How do you expect the court to believe that statement in view of the fact that it has had police testimony to the effect that you are an expert?

Pickpocket (smilingly)—Oh, well, you must remember that I had the benefit of a three years' previous practice in your profession.—Richmond Dispatch.

Building in Stockholm, Sweden.

Only two-thirds of the area of the lot can be covered in Stockholm, Sweden, except on street corners, where three-fourths is allowed. The remainder of the lot must be reserved for courts, for light and ventilation. All chimney flues must be 12 or 15 inches and must be swept once a month from October to April by official chimney sweepers.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Woman-Like.

Tess—She says she can't understand why people call him a flatterer.

Jess—She does, eh?

"Yes; I guess it's because he never said anything flattering to her."

"More likely he did say something flattering and she's trying to make herself believe he was in earnest."—Philadelphia Press.

THE REPUBLICAN.

ENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1901.

THE ELECTION SHOULD BE CONTESTED.

The question of expense should not in any way deter the Republican managers from making a contest in every county in Maryland where proof of fraud in the late election can be obtained. The issue at stake is not one of office or the emoluments of office. It is the integrity of elections that is challenged, and every voter should be informed whether or not it is true that he has been cheated at the polls. The evidences of fraud already disclosed show that the election was a farce in every county. Witnesses are ready and willing to testify under oath that election crimes were resorted to on a large scale. Fradulent nominating petitions were filed in many counties of the State by the Democratic managers before the Board of Supervisors of Elections to have the names of bogus Independent Republican candidates printed upon the official ballot to mislead voters and defeat the right of suffrage. In every section of the State the evidence of fraud is overwhelming, and the presumption is that it was resorted to on such a large scale because it was necessary to save the Democratic machine ticket from ignominious defeat. The presumptions of fraud are strong enough to warrant a contest in every county of the State, and will put on record the testimony of all the witnesses to fraud and subject all crooked election officials, their aiders and abettors, to a vigorous cross examination. The value of such a contest would not be the final issue as to the office contested, but the light it would throw on elections as conducted by the Democratic machine in this State under the new election law, and the evidence that would be brought out as a basis for the prosecution of guilty election officers. An autopsy is not valueless because it does not bring the dead to life. If it throws light on the cause of death it may save other lives, and that is its justification. If fraudulent elections are suffered to go on in Worcester county and State of Maryland indefinitely, and are not contested because a contest would be tedious and expensive, that means a complete surrender. Fraud triumphs because its victims lack the pluck, energy and persistence necessary to resist and expose it. If the cost was on the other foot and the Democratic machine was worsted under a suspicion of fraud, or criminal violat ion of the election law, it would contest the result as a contest could be maintained rather than yield a single point. The question is, Does the Democratic machine monopolize the energy and force necessary to the successful conduct of a political campaign in the State of Maryland.?

IN LOOKING over the political field ten days after the recent elections Maryland Republicans have much to be proud of.

1. They have made a vigorous and earnest fight for clean politics and gaod government.

2. Against the most astute and professional political managers to be found in this or any other State.

3. Who chose their own battle-ground and plan of campaign by the work of the late extra session and their handling of the ballots and elections

3. Whereby they practically disfranchised over 20,000 voters

5. And carried out all their work as though they lacked nothing in the sinews of war.

6. In spite of these advantages on the part of the Democrats, they lost one of their State ticket and elected their Comptroller by only five hundred votes,

7. And narrowly carried the General Assembly.

If anyone had ventured the opinion before the election that the Republicans would have any show at all with the ballots of 20,000 voters thrown out, he would have been thought "wild," yet this is what has occurred, and all in a campaign reinforced largely by an endeavor to arouse race prejudice.

This is indeed encouraging, and has been largely aided by the prudent and conservative conduct of the Republicans when in power. It means a vigorous opposition party which should be desired by all good citizens no matter what their party affiliations.—Bel Air Times.

IT IS AMUSING to read some of the Democratic editorials written anent the great triumph (?) of Gorman over in Maryland. If our Democratic contemporaries were to tell but half the truth about it they would hang their heads in shame and one couldn't get them to write Gorman's name on a block of ice over a furnace. It takes nerve to screw courage up to the sticking point in this case, but our brethern are equal to the occasion, and they must needs howl fraud to drown out the voices of indignant adherents of both polotical parties in Maryland who were disfranchised by Gorman's obnoxious bill. Here is a sample howl from the Wheeling Register:

The Republican gang is trying to steal the Democratic legislative victory in Maryland. That trick was done in West Virginia once, but the chances are that Gorman will not allow his pocket to be picked.

Judging from the statement made by Senator McComas, in Baltimore, Monday, and which may be found in another column of this paper, Gorman will have no occasion to "allow his pocket to be picked." Outraged justice is demanding the punishment of election officers who perpetrated the most flagrant frauds, and until those matters are settled by the courts Gorman's pockets are not so full as to attract attention. Our readers know all about the Register's reference to West Virginia, and comment on that statement would be superfluous.—Grafton Sentinal.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Warren Choate, Esq., proprietor of Hotel Chautauqua, spent last Thursday in the Park, returning to Washington City on 46.

Our new railroad time table is "a daisy." The kind that keeps a person at home unless they want to walk.

The Garrett Water & Light Co. will be ready to furnish the citizens of the Park with electric light next season. The company has secured the "right of way" through the streets and drives of the Park, as well as the contract to light up the streets and public buildings for a term of three years from next June. The company is prohibited from suspending wires on the trees. The plant will be centrally located for its business, on the railroad switch leading to the Association ice house. The grant of an acre of ground provides ample room for all the purposes of the company. The sale of stock will now be pushed, and work begin in earnest in early spring.

The western portion of the Park will be sewered as soon as the sewer pipe can be obtained. Secretary Rudisill is receiving bids for first class sewer pipe.

The grading of Philadelphia avenue will make it one of the most inviting drives in the Park, and greatly improve the property on K street. The removal of the old bridge, which had served its day and generation, will be appreciated by the public.

Mr. Rudisill expects to make a sidewalk from the corner of G street to Hotel Dennett, via the Methodist church, thence north on H street to Mountain View Home, thence to Hotel Dennett lands. Screenings from the Rowlesburg stone crusher will be used in constructing the walk.

Half an hundred families are spending the winter in this delightful winter resort. The past week seal skin coats, ear mufflers, etc., were necessary for outdoor comfort, and indoors rousing fires were kept up, and yet it was enjoyable weather.

Pheasants and rabbits are plentiful and bring a good price. The woods have been full of men and boys with guns.

The new addition to Hotel Chautauqua is ready for the plasterers. A car of "patent plaster" was unloaded Monday. Contractor Brown has certainly pushed the work, and is doing a good job.

At least $15,000 is being expended on new building and enlargments, and a larger sum will be expended next spring for the same purpose.

At this early date the indications for a successful summer are very flattering. Arrangements for a great camp meeting are being made by those having charge of the camp meeting. Dr. Davidson is at work on the Chautauqua program.

Bloodhounds to Hunt Murderer.

Bloodhounds will be used to run down the murderer of John Miller, aged citizen who was found Saturday night on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad near Keedysville, ten miles south of Hagerstown, with a bullet hole through his brain. They reached Hagerstown yesterday evening from Suffolk, Va. Mr. Miller usually carried a large sum of money, but when found there was not a cent in his pockets.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in Chicago

Hisgen Bros., the popular South Side druggists, corner 69th street and Wentworth avenue, say: "We sell a great deal of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and find that it gives the most satisfactory results, especially among children for severe colds and croup." For sale by all dealers.

TO ABOLISH TRICK BALLOTS.

Democratic Managers in Maryland Will Oppose The Policy in Future.

BALTIMORE, MD., Nov. 18.—Democratic managers want no more to do with trick ballots, says the Baltimore correspondent of the Philadelphia Record, (Dem.).

Those issued by the election supervisors in Baltimore and the central and western Maryland counties cost the party dear in the recent campaign. It caused a loss of four Democratic delegates in the Second legislative district in Baltimore, and other losses would be hard to estimate.

There is among Democrats revulsion of feeling against the practice of such methods as those in Southern Maryland and in Talbot aod Somerset counties.

The control of the House of Delegates by the Democrats is due to the election law which they passed. But for this law they would not have captured St. Mary's county, three votes in Prince George's, two in Caroline, one in Somerset, two in Talbot and four in Anne Arundel.

The Republicans are determined to make a bitter fight against this law. They say that under it 20,000 ballots were thrown out. Senator Putzel will lead the fight for repeal. The Democratic managers, however, have determined that the law shall not be repealed, but they will meet the Republicans half-way.

Isaac Lobe Straus, member of the House from Baltimore, and a candidate for Speaker and Senator Olin Bryan are drawing up amendments for the law and also for a new and fair law to govern the primaries. In the general election law it is intended to continue to araange the names of candidates alphabetically with their politics attached. The party emblem will not be restored.

Stringent provision will be made against the use of such ballots as were lately employed in some of the counties of Southern Maryland.

The law will prescribe that all the ballots in use throughout the state and in Baltimore city shall be printed in uniform type, with a uniform arrangement of names of candidates and party designation, and the type to be used will be required to be of a plain and bold sort.

The ballot will contain above each group of candidates specific directions as to the number of candidates to be voted for. It was the absence of this latter direction on the ballot at the late election that caused hundreds of men to vote for more candidates for the legislature than they should and thus lose their votes.

The fight for presiding officers of the two Houses of the Legislature will soon begin. Should President John Hubner not be a candidate for reelection as president of the Senate, Col. Spencer C. Jones or William B. Peter, of Howard county, will be the principal candidates with the chances in favor of the latter.

So far Isaac Lobe Straus, of Baltimore city, is the leading candidate for speaker of the House. Noble L. Mitchell, of Harford; Peter J. Campbell, of Baltimore city, and John G. Rogers, of Howard county, are also mentioned. Should Senator Peter be made president of the Senate, Rogers will be out of the race for speaker as the two presiding officers would not be selected from the same county.

The Democratic managers say they do not intend to do anything radical during the coming session of the Legislature, but on the inside there is a plan being considered to punish Mayor Hayes for sulking in the campaign.

Some of the managers say he did nothing to help Mr. Gorman and ignored the regular party organization.

If they find sentiment among the Democrats in the general assembly favorable to the scheme the managers propose to lop off six months of Mayor Hayes' term by changing the time of the municipal election from May to November, to go into effect next November. Hayes' term of four years does not expire until May, 1903.

It is believed, however, that Mr. Gorman and Chairman Vandiver, of the state committee, will oppose the plan. They would rather heal party differences than create others.

The Democrats fully realize that they are up against the independent sentiment in the city and state. They have no desire to antagonize this sentiment, knowing by experience that the independent vote holds the balance of power in the state. It is claimed, however, that not many of the independents are favorable toward Hayes.

Died.

BOWMAN.—At his home on the Northwestern turnpike a few miles south of Oakland, after an illness of a week or two of typhoid fever, John C. Bowman, aged about forty-eight years. Mr. Bowman was a prominent farmer and a believer in Christian Science, refusing to have the services of a physician in his illness. His funeral took place Monday, the interment being made at the Red House church. Rev. Fike conducted a short service at the house and also at the grave.

WARRING ON DISEASE.

State Board Of Health Aims To Protect School Children.

At a recent meeting of the Maryland State Board of Health the following rules were promulgated, being designed to aid the board in securing prompt information about cases of an infectious or contagious character, especially among school children. The rules, printed below, are published as a guide for our readers who are parents and having children attending the public schools of the county:

Every child absent from school four days on account of sickness must on returning to school present to the teacher the signed certificate of a practicing physician that such child has not been affected with any infectious or contagious disease.

No child from a house in which scarlet fever is present shall attend a public school until after the disease has disappeared, the house has been disinfected, all clothing worn during any period of the disease has been destroyed or disinfected and written notice has been given to the teacher or to the School Board that these conditions have been complied with.

Children who have suffered an attack of scarlet fever shall be considered well and the house ready for disinfection seven days after desquamation is complete.

Children living in a house where scarlet fever is present may be removed to another house, and after a period of 10 days may return to school. Evidence of compliance with these conditions must be furnished in writing by a competent person acquainted with the facts.

Children from houses where measles is present may be admitted to school upon the same conditions as are named with respect to scarlet fever, except that the date of recovery and the proper time for disinfection shall be fixed at 14 days from the disappearance of the rash.

In diphtheria the same regulations will be observed as in measles or scarlet fever, except that the evidence that infectiousness is passed shall depend upon negative results of a culture taken from the local area of infection, nose or throat, or both, not less than 24 hours after the use of any antiseptic gargle or application, and at a period not earlier than seven days from the disappearance of clinical symptoms.

Children not living in an infected house who have been exposed to diphtheria, but have not shown signs of the disease may be admitted to school after one negative culture is taken from both nose and throat. Written evidence that these conditions have been complied with may be given by the local health officer or by the attending physician.

Children suffering from whooping-cough shall be excluded from school so long as symptoms of the disease persist. Every child absent from school on account of whooping-cough shall, on applying for readmission, present the written certificate of the attending physician that the cough has disappeared. Children living in houses where whooping-cough is present must be sent home as soon as the cough is observed, but on presentation of the certificate of a physician that they are free from whooping-cough may be readmitted.

Children having chickenpox are not admitted to school during any period of the eruption, nor so long as scales or crusts remain upon any part of the body, nor until the clothing worn during the eruption has been destroyed or disinfected.

Children absent from school on account of mumps may not be readmitted until one week after the disappearance of all the symptoms, and shall present the certificate of a physician that all the symptoms and signs of mumps have been absent for a period of not less than seven days.

Children having scabies or itch upon any part of the body shall not attend school until the disease has been cured, and shall, on applying for readmission, present the certificate of a physician that the disease has been cured and the clothing worn by the child either destroyed or disinfected.

Children having ringworm of the scalp or of the face shall be excluded from school until the disease is cured, and on applying for readmission shall present the certificate of a physician that the disease is cured.

Children living in houses where typhoid fever is present shall not bring to school any milk or water from their houses.

Oakland District League.

Oakland District board of control met in Terra Alta, October 30, to fill vacancies in the board, and to transact other business. The first vice-president, Asbury Mick, and the secretary, E. R. Skidmore, having removed from the district, W. M. Shultz, of Swanton, was chosen first vice-president, and H. F. Colebank, of Hendricks, secretary. J. W. Bedford was chosen to fill the vacancy in the executive committee caused by the removal of M. F. Pritchard. A missionary committee was elected. The time for holding the next District convention was fixed for May 6 and 7, at Parsons. J. S. Harvey, of Mountain Lake Park, and Wallace Mason exchanged places, so Mr. Mason is now fourth vice-president, and Mr. Harvey third vice-president. The Conference convention will be held in Oakland next summer.

Church Services.

Rev. Dr. H. Scott, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, who met with a very serious and painful mishap some weeks ago, has recovered to some extent and will preach on Sunday morning. Sunday evening Presiding Elder Roberts will preach, and following the sermon communion services will be held.

Rev. Uhler will preach Sunday morning and evening in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

Pleasure.

To the Editor of the Republican:

Rightly understood, pleasure is the chief object of all human government—the art namely of making people pleased or happy: and it would not be less rational to condemn religion because of the cruelties that have been inflicted in its name, or art, because some good pictures have an immoral tendency, than to inveigh against pleasure because some people pursue it selfishly, or find it in unworthy objects.

To enjoy rightly is one of the surest precepts of human happiness, and it is difficult for a layman to put his finger on any denunciation of pleasure, as such, in Old or New Testament. There is something of insincerity, in the conventional attitude assumed towards pleasure by professing Christians. We are continually seeking it, yet we express abhorence of pleasure-seekers; we profess to despise it, yet the whole effort of the nation is to obtain it.

What is the aim of philanthropy but pleasure in the present? What is the promise of every religion but pleasure in the future? With what consistency can the honest believer undervalue pleasure when the Psalmist declares that "at the Lord's right hand are pleasures for evermore?"

If, then, pleasure is a good and right thing, and therefore worth taking some trouble to secure, it is not wasting time to consider its true nature, and remark upon some of the common hindrances to its attainment, and to point out the common neglect of some of its purest sources.

Pleasure, then, in the full meaning of enjoyment or delight, is indeed one of the most difficult subjects that can be submitted to analysis. Seek and ye shall not find it, unless your search is wisely directed. Often it eludes the most elaborate plans and costly preparations for its capture. Equally often it springs out unawares upon the way-farer, when he is least looking for it; meets him with frankest countenance when its presence would be least suspected. Thus the ordinary scheme of social entertainment is devised to encourage that most precious of all earthly joys—congenial intercourse, and the guests come away wearied, while a chance meeting on a railway, or even in a dentist's waiting room may fill the heart with gladness. The fact is, elaborate preparations are more likely to scare than to secure pleasure. In the expressive words of Mr. Dallas: "Pleasure seldom gives note of her coming. She comes like an angel, unseen, unheard, unknown; and not till she is gone, or parting from us, are our eyes open to what we have enjoyed."

The nature of the object sought is not in itself of the essence of pleasure. There is, perhaps, no device of ease more consumately designed for its purpose than a modern bed. Yet to the bed-ridden what is this bed but Gehenna?

Again, to the student books are all in all. How can one remain insensible to books as a source of pleasure? Nevertheless, not to mention the school-boy, in whose eyes books are but elaborate obstacles to the enjoyment of life, there are thousands of educated men and women who prefer the sensational trash of the day to the treasures of literature, because desire, the gratification of which confers pleasure, has not been born in them.

In fact, there is no such thing as objective pleasure; pleasure is a harmony, a fitting together—a fitting of an external object with a mood or want within ourselves. It is to put it plainly, the fulfillment of desire, the gratification of an appetite not necessarily ignoble.

As Goethe said of beauty so it may be said of pleasure: It is a primeval phenomenon that eludes definition—a radiance shed from the presence of Him at whose right hand there are pleasures for evermore. The source of which though we may speculate about it, we can never know. This much, however, it is in our power to do: seeing that pleasure is a sensation arising from the fitting of fulfillment to desire, and of condition to mood, we can encourage those desires and train those moods which conduce to the purest gratification.

No pursuit confers as much pleasure as natural science. The pleasure of expanding knowledge has a boundless field for its gratification, and proof of the enduring quality of pleasure derived from knowledge of physical science may be had in the fact that no one is ever known to tire of it, or to fail in deriving pleasure from every new discovery.

All this fund of exquisite pleasure so generally neglected may be drawn on by multitudes who spend their lives in the pursuit of pleasure by methods which experience shows them fail of the desired end. What is true of Science is no less true of Art. W. W. L.

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the land of the undersigned lying in District No. 2 of Garrett county either for the purpose of fishing, hunting or passing through the same with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. C. W. FRIEND.

$4,489.50 for a Steer.

All precedents were upset at the fat stock show at the East Liberty stock yards, Pittsburg, yesterday, when an individual steef, which had not even been awarded the first prize in the class in which it was entered, sold at $2.05 a pound, or $4,489.50. When the steer was brought out for sale there was great rivalry manifested among the visiting butchers. The bidding was spirited and the price was rapidly run up until it reached a price never before reached at any previous sale or exhibition of meat cattle.

The steer was raised by L. D. Bazell, of Lost Creek, W. Va., and weighed 2190 pounds. It was sold by C. H. Baumgarten, of L. Darr & Co., and was bought by Justin W. Harrison, a local dealer. It is a Hereford, crossed with the Aberdeen Angus.

Winter Tourist Tickets, Season 1901-2. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has placed on sale at all principal offices East of the Ohio River, Winter Tourist Tickets to points in Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Carolina and Texas; also Havana, Cuba, and Nassau, N.P., at reduced rates. For additional information call on Agent Baltimore & Ohio R.R.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Seaboard Air Line Railway to Florida, Cuba, Savannah, Camden, Southern Pines and Pinehurst.

Winter excursion tickets were placed on sale to resort points on this line in Norrh and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida on October 15th and will remain on sale during the season. Exceptionally low rates are in effect this year to Pinehurst and Southern Pines, N. C., Camden, S. C., Savannah, Ga., and all points in Florida and Cuba. To reach any of these points the service of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, "Capital City Route," will be found the best and most attractive. In addition to the superior service now operated, it is announced that Cafe cars will be placed in service on the Washington-Atlanta Line about November 1st and on the Florida Lines about January 1st, 1902. Following this the Florida & Metropolitan Limited will be inaugurated about January 15th, 1902, with sumptuous appointments and superb equipment, including dining and club cars, constituting it beyond a doubt the peer of any train in the world.

The service of the Seaboard Air Line Railway to Cuba is most attractive. Its Cafe car service and many other features present advantages commending it to the favorable attention of all travelers.

LOW RATES FOR HUNTING AND FISHING PARTIES VIA SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY.

This popular route, whose lines penetrate some of the best country for game, birds and fish to be found anywhere in the South, has on sale reduced rate tickets from Norfolk, Portsmouth and Richmond to all points in Virginia, North and South Carolina, for the benefit of hunting and fishing parties, moving individually or otherwise. One dog is carried free with each passenger and others are transported at a small cost.

Full information as to most desirable points, rates, schedules, etc., furnished upon application to any agent or representative of the Company. nov 30

BUSINESS LOCALS.

FOR SALE:—The Lutheran parson age, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

50c. and $1.00, all druggists.
SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York.

When using baking powder it is always economy to buy the Royal.

Royal makes the finest, most wholesome and delicious food.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

He laughs best whose laugh lasts.

Senator Ravenscroft, of Accident, spent Friday night and Saturday in Oakland.

Mrs. H. C. Sincell and children have gone to Washington. D. C., where a few weeks will be spent by them.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

Attorney William R. Offutt left Oakland Monday morning for Birmingham, Ala., where he will spend a week or two.

Mr. William Moody, of Bloomington, was in Oakland Saturday attending a meeting of the board of directors of the First National Bank.

If you want one of the best cutting boxes made either power or hand, see the ones Naylor has for sale for corn fodder or hay. It shreds the fodder. 36 3t

At a meeting of the board of directors of the First National Bank, held on Saturday, among others there were present Mr. M. N. Wilson, Mr. U. G. Palmer and Mr. William Moody.

Our attention has been called to an error in the election returns as printed in this paper the 7th inst. The majority of Mr. Edwin E. Friend, the Register of Wills-elect, was given as 833, when it should have been 883.

When you feel that life is hardly worth the candle take a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They will cleanse your stomach, tone up your liver and reguate your bowels making you feel like a new man. For sale by all druggists.

The changed schedule of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, which went into effect Sunday morning, is published elsewhere in this issue. The new schedule makes it quite inconvenient for persons desiring to go East to local stations, as but one accommodation train daily is run each way.

The lime-stone quarry along the Big Youghigheny river, a few miles south of town, which was leased by the Mosser brothers some months ago and who erected kilns and installed steam drilling machinery, is in successful operation. The lessees are overrun with orders and are unable to meet the demand for the output of their kilns.

To remove a troublesome corn or bunion: First soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it, then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily; rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn for a few days, to protect it from the shoe. As a general liniment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequaled. For sale by all dealers.

Two or three of our game dealers attempted to corner the game market in Oakland Saturday, and as a result pheasants sold at one dollar each before nightfall. Monday prices eased off somewhat, the highest price paid being $1.80 a pair for the birds. Partridges sold at 15 to 20 cents each, and rabbits brought 10 cents each. The shipments of pheasants Saturday and Monday aggregated about 350 birds.

Now that the election is over and matters have settled down to their normal state we desire that our correspondents throughout the county resume their letters to this paper. Many things of interest transpire which remain unknown except in the immediate community where they happen unless mention is made of the fact through the columns of the county press. Our corps of correspondents in years past have been efficient and trustworthy. This standard should be maintained in the future.

Mr. B. Recknor, who was killed by falling through a bridge with a load of railroad ties on November 6th, was interred in the cemetery at Addison on the 8th, aged 37 years and 5 days. He was working for Edward Nicklow when the accident occurred. Services were conducted by Francis M. Biddle, of town, assisted by Rev. Eastburn, of the Addison M. E. church. Deceased was a member of Addison Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and was also a member of Company I, 5th Pennsylvania Infantry during the Spanish-American war.—Meyersdale Commercial.

A coal hole—the mine shaft.

Mr. William M. Junkins, of Deer Park, was in Oakland Tuesday on business.

Miss Teckla Johnson, of Cameron, W. Va., is in Oakland visiting Mrs. Bullard and family.

Mr. W. W. Briscoe has returned feom a prolonged trip through Virginia and West Virginia.

The meteors didn't have any show to be seen as the drop curtain did not rise even if the stars did shoot.

Dixon & Kelso will pay 90 cents per barrel cash or $1, one half cash, for ear corn. 53 cents cash for buckwheat. 37-2t.

When a man has a birthday he generally takes a day off. When a woman has one she generally takes a couple of years off.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets cure biliousness, constipation and headache. They are easy to take and pleasant in effect. For sale by all druggists.

A good roads system is what this county needs worse than any thing else. It is the question before the people now and it will not be downed until it results in some sort of a plan being adopted.

Mrs. Clarence Michael (nee Lulu Stover) who has been visiting her aunt Mrs. Capt. Jas. A. Hayden, of Mountain Lake Park, left for Fairmont on last Tuesday to meet her husband. They will reside there for the winter.

Reports from the county as to the turkey crop are not very alarming, but it is said that there are not as many this year as usual. However everyone will probably get a turkey if he has the price, and most everyone in Oakland has that.

Here is to the girl who is gladdest in her gladness when she's glad, and saddest in her sadnees when she's sad. But her gladness when she s glad and her sadness when she's sad is not in it with the badness of her badness when she's bad.

Advertising is a modern substitute for salesmen. The clerk and the drummer were at one time the merchant's sole medium between goods and purchaser. Advertisments do the same work on universal lines. They should be business talks that will interest every one.

Rev. Asbury H. Rohrbaugh, editor of the M. E. Times, the official church paper of the West Virginia Conference of the M. E. church, died very suddenly at his office in Buckhannon on last Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Rohrbaugh was well and favorably known by many persons in this community.

There are a number of cases of typhoid fever near the Red House along the old Northwestern pike. One death has resulted in that community and there are now four cases in the family of Chas. Janoski and two in the family of the late John C. Bowman.

A big crowd of parishioners and friends of Dr. H. Scott, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, assembled at the parsonage on last Friday evening and tendered that worthy divine and his family an old fashioned donation, consisting of provisions and useful household articles. The evening was pleasantly spent in social intercourse. Dr. Scott and his family have been in Oakland but a few weeks and in that time they have made many warm friends.

The U. S. Express Compannv have placed guards on the cars of the B. & O. from Baltimore to Parkersburg. Each of these guards is equipped with Winchester repeating rifles and has a large revolver in a holster. There have been so many train robberies in various sections of the country that the company intends to be prepared for any such an attact in the mountainous soctions along the B. & O.

While this paper does not object to other papers copying articles of local interest from its columns when due credit is given, we do most seriously object when an article is stolen bodily from its columns by a paper published in Oakland and no credit given whatever. This occurred last week when the Journal copied the news item published the week previous by us giving an account of the explosion of blasting powder at the home of Michael Legeer near Bittinger, by which he and others in the building were injured.

GAME.—H. Creutzburg buys game of all kinds for cash.

Mr. Herbert Montgomery, of Piedmont, is holding cases temporarily in this office.

"Cheap John" is still east and will return in a few days with a car load of Christmas goods.

Go to Hinebaugh's Restuurant for meals, lunches, oysters, etc. Ladies' dining room in connection.

Foreman P. E. Kimmel, of this office, is kept from work this week owing to the illness of his father and mother.

Mrs. Joseph Helbig, of Oakland, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. C. A. Bolden, North street.—Meyersdale Commercial.

A dividend of five per cent. has been declared on the capital stock of the Aurora, Oakland and Terra Alta Telephone Company.

Mr. W. R. Mealy attended the reception in Cumberland tendered by the Commercial Travelers lodge of that city on Saturday night.

Dr. Henry W. McComas has adopted the following as his office hours: 10 a. m. to 12 m., and 6 p. m. to 8 p. m. Office at the Sanitarium.

The bad weather which has been prevailing here for a week or more, has put a stop to work on the new Catholic church now building.

Rev. W. H. Osmond, the rector of St. Matthew's, will return from Baltimore Saturday and on Sunday will conduct services at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. in St. Matthew's P. E. church.

John H. Purnell, one of the veterans of the Civil War, who has made Oakland his home for a number of years, has been admitted to the Soldier's Home at Dayton, Ohio, for which point he left last night. Col. Sturgiss secured his admission to the home through the Pension Bureau.

Seemingly winter set in in earnest on Friday when the snow commenced falling. Every day since it has been coming down at interyals. With the solid condition of the roads a good sledding snow is anticipated. With it all many wells remain dry, and should a freeze set in the streams, in which there is very little water, will become frozen solid.

Miss Nan Kenndy, of Washington, well known by many of our readers, will be married at her home in the above city on Thanksgiving afternoon to Francis Hampton Randolph, formerly of Marion county, Florida, but now chief clerk in the Adjutant General's office of the War Department in Washington. The wedding will be quietly celebrated owing to the ill health of the bride's father.

Garrett county lumberman and coal operators are greatly handicapped in making shipment of the output of their mills and mines on account of the great scarcity of cars. One lumberman at Wallman, this county, along the line of the West Virginia Central Railroad, has over $40,000 worth of manufactured lumber stacked at his mill and is unable to get it to market for the lack of cars.

A letter written by George Washington was found last week in the attic of an old stone house, known as the Job Lewis property at Wellsburg, W. Va. It is dated November 10, 1798, and is addressd to Mr. Barr, Whitehall, England. The writer complains of the intercepting of papers of importance by the French who captured the ship Suffolk. The letter was found in an old book and is well preserved.

By the fire which devastated Thomas, W. Va., one day last week, two former Garrett countians lost considerable property. "Dick" Thayer, who owned four or five dwelling houses, lost all of them. His insurance covered but one building. Adam S. Sell's house was burned. He saved from it a sewing machine and a few articles of wearing apparel. His daughter nearly lost her life by being overcome by smoke in the burning building, but was rescued by an Italian, who dragged her from her dangerous position.

F. H. Tibbetts, Esq., a few years ago employed as mine boss for the Bloomington plant of the Davis Coal & Coke Company, but now living near Fairmont, W. Va., was in Oakland Saturday on his way home from Alabama, in which State he has been engaged for some time in opening a new coal works. He will within a short time remove with his family to the South, where he will become superintendent for an operative company of coal shippers.

Mr. O. F. Morton has just shown us a complete sample of his new book, "Winning or Losing?" It is a very handsome volume and reflects much credit on both printers and binders. There are seven illustrations. With one exception it is the only book ever published in this county that concerns the county. It has a home interest to our people that no other new book could possess, and deserves a liberal patronage at their hands. Copies will be in the hands of subscribers within a few weeks. It will not be on sale at the stores and parties desiring copies may leave their orders at this office or with W. A. McGinnis.—Terra Alta Republican.

Mrs. L. C. Tabb, of Newport News, Va., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Delawder, came to Oakland Saturday last from Fairmont, where she had been on a visit to Mrs. Boughner, her sister, and after remaining here a few days went down to Deep Creek to visit her parents.

Armour & Co., Swift & Co., and the big refrigerating houses in Chicago are endeayoring to corner the egg market in that city by placing all the eggs they can lay their hands on in cold storage. 500,000 cases have gone into cold storage since July 1. Retailers have put up the price to 27 cents per dozen for eggs which a week ago were selling at 22 cents.

Mr. Thomas Parran, the newly elected Clerk of the Court of Appeals, will go into office December 1, when Mr. J. Frank Turner, the appointee of the court, will retire. The salary of the clerk is $3,000 a year; the bond $10,000, to be renewed biennially and approved by the court. When he takes the oath of office he is required to pay the State Treasurer a tax of $200.

R. D. Ruffin, a colored lawyer of Washington, D. C., has obtained titles to valuable coal and timber lands in West Virginia aggregating 141,000 acres, 71,000 of which lie in Randolph county. Ruffin was at Elkins, where all doubts to his title were removed. He went from Elkins to Harrison and Lewis counties in behalf of his interests, and from there to New York to confer with capitalists, who will develop the lands.

A newspaper whose columns overflow with ads of business men has more influence in attracting attention to and building up a town than any other agency that can be employed. People go where there is business. Capital and labor will locate where there is an enterprising community. No power on earth is so strong to build up a town as a newspaper well patronized and its power should be appreciated.—Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

A Dakota editor worked his typewriter over time and produced the following dirge, which hits most of us hard worked and poorly paid pencil pushers: "The melancholy days are here, the saddest of our time; the chilly blasts begin to blow from far off northern clime. The woodsaw sings, the coal bin groans, the tree doth moan in sorrow; the sun shines bright and though warm today—might snow like——tomorrow. We gladly think of times to come, when we can swiftly soar, through mince pie skies and night-mare drives, and stomach aches galore. Subscribers who are one year back should to the sanctum stroll, and soften these times which sorely try the editorial soul." The last seen of the poor, dear man after the appearance of this poem he was being carried to the hospital on a shutter.

Ball and Oyster Supper.

The members of St. Peter's Commandery No. 94, K. of St. John, will give a ball and serve oysters at Offutt's Hall on Wednesday evening next.

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. H. McCoy, Eva Clark, Miss Edith Davis, F. B. Jackson, Dr. W. H. Rogers, Mr. T. W. Miller, Mr. John Galoway, Mr. Elias Frankhouser, Mr. Eddie Boyle, Mr. John L. Crump, Mr. L. J. Swartzentruhe, Mr. James Upole.

Notice.

The Epworth League will hold a "social" in Naylor's Hall, Thanksgiving evening, November 28th, 1901, to which all are invited. A silver offering will be received at the door, and refreshments will be served to the guests without further charge.

Proceeds to be used in relieving the wants of the destitute persons of our town.

MERCY, HELP AND SOCIAL COM.

Query.

To the City Councilmen and Mayor of Oakland: What has become of the chemical engine and hook and ladder truck, and in what condition ure these two pieces of machinery which cost the town's citizens something over fifteen hundred dollars?

Bitten by Dogs

A few days ago a number of worthless dogs, of which Oakland contains more to the square foot than any other town in the United States, got into a fight on one of the streets and while thus engaged little Dick Jamison was knocked down by them. When he fell two of the curs pounced upon him amd bit him severely about the limbs. A physician dressed his wounds.

A Card of Thanks.

OAKLAND, MD., Nov. 15, 1901.

We extend our thanks to Mr. B. H. Sincell for kindness shown us, and for the regular visits of THE REPUBLICAN to the parsonage; to H. Weber & Sons for beautiful flowers; to the Epworth League and members and friends of St. Paul's M. E. church for their visit to the parsonage last Friday eyening, and their unusually large donation.

H. AND E. SCOTT.

ANGORA GOAT FARM.

Success of the Enterprise Almost Assured' Stock May Arrive Within a Few Weeks.

The much-talked of Angora goat farm which is to be located near Oakland, on the Garrett lands and upon the McCormick farm, is about to be a success, the only contingent arising which may block the plans of the promoters will be their inability to sell the required amount of stock certificates. This is not probable, however, as a great deal of the money has already been paid or pledged.

A meeting was held on Saturday night by the stockholders, when the following officers were elected:

President, D. E. Offutt.
Secretary, John T. Mitchell.
Treasurer, Scott T. Jones.

The board of directors consist of the above named gentlemen and Messrs. H. H. Dill, of the B. & O. industrial department: B. F. Spencer, of Baltimore, and Peter Corbett, also of Baltimore, who will be general manager. Mr. Corbett has for a number of years engaged in the goat business in Texas, and G. S. Hamill.

The corporation is capitalized at $125,000, of which $25,000 is preferred and to be paid up in full.

The company has already purchased the McCormick farm of about 600 acres and has a lease upon a large tract of land adjoining.

Probably within the next two or three weeks one thousand head of goats will be brought to Oakland from a point in lower Maryland where there is now a flock of 4000 of the animals and upon which an option is held by the manager.

The origin of the Angora goat has never been fully decided by naturalists, but it is generally agreed that the parent goat comes from one of two species, between which there is but slight difference. The place where the breed originated, however, has been settled, it being in the vilayet of Angora, in Asia Minor, but it is not known when this was. Some writers have ventured to say that it was 2,400 years ago. There is pretty strong evidence which goes to show that they were a distinctive breed when Moses was leading the Israelites out of Egypt. Goats' hair was spun by the Israelites for curtains and other purposes for use in the temple. In the story recorded in I Samuel (chapter 19) of the artifice of Michael in deceiving the messengers of Saul by placing an image in the bed in place of David and giving it a pillow of goat's hair, is believed by Pennant to refer to a pillow made of the Angora fleece.

The city of Angora, or Enguri, the capital city of the vilayet of Angora, is the ancient Ancyra, and is located about 220 miles south by southeast from Constantinople. Angora was the seat of one of the earliest Christian churches, and was probably established by the Apostle Paul. The province is mountainous to a considerable extent and furrowed by deep valleys. It is about 2,900 feet above the level of the sea. It was here that this famous goat reached its perfection—and such a state of perfection as has not yet been reached by the goats of either Cape of Good Hope or the United States.

The Angora goat, and more especially the varieties it has produced are probably the most valuable of the goat family, and have been ably described by naturalists and travelers as good-sized animals, generally of a beautiful milk-white color, with short legs and wide-spreading, spirally-twisted horns. The wool is described as a very beautiful curled or wavy hair of silvery whiteness, with a fine downy wool at its base, and this hair is disposed in long, pendant, spiral ringlets on the whole body. The hair or wool often sweeps to the ground and is usually from five to twelve inches long. The market value of the fleece varies, according to the grade, generally being from 70 to 80 cents per pound. The pelts sell from $2 to $3.50, the meat being about the same as mutton.

A GREAT RAILWAY.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway owns and operates over 6,600 miles of thoroughly equipped road in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, South Dakota, North Dakota, Missouri and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

It owns and operates all equipment in service on its lines, including Sleeping Cars, Parlor Cars and Dining Cars, maintaining an excellence of service unequaled on any railway in the world.

It has been a Pioneer in the Northwest and West in the use of the block system in the operation of its trains, in the lighting of trains by electricity, heating by steam and many other progressive methods, which have added safety, comfort and luxury to travel. It is always the leader in that direction.

The Pioneer Limited Trains between Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis have the costliest and handsomest Sleeping Cars in the world and the best Dining-Car service.

Time tables, maps and information furnished on application to John R. Pott, District Passenger Agent, 810 Park Building, Pittsburg. 37-3t.

A Great Opportunity.

The burned district of Jacksonville, Fla., is to be rebuilt at once, offering an opportunity of employment to workmen, and excellent prospect to contractors and capitalists. Jacksonville is reached from all directions by the Seaboard Air Line Railway System, which offers unexcelled facilities in the way of schedules and through car service to that point. nov 14tf

A Musical Treat.

On Wednesday evening next, Nov. 27, the Oakland Concert Band will give a grand concert in the Opera House and respectfully solicits the patronage of the citizens. The band has made rapid progress in the past few months, and in addition to the elaborate program which has been prepared the band will be assisted by some of the best musical talent of Oakland. Dr. J. E. Legge will render one of his fine cornet solos, Miss Margaret Miller will sing a solo, the Misses Robinson will play some of their beautiful piano duets and Little Olivete and Victor Shartzer will again appear in their fine singing and dancing specialties, which never fail to "bring down the house."

The band is now fully equipped with a fine set of silver-plated instruments, which come up to the standard of those used by the large professional bands, and is an organization of which the town may well feel proud. The citizens should not hesitate to give them all the support and encouragement possible.

The proceeds will go toward helping to pay for recently purchased instruments. The prices of admission are within reach of all—only 10, 15 and 25 cents. Let everybody turn out and pack the house.

BLOOMINGTON.

Piedmont Independent.

Mr. A. P. Martin, the lumberman, running a saw mill a few miles above town, dropped a heavy piece of timber on his foot one day last week and mashed three toes on his left foot.

Mrs. Jack Larrimer, of Savage, returned from Baltimore on last Sunday evening from a visit to her sister, Mrs. Nellie Bickey. Mrs. Bickey, her husband, and three children were found one morning about two weeks ago, unconscious in their bed-rooms, at their residence on George street, and it was reported by the daily papers that the entire family was poisoned by eating sour krout for supper the evening before. Mrs. Larrimer reports however that the condition of the family was due entirely to asphyxia from escaping gas and that they are now out of danger and improving rapidly. The many friends of Mrs. Bickey in this vicinity, where she is well known as a former resident and a summer visitor, will be glad to hear of the fortunate escape of herself and family.

Miss Fannie Knight expects to spend the winter in Cumberland, where she will enter a business school and take a course in typewriting and stenography.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Stump polled the highest vote of any candidate on the Republican ticket, he was cut by seven Republican voters of this district, most of whom are said to be prominent men in the party. No reasonable cause is assigned by the knowing ones other than they wanted to cut and they cut.

Mr. H. H. Mansbach, of Cumberland, known for years all over this section of the country as one of the most prominent and influential business men of Piedmont, was in town last Tuesday evening shaking hands in his usual jovial way with a host of friends and acquaintances who wish him well.

Mr. Simon Smith, the young man who got into difficulties by marrying a lady, too young, according to law to thoroughly understand the responsibilities of a married life, is, we are happy to say, now out of trouble and returned to town and is working at the Buxton.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place at Grantsville, Md., on or about the middle of July last, 5 head of sheep, 4 yearlings and one older, 4 being ewes and one a weather. Four of said sheep having crops off left ear and slit in right ear; one with left ear cropped off.

The owner or owners are hereby notified to come forward, prove property, pay costs and take them away.

Dated Oct. 1, 1901.

CHRISTIAN M. LIVENGOOD,
30 Grantsville, Md.

CONSTIPATION CURED!

Nearly everyone suffers in a greater or less degree from this dreadful disease. It is dangerous to neglect the bowels, and often by doing so a foundation is laid for serious ailments.

Those suffering from Constipation suffer from slow Poison.

OUR NATIVE HERBS cures Constipation quietly and permanently.

No Pain, No Griping, No Binding effect afterwards. Its action is pleasant and sure.

200 DAYS' TREATMENT $1.00.

A CURE GUARANTEED OR THE MONEY BACK.

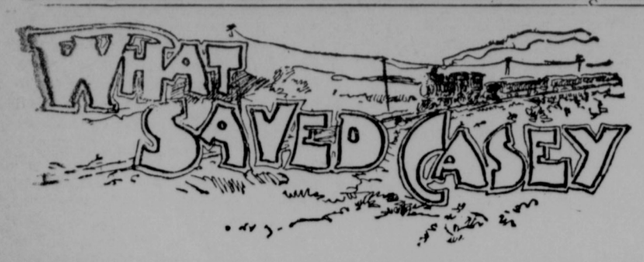
"When a girl I had Small Pox succeded by Typhoid Fever and Measels. I was left with Constipation and Sinking Spells. Sometimes I felt that I could not live. After having various physicians treat me with no benefit I bought a box of Our Native Herbs, which seems to be the only medicine that suits my case. I believe it saved my life." Mrs. M. MILLER, Crellin, Md.

No Case Too Stubborn for Our Native Herbs To Conquer.

THE ALONZO O. BLISS CO.,
SOLE PROPRIETORS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

A. C. BROOKE,
Local Agent. Mountain Lake Park, Md.

A box of Tablets or Powder mailed to any address upon receipt of $1.00.



AN INTERFAMILY quarrel between two houses up on Lynn street, with the consequent estrangement between Conductors Grimes and O'Connor, fathers and husbands of the warring groups, respectively, were powerful factors in the last chapter, but Casey's sweetheart with the sunlit hair was the cause of the trouble. She was innocent of all evil intent, but between her comeliness and Casey's feelings the most serious consequences nearly resulted to both parties, not to mention two train loads of Italian laborers and a bunch of the company's money. And if it had not been for that Lynn street feud and the fact that both train crews took sides therein—well, Casey and the girl would not have gone picnicking the next day.

How the feud originated no one seemed to know, not even Casey, and afterward he was too glad to accept the bare fact to inquire. But after the "kids" the mothers took it up, and the fathers had to follow suit to keep peace in their own families. It was serious by this time. Each of those two men had said things which had been passed along by mutual friends till neither could speak to the other. Oh, they were sore hearted. They met face to face that morning in the little booth next to the office where Casey, the train dispatcher, held the chair. One glared into space and the other scowled, and they passed. Casey saw them and laughed, and later in the day was thankful that it was so.

Casey's division ran from Janesville up to Baraboo, or thereabouts, and Grimes and O'Connor were in charge of the two gravel trains working the cut north of Janesville. Their trains loaded and shoveled off alternately at the cut and the fill, as the case might be, and small were the civilities that passed between crews.

Casey was rather a young man for so responsible a calling, but there was one line besides train dispatching at which he was even less experienced, and he was finding constantly that his pathway was beset with new perplexities and wonderments. This morning he was absent-minded, subject to unwonted starts and other symptoms. Casey hardly knew what was wrong, but he suspected strongly, and so did Annie. It was hard to confine his brain to the work in hand. Instead of train numbers and switches and sidings and stations his mind was filled with such irrelevant matters as the shape of a certain young woman's nose and the way the sun shone in her hair. But he pulled himself together and got the hang of the day's work before things began to snarl up.

The alternating gravel trains were attended to early. Conductor Grimes and his 50 Italian laborers were sent back to the cut to finish loading their train with gravel. O'Connor and his gang were put to work for awhile at the fill, unloading the flat cars that had been filled the night before by the steam shovel. All this was easy. The passenger trains and the through and way freights were reported O. K., and Casey allowed his min dto wander just a little, prospecting on the quality of picnic weather he and Annie would get to-morrow for their trip up the river. When he was called back to earth by a message from the operator at the cut five miles above. Grimes wanted to run up to the water tank, three miles further on, to fill the tender. Casey gave the right of way.

About this time O'Connor had finished his unloading at the fill, and his long train of empty flats pulled up at the station for orders. The 50 "dagoes" sat complacently in the sun, smoking their black pipes and saying nothing, like so many graven images. Casey sent them along the line to the cut for another load. Casey laughed again at the stolidity of the Italians, and wondered if they ever felt as he did. They did not seem to care whether school kept or not, but then, they didn't know the condition of the train dispatcher's mind, although this ought to have been of vital interest to them. Still, the passengers and the through and the way freights were doing nicely, and it was already ten o'clock.

Just then Annie came by. She ought not to have done so in business hours, but she wanted to ask Casey what lunch to put up for to-morrow's picnic. The dispatcher couldn't resist. He stepped out for just a little "spiel," a very short one. Annie was such a good hand to "josh" with.

Casey returned to his desk at last. Nothing had happened, and everything was all right. The operator at the tank wanted instructions. Grimes' engineer was ready to go back, but requested additional orders to take on his train at the cut, and then go rolling down the line to Janesville, without waiting for further telegraphic instructions.

If Casey had been thoroughly himself he would not have granted it, because such a thing is irregular in railroad practice, and two trains nearly always get into trouble when they try to pass on the same track. But for ten seconds it slipped his mind that he had given O'Connor the right of way. And in that ten seconds, having Annie's smile before his eyes and being benevolently inclined to all, he told Grimes' engineer to go ahead.

Then he looked out and saw Annie waving at him from across the track. She, too, had forgotten something. Did he prefer beef tongue or ham in his sandwiches? That was all, or nearly all, and it was quickly settled. He preferred ham.

But when Casey got back and looked at his order book he turned white. According to the stories in the magazines he should have drawn a gun on himself or died of heart disease. This is a true story, however, and Casey did nothing of the sort. He shut his lips tight and all the sunshine of the day turned black, and all the pretty things he had been thinking about the girl turned black with it. He jumped to the ticker and tried to rouse the operator at the cut.

HE CAUGHT THE LAST HANDRAIL OF THE CABOOSE.

The brute was slow, and when he did answer he said that Grimes' train had gone. Gone! Casey was almost reaching for the gun in the top drawer. But he didn't. He worked the instrument again.

"Chase it!" rattled Casey, and the operator chased.

In the next ten minutes Casey got his first gray hair.

Now, from the cut to Janesville it is down grade all the way. The gravel train had stood on a siding, and the brakeman had to jump to catch the caboose after he had locked the switch. The track was bad and good sprinting out of the question. The operator was a long-legged chap, however, and he had a chance.

Meanwhile Casey sat still and waited. He saw the wreck—vividly—the steaming ruin of the engines, the heaped-up train and the bodies lying side by side under blankets. Then the inquest and all the rest of the nightmare. There was murder on his hands unless that train was stopped. And if it was stopped—well, there would be words of comment by trainmen, messages over the wire to the division superintendent and others not by Casey, and it would be all over with Casey's railroad career, to say nothing of Annie and the picnic.

O'Connor had left Janesville long ago and was now plugging along up the grade, with numerous curves ahead and 50 dagoes behind. Grimes train was rapidly gaining headway, stringing out of the siding and rattling onto the main track, going faster with every yard.

The long-legged operator ran rapidly. Just as the train straightened out for the down grade of the main line he caught the last hand rail of the caboose and was flung off his feet, but hung on and climbed aboard.

And there they stood, the engine puffing and blowing off and Grimes talking very earnestly with his engineer when the O'Connor train pulled in. It was the long-legged operator who saved the trains—but it was the backyard quarrel that saved Casey. Grimes scowled, O'Connor glowered, conversation was out of the question and official joint reports not to be thought of. In the feud that had disrupted the neighborhood up on Lynn street the poor train dispatcher who had nearly sent two trains over the Great Divide was forgotten.

So Casey and the little lady with the sunlit hair went on their picnic up the river according to schedule.—Paul L. Wright, in Chicago Record-Herald.

THE BOASTFUL VETERAN.

Talks Too Much and Is Quietly Called Down by One Who Knew His Kind.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles is remarkable for more than his war record, his photographs and his diplomatic manner. One of his most winning traits is his disinclination to listen to boastful speeches or to hear some one condemned while the object of the adverse criticism is not present, says the Chicago Tribune.

Not so long ago that the other man in this little story has forgotten it a man in Washington who had once been in the army and had served in Cuba was present at a reception at which Gen. Miles was one of the guests. The general was surrounded by friends, and was enjoying himself immensely until the civilian and former army officer, who, for want of a better name, shall be called Mr. Blank, came into the conversation.

He attracted notice at once by severely criticising several prominent officers, none of whom was at the reception. Gen. Miles did not feel called upon to say anything at first, but in a few minutes Mr. Blank, profiting by the general's silence and interpreting it to mean that the general shared his views, became harsher than ever in his strictures upon the men who were absent. After one particularly severe outbreak Gen. Miles said, softly:

"I wouldn't, if I were you. If some of the men you have been talking about should happen to come into this room what would you do?"

Blank was not taken aback. In a loud voice and with every indication of strong-mindedness, he said:

"O, I don't know. I don't think I would be frightened."

"No?" asked Gen. Miles, tentatively.

By this time the circle around the men had increased, and the interest in the dialogue was deep, especially as many were present who were friends of Gen. Miles, the other man, and the men who had been unfortuate enough to incur Mr. Blank's resentment.

"I don't think I would be frightened," Mr. Blank went on in his loud voice. "You know, general, that we soldiers are not easily scared by the approach of the enemy."

"Ah, you were a soldier?" asked Gen. Miles.

"Yes, I was a soldier. I was in Cuba with my regiment, and I believe that a search through the official reports will fail to show that the appearance of the enemy ever made me lose my mind. Why, general, there was one time that we lay within 300 yards of the Spanish army before Santiago, and it became necessary for us to communicate with them. Of course, there were many men who would have been willing to go into their ranks under a flag of truce, but even that would have been dangerous. I myself offered to carry the message and to hold the consultation with the officers to be selected by the Spanish commander and sent out by him to a place between the two lines. I offered myself and was accepted. I talked with the enemy, sir, there, during a lull in the firing."

This uncontradicted evidence of the bravery of Mr. Blank moved the men in the group to admiration for him, and Gen. Miles, knowing that so long as the orator talked about himself the absent officers were safe, said nothing. Mr. Blank could not keep off the subject of the absent ones long, and soon was at it again.

This time Gen. Miles interrupted him. It was hard work, because the speaker possessed an unusually loud voice, upon which he never put the soft pedal.

"Ah, you talked with the enemy?" asked the general.

"I have said that I did," answered Mr. Blank, proudly.

"May I ask," queried Gen. Miles, politely, "if you used a megaphone?"

While Mr. Blank was pondering upon this Gen. Miles moved away. The others laughed and afterwards Mr. Blank said to the general that he had not intended all he had said.

How Cities Bury Themselves.

A well has recently been driven in the Place de l'Hotel de Ville in Paris, for the purpose of ascertaining the nature of the subsoil of the French capital. The revelations throw light on the manner in which great cities, in the course of centuries, bury the relics of their past. First comes a layer of rubbish, nearly four and a half feet thick, dating from the sixteenth century to the nineteenth. A second layer, a little over two and a half feet thick, consists of rubbish recognizable by the character of its fragments as belonging to the period from the fourteenth to the sixteenth century. This is separated from the first layer by a thin deposit of sand, and a second sandy deposit covers the third layer, which plainly shows relics of the eleventh and twelfth centuries. At the bottom is a clayey deposit filled with fragments of pottery and bits of oak timber belonging to the Gallic and Gallo-Roman periods.—Youth's Companion.

Elk's Teeth as Money.

Elks' teeth are becoming the financial medium of the Jackson Hole country, just south of the Yellowstone park. They are accepted in exchange for "wet goods" by the saloon men of the region, and in this manner many teeth have accumulated, and liquor dealers are laying up large sums from their sales to jewelers and agents who dispose of the tusks to members of the Elk fraternity. Every four tusks represent the death of one bull elk. Cow elk do not have tusks. —Chicago Inter Ocean.

Humane Flurry at Chicago.

Stray dogs and cats are to be cared for in Chicago during the coming winter, but, says the Chicago Record-Herald, the sparrows will have to hustle for themselves.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

Wire fences were in limited use in the neighborhood of Philadelphia as far back as 1816.

The cost of the United States troops and of the civil administration in Cuba is paid out of the revenues of the island.

It has been decided by the Kansas supreme court that opening a window screen constitutes a "burglarious breaking" within the meaning of the law.

It is a curious fact that the deed to the present police headquarters of New York city, 300 Mulberry street, which passed in 1863 from the metropolitan police district of that city to the board of supervisors of the county of New York, was not recorded until a few days ago. No explanation is given.

A descriptive article on Norway contains some striking instructions for the use of fire escapes taken from a local hotel, of which the following lines are part: "The plaited snotter shall be found in every room. To increase the hurry, let down the body one by one until all shall be left. The cord shall put out the ground from the shoulder thereunder."

A man riding a bicycle and driving a horse at the same time startled North Broad street. He held the reins in one hand and guided his machine with the other. His feet rested upon the coaster, and the horse did the rest. In and out among the other vehicles he guided the animal, and all along the streets people stopped and gazed in wonder.—Philadelphia Record.

Among the interesting things on view with the collection of books by negro authors at Buffalo is an autograph of Webster, dated March 19, 1847: "I have paid $120 for the freedom of Paul Jennings. He agrees to work out the same at eight dollars a month, to be found with board, clothes and washing, to begin when we return south. His freedom papers I give him. They are recorded in this district."

ABOUT BACKACHE.

The Various Causes of This Very Common Affliction Call for Medical Advice.

Pain in the back is one of the commonest of the ills afflicting humanity, and at the same time it is often one of the most difficult to relieve and the most puzzling to trace to its origin. It is a symptom of many acute diseases, such as spinal meningitis, smallpox, malaria, influenza, and so forth, but in such cases it is of short duration and its cause is usually evident, says Youth's Companion.

The backache of gall-stone, renal colic, or simple stomach-ache is also an acute affair, and disappears rapidly when the gall-stone or kidney-stone is passed, or the flatulence relieved.

It is different, however, with the chronic form, which so often defies all the skill and ingenuity of the physician, and exhausts the patience of the sufferer with its persistence and wearying, boring, wrenching pain.

The conditions which may produce this chronic backache are so numerous that a mere catalogue of them would fill the space allotted to this article, and we can refer only to the most frequent of them.

The pain may be due to disease in the spine itself, in the spinal cord, in the back muscles, or in the abdominal cavity. Pott's disease of the spine (hunchback) and cancer of the vertebrae are the most usual affections of the spine causing backache.

Any affection of the spinal cord may find its expression in backache, but the one most commonly responsible is perhaps locomotor ataxia. When of muscular origin, pain in the back is known as lumbago, a disease which is generally regarded as a rheumatic affection of the back muscles.

The discovery of the source of the pain in these local affections of the bone, muscle or nervous tissue is usually not difficult, but the problem is more intricate when the pain is merely a reflex of some internal disorder. Often the physician must interrogate each internal organ in turn before he can locate the starting-point of his patient's suffering.

This is the field in which the quack reaps his greatest harvest, his advertisements dilating upon the terrible diseases of the kidneys or other organs to which a backache surely points, and which can be relieved only by his infallible remedy—too often, alas! containing opium or some other enslaving drug. These advertisements are, of course, gross exaggerations, and the condition is seldom so serious as the quack would have his victim believe, yet it is always well for the sufferer from a persistent backache to consult a physician.

He Had the Money.

A western millionaire, who has made a fortune out of mines, and who is remarkable alike for his liberality and for his ignorance of his bank account, was asked one day to contribute to an object of charity. The canvasser suggested that $1,000 would be an acceptable contribution. "That isn't enough," replied the capitalist. "I will give you $5,000 if I have the money in the bank. Wait until I call up and inquire." He summoned a clerk and told him to telephone to the bank to inquire if he had $5,000 on deposit, as he desired to contribute that sum, if possible, to a worthy object. The clerk returned, and reported that the bank advised that he had $380,000 in the bank. "Dear me," cried the capitalist, "as much as that! Well, make out that check for $5,000." —Chicago Inter Ocean.

FUNNY FOLKS

Only Wise Course.

"Let us crown a queen of beauty," said the enthusiastic young man who was interested in the entertainment they were getting up for social divertisement.

"By all means," replied the wise and thoughtful youth.

"It should be the first thing on the programme," continued the first.

"Oh, foolish man!" retorted the other. "Think of the fun we will have so long as every girl thinks she has a show for the honor and of the row there will be when a selection is made. Let us rather make it the last feature of the entertainment."—Chicago Post.

What Was in Him.

"Children," said the teacher, while instructing the class in composition, "you should not attempt any flights of fancy, but simply be yourselves, and write what is in you. Do not imitate any other person's writings or draw inspiration from outside sources."

As a result of this advice Johnny Wise turned in the following composition:

"We should not attempt any flites of fancy, but rite what is in us. In me thare is my stummick, lungs, hart, liver, two apples, one piece of pie, one stick lemon candy and my dinner."—Baltimore American.

Bound to Get Out of It.

Mrs. Blinks (after breakfast)—My dear, I wish you'd stop into Biggs, Store & Co.'s and order seven-eighths of a yard more of that cloth I got yesterday, and three-quarters—

Mr. Blinks—I'm afraid I'll forget if you give me the items now. Just speak to me over the telephone this afternoon.

Office Boy (in the afternoon)—Please, sir, Mrs. Blinks is at the 'phone, and wants to talk to you.

Mr. Blinks (hurriedly) — Say—er—tell her I'm drunk.—N. Y. Weekly.

Language of Flowers.

"There's a language of flowers, they say," said he;
"Now, which shall I choose to speak for me?"
She blushed like a rose ere she found her voice:
"Well—orange blossoms would be my choice."
(And that's how Cupid was made to rejoice.)
—Philadelphia Bulletin.

VERY NEIGHBORLY.

The Neighbor's Boy—Please, Miss Jinks, mom says if you'll lend her a cup of sugar an' yer lawn mower an' some stickin' plaster an' a few eggs she'll send back your sewin' machine.—Chicago American.

Merely a Tradition.

We say that farmer folk are queer.
Their ways we love to "josh,"
Yet, truly, did you ever hear
A farmer say "begosh?"
—Washington Star.

A Dear Friend.

Morgue Keeper—Looking for anyone?

Visitor—Oi'm lookin' fur me dear friend, Moik Moolighan, who's mysteriously disappeared. It ud break me heart to foind him dead. Oi loved that mon like a brother.

"Has he any marks by which you could identify him?"

"Yis; he do have a big scar on his forehead where Oi hit 'im wid a brick."—N. Y. Weekly.

One for Bobby.

"I understand," said little Bobby, looking up from his lesson and keeping a forefinger temporarily between the pages of his history, "that there is only one man before whom the czar of Russia must take off his hat."

"Why, yes—that's so. Your book tells all about it, eh? Who is it, did you say?"

"His hairdresser," said Bobby, getting busy.—N. Y. Times.

A Bad Error.

"See here, Lyons, you've ruined me. In this account of the ball I said that 'Mrs. Bunkerton, the famous lecturer on dress, wore nothing that was remarkable.' You've put it: 'Mrs. Bunkerton wore nothing. That was remarkable!' You can go to the cashier and get your money. We can't stand a man like you around here."—Harlem Life.

Failed on the Test.

"No, Mr. Whipcord," said the Boston young woman, rising. "It is useless to urge me. I had begun to hope that we were congenial, but I see my error. I cannot marry you. I could never endure the daily companionship of a man who pronounces gen-e-al-o-gy 'ge-ne-ol-o-gy.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Given as a Reason.

"But he doesn't seem to know much about the topics of the day."

"Well, no wonder. He got all his education in a night school."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Knew the Difference.

"Well, you're a veterinary surgeon—what do you know about a horse?" asked a brow-beating attorney.

"I don't pretend to be a horse doctor," replied the witness, "but I know a good deal of the nature of the animal."

"That means to say you know a horse from a jackass when you see them," continued the lawyer, in the same style, looking knowing and glancing triumphantly around.

"Oh, yes, just so!" drawled out the intended victim, gazing intently at his legal tormentor. "For instance, I should never take you for a horse!"—Tit-Bits.

A Stirring Tonl.

A fellow confined in the gaol
Once turned most exceedingly paol.
"What is it?" they cried,
And the fellow replied:
"I thought I had swallowed a whaol."
—Baltimore American.

EVEN THERE.

Captain — Yonder is Dinkydink Point, the first view we get of America. See it?

Lord Sayvus—Naw; cahn't say I see the point.

Captain—That's so—you're English! —Chicago Journal.

The Nightmare.

The nightmare comes to plague us when
The lights are all put out;
We find ourselves in need of help
And try in vain to shout.
We suffer all the agonies
Of marytrs at the stake,
And just as all seems lost, at last
We manage to awake;
Then in a trice the awful woes
We thought we had disperse—
The nightmare comes to teach us that
Our troubles might be worse.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

Evidence to the Contrary.

"Do you think that a man is always better off for a college education?"

"No," answered the housewife, rather sharply. "This morning I asked a man who came around with a wagon whether he had any nice, fresh eggs. He merely looked at me reproachfully and said: "Madam, might I be permitted to observe that fresh eggs are always nice eggs, and nice eggs are always fresh."—Washington Star.

Haunted.

As I sit at fall of evening,
Musing 'fore the open fire,
'Joying thoughts as light and flitting
As the blazes of the pyre,
Lo! appears to me a figure
Standing in the flickering light,
And I say in trembling accents:
"Art thou come again to-night?
Speak! who art thou? what thine errand?"
Answer comes without delay:
"I'm Jim Brown, the tailor's son, sir; Here's that bill. Pa wants his pay!"
—Detroit Free Press.

TAKING IT BACK.

Victim—Say, you ought to change your vocation. You'd make a good butcher.

Barber—Sir, that's an insult.

Victim—Oh, all right. I'll take back what I said. No doubt you would make a rather clumsy butcher. —Chicago Daily News.

In the Pantry.

Little Tommy was stealing jam.
He couldn't deny the fact,
For his mother happened to catch him
Red-handed in the act.
—Chicago Tribune.

Not the Way He Wanted It.

"You promised me a kiss. May I take it?"

"Surely," she replied, "a first-class baseball player like you would derive no satisfaction from simply taking a kiss. Stand off across the room and I'll throw you one."

Even meritorious proficiency in some line may be regretted at times. —Chicago Post.

Canada's Wood-Pulp Exports.

Canada's exports of pulpwood and woodpulp in 1900 amounted to $3,335,329, of which $966,920 was sent to Great Britain and $2,302,215 to the United States, $66,194 going to other countries.

Couldn't Use Him.

Cholly—So you think I am too slow for any use?

She—Yes. You don't even make the other young men jealous.—The Smart Set.

ART IN ARCHITECTURE

Designed and Written Especially for This Paper

WE HAVE always maintained that any structure, no matter how inexpensive, intended as a dwelling place for civilized people, should be designed by a skilled man and should bear the marks of good designing. Good design in architecture, as well as elsewhere, costs no more than bad in construction. An essential feature of good designing is refinement, which is manifested in pleasing proportions and general outlines, or what is technically termed the "massing" of the building, the appropriate use of well-proportioned moldings and the various details which make up the whole. Refinement is best secured in simplicity of treatment and the use of delicate moldings and forms rather than in richest decorations. If our means are limited, it is better to concentrate our efforts upon a handsome front door and entrance, or for the interior in the staircase or a fireplace in the principal room. Cheap stained glass is vulgar, but a handsome stained glass window may be appropriately used in a hall or bathroom or sometimes in odd windows in a room.

A PRETTY LITTLE HOUSE FOR TOWN OR COUNTRY.

This little house is designed to meet the requirements of a family of moderate means in the country, and for that reason a number of sleeping rooms have been provided, a living room or sitting room and a large kitchen with the intention of eating in the kitchen, as is generally the case in the country. However, if a separate dining-room be desired it could be secured by using the front room for that purpose, with a passage to the kitchen through what is now a closet. A pretty veranda shades the front entrance and adds beauty to the exterior. The stairs to the second story lead up between the kitchen and the front bedroom, and the stairs to cellar lead down from the kitchen under the main flight. The sitting room has a projecting window on the right with seat and drawer case under.

In the second story there are three good-sized bedrooms, with large closets for each. Over the front porch a flat roof forms an open balcony.

There is a cellar under the building, with stone foundation walls. The house is of wood above the foundation, balloon framed, outside walls sheathed and papered and finished with siding. The gables and roof are shingled. All outside finishing lumber is of white pine, painted three coats. The interior trim is of pine, finished natural.

There is a china closet, sink and drain board, with force pump in the kitchen. The pantry is large and thoroughly equipped with cupboards, shelves, pastry table, bins and lockers.

The house has been built after these plans complete for $1,200.

E. A. PAYNE.

PLANS OF FIRST AND SECOND FLOORS.

Height of the Atmosphere.

The height of the atmosphere above the earth is not definitely known, but it may be approximately estimated in several ways. Judged by barometric pressure, it ought to end at the height of about 38 miles, for at that height the column of mercury in the barometer would tend to disappear. Meteors have been seen, however, at a height of 100 miles, and as their combustion results from friction generated by their passing through a resisting medium, there must be air at that elevation, though very rare. Observation of the duration of twilight, which is due to the reflection of the sun's light from particles of dust and air, shows that the limit is about 50 miles, and it is fair to assume, therefore, that the atmosphere, in its coherent form, as we know it, ends at that height.

The Highest of Waterfalls.

The highest waterfall in the world, geography tells us, is the Cerosola cascade, in the Alps, having a fall of 2,400 feet; that of Arvey, in Savoy, is 1,100 feet, and the falls of Yosemite valley range from 700 to 1,000 feet. But higher yet is the waterfall in the San Cuayatan canyon, in the state of Durango, Mex. It was discovered by some prospectors, ten years ago, in the great barranca district which is called the Tierras Desconocidas. While searching for the famous lost mine, Naranjal, a great roar of water was heard. With great difficulty the party pushed on, and up and down the mighty chasms until they beheld the superb fall that is at least 3,000 feet high.

A High Telegraph Pole.

A 160-foot mast has been set up at Siasconset, Mass., for the wireless telegraph station which will receive messages from the Nantucket lightship. The ground connections were made by placing eight heavy metallic plates, two and a half by eight feet, in the ground.

First Use of the Hot Blast.

James M. Swank, in a government report on iron and steel, says: The first practical application of the hot blast to the manufacture of pig iron in this country was made at the Oxford furnace, in New Jersey, in 1834, by William Henry, the manager. The waste heat at the tymp passed over the surface of a nest of small cast iron pipes, through which the blast was conveyed to the furnace. The temperature was raised to 250 degrees Fahrenheit and the product of the furnace was increased about ten per cent. In 1835 a hot-blast oven, containing cast iron arched pipes, was placed on the top of the stack by Mr. Henry and heated by the flame from the tunnel head. By this means the temperature of the blast was raised to 500 degrees. The fuel used was charcoal.—Science and Industry.

Liquid Fuel for Vessels.

The adaptability of liquid fuel for the smaller vessels of the British navy is now being tested with a special method of burning the oil. The liquid is distributed on a bed of coal and fire-brick by means of a steam spray, and there ignited. The Borneo oil is used, as it has been found better than the Russian article for this purpose. The great difficulty in the use of liquid fuel is in the maintenance of the steam pressure. When this has been overcome there is but little doubt that it will be extensively used in the navy.

Alcohol as Motor Fuel.

On a private railroad, used chiefly to carry coal to and bricks from a brickyard in Prussia, a locomotive using alcohol as fuel is used. It was bulit for a society for the promotion of the use of spirits, which, in that part of the world, are largely produced in distilleries of large landholders to utilize sirup produced in making beet sugar, unmarketable potatoes, etc.

Repartee.

Aristocrat—I understand that your grandfather made horseshoes.

Plebian—Yes, he made some for your grandfather once and the bill isn't receipted yet.—Somerville Journal.

W. L. DOUGLAS

UNION MADE

OUR $3.50 SHOES $3.00

THE WORLD'S GREATEST SHOE MAKER

MAJOR

W. L. Douglas $4 Gilt Edge Line Cannot be Equaled at Any Price.

For More than a Quarter of a Century the reputation of W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes for style, comfort and wear has excelled all other makes sold at these prices. This excellent reputation has been won by merit alone. W. L. Douglas shoes have to give better satisfaction than other $3.00 and $3.50 shoes because his reputation for the best $3.00 and $3.50 shoes must be maintained. The standard has always been placed so high that the wearer receives more value for his money in the W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than he can get elsewhere. W. L. Douglas makes and sells more $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than any other two manufacturers in the world. Fast Color Eyelets used. W. L. Douglas $2 and $2.50 shoes are made of the same high grade leathers used in $3 and $4 shoes, and are just as good in every way.

CATALOG FREE.

Sold by 63 Douglas stores in American cities selling direct from factory to wearer at one profit; and the best shoe dealers everywhere.

Insist upon having W. L. Douglas shoes with name and price stamped on bottom. Shoes sent anywhere on receipt of price and 25c. additional for carriage. Take measurements of foot as shown; state style desired; size and width usually worn; plain or cap toe; heavy, medium, or light soles.

W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

THE LATEST FASHION

FAMILY FOR MEN

FAVORITE HYMNS OF PRESIDENT McKINLEY:

"Nearer, My God, To Thee."
"Lead, Kindly Light," Etc.

ABSOLUTELY FREE

ALL THE WORDS. Write for them. ALL THE MUSIC. No cost to you.

McKinley Music Co., CHICAGO, 203 Wabash Ave. NEW YORK, 74 Fifth Ave.

AT ONCE WITH RIG

To sell our Poultry Mixture; straight salary $15 per week and expenses; year's contract, weekly pay. We furnish bank reference of our reliability. EUREKA MFG. CO., Dept. 5, East St. Louis, Ill.

STARK TREES best by Test—77 YEARS Largest Nursery. Fruit Book free. We Want More Salesmen. PAY CASH Weekly. STARK BRO'S, Louisiana, Mo.; Dansville, N. Y.; Etc.

HAZARD

Although one of the oldest powders in America and the favorite with hunters and sportsmen who have used it, the supply having been limited and the demand continuous, there has been no necessity for widely advertising, so that perhaps you are not familiar with its superiority over other brands. Your dealer will keep it in stock if you insist upon having it. Prices as low as other makes. HAZARD BLACK and HAZARD SMOKELESS powders are up to date and simply perfection, whether used loose or in loaded shell.

GUN POWDER

DROPSY NEW DISCOVERY; gives quick relief and cures worst cases. Book of testimonials and 10 days' treatment Free. Dr. H. H. GREEN'S SONS, Box D, ATLANTA, GA.

OPIUM WHISKY and other drug habits cured. We want the worst cases. Book and references FREE. Dr. B. M. WOOLLEY, Box 3, Atlanta, Ga.

A. N. K.—C 1900

PENSIONS on age, disability and Widowhood; P. J. or any U. S. Service. LAWS FREE. A. W. McCORMICK & SONS, Cincinnati, O.; Washington, D. C.

FREE FOR TOBACCO TAGS

NOV. 30TH

FROM

"STAR"
"HORSE SHOE"
"SPEARHEAD"
"STANDARD NAVY"
"J. T."
"PIPER HEIDSIECK"
"BOOT JACK"
"DRUMMOND" NATURAL LEAF
"OLD PEACH & HONEY"
"NOBBY SPUN ROLL"
"JOLLY TAR"
"E. RICE, GREENVILLE"
"GRANGER TWIST"

2 Granger Twist Tags being equal to one of others mentioned.

"Good Luck," "Cross Bow," "Old Honesty," "Master Workman," "Sickle," "Brandywine," "Planet," "Neptune," "Razor," "Tennessee Cross Tie," "Ole Varginy." 3

TAGS MAY BE ASSORTED IN SECURING PRESENTS.

Our new illustrated CATALOGUE OF PRESENTS FOR 1902

will include many articles not shown here. It will contain the most attractive List of Presents ever offered for Tags, and will be sent by mail on receipt of postage—two cents.

(Catalogue will be ready for mailing about January 1st, 1902.)

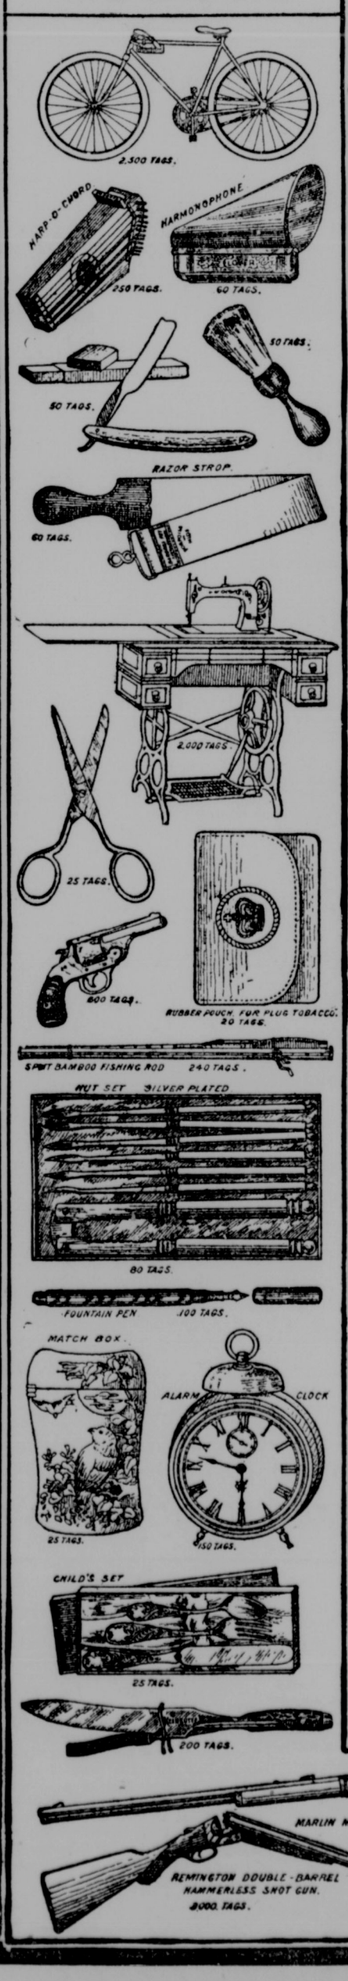
Our offer of Presents for Tags will expire Nov. 30th, 1902.

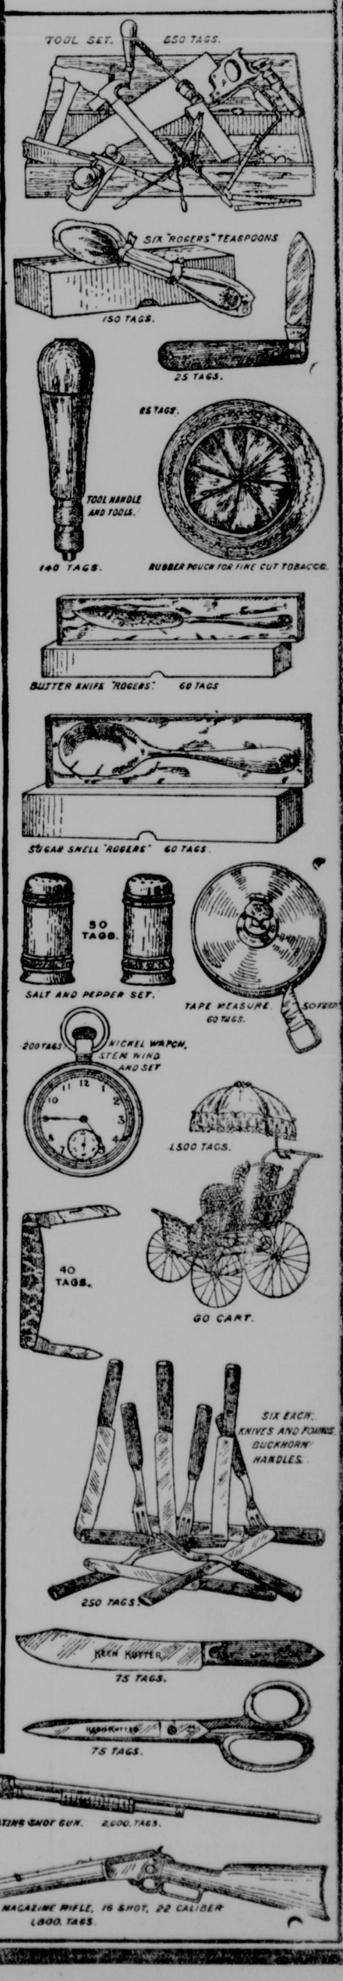
CONTINENTAL TOBACCO COMPANY.

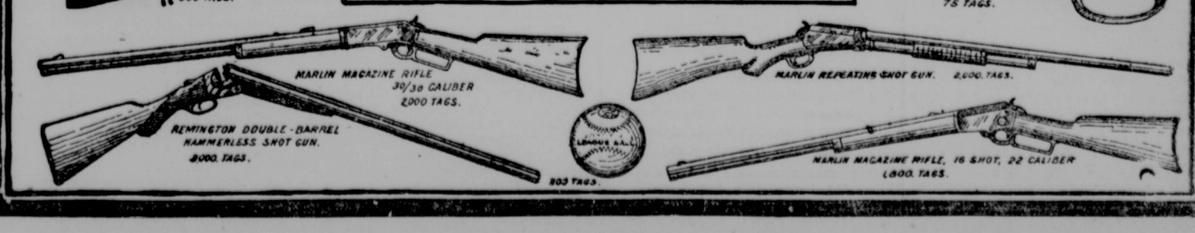
Write your name and address plainly on outside of packages containing Tags, and send them and requests for Presents to

C. Hy. BROWN,
4241 Folsom Ave.,
St. Louis, Mo.

1902.







GROWTH OF CITIES.

Influence of Electric Roads on Urban Population.

In looking for an explanation of the astonishing growth of urban populations it is not necessary to go beyond the improvement in facilities for communication between centers of population and their suburbs, says the New York Times. About 1850 the horse car became in a small way a factor in determining the diffusion of population, gradually building up suburbs to which the leisure classes withdrew when seeking rural surroundings without entire separation from the advantages of nearness to a city.

Anything within an hour of the business center of a town or city was considered as admitting of suburban development, and an hour by the horse car did not take the passenger very far afield.

With the passing of the horse car and the advent of the trolley car, the area of accessible suburbs expanded very rapidly. In an hour a passenger is whirled past the utmost limit of horse car service and into what five or ten years ago were farm lands, worth no more by the acre than they are now valued at per villa site, or under exceptionally favorable conditions per front foot. The suburbs were removed five, six, eight, and even ten miles from the former city limits, and the nearby neighborhoods were left no recourse except to annex themselves to and become wards of the cities they had formerly surrounded.

This tendency is noticeable in nearly every large city, and it is encouraged and facilitated by the electric railroad, which is bringing everything within a radius of five to ten miles as near for all practical purposes as neighborhoods within the mile or two mile radius used to be.

This means that what under the conditions existing before the era of electric railroads would have been a relatively small city surrounded by a fringe of villages and having within a given number of square miles a population about equally divided for purposes of census tabulation between the urban and rural classifications is now a city of steadily widening boundaries and with, say, twice the population which could be comfortably accommodated within its original municipal limits.

DELIVERY OF MILK.

Public Health Demands Perfect Cleanliness of Receptacles.

Discussing the danger that menaces the public health in the careless manner in which milk is often delivered, the New York Evening Post takes the board of health of Utica to task for its attitude in this matter. The Post says:

"The board of health in Utica has decided to recommend that the use of bottles for milk has no advantage so far as the public health is concerned; that it is more of a fad than a necessity; that milk served from thoroughly cleaned cans into the vessels furnished by the people themselves would avoid the danger arising from the use of bottles gathered from places where infectious diseases have been prevalent and, unknown to the milk dealer, used by him the next day.

"This is voicing the argument of the indifferent milkman, who knows little of sanitary laws and cares less. It has been repeated so often that members of the Utica board of health must have heard it that the conveyance of milk in cans, which must be opened occasionally, and in open pails from the delivery wagon to the consumer's can or pitcher on the kitchen steps is a dangerous practice, submitting the milk to infection from the microbe laden dust of the city streets. As to the dangers from the use of unclean bottles, that may be avoided by requiring the dairyman to sterilize his bottles. It is his business and not that of his patrons to wash those receptacles."

This is a question that boards of health generally should interest themselves in and see to it that the laws of sanitation are strictly observed.

The Deadly Grade Crossing.

According to the report of the interstate railroad commission for the year ended June 31, 1901, there were 17,865 persons killed and 50,320 injured by the railroads of the United States. Of this number 5,128 killed and 6,949 injured are classified in the report as trespassers. While a considerable proportion of these so called trespassers were perhaps unlawfully on the property of the railroad companies and their deaths or injuries presumably the results of their own carelessness or folly, the great majority of them were unquestionably within their legal rights in passing over or upon the property of the railroad companies and were killed or injured in grade crossing accidents for which the companies were mainly responsible. The lesson which these figures convey is that town and county authorities should strenuously insist upon the abolition of grade crossings wherever possible, or at least to have such crossings adequately guarded with gates or watchmen, or both. So long as the grade crossing exists, eternal vigilance is the price of public safety.

Yonkers Never Had a Boom.

The city of Yonkers, N. Y., is one of those places that pride themselves upon never having had a boom. Yonkers has had, on the other hand, what its admirers style "a healthy growth." Thousands of people have moved in in the last few years, and thousands of houses have been built, but the city has not suffered from this influx. In 1880 there were only 18,000 people recorded in the census. In 1890 this had grown to 33,000, and in 1900 there were 50,000 on the books. A city that can grow at this rate and not suffer from its prosperity has every reason to congratulate itself.

COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.
OAKLAND, MD., Nov. 21, 1901.

The Board of County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Dec. 3, 1901,

to transact any business that may be brought before them.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

Trustee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court of Garrett county, Maryland, passed in a cause wherein Noah Brenneman and others are plaintiffs and Paul Beachy and others are defendants, the same being No. 1115 Equity in said Court, the undersigned, as trustee, will sell by public auction, on the premises near the town of Bittinger in said county, on

SATURDAY,
The 7th Day of December, 1901,
AT 10 O'CLOCK A. M.,

all that valuable fee simple piece or parcel of land of which the late John Brenneman and Benedict Beachy died seized and possessed, and on which Paul Beachy now resides, the same being

MILITARY LOTS NOS. 2417, 2418, 2419 and 2420,

lying in one body and comprising a farm of

200 ACRES.

About 150 acres of said place is cleared and in cultivation and the balance in timber. It is improved by a barn and fair-sized dwelling house, together with other outbuildings, and has an ordinary apple orchard thereon. Taxes adjusted to day of sale. (For title see deed from Samuel Brenneman and wife to John Brenneman and Benedict Beachy, dated February 5th, 1881, and recorded among the land records of Garrett county in Liber No. 5, folio 548, &c.)

TERMS OF SALE:—One-third cash, one-third in six months and one-third in twelve months from day of sale (or all cash, at the option of the purchaser), the credit payments bearing interest from the day of sale and to be secured by the note or notes of the purchaser or purchasers, endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustee.

JOEL ORENDORF, Trustee.

FRED. A. THAYER, Solicitor.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD

CALIFORNIA

Via New Orleans & the Sunset Route.

THE ONLY TRUE WINTER ROUTE.

No Snow Blockades or Blizzards.

The only line operating double daily service between Cincinnati and New Orleans, carrying Pullman Palace Drawing Room Sleepers, free Reclining Chair Cars and Buffet, Library, Smoking Cars, Cafe Dining Cars (meals a la carte).

FASTEST and FINEST TRAINS in the SOUTH.

Pullman Excursion Sleeping Cars through to San Francisco from Chicago, via Omaha and the scenic line of the world.

Pullman Excursion Sleeping Cars through to San Francisco from Cincinnati and Chicago, via New Orleans and the Sunset route. These cars are personally conducted by competent agents to look after the welfare of patrons. Quickest and best line to

OKLAHOMA AND INDIAN TERRITORY.

Fastest train service to the famous

BEAUMONT, TEXAS, OIL FIELDS.

Through Sleeping Car from Chicago without change and through Sleeping Car reservations from Cincinnati via Memphis, Tenn., to

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

SPECIAL HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS TO ALL POINTS SOUTH, WEST AND NORTH WEST.

For FREE descriptive matter and full particulars regarding above, address

E. A. RICHTER,
Traveling Passenger Agent,
812 Park Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

WANTED—Several persons of character and good reputation in each state (one in this county required) to represent and advertise old established wealthy business house of solid financial standing. Salary $18.00 weekly with expenses additional, all payable in cash each Wednesday direct from head offices. Horse and carriage furnished, when necessary. References. Enclose self-addressed stamped envelope. Manager, 316 Caxton Building, Chicago. 28 13t

Burlington Route

It costs no more to ride on this beautiful train than on any other.

Chicago-St.Paul Minneapolis Limited Express

It is electric lighted and heated by steam, carries a library-buffet-smoking car, a dining car à la carte and everything there is to make one comfortable.

Leaves CHICAGO 6.30 p. m. Daily

We sell through tickets, reserve sleeping car berths, furnish maps and time tables, and can, perhaps, be of service in other ways. Kindly write or call.

H. E. HELLER, District Passenger Agent, 632 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

The Garrett County Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:

DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MD.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.

Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.

F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

A Promise for Next Year

1902 has many good things in store for all of us; the country has seldom before been as prosperous as it is to-day. But, aside from this, education was never so general, and the number of well-informed, intelligent Americans is very large indeed in proportion to our country's population. This is easily explained in the fact that we are a nation of readers, and we are extremely critical aud discriminating in the matter of literature. One of the best evidences that this is the truth is demonstrated by the enormous popularity of The Metropolitan Magazine. That a monthly periodical of such a high character as The Metropolitan should be eagerly read every month by more than half a milliou Americans proves not only the worth of the magazine, but a keen appreciation of good fiction, timely articles, and extremely artistic illustrations.

For the Exclusive Benefit of this Newspapers Readers

the publishers of The Metropolitan Magazine offer a rare treat for the coming year. To every one sending us a year's subscription at One Dollar and Fifty Cents ($1.50) we will send The Metropolitan Magazine for thirteen months to any address in the United States. Your subscription under this special offer includes the superb Christmas number with all its colored plates, many of which are suitable for framing. During the coming year The Metropolitan Magazine will present to its readers 2,500 superb illustrations by the greatest artists, nearly 2,000 pages of the best and newsiest reading (including stories by the world's greatest writers), with a pictorial cover on each number, printed in seven colors. It would take a column of this paper to print the names of all the famous men and women who have contracted to entertain our readers during 1902. This offer is good only for thirty days from this date, and subscriptions should be forwarded at once. You can make no more acceptable Christmrs gift than a year's subscription to The Metropolitan Magazine for 1902. Address

THE METROPOLITAN MAGAZINE,
116 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK.

Winter Tourists Tickets Now on Sale via Seaboard Air Line Railway.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway announces that, effective October 15, 1901, round trip Winter Excursion tickets will be placed on sale to resort points on its lines in North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. These low rates taken in connection with the superior service and fast schedules operated over this line, which is the shortest and best to Florida points, are brought to the attention of those who are planning Winter tours. It will be distinctly to their advantage to obtain definite information, which will be cheerfully furnished by an Agent or Representative of the Company.

J. C. HORTON, Eastern Pass'r Agent,
1183 Broadway, New York City.
C. L. LONGSDORF, E. E. Pass'r Agt.,
306 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
J. R. DUVAL, Passenger Agent,
Cont'l Trust Bldg., Baltimore, Md.
R. E. L. BUNCH, Gen'l Pass'r Agt.,
Portsmouth, Va

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by all dealers.

"The Deacon."

THE
SECOND NATIONAL BANK
of CUMBERLAND, MD.

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000

Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
John Sheridan, A. Hunter Boyd,
David W. Sloan.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT NOV. 17, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, Nov. 17, 1901, Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily.....12.52 A. M
No. 3—Daily.....7.32 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday.....10.01 A. M
No. 55—Daily.....4.52 P. M
No. 1—Daily.....10.07 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—Daily.....12.37 A. M
No. *8—Daily.....5.54 A. M
No. 2—Daily.....6.18 A. M
No. 72—Accom day except Sun.....2.47 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily.....4.46 P. M
No. 12—Daily.....8.35 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT SEPT. 29, 1901.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	SOUTHWARD No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	NORTHWARD No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15*	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 06	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June.	10 51	6 01
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 15	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	5 15
6 00*	9 50* ar	Elk Garden	*8 10	*4 25
5 49*	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 38	10 27	Thomas	8 38	3 53
7 10	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 15
6 48	10 35 lv	Coketon	8 35	3 50
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 09	3 15
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 10†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 15
	SOON
8 46*	12 52† ar	Beverly	lv	†1 44
9 10*	1 15† ar	Huttonsville	lv	†1 20
M. P.				P. M.
	3 15* ar	Bealington	lv	*11 45
	P. M.			A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, Gen. Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agent

I HAVE PURCHASED
THE OAKLAND COAL YARD
of Mr. D. L. Conneway and will continue the business. I will keep constantly on hand a large supply of
HARD AND SOFT
COAL,
KINDLING WOOD, Etc.

All orders will receive prompt attention. Leave orders with the weighmaster or at my residence, the Giessman Hotel.

35-2 GEO. GIESSMAN

VALUABLE
REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

153½ acres coal land on Youghiogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale. House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187½ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 26½ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 200 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ mues southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north o Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swauger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to
JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

E W Grove

This signature is on every box of the genuine Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets the remedy that cures a cold in one day

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY,
ARCHITECT,
Office 7 North Liberty St.
CUMBERLAND, MD.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.

Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.
Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Money loaned on Mortgage.
Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.
Agent for the Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.
Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
OAKLAND, MD
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in McComas's Building, Main St.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. [e14-1y

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD
Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients. 48—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,

Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. '88 10 6

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.
Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 16-'99

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office opposite Garrett County Bank.
Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 6 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER,
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.
Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by aneroid barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26t*

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate.
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.
Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats, descriptions and estimates furnished. 40-1yr.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!

I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 20,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.

All trespassing will be prosecuted to the ullest extent of the law.

Call on or address:
C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1901. NUMBER 38.

ORIGIN OF LOCAL HISTORICAL NAMES.

Savage River and Mountain—A Tragedy Which Gave Negro Mountain Its Name.

"J. B." in Cumberland News.

The article recently published in the Daily News touching on the names of mountains, rivers and Indians, seemed to have formed acceptable reading to a goodly number of persons, I have concluded to follow it up with another on the same lines, beginning at Cumberland, the source of whose name is well known. In early times, there were quite a number of Indians along the Potomac and Wills creek, which unite at our now city. In the angle formed by them there was not only good hunting ground, but good soil for "Indian Corn," which is more conveniently cultivated than any other food cereal. Among the natives of those times was Indian Will. Likely his name came from some white man, which was then no uncommon thing, as in the case of the celebrated Indian, Logan, who was the son of Skikellimus, chief of the Cayugas. But after becoming civilized, or partly so, under the Moravians in Pennsylvania, he was given the name of Logan, in honor of James Logan, one of the governors of Pennsylvania, in colonial times. So our Indian Will had the double honor of having a large stream of water—Wills creek, and a mountain—Wills mountain, at our city, named for him, the former severing the latter in its middle to its very base. Tradition tells us, somewhat dimly, that he was buried on the top of this mountain, about five miles north of this city.

I will pass by Dan's Mountain, as it was noticed in a previous paper, to the two Savage mountains, Great and Little, about one mile west of Frostburg. Those two ranges, it is understood derive their names from the wild character and nature of the surrounding country, and not on account of the presence of the savages or Indians. They did not inhabit the mountain regions as much as the lowlands. It is believed the name was given by Washington, who crossed the mountains, once or more, prior to Braddock's campaign, as he recognized the name. The Savage Creek flowing along the narrow valley down to the Potomac received its name from the same source. Meadow mountain is reached by way of the old National road, which passes over it eleven miles west of Frostburg. Little Meadows, at the western foot of this mountain, was a favorite stopping place of Washington prior to 1755. He gave the name to this charming place and also to the mountain which smiled upon the then beautiful prairie. This range of the Alleghenies, is a favorite to many, especially to the writer, whose home in youth was at its western base.

Often did he cast wishing looks up its even slopes; and at times when at his willing toils in the fields and meadows of the old home plantation, he would trend his eyes up and along Mason and Dixon's line—in early times plainly discernable from the deep depression or trench in the forest timber, which in the beginning had been cut down and cleared away to a width of about 50 feet—in 1768. Several generations of time were necessary to heal this deep wound in the native forest. It is well this historic line is about to be retraced and permanently marked, which was only partially done in the beginning. Just a few rods beyond the Little Meadows is the beginning of the Crossings hill, a slope westward of nearly two miles to the margin of the Little Crossings river, which gave the name to the hill. The map of Braddock's old road recognizes "Little Crossings," meaning the stream. This was and still is the original name of not only the river, but the "post town" or village on its margin. In recent years it has been called Castleman's river, but why, when or by whom so named no one seems to know. It is believed this new and erroneous name flowed up stream from somewhere in Pennsylvania. There is a station on the P. C. R. R. in Somerset county, called Castleman. The legal name of the Little Crossings has never been changed by authoritive method.

HISTORIC NEGRO MOUNTAIN.

The next and last mountain to be noted in this paper is Negro mountain. It or rather its name has tragical history. Its foot is about two miles west of Grantsville, with a moderate slope to the beautiful crest, with its magnificent views. It has been known for generations from vague tradition that the name came from a deadly battle between a negro and a hostile Indian. The Indian was slain, and the heroic negro at the time was supposed to be mortally wounded.

The most authentic and reliable account of this affair that I am aware of came from the venerable Joseph Friend, who died in Garrett county about eight years ago, at the great age of over ninety years. In 1893 he wrote me a long letter largely in reference to his ancestry. The three brothers, Nicholas, Jacob and Israel Friend, came from Sweden. The letter among other things stated that Capt. Cresap, old Thomas it is supposed, raised a company of 25 men to fight the hostile Indians. These men were dressed in Indian style, and marched in single file along the line that afterwards became Braddock's road till they encountered the natives, who inquired who the approaching men were. "Brother Indians," was the answer, but the truth was they were enemies instead of friends. A fierce battle ensued in which the negro already mentioned, and an Indian drew their guns at the same instant at each other and fired. The Indian fell dead and the Negro fearfully wounded.

After a severe battle the combatants separated. The heroic negro was left behind, laid by the side of a log for dead or to die. He was covered up with such debris as could be found. Friend did not state which side won the victory, but the captain must have returned to Skipton, his home. He was not a man to be whipped by the Indians at least. The day after the battle, straggling soldiers from Col. Washington's unfortunate affair at Fort Necessity or Great Meadows came by the battle ground where they heard deep groans from the side of the log. Search was made and the heroic negro was found in his agonies. The account given in the letter did not say what become of the sufferer, but it is supposed he died. At any rate his memorial is Negro Mountain to this day with many interesting and strange incidents in later years upon its summit, on the old National road. Nicholas Friend and Andrew Friend were in this fight from whom Joseph Friend obtained his information.

Grandfather Nicholas Friend died in old age, and was buried at or near McHenry in Garrett county, Md. Good old Joseph in his letter pathetically told how he wrote it. The tremulous right hand that wrote down his words and thoughts was steadied by the left member. How earnest, devoted and obliging he was. But his vast treasures of local and personal information are lost forever. Only few persons realize or appreciate such a loss. Here is one who does.

Nov. 20, 1901. J. B.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

For the past week the male portion of our population have been hunting—successfully hunting. Clerk Duckworth, as far as we know, is the champion, killing at "one hunt" six pheasants and four rabbits.

Advantage was taken of the cold snap by our farmers, by butchering cattle and hogs, hence fresh meat is plentiful and cheap.

Eggs are eggs and are as scarce as Republicans use to be in the ninth district.

The B. & O. masons put in a substantial foundation for the "tower" last week. All the material for the wood work and slate roof is here.

The Hustling Store Co. has ties, mine props and lumber enough along the sidetrack to load a dozen or more cars.

Wm. Clair visited Parsons, W. Va., last week.

The Youth's Companion has more than forty subscribers at this place.

Manager Rudisill made a business trip to Piedmont and Cumberland Tuesday, returning home on No. 55 Wednesday.

The heavy snow of last Sabbath broke quite a number of limbs from the trees throughout the Park, also disconnected the telephone wires at several places.

John Sanders has moved into one of Mrs. Bunce's houses at Loch Lynn.

J. A. Enlow and family contemplate moving to Cumberland next week. Mr. E's business requires him to be nearer headquarters.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by all dealers.

WHERE I GOT MY "LIBRARY IDEA"

By ANDREW CARNEGIE

WHEN I was a boy working in a cotton factory, a true benefactor of his race, Colonel Anderson, announced that he would attend every Saturday in his library and give to working boys and young men a book from his shelves. He had only about 400 volumes, but I DOUBT IF EVER SO SMALL A NUMBER OF BOOKS WERE PUT TO A BETTER USE. Only he who has longed as I did for Saturdays to come can understand what Colonel Anderson did for me and for others of the boys of Allegheny, several of whom have risen to eminence. Is it any wonder that I resolved that if ever surplus wealth came to me I would use it in imitating my benefactor?

THE NEXT STEP IN CO-OPERATION

By SAMUEL M. JONES, Mayor of Toledo

THE trusts are making the application of the co-operative principle in the field of production. They are abolishing the warlike methods of competition and eliminating its dreadful and costly waste. Any combination of men and materials that saves labor and lightens the burden of human toil is in the line of progress and ought to be encouraged, but the trustmakers have not reckoned on the next step, WHICH IS JUST AS INEVITABLE AS THE STEP THAT LED TO THE FORMATION OF THE TRUSTS. This next step is co-operation in the field of distribution and the saving effected by the development of labor saving machinery, and the organization of the trusts does not belong alone to the trustmakers. This saving is a social product because it would not be possible except for the combined efforts of employer and employed alike.

These profits are a social product and should and will yet be socially owned and distributed in the way best calculated to build up the citizenship of the nation. This is to be brought about by a gradual process. The shorter workday is a step toward it, and the next step in the development of industry is the adoption of a system of co-operation in the field of distribution that will recognize the principle to which our government is dedicated and upon which all humanity must be saved or forever lost.

THAT PRINCIPLE IS EQUALITY OF ALL MEN AND THE RIGHT OF THE HUMBLEST CITIZEN—YES, THE RIGHT OF EVERY BABY BORN ON THE PLANET—TO HAVE ACCESS TO EVERYTHING NEEDED TO DEVELOP IN THAT BABY THE HIGHEST POSSIBILITIES OF CITIZENSHIP.

A RECORD DROUGHT.

'Tis the Driest Autumn in Maryland for 25 Years.

This is the driest autumn Maryland has had in the past 25 years. The drought has been general over the State, and the director of the weather station says it is the driest since the establishment of the weather service in Maryland.

In the country the farmers have noted the dry spell with apprehension. The following table will explain the abnormal conditions of the drought during the past two months and the present month, to date:

September—Total rainfall, 2.50 inches; average rainfall for the month the past 25 years, 3.58 inches. This month's shortage this autumn, 1.38 inches.

October—Total rainfall, 1.52 inches; average rainfall of the month the past 25 years, 2.95 inches. The month's shortage, 1.46 inches.

November—Total rainfall, .12 inches; average rainfall for the month the past 25 years, 2.20 inches. The month's shortage, 2.08 inches.

The table shows that the accumulated shortage for the three months is 4.92 inches. While the shortage for the month of October is not so great, in comparison, it does not alter the nature of the case. Practically all the rain that fell during the month was prior to the 15th, which made it of little or no service to farmers as to the sowing of next year's wheat crop.

Agricultural reports from the State show that nearly all the wheat was sowed after that date, and has since had almost continuous drought, the rainfall this month to date being the smallest possible.

It is thought that the wheat crop will be materially injured by the protracted drought. The grain has been deprived of the moisture sufficient for germination, and should ample rains fall now the young shoots of the grain would be in a tender state and would easily succumb to early cold. Of course, the seed has to a certain extent remained in the ground dry and sound, with a possible exception of a slight shriveling. On the other hand, should enough rain fall barely to moisten the grain and thereby cause it to rot, there will be a large loss.

Should there be rain enough to cause the wheat to sprout, and if no hard freeze follows, the frost will not harm it, as it will only crop the tips of the sprouts, which often is done by the farmers' cattle, they being turned into the field when the growth is what is known as "rank."

Of course, the drought protected the corn crop. It has been caused by the areas of high pressure that have prevailed this fall and by the general absence of cyclonic disturbances, which precipitate rain areas.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Sunday morning the snow was ten inches deep, most of it had fallen during the night. It was so wet and heavy that it was both bending and breaking the trees.

J. A. Enlow has accepted a position as salesman for J. B. Williams Co., and will locate at Cumberland, Md., in the S. T. Little building, at least for the winter. He is to have charge of a new marble yard in that city, yet he will continue to travel this territory. He will move the first of December. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Flowers have already moved into his residence here. Mr. Enlow and family have nearly completed their 20th year here, and would gladly stay longer, but they wish to put their children into the excellent schools there.

Mr. L. A. Rudisill is spending part of this week in Piedmont and Cumberland, looking after closing up some lot sales here.

Joseph Lashorn, of Deer Park, is here lathing the new addition to the Chautauqua Hotel.

ISADOR RAYNER'S FEE.

Not One Dollar Would Great Lawyer Take From Schley.

Rear-Admiral W. S. Schley has presented Mr. Isador Rayner, who so ably represented the Admiral in the recent famous hearing before the Court of Inquiry, with a handsome souvenir as a token of his great esteem and affection for the distinguished Maryland lawyer. Mrs. Rayner has also been remembered.

A special dispatch from Washington states that two beautiful presents were recently sent out from that city by Rear-Admiral Schley. One was a valuable gold timepiece and the other a magnificent brooch of diamonds and pearls.

The watch came to Attorney-General Rayner and the brooch to Mrs. Rayner with expressions of the highest regard from Admiral and Mrs. Schley. Mr. Rayner declined to say anything about what he regarded as a personal matter, and Admiral Schley pleaded that nothing be said of the matter.

It is stated that both the watch and the brooch are beautiful and valuable samples of the jeweler's art. They came, it is understood, as a complete surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Rayner.

A mutual friend of Mr. Rayner and Admiral Schley, at Washington, who saw the gifts, describes them as follows:

"The watch is of solid gold, with white face and plain English numerals. On the back of the case is Mr. Rayner's monogram, 'I. R.,' exquisitely engraved. The chain is heavy, but perfectly plain, and on the end is a large ring, to which is attached a small gold pencil, likewise severely plain. The watch was made by Galt & Bros., of Washington.

"The brooch, or pendant, sent Mrs. Rayner, is about 1½ inches in diameter and heart-shaped. In the center is an egg-shaped stone, about the size of a finger nail. It is of a pale, delicate green when viewed by gaslight, but at other times has a decidedly bluish tint. Surrounding this center stone are seven solitaire pearls, each nearly as large as a small pea. Around the edges of the pendant are 50 diamonds, set close together and imbedded deeply in the gold forming a continuous border of the precious stones.

"Both watch and pendant are incased in handsome caskets of red plush, covered with leather of the same hue."

It can be stated upon the best authority that Rear-Admiral Schley has written to Mr. Rayner asking him to name his own fee for service rendered the Admiral before the Court of Inquiry, and that Mr. Rayner has positively declined to accept a single dollar.

A friend of Mr. Rayner who followed the trial and was with him a great deal during that time stated that he knew that after Mr. Rayner had declined to receive any compensation for his services Admiral Schley had insisted upon paying Mr. Rayner's expenses during the three months he spent in Washington. Mr. Rayner during that time had very expensive apartments at the Shoreham and Williard's where witnesses met daily for consultation. The gentleman declares that Mr. Rayner absolutely declined to receive any payment at all in the way of expense.

This gentlemen further stated that during the trial he heard a number of United States Senators and Representatives speak to Mr. Rayner with reference to offering a bill in Congress to provide compensation for the attorneys, and he heard Mr. Rayner say that while he appreciated their purpose very much it was not a case for money as far as he was concerned.

Mr. Rayner was seen and was asked if he would object to stating whether he had made any charge for the professional services rendered Admiral Schley before the Court of Inquiry. Mr. Rayner replied:

"I know that you will excuse me from talking about this matter. The Admiral is such a noble and generous soul that he would have sacrificed the last cent he had in the world for those who represented him in this case, and when it comes to money you can not measure his liberality.

"There are cases, however," continued Mr. Rayner, "in which I could not accept any compensation. Every feeling that I have in the world is so involved in this matter that I do not desire to hear the word money in connection with it."

Mr. Rayner's connection with the famous case has made his name known throughout the world, and everywhere public attention was divided between interest in the sensational nature of the evidence and the splendid manner in which Admiral Schley's side of the case had been managed by his counsel. Mr. Rayner, some time before the hearing began, gave up all his business here, went to Washington and devoted himself entirely to the Schley case. In a wonderfully short space of time he had mastered all the intricate and numerous details, and from the first was confidant of a verdict that would give Admiral Schley in full measure the tardy justice that had been withheld.

Mr. Rayner worked 15 and 16 hours a day during nearly the entire hearing. He was assisted by Captain Parker, an expert in naval matters, and Admiral Schley himself rendered valuable assistance. Ex-Judge Jeremiah S. Wilson, who had been retained as one of Admiral Schley's attorney's, died suddenly shortly after the case opened. The brilliant fight made by Mr. Rayner is well remembered and is evidently thoroughly appreciated by Admiral Schley.

HOYES.

Snow fell to a depth of eight or ten inches Saturday night and Sunday morning which stuck to the timber and made a very picturesque scene.

A series of meetings is in progress conducted by Rev. D. A. Friend.

We are making preparation for services on Thanksgiving day. We will have fifty pounds of candy to treat the Sunday school children. All are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Bishoff returned home Saturday from Morgantown, W. Va., where they have spent some time visiting friends and relatives.

Miss Lillie Smith and sister, Sadie, of West Virginia, who were visiting their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith, left here last Monday morning for Mr. Abel Dewitt's, where they will remain a few days.

Mr. Blaine Wilburn returned home Saturday from Abel Dewitt's where he has spent a few days hunting. We are sorry to say that he met with very poor success.

Our school is progressing nicely under the care of Miss Esther Budd. The only draw-back is that of the books. Some of our scholars have only one free book and others have two or three. Our teacher has sent order after order to the School Board. Once she received some two or three books. Part of them were not what she ordered; another time she received some answer papers which were also the wrong kind. One of the scholars made out a list of books needed and when it was telephoned to the School Board's office the examiner asked, "where are the books you got last winter?" as though we were superintendent of public schools and knew all about them. When he was told they were taken away by orders from Mr. Browning last spring for normal use he said, "well, you will have to go and hunt them up." If he knows how many books we had and will send us a list we would know how many was taken away and we would try and hunt them up. We think as people have to pay their taxes, and sure we pay as much as any other place, some investigation ought to be made concerning the matter as to where the money that is levied for free books is going. The books necessary to run the public schools of Garrett county are not sent out and the people should not be treated as a set of heathen or uncivilized people. There have been several of our most able scholars forced to stop school on account of no books, we are very sorry to hear. If the scholars must stop going to school on account of no books, and if the board thinks that we ought to look after the books that they get paid to look after, they must let us know and other schools may send their order to us and we will have plenty of books to fill their orders promptly.

A GREAT RAILWAY.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway owns and operates over 6,600 miles of thoroughly equipped road in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, South Dakota, North Dakota, Missouri and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

It owns and operates all equipment in service on its lines, including Sleeping Cars, Parlor Cars and Dining Cars, maintaining an excellence of service unequaled on any railway in the world.

It has been a Pioneer in the Northwest and West in the use of the block system in the operation of its trains, in the lighting of trains by electricity, heating by steam and many other progressive methods, which have added safety, comfort and luxury to travel. It is always the leader in that direction.

The Pioneer Limited Trains between Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis have the costliest and handsomest Sleeping Cars in the world and the best Dining-Car service.

Time tables, maps and information furnished on application to John R. Pott, District Passenger Agent, 810 Park Building, Pittsburg. 37-3t.

GAME.—H. Creutzburg buys game of all kinds for cash.

"Keep A-Tryin'" Signboards.

"My boy," said Uncle Hiram, "you'll soon be starting out,
To drive o'er Life's long roadway, and oft a bit of doubt
Will puzzle you completely, as to which you'd best pursue
Of branching ways, when roads fork out, as they're inclined to do.
Each bears the equal marks of well-worn travel, like as not,
And so, one's undecided which he'd better choose to trot;
But I have learned the route, my boy, and thus much I'll confess—
The 'Keep a-tryin'' signboards mark the highway to Success.

"Success is such a pretty town—to reach it, all men strive;
You'll find the crowd, though, growing less, the farther on you drive—
For many, seeking shorter cuts through Dilly-dally Lane,
Get so far off the highway that they find it ne'er again!
You'll be allured, as on you go, by finger-posts that say:
'Take Chance's Road, past Waitingville, it's far the better way;'
But I this safer route would fain upon your mind impress—
The 'Keep a-tryin'' signboards mark the highway to Success.

"The road that runs through Waitingville has prospects bright and fair,
When first you start, but, farther on, it leads through swamps of Care,
And, after that, you'll have to climb the weary hill of Debt;
Then, still beyond, there looms in view the tollgate of Regret.
And so, my boy, when starting on the road of Life, alone,
The route your Uncle Hiram chose I trust you'll make your own,
And heed his plain directions, if you'd quite avoid distress;
The 'Keep-a-tryin'' signboards mark the highway to Success.

—Roy Farrell Greene, in Success.

A SEQUOIA DRYAD

By ETHEL WATTS MUMFORD.

DERRINGER thought he had a good thing when he bought up the timber rights of Cleopatra canyon. The grade was down all the way to the opening and the inlet made up close to the hills. Nothing easier than to swing the great redwood sections on the waiting freighter and transport them to Monterey, where the cheap Jap laborers could put on the finishing polish, convert huge slabs of rough timber to shining monolithic table tops—for that was his scheme, round tables, such as King Arthur would have envied. Already his friends—artists, decorators and millionaires in the country places, had filled his pocket with orders, and he could clear up a tidy little sum which he needed sadly. One acquisition he made, however, upon which he had not counted—the Dryad. He first saw her the day he brought up his men and tools and set them to building shacks by the spring side. She advanced to meet him from the trunk of a giant sequoia, with a hesitating, nervous step, paused some ten feet away and observed him. In turn he scrutinized her singular person. She was tall and sinewy, and her powerful shoulders were draped in an old Spanish shawl of Chinese crepe—a black ground embroidered in colors—a tattered skirt of dark silk hung below, and was gathered full at the waist after the ante-bellum fashion of California. The Dryad's face was haunting, white and hard like ivory, but cut by a strangely scarlet mouth that made a sudden dash of color in its pallid oval. Black eyes that burned slumberously drew down waxen lids to hide their fire, and black brows met in a straight line over a thin aquiline nose. Derringer looked, and his flesh crawled. She continued to watch him in silence. He wet his lips thrice, and then managed at last to speak.

"Who are you—and what do you want?"

"I am Carmelita," she answered, in Spanish. "What are you come for?"

"The timber," he answered, roughly; "what business is that of yours?"

She looked at him sullenly. "What for? You cannot move them; they are fast as the hills—and they do not wish to go."

He shrugged his shoulders and turned away. She took a step nearer.

"To cut them?" she asked, in a hushed voice.

Again the uncanny quiver shook him.

"Yes, what else? You don't expect me to pull them up by the roots, do you?"

She looked up at the stately height of the tree beside her, rising massive and tall as a cathedral spire till it seemed to uphold the blue tent of sky, far above in the rift of the canyon. She shook her head. "You had better go away, man," she said, calmly. "They will never let you. I have lived with them for years, and I know them. Go away before they show their strength." Derringer stood still for a moment, then hastened off to camp with an uneasy beating in his usually placid heart. The mad woman—for mad she undoubtedly was—moved his imagination strangely. The Dryad turned, slowly retraced her steps to the sequoia, stepped inside the hollow at its roots, and disappeared. Later in the evening Derringer saw a thin line of smoke climbing upward along the rough bark walls of her dwelling. Evidently the tree was her home.

The timber contractor, though "green," was no tenderfoot. He knew enough of the surprises of California life to expect strange things of the people he encountered—dwellers up inaccessible canyons, or on the edge of the sage brush deserts. He had met hoary old men a hundred miles from civilization who talked Emerson and Plato with him, and had encountered more than one beautiful and refined woman recluse, ruling a tiny ranch in the very heart of the coast range. But this woman, whom he could not help calling "The Dryad," was a new and disconcerting type. However, he was bodily tired that night and so slept and forgot.

The next morning, bright and early, the great 15-foot, flexible steel saws were uncrated, the finest redwood tree was surrounded by a scaffolding some 20 feet from the ground, and the work of destruction was begun in earnest. Derringer thought no more of the strange woman or her predictions. But at noon, when the men rested, ate their bacon and hardtack, drank bad whisky and water, and swapped stories, they were suddenly arrested by the appearance of the gaunt, dark figure. This time she did not wait to be addressed, but walked with majestic languor to within earshot.

"Men," she said in her clear, musical Castillian, "you are in danger—go your ways and do not tempt your betters to destroy you. For centuries they have lived. Do you dare to threaten their existence?—if so, beware! I know them, and I know their will."

She waited for no response, but turned, with the slow, strong, graceful motion that characterized her, and disappeared in the direction of her tree. The half-breeds looked after her in surprise, took a fresh drink all around and returned to their talk. But Derringer could not. He had experienced for the second time that ungovernable fear, that creeping of the flesh that unnerves a man. He swung himself from the platform to the ground and followed the retreating figure. He saw her enter the gaping cavern in the heart of the sequoia, and a few moments later noticed the same thread of blue smoke proceeding from an opening in the bark, where, doubtless, she had improvised a chimney. He longed to cross the narrow barrier of the stream and enter this unusual dwelling, but a sense of impropriety held him back. After all she was a woman, this forest giant was her boudoir, and the habit of his youthful training was still strong upon him.

That was the beginning. From that day forward he knew no peace. Every day at the noon hour the Dryad came, calm and unmoved as the speaking statue, to deliver her warning, and daily the men lost their indifference and grew more troubled at her coming. When the dinner hour approached they scattered instead of "climbing" on the scaffoldings. They looked over their shoulders hurriedly as they went, and gave the smoking sequoia a wide berth. In addition to the superstitious terrors to which he now found himself a victim, there was added the more definite anticipation of desertion among his woodmen. He tried to drown their whispered councils by cheery banter, but his own heart misgave him.

A week passed and nothing happened save the daily visits of the Dryad, and the completion of the dissection of the redwood. The wire ropes had been staked and drawn taut, the winders were set up at a safe distance to avoid the possible spring of branches, and another day would see the fall of the first cut redwood of his claim. Derringer breathed more freely, for the Dryad did not come at midday. Perhaps she had given up the fruitless bluff. But at twilight when the canyon was already full of the blue-black mystery of night, and the rush of the little stream sounded loud and unceasing, she stood suddenly before him, framed in the door of his little shack.

"Senor," she said, "this is the last warning—go!"

She disappeared as if by magic, and Derringer's heart lay cold in his breast. He shivered, rose, looked out at the blackness of the shadows, listened to the magnified roar of the little river, and tried to shake off the oppression of impeding evil—but anyhow the warnings of a mad woman. That night there were strange creakings in the forest and sounds at times of stretched cables and sinister cracklings. But the lumbermen thought of the doomed redwood and turned to more solid slumbers on their primitive beds.

Suddenly out of the night came a scream as of ten thousand demons, a rending and tearing as of an earthquake, a blow that shook the hills and echoed down the stony mountain walls. Then the silence grew and swallowed the vain tumult. Dawn showed the cleft redwood still standing in its cables, ringed by its plank platform, but the men who planned its destruction were not there to complete the work. They lay crushed in their frail plank shanties under the great sequoia.

Only the Dryad was there to see how its heart had been eaten out by the devouring fire, until the chamber at its base had become but a ring of bark. There was no one to tell of the patient vengeance of the half-witted priestess of the trees. But she, draped in her tattered Spanish finery, damp with the night's dews, only shook her head wisely at the ruin about her, and calmly took her solitary way through the unbroken silence of the canyon in search of a new home.—Town and Country, New York.

MEANING OF MANUSCRIPT.

Derivation of the Term Used to Indicate Matter Written by Hand.

The singular and plural forms of the abbreviated word "manuscript" (MS. and MSS.) are the initials of the two Latin words manu scriptum, whence our word is derived. Of course, says St. Nicholas, it means, literally, written by hand. After the introduction of printing, certain books were spoken of as codices (or libri impressi), printed books, to distinguish them from codices manu scripti. Most of the old and important records found in manuscript and preserved in libraries have been copied and reproduced in print, so that we need not trouble ourselves to decipher crooked characters or half-faded writing. It is, however, interesting as well as very curious to hold in one's hands the parchment or half-decayed paper on which the hand of some great scholar, long since dead, traced the story of his day, or wrote a poem which lives even now. Would you not like to own, for instance, the manuscript of Virgil's Aeneid, or of Dante's "Divine Comedy," written by their own hands? You would be a very rich young person if you did; but, of course, the real originals of the long-ago writers are very difficult, in fact impossible, to find. Probably they do not exist, and certainly if they exist, no one knows where they are.

VALUABLE FIND OF FOSSILS.

Rich Discovery of Professor Holmes of the Smithsonian Institution in Indian Territory.

Two miles north of Afton, I. T., there is a spring known as White Sulphur springs, which is proving a veritable gold mine for the scientific world. It is located on a flat prairie. It never goes dry, but it is just now in the lowest stage ever known. It thus affords an excellent opportunity for the investigation conducted by Prof. W. H. Holmes, head of the bureau of ethnology of the Smithsonian institution, who, accompanied by M. A. Gill, government photographer, and an assistant, has thoroughly explored the bog surrounding the spring. They have accumulated one of the most wonderful collections of prehistoric remains ever brought to the light of science in any locality.

Prof. Holmes has filled numerous boxes with teeth and bones of mastodons, bears, wolf, deer and buffalo. There is also a box filled with valuable stone relics of Indian tribes and other races. Prof. Holmes only partially examined a space not over 10 by 15 feet and 10 feet deep. He thinks the whole bog is filled with those deposits of prehistoric times.

ELIZABETH, QUEEN OF ROUMANIA.

Queen Elizabeth, whose pen name is Carmen Sylva, has just issued a new volume of fairy tales. Her majesty is not only a successful writer, but a charming hostess and brilliant conversationalist, being able to entertain her guests with equal grace in half a dozen different languages. Her literary work includes novels, poems, dramas, proverbs, a philosophical treatise and an opera libretto, but her greatest delight she finds in writing fairy tales. The stories are about children and for children, and their ideas and imagery are just of the right kind to hold the little ones spellbound.

COAL WASTED IN MINING.

Twenty-Two Per Cent. of the Total Output of English Mines Annually Lost.

"It has been recently computed that more than 50,000,000 tons of coal are wasted every year in the mine." So said J. Stephen Jeans in addressing the South Wales Institute of Engineers, reports the London Telegraph. This waste is that mainly of small coal, and is, of course, quite independent of the reckless and useless consumption that goes on in nearly every domestic grate and at every furnace. Even this huge figure is less than it used to be, for, with the general adoption of coal washing plants, the introduction of producers capable of using small coal in the making of gas and the manufacture of briquettes, the loss has been reduced. It forms still 22 per cent. of the total output, and represents a money sacrifice of £20,000,000. Allowing 10,000,000 homes in the United Kingdom, these 50,000,000 tons would allow five tons per annum for every family. A high authority (Forster Brown) reckons that at the existing rate of consumption (and waste) "within 40 years from the present time an increase in the cost of coal will begin to be felt as a new element in the commercial position of the nation." Mr. Jeans thinks this estimate too pessimistic, but if we allow twice 40 years it is a terribly short time in the life of a nation. Most people ignore the fact that the exhaustion has begun. In the Northumberland coal field most of the thick seams are worked out, and it has now become necessary to work seams from two feet to two feet six inches thick, which is reducing the output per man by from 15 to 20 per cent.

Nut-Cracking by Electricity.

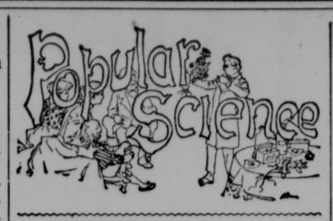
In St. Louis the nut-cracking industry gives employment to a considerable number of persons, there being three plants in the city. The nut-crackers are driven by electricity, each nut being fed individually into the crusher. After the shells are cracked the nuts are winnowed by an air blast and the meat is picked from the crushed shells by hand, women and girls being employed for this part of the work.

A High Balloon Ascension.

MM. Siering and Berson of the meteorological institute of Berlin have lately ascended in a balloon of 8,000 cubic meters capacity to the great height of 10,300 meters (33,800 feet). Success was possible only because the aeronauts began to breathe pure oxygen at an elevation of about 8,000 meters. The scientific results of this ascension are now in process of calculation and will shortly be published.

WOMAN'S TRIP OVER NIAGARA.

Mrs. Annie Edson Taylor is the first person who ever actually went over Niagara falls and lived to relate the experience. All previous so-called trips "over the falls" have been merely journeys through the Whirlpool rapids below the falls. Mrs. Taylor actually went over the Horseshoe fall in a barrel, the drop being 195 feet. When she emerged from the barrel in which she made her crazy venture the woman was almost dead. She was bruised all over her body and her hearing will probably be permanently affected. She made the trip to make some money which she needed badly.



SUBMARINE ANIMALS.

All of Them Are Interesting, But None More So Than the Deep Sea Anemones.

Very interesting is the manner in which some of the little submarine animals, scientifically known as Actinia, live. Sea nettles, sea flowers and sea anemones are the popular names of these creatures, and they are called sea nettles because they sting when touched and sea flowers because their long and slender tentacles are similar to the petals of many flowers.

Many of the Actinia lead a solitary life, but others form regular colonies, among the latter being the epizoanthes, several of which form themselves into groups around hard and immovable bodies, such as rocks, corals and large shells, while others form themselves into a colony around the body of a pagurus, that singular denizen of the sea which is popularly known as Bernard the Hermit. The latter are thus enabled to move from place to place, and in return for such a service they protect their host from various enemies. As a rule they live with him in the depths of the sea, and that is why their novel mode of life has only recently attracted attention.

Prof. Louis Roule, who lectures on natural sciences, has studied these Actinia carefully and has succeeded in obtaining some excellent specimens of them.

"At first," he says, "the epizoanthes is a tiny embryo, which is able to move about in the water. After some time it attaches itself to some hard object, and then it puts forth buds and produces a colony. If its domicile is a rock or a large shell, its life thenceforth is uneventful, but, if it selects a small shell, already inhabited by a young pagurus, a lasting intimacy is at once established between the two animals.

AN ACTINIA FAMILY.

"As a result, the two continue to grow and each in turn does good service for the other. The pagurus in time finds that he is supporting from eight to ten epizoanthes, all of whom are ready to protect him when danger is near and who only ask in return that he will take them with him wherever he goes and thus save them from the monotony of an absolutely motionless existence."

Specimens of these Actinia are not readily secured, owing to the fact that they are never found near the surface of the sea. Scientists, however, who desire to study them, will find little difficulty in doing so, for there has never been a time when so much interest was taken in deep sea explorations as at present, and among the curious objects that are brought up now and then from the deep waters are colonies of these sea anemones.

MUSHROOMS AS FOOD.

Their Usefulness Lies in the Palatableness They Give to Other Food Materials.

Recent investigations made by the department of agriculture show that mushrooms are about equal to potatoes in the element of nutrition that goes to make flesh and blood, but that on the other hand, they do not hold much of the fuel stuff required to keep the body machine running. Containing, as they do, a very large percentage of water, they may be said, in a sense, to correspond with fresh vegetables in respect to food value. The notion that their composition resembles closely that of meat—a conception which has caused the term "vegetable beefsteak" to be applied to them—is an absurd error. One would have to consume eight pounds of mushrooms in a day in order to take the place of the ordinary ration of beef or mutton.

The great usefulness of mushrooms lies in the palatableness which they give to other food materials. This is a matter of no small importance from the point of view of the economic expert in dietetics, who looks upon the attractiveness of dishes as a notable element in their value. In this country only one species of fungus is utilized to any extent for the table—namely, the common field mushroom with pink gills—whereas in Europe a dozen or more varieties are eaten.

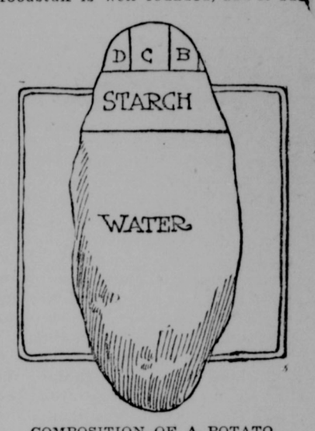
This common mushroom is a trifle more than 91 per cent. water. It contains nearly four per cent. of flesh-forming stuff, three and one-half per cent. of starchy and sugary substances, and one per cent. of fat and fiber, with one-half of one per cent. of mineral material. There are other species which are more nutritious—such as the "oyster mushroom"—but they are not sufficiently well known in the United States to be worthy of consideration.

THE POTATO ANALYZED.

It Is a Source of Muscular Energy, But Does Not Serve to Repair Body Tissue.

The accompanying diagram, which illustrates graphically the composition of the ordinary potato, has been prepared for the United States department of agriculture and appears in one of its recent publications. We quote the following description from the Philadelphia Record:

"The popularity of the potato as a foodstuff is well founded, and is due



COMPOSITION OF A POTATO.
A, fat; B, crude fiber and other carbohydrates, exclusive of starch; C, protein; D, ash.

to its prolific yield, superior keeping qualities, ease of propagation, and agreeable flavor. It was introduced into this country at the time of Raleigh's voyages to Virginia, and has steadily increased in popularity ever since.

"Every school child is aware that potatoes are classed as starch foods, and that their bulk is made up largely of water. . . . It is chiefly on account of the starch content that potatoes are eaten, and while they are apparently not economical foods, owing to the large proportion of water which they contain, this is not actually the case. In other foods, as for instance, rice, there is four times as much nourishment as in an equal weight of potatoes, but then water or milk is added to the rice in preparing it for the table, so that when ready to be eaten it very much resembles potatoes in the assimilable proportion, bulk for bulk. Equal weights of the two foods do not cost as much in each case.

"Being chiefly starch, the potato is valuable as a source of muscular energy and does not serve to build or repair the body tissue, except in a very small degree. This explains why potatoes are generally served with foods rich in tissue-making properties, such as meats, and why it is that large numbers of the country population of Ireland and Germany are so poorly nourished. Potatoes alone are a very one-sided diet.

"The accompanying table shows at a glance how the potato is proportioned as regards its food value:

	Per cent.
Water	78.3
Starch, or energy-producing material	18.4
Nitrogens, or tissue-producing material	2.2
Fats	.01
Mineral matter, chiefly potash salts	1.00

"It is often asserted that the potato is unwholesome, but there is no scientific basis for it. Eaten alone potatoes, of course, would form a very badly-balanced diet. As a matter of fact its universal popularity and consumption are evident from the statistics above quoted, that it forms nearly 14 per cent. of the total food of the people of this country, furnishing about four per cent. of the total proteins, or nitrogenous foods, and nearly ten per cent. of the total carbohydrates or starches.

"A word of warning. Potatoes that have been stored for a long time and which have begun to sprout, should not be eaten, as they are apt to contain an undue amount of solanin, or poisonous substance. Numerous cases of poisoning are on record resulting from this cause."

ART OF BREATHING.

Scientific Men All Over the World Are Beginning to Recognize Its Importance.

It is perhaps one of the signs of the times to those alert for indications that the art of breathing has become more and more a subject of attention. Oculists as well as physiologists go deeply into its study in a way hardly to be touched upon in a limited space. Physicians have cured aggravated cases of insomnia by long-drawn, regular breaths; fever-stricken patients have been quieted, stubborn forms of indigestion made to disappear. A tendency to consumption may be overcome, as some authority has within the past few years clearly demonstrated, by exercise in breathing. Seasickness, too, may be surmounted, and the victim of hypnotic influence taught to withstand the force of an energy directed against him.

There is a famous physician of Munich who has written an extensive work upon the subject of breathing. He has, besides, formulated a system by which asthmatic patients are made to walk without losing breath, while sufferers from weaknesses of the heart are cured. At Meran, in the Austrian Tyrol, his patients are put through a certain system of breathing and walking. The mountain paths are all marked off with stakes of different colors, indicating the number of minutes in which a patient must walk the given distance, the breathing and walking being in time together. As the cure progresses the ascents are made steeper and steeper.

OFFENSIVE BREATH.

Persons Afflicted with It Should Use Some Simple Disinfectant with Regularity.

There are many causes for bad breath; in some cases it is occasioned by the teeth, in others by a disordered stomach or catarrhal trouble, again it is the result of diseased and decaying lungs.

As persons afflicted with bad breath are themselves frequently unaware of the fact, it is the duty of those with whom they come in contact to call attention to the matter in as kindly a manner as possible. Where the disorder comes from the teeth, the services of a good dentist are necessary, also some simple preparation for the mouth. The following recipe is harmless and good: One ounce of powdered borax, one ounce of precipitated chalk, one-fourth ounce of powdered myrrh and one-fourth ounce of powdered orris root. Charcoal is an excellent remedy for a feverish breath and the Canadian snake root is also very highly recommended; it imparts a spicy aroma to the breath and leaves a pleasant taste in the mouth. Needless to say the greatest cleanliness in regard to the teeth and mouth is indispensable. Many persons who are most particular about brushing their teeth after meals never think of doing so before breakfast, and at no time is it more important as various impurities gather in the mouth at night. After cleaning the teeth in the morning, wash the mouth with weak borax water.

Where the offensive breath is caused by some incurable disease the person thus afflicted is deserving of sympathy and consideration. Even then some simple disinfectant should be used.—Eliza R. Parker, in National Stockman.

KILLED A RATTLER.

Mrs. Seton-Thompson Dispatched a Venomous Reptile with a Rusty Frying Pan.

Mrs. Seton-Thompson, in her camping experiences entitled "A Woman Tenderfoot," confesses that in the beginning of her Rocky mountain life she regarded rattlesnakes as only one kind of disagreeable reptile. One day she was riding in advance of her husband. She says:

"Suddenly, there came a noise like dried peas in a pod, and gliding across the road was a huge rattlesnake. Whiskers, my pony, performed a flank movement, so nearly unseating me that I deemed it expedient to drop to the ground; and Whiskers, without waiting for orders, galloped down the road.

"The rattler stopped his pretty gliding motion away from me and seemed in doubt.

"'He is going to coil and then to strike,' said I, recalling a paragraph from my school reader.

"I cast a despairing glance around, and saw, almost at my feet, half hidden by sage brush, several inches of rusty iron. Blest be the passing teamster who threw it there. I darted toward it and turned on the rattler, armed with the goodly remains of a frying pan.

FRYING PAN CAME IN HANDY.

"The creature was ready for me, with darting tongue and flattened head. Another instant and it would have sprung. Smash on its head went my valiant frying pan and struck a deadly blow. I recaptured my weapon and again it descended. The rattler was settled.

"But, oh, that tail! That awful, writhing, lashing tail. I can stand Indians, bears, wolves, anything but that tail; and a rattler is all tail except its head. The snake was really helpless, and I put one foot on him to take his scalp; that is to say, his rattles.

"Then the uncanny thing began to wriggle and rattle with old-time vigor. Horrid thrills coursed through me; but, fortified by the assurance that the existing rattle was a 'purely reflex neuroganglionic movement,' I hardened my heart and captured the 'pod of dried peas.'"

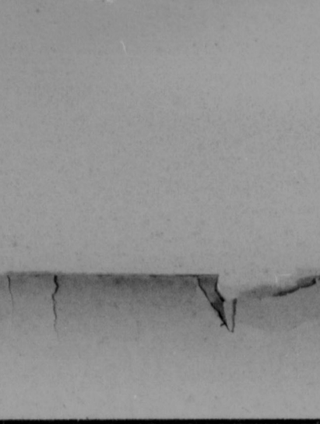
Children's Social Liberties.

The social liberties of the American child are one of the evils of this country. Children's dances and children's parties, once given in the afternoon, have intruded into the evening and are sending thousands of our children to their beds in a state of excitement which means no good for their future. It stands to reason that no child can, with his or her unformed strength, burn the candle at both ends.—Ladies' Home Journal.

HELPED HER HUSBAND

Mrs. La Follette, Wife of Wisconsin's Governor, Is a Helpmate in the Fullest Sense.

The tact and magnetism possessed by Mrs. La Follette, wife of the governor of Wisconsin, have made her of the greatest assistance to her husband in his political campaigns. She is best known among the women of the state for her advocacy of dress reform and physical culture, and as head of the Emily Bishop league for physical culture she has gathered an enthusiastic class about her. She attends all the gatherings of the league, and is usually its principal speaker and moving spirit. But Mrs. La Follette is remarkable for other reasons. She is one of the few women of the state admitted to the bar. She was a Baraboo girl—Miss Belle Case—and was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in the same class as her husband, that of 1879. The same year she won the Lewis prize for oratory, her husband also winning the interstate championship in oratory, with an oration on Iago. Later she studied law and was admitted to the bar. The home life of the La Follettes is ideal. They have three children. One daughter, Miss Flora, a freshman in the university, who traveled in Europe last summer. Mrs. La Follette prepares her children for the high school at home.



MRS. LA FOLLETTE.
(The Talented Wife of the Governor of Wisconsin.)

Wisconsin people, for some reason not reported, have the reputation of being exceedingly cold to their prominent fellow-citizens, but whether this be true or not it does not refer to the governor's wife, who is received everywhere with enthusiasm begotten of respect. The people of the state understand that by her earnest endeavors in behalf of movements calculated to improve the industrial and legal status of women she has earned the gratitude of her sex in all parts of the country.

LIVING WITH OTHERS.

It Is Better, Even Where There Is Jarring and Friction, Than One's Own Company.

"It is better to live with others even at the cost of considerable jarring and friction than to live in undisturbed quiet alone," said a wise little woman the other day.

"Yes, I know that sort of life brings hurts, smarts and heartaches, to say nothing of an occasional tempest, but all the same it is an education that cannot be gained in solitude. Life brings many changes and throws strange people together, and it is easy to decide that some of one's kindred by birth or by law—especially the latter—are so uncongenial as to make living with them unendurable.

"Sometimes that is true, but very rarely. Usually if two persons are well-meaning—and most people really do mean well at heart—they can gradually grow into each other's ways, and by doing so modify individual traits and habits to the great improvement of character. We need to have our sharp corners rubbed off, our little pet vanities punctured, and most of all to learn self-control, 'sweet reasonableness,' and toleration for other people's point of view. When persons say to me of members of their own families: 'I do not know how to live with them,' I feel an unsympathetic desire to reply: 'Keep on living with them till you learn how; it is exactly what you need.'"—Wellspring.

Harmony in Color Schemes.

Women would do well to give much thought to color harmony and circumstances rather than style when choosing house furnishings. Upon the harmonious blending of wall and floor covering, together with the woodwork, depends much of the success of the room; yet some woman, hearing that red walls "are the style," and seeing how effective a soft shade of it is with the pure black Flemish oak, straightway has it put on her walls to combine with yellow oak. How much better a gobelin blue burlap or cartridge paper would be! Then, too, often the mistake is made of having everything of one color to match, thereby causing monotony. Artistic decorators advocate old rose in rugs and hangings as a relieving contrasting bit to gobelin blue walls and yellow oak woodwork. —Chicago Daily News.

Regulating a Child's Diet.

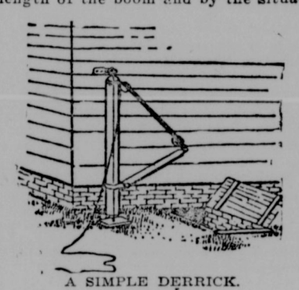
A child who is given whatever he asks for at the table and who is also allowed to be continually eating sweetmeats, cakes, buns, etc., between meals must sooner or later pay the penalty. It is as foolish to expect a child's digestive organs to do the work of those of an adult as to imagine he can compete with a grown person in physical or mental labor.

HANDY FARM DERRICK.

Time and Labor Saved by Its Use More Than Equals That Required to Make It.

A simple and cheaply constructed boom derrick, arranged as illustrated, will be found of much service by a great many farmers, and the time and labor that will be saved by its use will more than equal that required to make it, says an Ohio Farmer writer. When boxes, barrels or sacks of produce are stored in a basement, one man, without some mechanical assistance of this kind, will be unable to lift them from the cellar way and load on a wagon conveniently, and even if several men engage in the work, they cannot remove and load the articles as easily and speedily without the derrick as they can by its help. A derrick made in the same way, and supported as best suits the case on hand, will often be useful for other purposes, such as getting out stone, loading ice, etc.

For the derrick post use a piece of stout timber not less than four by four inches square, or a round pole, if preferable. The length of this pole will be governed somewhat by the length of the boom and by the situation of the derrick. For the boom use a round or square piece of light but strong wood, ten to fifteen feet long. Insert a heavy iron pin in the top and the foot of the post, and put on iron bands. Hinge one end of the boom with iron straps and bolt it to the post about five feet from the bottom, and on the other end put a band with eyes or hoops, as is shown in the partial illustration of the derrick.



A SIMPLE DERRICK.

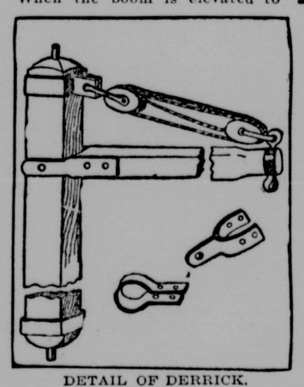
If the post is round instead of square, as pictured, the boom may be attached by using a band on the post and the iron device on the boom, like those shown in one corner of the same illustration, both of which may be made from a heavy wagon tire and fastened in place by bolts in the holes made for this purpose.

The top of the post and the end of the boom are connected by a rope and a pair of single pulleys, or, better, by a double block tackle.

The lower pin of the derrick post revolves in a wooden block, having an iron socket or a heavy stone with a hole drilled to receive it, and the top pin is held by a strong projecting wood or iron cleat or one of the building timbers.

The part of the post above the point at which the boom is hinged should be as long as the boom, so as not to have the tackle work with too great a loss of power.

When the boom is elevated to a horizontal position, the article being lifted will be about the right height for loading on a wagon, and the end of the boom may, by means of the revolving post, be swung around to the point desired.



DETAIL OF DERRICK.

With a double block tackle one man, by ordinary exertion, ought to be able to handle conveniently a weight of 300 or 400 pounds.

By attaching a hay rope pulley to a firm stake near the foot of the derrick or to the building, the rope may be conducted over it and have a singletree attached for a horse when it is necessary to lift more than an ordinarily heavy object from the cellar way.

Manures and Potato Scab.

It is the common experience that lime and ashes are apt to favor the potato scab. The Rhode Island experiments showed that this is attributable to their content of carbonate of lime which renders the soil favorably alkaline. Similar increase of scab followed the use of soda ash (carbonate of soda), potash (carbonate of potassium) and magnesia. Stable manure of all kinds favors the scab development, probably for similar reason. Fertilizing materials which do not tend to increase the scab and which may even check it are enumerated as follows: Common salt, land plaster, most commercial fertilizers (including superphosphates), sulphate of ammonia, nitrate of soda, kainit, muriate of potash, sulphate of potash.

A Valuable Curate.

There is much excitement in the village of Slushton, because the most important cricket fixture which the village club had arranged was down for decision on the following Saturday, and the bowler who had won every match for them that season had sprained his wrist, and consequently would not be able to play.

All their fond hopes of victory had gone, when, as a last resort, they asked the new curate of the village to play for them. He consented, and owing to his score of 54 and his capture of eight wickets for 34 runs they scored a brilliant victory.

The next morning as the squire, himself an enthusiastic cricketer, was leaving the church, where the curate had just preached his first sermon, he was asked by the vicar what he thought of the new curate.

"Oh," responded the squire, "his voice is weak, his doctrine's shaky, he isn't as learned as he should be, but his cricket is a fair eye-opener. We must keep him, even if we have to pay him double the salary."—London Spare Moments.

Oratory is on the Decline.

Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, dean of the University of Chicago, in addressing the seniors at division meeting said: "We have no orators to-day—that is, no orators of the first-class. The reason for the decline in oratory is the vast increase in reading. There are too many gabblers without sound knowledge. We need more thorough knowledge and clear-thinking, and oratory will then take care of itself. The newspaper and periodical press at the same time make much oratory needless and multiply the power of what is left."

Strong Men.

Miss Touriste—You have some strong and rugged types of manhood out in this western country?

Stage Driver—Yaas, miss, we hev men out here thet don't think it's nuthin' t' hold up a railroad train.—Ohio State Journal.

The man who never smiles is the center of gravity.—Philadelphia Record.

A figurehead does not necessarily have a good head for figures.—Ram's Horn.

You had better contract your expenditures than stretch your conscience.—Ram's Horn.

A man will admit that he is prejudiced, but never quite as much as the other fellow. —Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

Customer—"By the way, Mr. Yolker, there was a chicken in one of those eggs." Dealer—"So? Chickens are two shillings a pound, you know. I suppose you are willing to do the right thing?"—Boston Transcript.

"My dear, this is my friend Smiggins, of whom you have heard me speak." "I'm glad to meet you, Mr. Smiggins. You can hardly appreciate what a convenience your acquaintance is to my husband when he stays out later than he should."—Indianapolis News.

Wherein It Failed.—"Why didn't the tenor sing to-night? He has such a sympathetic voice." "Well, the reason he didn't sing was that his voice wasn't sympathetic enough to touch the manager for a week's salary overdue."—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Poet—"I was pleased to see my poem in your paper. Is there any money—" Editor—"Oh, no; we sha'n't charge you anything this time. It is your first offense, you know. If, however, it is repeated, we cannot let you off again so easily."—Boston Transcript.

One of the latest apocryphal stories on the yacht race is that about the lady who, on hearing that the Shamrock was beaten on time allowance, said it was "horrid of the Americans to take advantage of the difference between their time and ours."—Glasgow Evening Times.

STRENUOUS STINGERS.

The Wasp Has More Real Executive Ability Than Any Other Hot-Footed Insect.

"I read in one of the magazines recently something about the sting of the bee," said a citizen, relates the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and I was reminded of an experience I had with a friend some time ago while in the country. He was plowing over behind a small clump of hills, and they were well wooded almost down to the fence line. It was a section which is noted for making wildcat whisky, and this fact threw me off the track, as will appear hereafter. I was approaching my friend from the hillside. I was riding.

"Suddenly I thought he glanced at me, and at the time he rushed around hurriedly to the singletree, unhooked the trace chains, threw them across the horse's back, and the animal struck out on a dead run down the turning row which split the ravine. My friend followed, and it was a race for who laid the rail, as they say in the country. I could see through it all in a minute. My friend had been making moonshine whisky, and he thought I was a United States marshal. I split my sides laughing over the thought of the thing, and then I struck out down the ravine after him. I traveled some distance before catching sight of my friend and his horse. Finally I found them close to a branch, and my friend was stooping down occasionally, picking up something and smearing it on his hands, face and neck.

"'Hello, Bill,' I said smiling, 'I guess you thought I was a United States marshal.' 'United States h—!' he said, almost uncivilly; 'plowed up a hornet's nest.' And sure enough he had, and both the man and the horse were as knotty as a hickory limb as the result of it all. The bee may be a good stinger, but the hornet is the fleetest thing on wings when it comes to using the stinger with swiftness and effect.

"That reminds me of the curious methods of bees and things of that sort of stinging," the narrator continued. "Take the honey bee, for instance. Now, the honey bee is what you might call a lazy, clumsy, docile sort of stinger. Really, the bee is awkward when compared with other insects. The bumble bee is a trifle more vigorous, and there is a deal more of what one may call action in its movements. It is a striking sort of sting, and I have seen children almost knocked down by these heavier members of the bee family. It is a mean sting to handle, too, and does not yield so quickly to treatment. The hornet and the yellow jacket sting on the wing, as it were. They do their work quickly, but thoroughly, and they generally leave a record behind them that they would have no cause to feel ashamed of if they had this element in their make-up.

"But there is my old friend, the wasp. I want to speak of him. He is the prince of stingers. You may not forget him so quickly when he stings you. He leaves a sort of waspy taste in your mouth, and it is anything but pleasant, and it is a taste you will remember even after the years have gone by. The wasp is a lingering sort of fellow. He lovingly and caressingly stings, perches for a while on one's neck, I may say, and then hums about his business. But really, while the wasp lingers longer than other insects while stinging, he also shows more anger, and is probably the most spiteful member in the list of stinging insects."

Teacher—"Yes, 'revive' means to 'come to.' Now make a sentence containing that word." Bright Boy—"If one apple costs three cents what'll four apples revive?"—Philadelphia Press.

Don't Pay for Another's Dinner.

"Order what you want; pay for what you order," is the unique way in which the Lackawanna Railroad is advertising its new dining-car service. The aptness of the phrase is apparent when it is understood that the traveler may order from the most complete menu, and yet pay for nothing he does not want. In addition, low-priced club meals are served individually from 35 cents to $1.00, so that table d'hote and a la carte features are virtually combined. All through trains to Buffalo, Chicago and St. Louis are equipped with dining-cars, and the service is admitted to be second to none in the world.

Recalls Famous Cures.

Small doses of fine, dry sand are the latest freak "remedy" for dyspepsia. Somehow this specific recalls the remark of a distinguished American that six feet of gravel is the only cure for hay fever.—Norfolk Reflector.

"Straws Show Which Way the Wind Blows," and the constantly increasing demand for and steady growth in popularity of St. Jacobs Oil among all classes of people in every part of the civilized world, show conclusively what remedy the people use for their Rheumatism and bodily aches and pains. Facts speak louder than words, and the fact remains undisputed that the sale of St. Jacobs Oil is greater than all other remedies for outward application combined. It acts like magic, cures where everything else fails, conquers pain.

No man ever arrived suddenly at the summit of pure cussedness.—Chicago Daily News.

Best for the Bowels.

No matter what ails you, headache to a cancer, you will never get well until your bowels are put right. Cascarets help nature, cure you without a gripe or pain, produce easy, natural movements, cost you just 10 cents to start getting your health back. Cascarets Candy Cathartic, the genuine, put up in metal boxes, every tablet has C. C. C. stamped on it. Beware of imitations.

What is worse than a giraffe with a sore throat? A centipede with chilblains.—Boston Christian Register.

Persons contemplating a journey East or West should be careful that the rates paid for their transportation do not exceed those charged by the Nickel Plate Road.

This company always offers lowest rates and the service is efficient. Careful attention is given to the wants of all first and second class passengers by uniformed colored attendants. The dining car service of the Nickel Plate Road is above criticism and enables the traveler to obtain meals at from thirty-five (35) cents to $1.00 but no higher.

The Pullman service is the usual high grade standard. Semi-weekly transcontinental tourist cars ply between Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. Confer with nearest agent of the Nickel Plate Road.

Just a Beginner.

She—Has she many friends in society?

He—Oh, yes; she hasn't been in long, you know.—Smart Set.

To Cure a Cold in One Day

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund money if it fails to cure. 25c.

"Smith evidently does not think time is equivalent to money." "Oh, I don't know! He just now asked me to let him have ten dollars for a couple of days."—Detroit Journal.

Explosions of Coughing are stopped by Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. Pike's Toothache Drops Cure in one minute.

"This ancient umbrella," remarked Squidig, "belonged to my grandfather." "Ah! One of the shades of your ancestors," added McSwilligen.—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

Piso's Cure is the best medicine we ever used for all affections of the throat and lungs.—Wm. O. Endsley, Vanburen, Ind., Feb. 10, 1900.

People who get the hardest knocks have the best idea of life.—Atchison Globe.

We promise that should you use PUTNAM FADELESS DYES and be dissatisfied from any cause whatever, to refund 10c. for every package.
Monroe Drug Co., Unionville, Mo.

Two fools' heads are worse than one.—Ram's Horn.

SYRUP OF FIGS

IS AN EXCELLENT FAMILY LAXATIVE—
IT IS REFRESHING TO THE TASTE
AND ACTS
PLEASANTLY AND GENTLY.
IT ASSISTS ONE
TO OVERCOME HABITUAL CONSTIPATION
PERMANENTLY

With many millions of families Syrup of Figs has become the ideal home laxative. The combination is a simple and wholesome one, and the method of manufacture by the California Fig Syrup Company ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product, which have commended it to the favorable consideration of the most eminent physicians and to the intelligent appreciation of all who are well informed in reference to medicinal agents.

Syrup of Figs has truly a laxative effect and acts gently without in any way disturbing the natural functions and with perfect freedom from any unpleasant after effects.

In the process of manufacturing, figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinally laxative principles of the combination are obtained from plants known to act most beneficially on the system.

To get its beneficial effects—
buy the genuine—Manufactured by

California Fig Syrup Co

Louisville, Ky. San Francisco, Cal. New York, N.Y.

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS PRICE 50¢ PER BOTTLE

THE REPUBLICAN.

ENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

HE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address.

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1901.

THE OBSERVANCE OF THANKSGIVING DAY.

Among the number of priceless legacies for which we have to thank the Pilgrim Fathers, is the custom of observing an annual Thanksgiving Day. This institution, originating as an expression of the gratitude of a handful of men and women for physical endurance beyond the demands of a rigorous climate, has grown along with the changing and enlarging of the nation itself. From the free acknowledgment of the goodness of a benign Providence to a small band of settlers in adversity, Thanksgiving Day became a celebration of grateful hearts for colonial freedom, success in war or the cessation of civil strife; now the heart of the American people pulsate throughout a national life, in the name of human kind sending life blood to the downtrodden and distressed, and with the expanding of the national life goes the extension of the meaning of this distinctly American holiday.

There is no need of referring to any special reason for national gratitude in these prosperous times. Nor do we mean to mention the many causes for the observance of Thursday as a day of thanksgiving for individuals. To those to whom this has been a season of plenty, thankfulness will be inspired by blessings of endless and confusing variety; those upon whom fortune has smiled but coldly may learn a lesson from the Pilgrims' first Thanksgiving Day.

The manner of observing the day has changed with the habits of the people. While the Puritans most probably spent the morning in the accustomed place of worship, as is the general custom now, there is no record of the afternoon being devoted to a football game or a chrysanthemum show. In the day of the Puritan maiden the "mum" adorned the pigtail of the more enlightened "Chinee," and the staid New Netherlander would have succumbed to the excitement and strenuous "rooting" incident to a modern football game. But on one point in this connection we find symptoms of history repeating itself. There is evidence that the gratitude of the American—be he Pilgrim, Puritan or Porto Rican—has always awakened a fellow-feeling towards the inner man. The latter being soundly patriotic, has a penchant for native products, and to gratify this weakness the turkey and pumpkin seems to have ever been indispensible. And thus it happens that this gallinaceous bird will be the usual center of attraction on many a table Thursday, and when reinforced with the delectable oyster and adorned with a dash of cranberry sauce, the pumpkin pie is all that remains to soften the most ungrateful heart. For all this and more let us be thankful.

GREAT efforts are being made to secure fac simile copies of the trick ballots used in some of the counties of Maryland at the recent election. Of course it is impossible to secure a real ballot, but a fac simile of some of them would prove quite a valuable souvenir to remember the "Old Ring" by, after they are gone or rather driven out.

NOW THAT the smoke of the recent conflict has cleared away we wonder if the old Ring in Maryland under the leadership of Mr. A. P. Gorman is satisfied with the number of honest votes it has succeeded in killing. The number of maimed and crippled votes in this state is very large and the amount of public sentiment that should have been expressed thereby would have been more than sufficient to deny any man who would make a bold threat at the liberties of the people, a seat in the United States Senate.

DURING every campaign we have a number of wise men with us who have are very free with predictions as to the result of the coming election, but such persons are able to tell more accurately about what will happen after it has happened than they could before. The last election, however, was a hard one for the prophets, although we hear of some, "I-told-you-sos." Everybody knew that an element of great uncertainty existed but even so we had several prognostications, although they amounted to no more than mere guesses. With normal conditions and a full vote those who give attention to politics can foretell the result with reasonably accuracy, but when conditions change and a light vote is cast the best political seers go wide of the mark. In the campaign just over those best entitled to speak with authority were dumb on the subject of figures. They did not know what would happen under the prevailing order of things and they were frank enough to acknowledge this fact. But now that it is over more than one man has been found who boldly asserts that he accurately predicted the result. Such claims amount to nothing, and are not even believed by those who make them. People who try to get credit for wisdom they do not possess do not fool many.

IT STRIKES the average person that Lloyd Wilkinson, who draws the salary of State Insurance Commissioner from the taxpayers of Maryland, oversteps the bounds of propriety and common decency, in his defense of the Democratic frauds perpetrated in the recent elections, when he asserts that an investigation "will disclose in a clear and more convincing light than ever this combination of negroes, illiteracy and bribe-takers controlling the Republican party in this state." Mr. Wilkinson is nothing but the paid hireling of the Gorman machine in this state, and has always stood ready and willing to appear in public as the defender of and apologist for the men who have debauched and corrupted Democratic politics of Maryland. The men controlling the Republican party in Maryland have never been charged by any reputable person with any crime against the State. Can Mr. Wilkinson, or any other champion of the Gorman Ring, say as much for some of the men who dominated the Democratic party in Maryland?

BRYAN'S LATEST PROPOSITION.

Mr. Bryan, with hope springing eternal in his human breast, proposes a revival of the debating society on a national scale. If the country is to be saved it must be by such means. The great dailies are under the thumb of the money power. All alike are for the syndicates against the people. They put the dollar above the man, and for the purpose of gathering in the dollars for themselves. The weeklies—an astounding admission from the editor of one to make—are too limited in circulation. Those advocating the doctrines of democracy and populism are well enough as far as they go, but they don't go far. They have too few readers. It is debate, then, we must have, in the fine old primitive fashion, or, as a people we perish.

This, although dictated by hope, is the language of despair. It admits too much. The picture drawn is too dark. If the country is in the condition described, the salt of village controversy won't save it. Mr. Bryan, in effect, refers the case to a jury not only uninformed, but incapable of digesting information. We are a nation of newspaper readers. The great dailies reach out in every direction, and undoubtedly are a power in shaping sentiment. If, therefore, they have poisoned conviction to the extent of their influence, and the weeklies are impotent, what chance is there for saving the country? Does Mr. Bryan really believe that those who are entirely outside the newspaper influence and strangers to the taste for everyday reading, can be organized to control this government? Is not that a somewhat startling proposition? And does it come appropriately or impressively from a man who for four years has lived principally on newspaper notices? He raised himself by the bootstraps into priminence in 1896, but since then he has owed much to the press—even to the great dailies.

The man who attributes too much power to money in our political affairs maligns the people and discourages the hope of better things. If the press of the United States is under bond to the syndicates, and its readers are under delusion as to the public policies to be pursued, how limitless may the operations of the syndicates be! How impossible to check their rapacity and rascality! Mr. Bryan by organizing the non readers on the out skirts, will but subject them to temptation. For no sooner are the debating clubs in full tongue than the irresistible agents of the money power will make their appearance, and begin to ply their arts. And where the alert and the up-to-date have fallen, may the backward and the underdone hope to keep their feet?

THE Maryland Republicans will be taking a sensible course if they follow up their present decision to prosecute the frauds perpetrated in the election held in that State. The frauds are so palpable and flagrant that the Republicans hope to punish those responsible for them and possibly prevent the seating of Arthur P. Gorman in the United States Senate. At a meeting of the Republican State Committee a tabulation was made of the Republican ballots objected to by Democratic counters and thrown out and it summed up 17,000 in the counties and 8,000 in Baltimore city. If these ballots were wrongly marked it was owing to the tricky manipulation of the ballot by the Democrats with exactly the end in view which resulted. The Maryland Republicans owe it not only to themselves but to honest elections everywhere to expose and punish these frauds. The Baltimore Sun says that the Republican Finance Committee is expected to raise $30,000 to prosecute these contests and that Charles J. Bonaparte, the leading reformer, will take a leading part in carrying them on.—Philadelphia Press.

Getting Thin

is all right, if you are too fat; and all wrong, if too thin already.

Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: over-work and under-digestion.

Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however; you'll pay for it.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work—you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.
If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.
SCOTT & BOWNE
Chemists,
409 Pearl Street,
New York.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

FEDERAL AID TO AGRICULTURE.

Altho the Department of Agriculture is scarcely out of swaddling clothes, its aims and activities are full grown, buoyant and progressive as becomes the administrative relation of the State to the chief industrial occupation of its people. The diversification of agriculture in the United States, its predominance as a source of wealth production and the insatiate and inevitable demands of producers for new and broader markets have induced within recent years a commensurate activity in the bureaus of the department. The application of bureaucratic methods to the principles and practice of scientific farming has been vigorous, unstinted and apparently successful.

During the past twelvemonth, according to official reports of the department, a large number of the divisions formerly engaged in expert researches on allied subjects have been consolidated into four new bureaus, covering plant industry, forestry agricultural, chemistry and soils. Under these principal heads may be grouped nearly all of the subjects relating to modern agriculture, and the tendency to specialization, already so marked in the researches of department experts, will be further encouraged by the evident disposition of those in authority to make of the department practically a vast school of modern intensive farming, with such associated topics of instruction as forestry, floriculture, weather observation, road building and irrigation. A new department building is desired in order to concentrate properly these multifarious agencies of inquiry and instruction, and it will not be Secretary Wilson's fault if Congress shall withold the funds necessary for the proposed construction. Public money has been expended time and again for objects far less worthy.

The substantial expansion of this latest administrative department of the Federal Government has been noted for some years past with serene satisfaction by advocates of the arts of peace as opposed to the destructivness of war. If the varied and often conflicting interests of American agriculturists can be reconciled and promoted materially by administrative agencies, it is urged, why should such work not be done? And why not commercial interests as well?

Study and investigation of the natural resources of the country are in this view, closely allied to the application of governmental systems and agencies designed to influence conditions that are purely artificial and beyond administrative control. It is not a difficult matter to determine what crops may be grown to paramount advantage in a certain locality; but to designate the most profitable form of commerce in that quarter is quite a different matter. Yet it seems to be assumed—as witness the Reciprocity Convention resolution in favor of creating a Department of Commerce—that the scientific and bureaucratic methods employed in aid of American farming industry can be employed also to quicken the wheels of commerce, create new markets and secure for our manufacturers new outlets for accumulated stocks.

VOTE IN THE STATE.

Dr. Hering is Elected Comptroller by the Small Plurality of 121 Votes.

The completion of the official returns in the city of Baltimore makes the State vote complete, and gives the first opportunity to correctly estimate State majorities. According to the figures Dr. J. W. Hering is re-elected Comptroller by the small plurality of 121 votes.

In the counties exclusive of the city of Baltimore, the vote on the State ticket was as follows:

For Comptroller:
Joshua W. Hering, Dem	57,362
Herman S. Platt, Rep	53,944
Hering's county plurality	3,418
For Clerk Court of Appeals:
J. Frank Turner, Dem	56,938
Thomas Parran, Rep	54,440
Turner's county plurality	2,498

The vote in the city of Baltimore on the State ticket was as follows:

For Comptroller:
Joshua W. Hering, Dem	39,115
Herman S. Platt, Rep	42,412
Platt's city plurality	3,297
For Clerk Court of Appeals:
J. Frank Turner, Dem	38,331
Thomas Parran, Rep	42,218
Parran's city plurality	3,887

The total vote in the State on the State ticket was as follows:

For Comptroller:
Joshua W. Hering, Dem	96,477
Herman S. Platt, Rep	96,356
Hering's plurality	121
For Clerk Court of Appeals:
J. Frank Turner, Dem	95,269
Thomas Parran, Rep	96,658
Parran's plurality	1,389

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Seaboard Air Line Railway to Florida, Cuba, Savannah, Camden, Southern Pines and Pinehurst.

Winter excursion tickets were placed on sale to resort points on this line in North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida on October 15th and will remain on sale during the season. Exceptionally low rates are in effect this year to Pinehurst and Southern Pines, N. C., Camden, S. C., Savannah, Ga., and all points in Florida and Cuba. To reach any of these points the service of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, "Capital City Route," will be found the best and most attractive. In addition to the superior service now operated, it is announced that Cafe cars will be placed in service on the Washington-Atlanta Line about November 1st and on the Florida Lines about January 1st, 1902. Following this the Florida & Metropolitan Limited will be inaugurated about January 15th, 1902, with sumptuous appointments and superb equipment, including dining and club cars, constituting it beyond a doubt the peer of any train in the world.

The service of the Seaboard Air Line Railway to Cuba is most attractive. Its Cafe car service and many other features present advantages commending it to the favorable attention of all travelers.

LOW RATES FOR HUNTING AND FISHING PARTIES VIA SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY.

This popular route, whose lines penetrate some of the best country for game, birds and fish to be found anywhere in the South, has on sale reduced rate tickets from Norfolk, Portsmouth and Richmond to all points in Virginia, North and South Carolina, for the benefit of hunting and fishing parties, moving individually or otherwise. One dog is carried free with each passenger and others are transported at a small cost.

Full information as to most desirable points, rates, schedules, etc., furnished upon application to any agent or representative of the Company. nov 30

Winter Tourists Tickets Now on Sale via Seaboard Air Line Railway.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway announces that, effective October 15, 1901, round trip Winter Excursion tickets will be placed on sale to resort points on its lines in North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. These low rates taken in connection with the superior service and fast schedules operated over this line, which is the shortest and best to Florida points, are brought to the attention of those who are planning Winter tours. It will be distinctly to their advantage to obtain definite information, which will be cheerfully furnished by an Agent or Representative of the Company.

J. C. HORTON, Eastern Pass'r Agent,
183 Broadway, New York City.
C. L. LONGSDORF, E. E. Pass'r Agt.,
306 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
J. R. DEVAL, Passenger Agent,
Cont'l Trust Bldg., Baltimore, Md.
R. E. L. BUNCH, Gen'l Pass'r Agt.,
Portsmouth, Va.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

FOR SALE:—The Lutheran parsonage, located on the corner of Fifth and Green streets, in Oakland, near the court house. Contains 8 rooms, hallway, cellar and porches; excellent well of water. Will be sold cheap. Apply to or address Rev. George I. Uhler, Oakland, Md.

TO CURE LAGRIPPE IN TWO DAYS

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE TABLETS. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature on every box. 25c.

SUPERVISORS INDICTED.

Hagerstown Jury Presents Messrs. Nock, South and Briscoe.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., Nov. 22.—One of the last acts of the Grand Jury for the present term of court, before adjourning today, was to return indictments against Charles B. South, of Funkstown, and Thomas A. Nock, of this city, the Democratic members of the Board of Election Supervisors for Washington county. They are charged with official nonfeasance in connection with the misprinted election ballots. The indictments were sworn to by Thompson A. Brown, the Republican member of the Board of Supervisors, and cover six typewritten sheets.

The presentment sets forth that "Charles B. South and Thomas A. Nock unlawfully, wilfully, obstinatly and contemptuously did neglect, and omit and refuse to have printed and distributed to the voters of Washington county proper official ballots." It further specifies that "the parties aforesaid refused and omitted to have printed on the ballots to the right of the name of William Kleinle the designation of his party." The misprint in the ballots was made in this manner, the word "Republican" being printed after the name of Kleinle, who was the Prohibition candidate for Comptroller. The ticket thus showed two Republican candidates for the same office.

Warrants were served on Messrs. Nock and South by Sheriff Angle. They were released on their own recognizance in the sum of $300 each.

The investigation by the Grand Jury covered several days and a number of witnesses were examined. The cases will be heard at this term of court. The misprint is generally believed to have been a typographical error on the part of the printer. The discovery of the misprint was made in the morning of the day of election and created confusion and excitement in this city and throughout the county.

An indictment was returned by the Grand Jury at 2 o'clock this afternoon for James T. Briscoe, Ja., charging negligence in the printing of the official ballots. Mr. Briscoe had charge of the printing of the ballots, and was sworn in as a clerk by the Election Supervisors. He furnished bond.

NOTICE OF
First Meeting of Creditors.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, in Bankruptcy.

In the matter of William J. Sanders, Bankrupt
In Bankruptcy.

To the creditors of William J. Sanders, of Gortner, in the county of Garrett and district aforesaid, a bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 7th day of November, A. D. 1901, the said William J. Sanders was duly adjudicated bankrupt; and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at my Law Office, No. 6, Washington Street, in Cumberland, Maryland, on the 9th day of December, A. D. 1901, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time the said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
Nov. 22, 1901. Referee in Bankruptcy.

COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.
OAKLAND, MD., NOV. 21, 1901.

The Board of County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Dec. 3, 1901,

to transact any business that may be brought before them.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

Trustee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court of Garrett county, Maryland, passed in a cause wherein Noah Brenneman and others are plaintiffs and Paul Beachy and others are defendants, the same being No. 1115 Equity in said Court, the undersigned, as trustee, will sell by public auction, on the premises near the town of Bittinger in said county, on

SATURDAY,
The 7th Day of December, 1901,
AT 10 O'CLOCK A. M.,

all that valuable fee simple piece or parcel of land of which the late John Brenneman and Benedict Beachy died seized and possessed, and on which Paul Beachy now resides, the same being

MILITARY LOTS NOS. 2417, 2418, 2419 and 2420,

lying in one body and comprising a farm of

200 ACRES.

About 150 acres of said place is cleared and in cultivation and the balance in timber. It is improved by a barn and fair-sized dwelling house, together with other outbuildings, and has an ordinary apple orchard thereon. Taxes adjusted to day of sale. (For title see deed from Samuel Brenneman and wife to John Brenneman and Benedict Beachy, dated February 5th, 1881, and recorded among the land records of Garrett county in Liber No. 5, folio 548, &c.)

TERMS OF SALE: One-third cash, one-third in six months and one-third in twelve months from day of sale (or all cash, at the option of the purchaser), the credit payments bearing interest from the day of sale and to be secured by the note or notes of the purchaser or purchasers, endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustee.

JOEL ORENDORF, Trustee.
FRED. A. THAYER, Solicitor.

Wanted.

One hundred men for general woods work and grading railroad.

PRESTON LUMBER & COAL CO.,
2 tf Oakland, Md

GOOD ROADS NEEDED

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY RETARDED BY POOR HIGHWAYS.

Many Routes In Western States Suspended Last Winter Because of Road Conditions—What Is Required For Extension of Service.

The government officials in charge of the rural free delivery system of the postoffice department are just as much interested in the good roads proposition as is the good roads bureau of the agricultural department. Good roads are a necessity where rural free delivery is in operation. If a county does not have good roads, the residents of that county will have a very hard time securing the free delivery service. If the service is secured, it is very likely to be unsatisfactory, says the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

August W. Machen of Toledo, O., superintendent of the free delivery system, is a great friend of the good roads movement. He appreciates the fact that the free delivery of mail to the rural residents cannot be carried on entirely successfully without good roads. The good roads proposition and the rural free delivery system are very close relatives. They should go hand in hand. Superintendent Machen in this connection has this to say:

"The temporary suspension of service last winter and spring on a number of rural free delivery routes in the western states on account of the impassable condition of the roads brought forcibly to the attention of the department the necessity of good roads in connection with the rural free delivery service. At that time the local authorities were informed that unless the roads were improved before the return of winter there would be danger of a permanent withdrawal of the rural free delivery service. Reports show that the advice of the department has been heeded in many instances. In one locality which I recall favorable action was taken by the township trustees by appropriating an amount of money for the improvement of roads over which the rural carrier travels.

"While the actual suspensions of service on account of impassable roads were few, comparatively speaking, there were many cases in which the poor condition of the roads made it very difficult to provide an efficient service and in which the service was performed only by dint of perseverance on the part of the carrier, backed by the determination of the department to deliver mail whenever it was possible. It is readily seen that the condition of the roads becomes a very important consideration in the establishment of rural free delivery. Where the roads are good a route twenty-seven or thirty miles in length may be more easily served than another route of eighteen or twenty miles over poor roads.

MAKES TRAVELING SLOW.

"In the first case more people are served, and the service is performed more expeditiously and with much more ease to the carrier and his horse. The carrier, too, can establish a regularity of service, enabling the farmers to know just about what time every day he will arrive in front of their premises.

"In the second instance, with the short route over bad roads, as much time is consumed in serving a smaller number of patrons, the regularity of the service varies with the changing condition of the roads, the work is more trying on both the letter carrier and his horse and is unsatisfactory to patrons, especially when it becomes necessary to suspend the service on account of impassable portions of the route.

"Reports from all parts of the country indicate clearly that the people are waking up to the necessity of providing good roads in order to obtain the establishment of rural free delivery, and in this way it is seen that the rural service becomes a factor in the good roads movement which of late years has been agitated in many of our progressive states."

Mr. Machen brings out the policy of the postal department by intimation rather than by direct assertion. Rural free delivery will go to where the people either have or are willing to provide good roads. It will take several years to spread the delivery system over the entire fairly well populated portion of the country. Those portions which have at all times or certain times of the year such roads as make the service expensive will be denied the luxury of having mail brought to the house every day.

Daily the representatives are being more strongly impressed with this fact. When a good case politically is made out in favor of a certain route, the department acts upon the report of the inspector, and "bad roads in the spring" is certain to cause the petition to be held up for a time or sometimes for good. It is understood that the department will enforce a rule to the effect that when the carriers report their inability to cover a route on account of the condition of the road it will be abolished and mail service given from the village postoffices.

The Finest Cake

Is made with Royal Baking Powder. Always light, sweet, pure & wholesome.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

Dr. Selby, of Eglon, was in Oakland Tuesday on business.

Dr. Edwin W. Greene, dentist, will be at Friendsville Dec. 2 to Dec. 8, inclusive.

Ezra B. Hook, of near Friendsville, was in the city Monday and Tuesday on business.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

Assemblyman-elect Chas. A. Ashby, of Crellin, was in Oakland Saturday on business.

Dixon & Kelso will pay 90 cents per barrel cash or $1, one half cash, for ear corn. 53 cents cash for buckwheat. 37-2t.

Auction in the Opera House building every afternoon and night until all the goods are sold.

Mr. Fred. A. Thayer has been appointed administrator of the estate of the late Michael Maroney.

Go to Hinebaugh's Restuurant for meals, lunches, oysters, etc. Ladies' dining room in connection.

Mr. Ed. Scherr, of Horse Shoe Run, was in Oakladd Tuesday on his way to Cumberland and Baltimore.

Election Supervisor Brison Welch, of Selbysport, was in Oakland a day or two this week on business.

Dr. Henry W. McComas has adopted the following as his office hours: 10 a. m. to 12 m., and 6 p. m. to 8 p. m. Office at the Sanitarium.

Miss Nellie Browning was at Parkersburg, W. Va., a few days last week as a guest of Mrs. Barrott.

Mr. W. P. Hansel, of near Lonaconing, was a visitor to Oakland Tuesday and made this office a pleasant visit.

Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell and children, accompanied by Miss Martha Schlossnagle, are at Kingwood spending the week.

If you want one of the best cutting boxes made either power or hand, see the ones Naylor has for sale for corn fodder or hay. It shreds the fodder. 36 3t

Mr. Henry Weber, Sr., returned home Monday afternoon from an extended trip through Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia.

Mr. Charles Bolden, one of "ye oldest residents" of Oakland, has returned from an extended visit to relatives at Terra Alta.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets cure biliousness, constipation and headache. They are easy to take and pleasant in effect. For sale by all druggists.

We print our paper one day earlier this week than usual in order to give the office force an opportunity to enjoy the Thanksgiving festivities.

Ex-Sheriff Austin Brown was out at Wheeling a day or two this week where he was examined by the West Virginia board of undertakers' examiners.

Rev. G. A. Royer, formerly pastor of the Lutheran church at Accident was installed as pastor of the Clearspring, Md., charge on Sunday morning last.

Rev. W. H. Osmond returned on Saturday night from Baltimore where he spent some days with his mother, who recently returned from a visit of four months to England.

Surveyor Franklin P. Green and wife were here one day last week. Mr. Green and his family are contemplating moving to the Capt. Gordon farm adjoing Mountain Lake Park.

Rev. E. P. Idleman, of Rowlesburg, preached Sunday morning last in St. Paul's M. E. church, in the absence of Rev. Dr. Scott, who is still confined to his room on account of the accident which befell him some weeks ago.

Ross Wolf is home from his duties as a B. & O. brakeman with two of his toes badly crushed, the accident befalling him at Terra Alta one day last week, by having his foot caught between the bumpers of two cars.

When you feel that life is hardly worth the candle take a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They will cleanse your stomach, tone up your liver and regulate your bowels making you feel like a new man. For sale by all druggists.

No portrait of a man ever appeared on Uncle Sam's coins, and no portrait of a woman on his postage stamp, and this leads a discriminating exchange to remark that this is the reason we lick the stamps and squeeze the coins.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

Andrew Nelson, who has been engaged in Pittsburg for a year or more where he holds a lucrative position with a Chicago packing house, is home to recuperate after a five weeks siege of typhoid fever.

LOST.—On Monday, $7 or $8 in bank notes. This money was the property of the editor—all he had—and was to have been used in purchasing Christmas goods for his family. Unless some person finds the money and returns the same our expectations for a merry Christmas will be but a dream.

It is estimated that one county on the eastern shore of Virginia, containing a population of about 13,000, sold this year 550,000 barrels of Irish potatoes at a profit of $1,000,000, which means that every man, woman and child in the county would be entitled to receive, if the money were distributed pro rata, something more than $75 from one crop alone.

Sheriff-elect W. A. Maffett, of McHenry, brought to Oakland Saturday a portion of his household effects. He will take the oath of office and enter upon his duties within the next week or two. That Mr. Maffett will make a painstaking officer none will gainsay. He is a gentleman of good education and not without that requisite in the make-up of a man to hold the responsible position to which he has been elected—grit.

To remove a troublesome corn or bunion: First soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it, then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily; rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn for a few days, to protect it from the shoe. As a general liniment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequaled. For sale by all dealers.

Rev. Dr. H. Scott, the Methodist Episcopal minister in Oakland, says of his arrival here and reception by the people of the town the following, which was published in the current issue of the M. E. Times:—"I arrived in this beautiful town Oct. 19. My goods came in Monday the 21st. Mrs. Scott and Gertrude came on the 8:30 train, Wednesday, the 23d, and we went to housekeeping Thursday. We found a good church, and splendid people who have shown us the greatest kindness. The society put a stove in sitting room at $25.00, one in parlor, $12.00, a range in kitchen, $22.00, papered two rooms, $11.00, and owed for papering, $14.00, total, $84.00. On Sunday, Oct. 27, we asked the people to pay this bill and they gave $107.00. The new preacher is an expensive luxury."

There is a growing tendency to make the country homes of this county more attractive in outward appearance. This is as it should be, and a more marked tendency in this direction would be of great benefit to the individual as well as the public. The time has gone by when the belief obtained that a good barn paid for itself, but a good house was a poor investment. The inmates of the home are now regarded more highly than the live stock on the farm. The boys and girls are recognized as the best products of the farm, and entitled to neat and attractive surroundings. We have heretofore spoken of the deep influence exerted upon formation character by its environment, and if the young people on the farm find nothing to give them delight in their homes they cannot be held at fault if they get up and leave the farm as soon as they are old enough.

A Great Medicine.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. Phipps, of Poteau, Ark. "It cured me of bloody flux. I cannot speak too highly of it." This remedy always wins the good opinion, if not praise, of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects even in the most severe cases make it a favorite everywhere. For sale by all druggists.

A Great Opportunity.

The burned district of Jacksonville, Fla., is to be rebuilt at once, offering an opportunity of employment to workmen, and excellent prospect to contractors and capitalists. Jacksonville is reached from all directions by the Seaboard Air Line Railway System, which offers unexcelled facilities in the way of schedules and through car service to that point. nov 14tf

Trespass Notice.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon the land of the undersigned lying in District No. 2 of Garrett county either for the purpose of fishing, hunting or passing through the same with a weapon or in pursuit of game of any kind.

All persons found so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. C. W. FRIEND.

NEARLY $100 A FRONT FOOT.

That Was the Price Paid For a Lot in Oakland.

Monday the First National Bank purchased from G. S. Hamill the lot upon which his law office stands on Alder street, the consideration being $1,200. The lot fronts 14½ feet on Alder street and runs back 31 feet. By acquiring this bit of land the bank's lot is put in better shape for the proposed new building which will be erected next spring.

Blaine Mines Purchased by Philadelphia Syndicate.

A Philadelphia syndicate has purchased the plant of the Blaine Coal Company, at Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va., on the West Virginia Central railway, a few miles south of Piedmont. The coal lies in Garrett county, Maryland, but the dump is in West Virginia. The property belongs to the estate of the late Ebenezer Kitzmiller. The plant is to be improved and the output tripled. The price paid has not been made public, but was well up in five figures. Several other coal deals are under way here. Jonathan Vipond, of Scranton, Pa., has been at Piedmont several days examining coal land and inspecting all coal mines, presumably representing Pennsylvania capitalists. He has charge of 12 mines about Scranton, Pa.

Thanksgiving Services.

Rev. W. H. Osmond, Rector of St. Matthew's Parish, will conduct Thanksgiving services in St. Matthew's church Oakland, this morning at eleven o'clock. In Anderson chapel Swanton, services will be held at 7.30 o'clock.

A Heavy Snowfall.

Saturday night some eight or ten inches of snow fell in this section. There was considerable moisture in the snow, which made it have a tendency to cling wherever it fell. Several electric wires were broken down and the telephone service was almost entirely knocked out for a day or two. Numerous trees were broken down in Oakland as a result of the great weight of snow with which they were ladened.

Church Services.

In the Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church Rev. W. H. Miller, of Beaver City, Nebraska, will preach on Sunday morning, Dec. 1st, at 11 o'clock and also in the evening at 7:30 o'clock. All are cordially invited to attend. Rev. Miller is expected to remain here one month to preach for the Presbyterian congregation. He is a native of Berkeley county, W. Va., and is highly esteemed by his parishioners in Nebraska.

On next Sunday, Dec. 1, there will be services morning and evening conducted by Presiding Elder Roberts at the Mt. Lake M. E. church. At the morning service the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered. All are cordially invited.

J. S. HARVEY.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and Sunday afternoon at four o'clock Rev. W. H. Osmond will preach in St. Matthews' P. E. church.

Rev. G. I. Uhler, the pastor, announces services in St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, at 10 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sunday.

The Columbia Coal, Oil and Gas Company.

The Columbia Coal, Oil and Gas Company, which was recently organized for the purpose of drilling for oil and gas in this county, has met with but little impediment in securing options of promising oil territory in the vicinity of Oakland. Already options upon several thousand acres of land has been secured by the company and as soon as other options they have in view can be obtained a derrick will be erected and necessary machinery will be brought here for the purpose of putting down a well.

The stockholders are greatly encouraged over the promising prospects before them. The company is a strong one and the directorate is composed of practical oil and gas men of the State of West Virginia.

I. M. Kelley, general manager, is at present the Mayor of Clarksburg, W. Va. He has had over thirty years practical experience in the coal and oil fields of Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Mr. Kelley was first to develop gas in eastern West Virginia and is considered authority on coal, oil and gas.

Mr. Thomas B. Keating, of Oakland, is the authorized agent of the company, he having interested those concerned in the company in this section of country.

The directors are C. A. Morrison, W. A. Batten, Samuel O'Niel, R. H. Wilson, Clarksburg, W. Va.; John T. Mitchell, Oakland, Md.; J. P. Moore, Sand Fork, W. Va.; T. B. Keating, Oakland, Md.; I. M. Kelley, Clarksburg, W. Va.; Geo. D. Scott, Washington, D. C.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in Chicago

Hisgen Bros., the popular South Side druggists, corner 69th street and Wentworth avenue, say: "We sell a great deal of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and find that it gives the most satisfactory results, especially among children for severe colds and croup." For sale by all dealers.

MURDER IN ALLEGANY.

Verdict of Coroner's Jury in Cumberland Homicide.

CUMBERLAND, MD., Nov. 25.—Dolan Mason, accused of the murder of Taylor Locke in a dispute over the possession of an umbrella, was captured at Bayard, W. Va., his old home this morning and placed in Cumberland jail tonight. He consented to come without a requisition, and his brother Clarence, a cripple, who was present at the tragedy, accompanied his brother and is also in jail. Albert Mason, who was arrested yesterday, and is alleged to have said that his brother struck the fatal blow, was held by Justice Humbird today for the action of the grand jury. His counsel, Congressman George A. Pearre, will tomorrow apply for a writ of habeas corpus to have bail fixed.

The coroner's jury tonight held Dolan Mason responsible for Taylor Locke's murder and charges his brothers Albert and Clarence as being accessories. An attempt will be made to have the latter released on bail. William Hartung who saw the tragedy, is held in $200 as a witness.

Coal and Timber Development in Garrett.

Cortez H. Jennings, who is building a railroad near Grantsville, and who has about completed the erection of one of the most improved saw mills in this part of the state, took over his road the Trenton members of the Meadow Mountain Coal and Coke Company, which owns the coal under 6,500 acres of land in Garrett county. Jennings Bros., of Lopez, Pa., own the timber on the above tract and it is estimated that there is 100,000,000 feet of spruce and white pine on this property, the same being virgin forests. Jennings Bors. have about completed a side tract for the Meadow Mountain Coal and Coke company, which will begin on December 1 to erect a mining plant. A mining town has been laid out on the Three Licks river.

A Story of Goats.

Roy K. McCardell, whose genius as an humorist first began to bud when Cumberland was his seat of habitation, has undertaken a characteristic study of the Angora goat, which enlivens the pages of a recent issue of Judge:

The United States department of Agriculture has kindly sent us, writes Mr. McCardell, a scholarly and exhaustive treatise on the Angora goat. The author of this pleasant excursion into a field that is comparatively unexplored has not only covered himself with glory, but has brought to the public eye an animal that is all overcoat. His wool hangs down in heavy draperies that make him look like a mop in repose. He parts his wool in the middle, along the spine, and lets it hang over on each side like football hair. Like his Harlem brother, he is fond of scrap iron, which delicacy is fed to him in captivity, that he may yield mineral wool. He also yields mohair, which is noted for its specific gravity, though not so much as the Angora goat is himself noted for his skill, in which sphere he is said to be superior to the Chinaman, in clearing land. He makes the brushwood fly like oysters at a church fair, eats chestnut burrs with the same delight that a Scotch golfer devours thistles while helping the caddy find a lost ball. When he begins to clear off the bosom of the landscape, he eats cans, bottles and other things with such gusto that the owner of the place is harrowed by the suspicion that the omnivorous Angora may devour the title and both mortgages that hold the pumpkins down as if fastened with spikes. He has been known to eat cordwood, and sometimes he has been given slivers of cedar, which have the same effect on him that a chest of that wood has on a sealskin sacque—inasmuch as the moths fly to him as if he were a lamp. His pelt makes fine rugs, college diplomas and shoes, while Angora milk is much richer than that of the cow, and, in addition is absolutely waterproof. It is furthermore translatable into a cheese beside which limburger is as the dainty scent of the wildflower. He wears bric-a-brac horns and a Van Dyke beard; his wool is so long that sometimes it is put up in papers, that it may be curled up off the ground and not trip him. He protects ordinary sheep against wolves and dogs, and always keeps out of thickets, that he may not become snarled and tangled to such a degree that he will fall over himself and become impassable and unraveling. His song is an emulsion of the susurra and the frou-frou, and we thank the author, George Fayette Thompson, for the hour of genuine pleasure that was ours while reading his luminous exploitation of the Angora goat.

In Bankruptcy.

William J. Sanders, residing near Sunnyside, has made application for the benefit of the bankruptcy law. The notice for the first meeting of the creditors of the bankrupt will be found elsewhere in these columns.

Call for Your Letters.

Miss Lola Sanbower, Mr. Charley Thompson, Mr. Alum Slarebungle, Mr. E. Petter, Mr. Richard Kerens, Mr. Jacob Kisner, W. M. Bergman.

Winter Tourist Tickets, Season 1901-2. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has placed on sale at all principal offices East of the Ohio River, Winter Tourist Tickets to points in Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Carolina and Texas; also Havana, Cuba, and Nassau, N.P., at reduced rates. For additional information call on Agent Baltimore & Ohio R.R.

TRIMMING THE LAMP.

Idaho People Know How to Make Their Light Shine.

That the sturdy and hustling citizens of Idaho county are alive and in the front rank of the procession of progress is evidenced by the following copy of a statement which has been sent broadcast over the country. Here is the way they boom their county:

Idaho county is the largest county in the state of Idaho and one of the largest in the United States. Its population is about 10,000. During the year 1899 the population of the county increased rapidly owing to the amount of railroad building and the impetus given to its mining industry by the discovery of the rich mines of Buffalo Hump and other good mining properties.

The resources of the county are large and varied. Its mines are good producers, its agricultural interests are large, while its stock interests form an important item in the aggregate wealth of the state. It occupies the heart of the Gem of the Mountains and extends from Oregon on the west to Montana on the east. It may with safety be said that no finer piece of farming land lies out of doors than the great Camas prairie. Looking down over this vast rolling plain, covered in the summer time with beautiful flowers and dotted with waving fields of grain, Camas prairie is indeed a pretty picture.

The soil of this prairie is a rich loam of great depth and of wonderful fertility. Hay, grains of all kinds, corn and vegetables grow there in abundance. It is a natural timothy country, the timothy in a short time when sown rooting out the native grass. Immense crops of wheat and oats are grown. The hardier fruits grow on the prairie, while on Salmon river are grown most delicious peaches, pears, plums, apricots and grapes. Mountain streams cut across the prairie at various points, and the entire country is well watered. Large herds of horses, cattle and sheep roam on the immense tracts of grazing lands in this county.

Mount Idaho is the county seat of Idaho county. It is a little village near the mountains and at one time was quite an important town. Grangeville, situated about three miles on the Lewiston side from Mount Idaho, is the largest town in the county. It is growing rapidly and is recognized as one of the most important towns in north Idaho. Its present population is about 3,000. It is well and compactly built, well supplied with schools and churches, benevolent and social orders, electric light plant and good water system. Come and see.

ADVERTISING PROBLEMS.

Some European Cities Prohibit Disfiguring Billboards.

In the little Dutch city of Leyden the municipality itself manages the public advertising and so frees the picturesque, canal cut streets from unkempt hoardings. The city erects at the principal corners and by the canal bridges boards of neat and attractive design for public notices. A projecting top prevents the rain from tearing or washing away the bills, the boards are surmounted by ornamental woodwork, and the advertising is thus not only kept in bounds, but is made almost artistic. Of like purpose, and better known, are the familiar kiosks of Paris and the city owned pillars of theatrical bills.

In Paris vigorous agitation has lately arisen against the defacement of building fronts by hugely lettered signs, and there are ordinances which prohibit the attachment of notices to any tree on the public way or to the municipal lighting apparatus.

In Rome the municipal and government acts are posted on marble tablets owned by the government and reserved for this use. Private announcements are on billboards of regulated size and form, which can be erected only on permission from the property owner and from the city.

ANNUAL FALL FESTIVAL.

How Cincinnati Manufacturers Advertise Their Wares.

The Cincinnati fall festival has become a favorite medium with manufacturers for the exploitation of their products. Last year its paid admissions were remarkably large in numbers, while the attendance this year exceeded that of last. Over 430,000 square feet in the great Music hall is devoted to exhibits and shows.

One of the influences that help boom the attendance at the fall festival is the active interest taken in it by the railroads of that section of the country. All the lines running into Cincinnati give special excursion rates during the fair, and these excursions are advertised extensively throughout the territory. The result is that immense crowds take advantage of the low rates and visit the show.

A Healthy Wyoming Town.

Here is the way the truthful citizens of Cody speak of the abounding healthfulness of that region: Joe Wheelock, Jr., the actor, is living here in the town of Cody in a colony of easterners who have come west for their health. He came to the Big Horn basin weighing 118 pounds and scheduled to die in two months. But nobody dies in Cody. If you can get a corpse there before it needs burial, it'll come to life. He's picked up a new pair of lungs, weighs 178 pounds and eats canned goods without opening the tins.

Early Advertising Ways.

In early English days, notably in London, the "touts" held high revel. They were usually apprentices, and when not fighting with each other or trouncing some unfortunate wayfarer they stood in the stalls of their masters' stores and howled to the passers-by to stop and purchase of their incomparable goods.

Portraits of Christ.

There is no portrait of Christ which can be pronounced authentic. The Jews were forbidden by their law to make likenesses, and so art, as we understand the word, scarcely had among them an existence. There are, however, two portraits which have the merit of extreme antiquity and were both probably made at some time in the first century. The one is cut on an emerald, the work purporting to have been done by command of the Emperor Tiberius. The jewel was preserved in the treasury of Constantinople, but in some way fell into the hands of the Turks before that city was taken by them and about 1483 was given by the sultan to Pope Innocent VIII. as a ransom for the sultan's brother.

The other portrait is on a fine brass medal discovered in Anglesea, Wales, in the year 1702. The workmanship is that of the first century, and a Hebrew inscription on the reverse declares the portrait to be that of the prophet Jesus. The two portraits bear a close resemblance, and it is altogether probable that both are ideal and that each followed the description of Christ given in the well known but not well authenticated letter of Publius Lentulus. The napkin portrait called St. Veronica's is much more modern and is probably a copy of the emerald likeness.

The Clerk Spoke English.

The ambitious attempts of the foreign tradesman to speak English to his American customers have been described by Mrs. Gillespie in "A Book of Remembrance" as part of her amusing experiences in Berlin.

Supplies of linen were to be bought, and we went again to the shop where we had essayed to speak German and the shopman had answered us with effort in English.

We found him affable as before, and, although we told him in German that we wanted to look at towels, he brought out some and said:

"I have found it very difficult to become such a towel as this."

We agreed with him and then asked for some other articles which he was obliged to look for in some distant part of the store. He bowed and said:

"Execute me in an instant."

My companion, Looli, bought twelve dozen children's napkins, and the young man said:

"Have you, then, so many young sisters and brothers?"

Thumbs.

The disparagement of the usefulness and importance of the thumb implied in the expression "His fingers are all thumbs" seems undeserved in view of the important part the thumb formerly played in the social customs of the people and the very important part it plays in our own lives.

Lord Erskine in his "Institutes" states that among certain of the lower ranks in Scotland the final settlement of a bargain was always signalized by the licking and joining of thumbs.

Selden in "Titles of Honor" says that kissing the thumb was a characteristic of servility. The clergy, the rich and the great were in receipt of this honor from their tradesmen. From the remotest days of antiquity the practice of licking the thumb has always been regarded as a pledge or promise existing, according to Tacitus and other authorities, among the Goths, the Iberians and the Moors, and it may also be traced through successive periods down to our own times.

Power of Pigeons on the Wing.

The power of pigeons on the wing is proverbial. All trained birds of this species have two qualifications in a marked degree. The first is speed, the second long and sustained powers of flight. This proposition can be amply demonstrated, and the following is one of the most remarkable records: On Oct. 6, 1850, Sir John Ross dispatched a pair of young pigeons from Assistance bay, a little west of Wellington sound, and on Oct. 13 a pigeon made its appearance at the dovecot in Ayrshire, Scotland, whence Sir John had the pair taken out. The distance direct between the two places is 2,000 miles.—Cornhill Magazine.

The Problem He Solved.

"Ah," he said to himself as he finished the last paragraph of his magazine article, "I think the world will have cause to thank me for this. In these pages I have worked out a reasonable solution of the servant girl problem. After this there can be no"—

"Henry," his wife cried as she rushed excitedly into his room, "Hannah has just notified me that she's going to leave, and here we have the Buchanans coming from New York next week. What on earth shall we do?"

He fell back helpless in his chair and gave it up.—Chicago Herald.

Friendship.

Friendship is as delicate and timid as a dove. She must be approached softly and allured gently; but, once taken, how faithful she is and how she fills all life with her grace and beauty! Do you know what attracts her? Good will and affability, obscure little virtues, one of which does not see or at least does not look at the defects of others, and the other of which attracts by a hidden charm pervading one's bearing, one's smile, one's words—little virtues which cost little and are of great value.—Selected.

The Coming Country Boy.

The life in the country is being more and more appreciated, and the income is sure. The young educated farmer is the coming man. Irrigation and forestry are bound to reclaim what is now arid land for the use of the farmer, and the broad prairies of this country will continue to invite our best young men to a calling more desirable and remunerative than pushing pens and pencils by the glare of a gas jet.—Janesville (Wis.) Gazette.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Publisher.

OAKLAND, : GARRETT CO., MD.

WON BY A SCRATCH

PROF. STARRETT, of the Upper Midland university faculty, a polished gentleman of the highest intellectual attainments, a widower with one child—a daughter whose age was 20 years, and whose charms, both mental and physical, had driven more than one young man to the verge of poetry—was in a quandary. He scratched his nose delicately with the blunt end of his pencil, and permitted a frown to wrinkle the usually calm surface of his white forehead. The desk, upon which he rested one elbow, was strewn with literature pertaining to the Pan-American exposition. In his left hand, pendant at his side, was a letter just received from a friend of his boyhood, now the general passenger agent of a great railway. The letter was one practical in its cordiality. It begged the professor to accept, for old times' sake, a pass to Buffalo and return for himself and daughter.

Why the professor should have been in a quandary is difficult to understand at first blush. The weeds of vacation time were growing in the streets of the university village. His leisure was ample, and his desire to see the exposition was strong. The means were at hand. Why should he have hesitated?

The Professor Was in a Quandary.

The facts may as well be stated. His daughter was infatuated with a young student whose name was Ropp. The name was in itself sufficient to arouse an unreasonable prejudice in the breast of a highly-strung individual like the professor, even had there been nothing else against the young man, which there was. He displayed more enthusiasm for athletics than for Greek; he was given to playing first fiddle at high jinks, parties, from which statement it must be inferred that he was a violinist; he was irreverent in his demeanor toward his elders; he cracked jokes out of football season, and during the season cracked heads; in short, he was a savage. The professor was compelled to acknowledge in his more reasonable moments that there was a wonderful charm about the young fellow, and it is to be admitted guardedly that had the presumptuous rascal not fallen in love with the professor's daughter, and, what was worse, caused the professor's daughter to fall in love with him, the professor would have had not a word to say against him. The truth is that the professor's dislike was a matter of jealousy, as events conclusively proved.

The door of the study opened presently, and the young woman appeared. The professor aroused himself.

"Ah, my dear," he said, "I am glad you have come. I wish you to consider your determination regarding a trip to Buffalo. See here."

He handed her the letter from the passenger agent, watching her closely as she read it.

"It is very lovely of him to remember us," she said, returning the sheet, "but really, papa, I would rather not go. I have a horror of crowds and shows. Why cannot you go alone?"

"I am Glad You Have Come."

The professor cleared his throat. He had no really good reason for not going, and he was not accomplished in the art of dissembling.

"Well—er—my dear," he began, "I can go alone, but—"

"But what, papa?"

"But I would prefer that you accompany me. We—we have been so much together, you know, and—"

He hesitated to declare outright that he did not wish to give young Ropp a clear field for his courting; he had an intuition that the declaration would sound even more ridiculous than it felt, and he had a horror of ridicule.

"And—and it would be so much more enjoyable," he continued, lamely.

The young woman said nothing until she had kissed him. There is reason to suspect that she understood.

"Will leaves for Buffalo to-day," she announced.

"What! young Ropp!" The professor brightened visibly, and it was all the young woman could do to repress a smile.

"Yes," she continued, "he is going, and he is to remain three weeks, and when he comes back, papa, he is going to ask your consent to—your consent to—to marry me. It is a secret, papa. You must not breathe it to a soul."

"No?" The professor blinked rapidly, for he was not accustomed to coming down to business with such vengeance.

"No, papa; you will not, will you?"

"No," replied the professor, decidedly, "I will not." And then, fired by the spirit of the moment, he went on, recklessly: "The truth is, my dear, that this young Ropp is not a gentleman; he is woefully lacking in consideration for others, and I can never consent—"

The door closed softly. He was alone. Sighfully he gathered together the literature pertaining to the Pan-American exposition and pulled down the rolling top of his desk, locking it. That night he was on his way to Buffalo.

It was like the professor to act thus abruptly. Foresight was not one of his strong points. He was subject to intervals of what he lightly termed lapsus mentalis, which is commonly known as absene of mind. Furthermore, he was given to jumping blindly in practical matters. And he was a sufferer from some sort of a skin malady, resembling eczema, which came out upon the small of his back and itched distractingly when he was in his bed at night. Life was not all a dream to the professor, despite his dreaminess.

He arrived at Buffalo just as the evening shadows were falling. He was dirty and exceedingly fatigued. Five hotels he visited, directed by kindly policemen, before he found a place wherein to stretch his mortal frame. At the fifth hotel they told him that if he had no objection to sleeping double, they could accommodate him, and he gladly accepted the terms, going immediately to bed.

He was exceedingly fatigued, as has been said, and naturally his sleep was sound, although not free from dreams. The professor was never entirely free from dreams, whether waking or sleeping. And throughout the night he imagined himself scratching, scratching, scratching, to allay the distracting itching caused by the skin malady upon his back. The itching was still unallayed when he opened his eyes in the morning and looked into the face of his bed-fellow.

"Well, well!" ejaculated the professor, and essayed to arise hastily.

But the movement awakened his bed-fellow, who raised himself upon his elbow, smiling.

"Good morning, Prof. Starrett," he said.

"Good morning, Mr. Ropp," returned the professor, stiffly.

"I trust you rested well, sir."

It has been said that the professor was not adept in the art of dissembling. "No, sir, I did not," he said, frankly, and with some asperity; "my back troubled me a great deal, and I dare say I scratched it raw."

He drew on his trousers, and took a hand mirror from his grip, holding it before him while he backed towards the mirror upon the wall.

"Why!" he exclaimed, "there is not a scratch mark there! I must have dreamed it."

The young man offered no opinion, but suddenly he sat up in bed and pulled his nightshirt over his head, presenting his back to the professor's view.

"Oh!" gasped the professor. "Good gracious! I must have scratched your back all night!"

"Oh!" Gasped the Professor.

"You did," admitted the young man.

"But wh-why," cried the professor, "did you not awaken me?"

"There were two reasons," replied the young man. "In the first place you were, to all intents and purposes, my guest, this being my bed. In the second place I did not wish to disturb your slumbers."

"You were most considerate," murmured the professor, after an interval of deliberation. Then impulsively he held out his hand.

Twenty minutes later they went down to breakfast arm in arm.

After Waiting Four Hours.

He was a doctor and was patiently waiting for his first patient.

Thought he: "If the mountain will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet must go to the mountain. And, as patients will not seek me out, I must needs seek them out."

He strolled through the cheap market, and presently saw a man buy six nice cucumbers.

"Here's a chance!" said he, and followed him home.

Patiently he waited for four long and lonely hours, and about midnight the front door quickly opened and the man dashed down the steps.

He seized him by the arm and cried earnestly:

"Do you want a doctor?"

"No!" replied the man, roughly. "Want more cucumbers!"—London Tit-Bits.

Beware of Appearances.

Two practical jokers once, when at a railway station, observed a rustic-looking personage, who stood gaping around at everybody and everything in evident astonishment.

Thinking to have some fun, they walked up, and, stationing themselves on each side of him, proceeded to have their sport.

"Paddy," said one, "are you a fool or an ass?"

"Neither," replied the peasant, "but I'm between the two."

The jokers were observed walking away in evident disgust and looking very small.—London Tit-Bits.

Tipsy Elephants.

The fruit of the umganu tree of South Africa yields a strong intoxicating drink for the natives. Elephants are fond of it, becoming quite tipsy, staggering about, playing antics, screaming so as to be heard for miles and having tremendous fights. When in this state the natives leave them alone.

The Independent American Cities.

While riding in a Maine country road a traveler observed a field of corn which was overrun with rank weeds, and midway of the piece was a large, conspicuously-displayed sign with the following: "Notiss! None of Your Business If This Corn Ain't Hoed."

SIMPLE AND COURTLY

Adjective Applied to the New Ameer of Afghanistan.

Not by Native Flatterers, But by an English Lady Physician, Who Has Known Him Ever Since Childhood.

The accession of Habibullah to the rulership of Afghanistan is subjecting the character of the youth to the closest scrutiny upon the part of interested powers. Whether he will be strong enough to follow out the policy of his father, Abdur Rahman, remains to be seen. A weak man, or one who turns to Russia, is likely soon to precipitate the long-threatened conflict in the far east.

Extracts from a recently published sketch written by Dr. Lillian Hamilton, who for several years was the physician of the late ameer's household, are herewith reproduced:

In 1888, when the father set out for Afghan Turkestan to punish the rebellion of his cousin Ishak, Prince Habibullah Khan, his eldest son, then a boy of only 16, was left to officiate during his absence, and the period of his rule in Cabul was marked as one of special prosperity and repose. Many causes may have contributed to this happy result, but one of the chief undoubtedly is the prince's own disposition. He has, indeed, so far seemed to combine in his person most of the best qualities of his immediate ancestors without their faults—the shrewd common sense, simplicity and courtly manners of Dost Mohamed without his Quixotic chivalry, the piety and religious aspirations of Mohamed Afzul without his weakness, and the ready wit, tact and keen perception of Abdur Rahman without his violence and cruelty. The one question that still remains unanswered is that of power. Is he also strong? Popular he certainly is at present, but without strength in such a country no one can even hope to remain in favor. At present it is impossible to answer this with any authority.

"Education," he has said, "is the cause of the prosperity of England. Why, the commonest workman in England becomes a master when transported to this country." Prince Habibullah is not only the eldest son, but has already acted for his father, not merely during his absence from Cabul, but in his many severe illnesses, and has, moreover, as the ameer's health declined, gradually had more and more authority placed in his hands.

HABIBULLAH KHAN.
(The New Ameer of the Asiatic Kingdom of Afghanistan.)

Until recent years—until, indeed, they were put down by Abdur Rahman—bloody feuds and the law of retaliation, and the raids which they occasioned, were universal throughout the whole of Afghanistan. Every chief was at war with his neighbors or most of them, and the daughters of a man of older lineage might often be found to be slaves in the households of these various robber chieftains. Thus it came about that the daughter of the Mir of Fyzabad was taken prisoner by Mir Jahander, shah of Turkistan, and, being very pretty, was kept in the house and brought up with his own daughter till she should be old enough for him to marry her. Jahander Shah, however, died before that time arrived, and when his daughter became Abdur Rahman's fourth wife she took with her the companion and friend of her childhood. Shortly afterward the ameer, attracted no doubt by her beauty, which is still, even as an old lady, quite out of the common, married her with the sanction—almost at the request—of Jahander Shah's daughter, who had no children of her own, and who, like all eastern wives, was most anxious to have "children in her house," as they would say. This daughter of the Mir of Fyzabad is the mother of Prince Habibullah and Prince Nasrullah, and is a scion of one of the most ancient families of Afghanistan.

Marriage Fees in Mexico.

There are well-founded reports of excessive marriage charges on the part of the clergy in the interior of Mexico, where young men are "sized up" to see what they will stand. Thus the performance of the religious ceremony of marriage is discouraged. In some cases sensible grooms have refused to pay from $800 to $1,500, and have gone to the United States, where priests were happy to perform the religious ceremony for $25 gold, or, say $52 silver. The civil marriage, which alone legitimatizes children and provides for the due and orderly inheritance of property, is always in order, and many people are contenting themselves with what the law says is sufficient.

WHITNEY LEADS WINNERS.

His Share of Turf Stakes and Purses in the Season Just Closed Placed at $108,440.

William C. Whitney heads the list of winners on the American turf this year with $108,440 as his share of stakes and purses. To the intensely practical mind this seems like a small return for the $500,000 or more that Mr. Whitney has spent on his horses, but doubtless the royal sport he has enjoyed more than make up the difference.

John E. Madden, second in the list, has proved himself a magician. Although Yankee and Blue Girl and several other horses ranked among the best of the year, he has still kept enough first-class performers running under his colors to earn him $103,115. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Farrell hold third place with winnings of $49,110.

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY.
(Famous Democratic Politician and King of the Turf.)

The principal winners of the season are:

Names.	Amount.
Whitney, W. C.	$108,440
Madden, J. E.	103,115
Farrell, Frank	49,110
Morris, Green B.	46,135
Mackay, Clarence	40,737
The Pepper Stable	40,600
Keene, James R.	36,901
Haggin, James	30,405
Sealey, W. H.	28,165
Wilson, R. T., Jr.	27,920
Belmont, August	25,520
Osceola Stable	24,750
Featherstone, A.	23,988
Morris, A. H. & D. H.	23,765
Daly, W. C.	22,351
Schorr, J. W.	20,505
Hitchcock, T., Jr.	19,930
Goughacre Stable	19,805
Keene, J. R. & F. P.	18,135
Littlefield, C. Jr.	17,685
Rollins, W. C.	17,650
McLewee & Co.	17,585
Fleischman, J.	17,130
Bell, L. V.	16,190
Chamblet, Mr.	15,795
McCafferty, J. J.	15,645
Walbaum, G.	15,145
Lakeland, W.	15,130
Follansbee, J. G.	12,640
Hitchcock, F. R.	12,760
Fleischman Sons	12,600
Aste, A. L.	12,350
McDowell, T. C.	12,135
Widener, Jos. E.	11,290
Healy, T. J.	11,145
Schreiber, Barney	10,885
McLaughlin, James	10,300
Smith, Harry W.	9,675
Randolph, P. S. P.	9,660
Smith, George E.	9,585
Dwyer, C. F.	8,970
Murphy, M.	8,690
Monahan, T. J.	7,575
Thompson Bros.	7,385
Griffin, H. T.	7,260
Brown, S. S.	7,200
Albermarle Stable	7,161
Bannington, N.	6,840
McCarren, P. H.	6,765
Rice, R. R.	6,755
Carruthers & Shields	6,610
Setauket Stable	6,595
Tabor, John	6,480
Myers, L. M.	6,135
Worth, Jacob	6,120
Patterson, C. T.	5,965
Smythe, J. W.	5,700
Johnson, S. C.	5,530
McGarry, J. A.	5,445
Oliver, W. L.	5,415
Dwyer & Maguire	5,305
Sullivan, Harris, Mulligan	5,230
Joyner, A. J.	5,200
Laughlin, R. J.	4,945
McDonald, J. E.	4,895
Smith, W. J.	4,670
Appleby, L. O.	4,650
Finlan, Miles	4,485
Richards, O. L.	4,475
Bennett, J. A.	4,430
Clancy, Michael	4,390
Walden, R. W. & Sons	4,350
Hill, Charles F.	4,220

GEN. GRANT'S WIDOW.

Former Mistress of the White House Is Just Recovering from a Rather Serious Illness.

Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, who is just recovering from a rather serious illness following upon her last visit to

MRS. JULIA DENT GRANT.
(Her Recovery from Serious Illness Has Just Been Announced.)

Canada, is now in her seventy-fifth year and has enjoyed excellent health and spirits almost all the years of her life. The widow of the great soldier and president was born at St. Louis, the daughter of Frederick and Ellen Dent. It was soon after her graduation from a boarding school that the charming Miss Dent met and captured the heart of the then Lieut. Grant, who was stationed at St. Louis. The marriage took place on August 22, 1848. When Gen. Grant left the white house his wife accompanied him on his trip around the world and shared in all the honors bestowed on the hero of the civil war. After the general's death congress passed a bill giving his widow a pension of $5,000 a year, upon which she has chiefly subsisted since that time.

Mrs. Kate Berg, Secretary Ladies' Auxiliary of Knights of Pythias, No. 58, Commercial Hotel, Minneapolis, Minn., After Five Years Suffering Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Whatever virtue there is in medicine seems to be concentrated in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered for five years with profuse and painful menstruation until I lost flesh and strength, and life had no charms for me.

Only three bottles of your Vegetable Compound cured me, I became regular, without any pains, and hardly know when I am sick.

Some of my friends who have used your Compound for uterine and ovarian troubles all have the same good word to say for it, and bless the day they first found it."—MRS. KATE BERG.

$5000 FORFEIT IF THE ABOVE LETTER IS NOT GENUINE.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues, and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address Lynn, Mass.

"UNION-MADE"

W. L. DOUGLAS $3.50 & $3.00 SHOES

SOLD IN OUR 63 RETAIL STORES

SOLD BY OVER 5,000 DEALERS

W. L. Douglas $4.00 Gilt Edge Line Cannot Be Equaled At Any Price.

For More Than a Quarter of a Century the reputation of W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes for style, comfort and wear has excelled all other makes sold at these prices. This excellent reputation has been won by merit alone. W. L. Douglas shoes have to give better satisfaction than other $3.00 and $3.50 shoes because his reputation for the best $3.00 and $3.50 shoes must be maintained.

W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes are made of the same high-grade leathers used in $5.00 and $6.00 shoes and are just as good in every way.

The standard has always been placed so high that the wearer receives more value for his money in the W. L. Douglas $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than he can get elsewhere. W. L. Douglas makes and sells more $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than any other two manufacturers in the world.

FAST COLOR EYELETS USED. Insist upon having W. L. Douglas shoes with name and price stamped on bottom. Shoes sent anywhere on receipt of price and 25 cents additional for carriage. Take measurements of foot as shown; state style desired; size and width usually worn; plain or cap toe; heavy, medium or light soles.

Sold by 60 Douglas stores in American cities selling direct from factory to wearer at one profit; and the best shoe dealers everywhere. Catalog O Free. W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

Making No Useless Exertion.

Smooth Stranger—Beg pardon for troubling you, sir, but may I ask if you are carrying all the life insurance you want?

Fweddy (languidly to valet)—Williams, am I cawwying all the life insuwance I want?—Chicago Tribune.

Judging from Appearances.

The New Woman—In me, sir, behold a self-made woman.

The Old Man—That is certainly commendable. How long have you been a dressmaker?—Chicago Daily News.

Avoid the Alligator.

He was evidently from the country, this little old German, and as his eyes rested on the elevator, undoubtedly for the first time, his sense of the ridiculous was touched.

For a few minutes he stood in wonderment and then, laughing softly to himself, he stopped the first person he chanced to see, who happened to be the janitor, and fired this at him: "Vat was dot leedle box t'ing vat valks people oop der stairs stooden still?"

"Oh, that's the elevator," was the answer.

"Oh, dat's vat idt is, is idt? I haf a pockетbook made offen der peel uf one uf doze." He tried a ride, but didn't like it. Then he said:

"I vould told my wife nefer to go in mit von uf doz alligators ven der valking by hand vas goot."—N. Y. Post.

Made for Each Other.

Edith—I hear that you and Fred are quite interested in one another.

Bertha—Don't you tell a soul, Edith, but really I believe Fred and I were made for each other. We have played golf together three times, and we never have quarreled—except two or three times when Fred was clearly in the wrong.—Boston Transcript.

Comforting Improvement.

Pinchbeck—Ah, doctor! I see you continue your visits to my neighbor, Guffinger; how is he, by the way, this morning?

Doctor—I am glad to be able to report a noticeable improvement in his case.

"Indeed! Is he able to do anything yet?"

"Yes, indeed! He was able to pay his bill yesterday, and that's a marked improvement, as compared to the bulk of my patients."—Richmond Dispatch.

He Escaped.

Thingumbob—I thought you said you saw Borem first in Europe last summer.

McJigger—Well?

"Well, he says he's known you for years; besides he says he didn't see you at all when he was in Europe last summer."

"Exactly; because, as I told you, I saw him first there."—Philadelphia Press.

Only Half the Battle.

Brown—Are you anything of a linguist?

Jones—Well, I can read and understand French, German, golf, yacht, baseball, and football; but I can't talk 'em.—Detroit Free Press.

From Experience.

"Paw's weather-strips are feit," said Bessie, as she examined the door.

"So are his shingles," sobbed Tommy, who had been caught smoking in the woodshed.—Chicago Daily News.

The men are getting their rights. When a man eats too much pork these days, and gets sick, his friends find that grieving over the death of his wife, or his grandmother, caused his illness. Men never used to get any credit for poetic instincts.—Atchison Globe.

Revenge is like a mule—it works both ways.—Chicago Daily News.

FAVORITE HYMNS OF PRESIDENT McKINLEY:

"Nearer, My God, To Thee."
"Lead, Kindly Light," Etc.

ABSOLUTELY FREE

ALL THE WORDS. Write for them. ALL THE MUSIC. No cost to you.

McKinley Music Co., CHICAGO, 203 Wabash Ave. NEW YORK, 74 Fifth Ave.

HAZARD

DON'T FIRE SEVERAL CHARGES AND POSSIBLY LEAVE IT TO SUFFER AND DIE. USE HAZARD POWDER, WHETHER BLACK OR SMOKELESS, AND KILL AT FIRST SHOT.

GUN POWDER

THE POWER OF A PENNY

It will buy a charming story if invested in

10 STORY BOOK.

Ten cents buys ten of the best complete stories of the day by the greatest living authors. One hundred cents, $1, buys a year's subscription to this wonder in the magazine world which gives you 120 complete stories a year—less than 1 cent for each story. Send subscriptions to 10 STORY BOOK, 167 Dearborn St., Chicago.

Money-Money

FOR SALE—Small mortgages paying 6 per cent. interest on irrigated farms in the Great Platte Valley of Nebraska, where crops never fail. Write for information. JAS. H. CASSELMAN, President of The Irrigators' Bank, SCOTTSBLUFF, Nebraska.

READERS OF THIS PAPER DESIRING TO BUY ANYTHING ADVERTISED IN ITS COLUMNS SHOULD INSIST UPON HAVING WHAT THEY ASK FOR, REFUSING ALL SUBSTITUTES OR IMITATIONS.

PILES ANAKESIS gives instant relief and POSITIVELY CURES PILES. For free sample address "ANAKESIS," Tribune building, New York.

RHEUMATISM Van Buren's Rheumatic Compound is the only positive cure. Past experience speaks for itself. Depot 83 S. California Ave., Chicago.

DROPSY NEW DISCOVERY; gives quick relief and cures worst cases. Book of testimonials and 10 days' treatment Free. Dr. H. H. GREEN'S SONS, Box B, ATLANTA, GA.

STARK TREES best by Test—77 YEARS. LARGEST Nursery. FRUIT BOOK free. WE PAY CASH. WANT MORE SALESMEN. PAY Weekly. STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo.; Dansville, N. Y.

A. N. K.—C 1894

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

THE MODERN GULLIVER.

There was once a young man whose companions in life
Were Intemperance, Idleness, Worry and Strife,
And the whole of the rest of the Lilliput band—
Dissipation their leader—who roam through the land,
And who by their grimaces, cajoling and wiles,
And their limited pleasures, invidious smiles,
Bind young men in a web of contempt to the earth,
And then make their misfortunes a target for mirth.

Said this fearless young man to the Lilliputs bold:
"Ho, there, ho! you can't trouble me—I am too old—
So keep on, Uncle Worry, and tie your cord tight,
And you, too, Cigarette, you may pull with your might;
Also Billiards and Whisky, and you, little Pool,
Must conjecture that I have become quite a fool."
With a leer of false pride, he exultingly said:
"I can break through your mesh when it enters my head."

But the years sped along, and the Lilliputs wound
Their fine threads into ropes, and completely they bound,
Hand and foot, to the roadway of Utter Despair,
The weak Gulliver who their encroachment did dare;
But as soon as he woke, with a look of surprise,
He discovered that he was unable to rise.
Then the Lilliputs laughed, as such elfs only can,
For they knew they had ruined the life of a man!

—Felix G. Pryme, in Success.

ALCOHOL AND WOMEN.

Dr. Heywood Smith Thinks Women Drinkers Are Increasing and Tells Why This Is So.

I think we may take it for granted that drunkenness is on the increase among women, and that not only among the poor, but also to an alarming extent among the well to do. And we may the more readily do so, as, in answer to an invitation from the Charity Organization society, a meeting was held in the Royal United Service institution on the 29th of last month to consider the question of intemperance among women, and to suggest some remedy for the evil; and it was then given as the opinion of the majority of the speakers that intemperance was greatly on the increase among women.

That such is the case witness the provision that is being made for the reception of the criminal inebriates into reformatories that are being established in order to carry out the requirements of the inebriate acts. In those already opened there is accommodation for about 50 men, and for about 252 women, or in the proportion of one to five. So, too, the number of convictions under the act in 1899 were two males and 90 females. Again, in certified retreats there is provision for 131 men and 174 women. And in the recent epidemic of poisoning among beer drinkers in Manchester and its neighborhood the majority of the victims have been women.

Now, sir, why is all this? Why are so many women becoming drunkards?

(1) First, perhaps, to put it broadly, the increasing independence of women may be a factor; i. e., women during the last 30 or 40 years act more than formerly according to their own discretion; they are by common consent, or, if not by consent, yet by custom, accorded more liberty, a liberty which it seems some of them proceed to abuse.

(2) In the struggle for life which this independence engenders there is often the element of failure or over nerve strain, and women, too weak in many instances to bear the strain, fly to stimulants.

(3) The anxieties connected with the home and children, especially where to these are added, it may be, a husband's neglect, or the brutality of a husband who drinks.

(4) We must not omit the influence of pain in driving some women to alcohol as a remedy. To women, not only to the poor, but the rich, come often periodic waves of pain, and at those times the advice of injudicious friends, nay, even of their own mothers, is to take some hot gin and water.

(5) I am sorry that I cannot exclude the not infrequent carelessness of our own profession, for medical men are too apt, should they deem it necessary to prescribe alcohol, to say: "Oh, take a little wine," leaving it to the patient to determine the dose; whereas, did they realize that alcohol was so insidious a poison as it is, possessing as it does the seductive power of inducing the exhibition of larger doses, they might hesitate before they placed without limit such a dangerous drug in the hands of their patients, and prescribe it in more accurate doses, and wrapped, perhaps, on some less pleasant taste.

(6) Among the well to do the habit of drinking champagne and other wines at dinner, fosters a taste that tends to enthral rather than to leave the partaker a free agent. So-called moderate drinking is a snare, as few have sufficient self-control to determine what moderate drinking is.

Among men some of the causes of inebriety are the temptations arising from boon companions; there existing a sort of idea that to refuse to drink when invited is a kind of insult or want of good-fellowship. Again, how often business transactions are sealed by a drink, though happily this is not so frequent a habit as formerly. To these causes must be added business and domestic troubles, and but too often a careless, untidy, or nagging wife drives the man to his only club, the public house.

Men drink in company, women too often in secret, making the detection of the early stages difficult or almost impossible.

We will now just see how this evil of drinking affects men and women.

1. When a man comes home drunk he comes as a terror to his children, who shrink on hearing his footsteps; he quarrels with his wife, as to his food, it may be; he may be violent and smash up his little furniture, and with the broken pieces assault his long-suffering partner. But when a woman drinks she neglects her children, pawns their clothes, leaving them exposed to cold and disease; she neglects her home and her husband, driving him probably also to drink, and so leading to assault and perhaps murder.

2. Again, when a man is imprisoned for some consequence of his drunkenness, the family is indeed deprived of the chief bread-winner, and they are exposed to want and privation, which may, however, be mitigated by the industry of the wife; but when the wife is shut up the family is deprived of the mainstay, the husband is left without anyone to care for him or provide his food, the children are left to run about uncared for and exposed to all sorts of dangers, and on her coming out of prison her drinking habits are as bad as ever, and the house has ultimately gone to wrack and ruin.

I have hitherto referred only to wives, but woe betide that solitary woman, whether the unmarried or the childless widow, who, companionless and despairing in her very solitude, has recourse to drink in order to infuse, if possible, some measure of so-called happiness or oblivion into her probably objectless life. For these sad and unhappy cases, the victims of a veritable disease, measures must be taken (1) to prevent them having access to the poison that is destroying their existence, (2) to help them in their fight against the terrible onsets of the drink-crave, and (3) to build up their health during the process, which, in most cases, is associated with a deeper despair and hopelessness. And in our dealing with these suffering sisters of ours let us ever remember that a tender and human sympathy will do more to wean them from the habit than any measure of forcible coercion.

Among the well to do, facilities for women obtaining drink are being multiplied. The granting of licenses to grocers is one of the chief of these. The housekeeper has no necessity to enter a public house, she has only to go to her grocer and have the bottle of wine put down as candies or raisins or some other commodity, and even the lady in her carriage can there obtain all she needs without even entering a wine merchant's establishment. And to those who have no shrinking from entering a public house there are now being fitted up ladies' bars, comfortably furnished, and in some cases, with a separate, unobtrusive door, where the enemy lies in wait to compass their destruction.

The drink habit lays hold of women insidiously, and of its effects one of the most frequent is the habit of lying—a pretty constant symptom of the disease; then comes untidiness, poverty, dirt, ruin and death.

But before death closes the sad scene there is another effect that is becoming deplorably frequent, and that is insanity; the proportion being of two women to one man, and the seeds of insanity once sown bring forth fruit in succeeding generations.

—Dr. Heywood Smith, in Temperance Record.

Drink and Crime.

In 120 army prisons throughout Germany 46 per cent. of all the murderers committed their crimes while under the influence of drink. Sixty-three per cent. of the cases of manslaughter, 74 per cent. of serious injury to the person and 77 per cent. of criminal immorality are due to the same cause. In the navy, out of 1,671 punishable cases during the last six years 75 per cent. of the most serious cases have been due to drunkenness. —Berlin Letter to London Chronicle.

Seeking the roses of health in the red cup you may find the rouge of ruin.—Ram's Horn.

INDIANS WERE KIND.

Received the Early White Settlers with Gifts of Corn.

And Scientific Research Demonstrates That Many of the Tribes Had Attained a Fair State of Civilization.

[Special Washington Letter.]

GIFTED with reasoning faculties so well balanced that his analytical and synthetical mental processes were equally superb, Auguste Compte gave his "Positive Science" to the world as naturally and easily as a mother gives a part of her life to the wee babe in her arms.

It was Compte who first clearly explained that "science is fact; philosophy the reason or cause of the fact." It is one thing to know that the sun gives light and heat. It is another thing to take a philosophic theory and deduct from it the reason or cause of that fact. It is one thing to ascertain the facts that the vegetable and animal worlds interchange carbon and oxygen. It is another thing to theorize and philosophize concerning the rationale of those facts. There is no argumentation in science. Philosophy is based upon and absorbed in theses and discussions.

Although the learned men of the old world and the new have endeavored to follow Compte by keeping their science and philosophy separate, they have not been wholly successful. This is particularly true as to the science of geology, which is largely also a philosophy. This also is true of archaeology. Delvers in the earth have not been content to coldly chronicle their ascertained facts, but have endeavored to give the reason for all of those facts. Whatever and wherever they have sought the rationale, they have ceased to be positive scientists and have sought also to become philosophers.

In our own country and continent philosophical endeavor has surmounted scientific attainment. For example, discoverers of facts concerning the mysterious mounds which abound in certain localities have taxed their brains to develop theories concerning a race called mound builders. Lapsing into theories they have become theorists and philosophers, rather than pure scientists or fact-getters.

It is admitted that philosophy has developed many facts which are now a part of positive science. Theorizing is not decried, because from it knowledge, and philosophy is useful ence, however, is the higher form of knowledge and philosophy is useful only as it develops truths which are added to science. When a child burns its finger, it ascertains a fact concerning heat; the child is then in the domain of science. But the child enters upon the realm of philosophy when it asks why heat burns.

In the tide-water region of the Potomac river, for many miles to the southward of our national capital, scientists have discovered utensils and implements of bone, stone, pottery, iron and copper. They have added the well-known fact that Indians originally inhabited this continent, and they have evolved interesting philosophies concerning the habits of those prehistoric human beings. Books and pamphlets on these topics fill many shelves of the congressional library, while the National museum and Smithsonian institution exhibit the prehistoric articles concerning which the numberless works have been written. There are upwards of 25,000 specimens of rare relics which have been gathered by different individuals during the past half century. Local archaeologists have uncovered village sites all along this region; and they say that these sites are as distinctly the former dwelling places of the Indians as Herculaneum and Pompeii were the cities disclosed by similar delvers near Vesuvius.

PURITANS RECEIVED WITH CORN.

According to the facts and theories of these workers in the earth, more than 40 of these villages have been uncovered within the limits of the District of Columbia alone, while scores of other village sites have been discovered along the river and Chesapeake bay. It is a matter of well-defined history that a number of tribes were included in the Powhatan confederacy when white men first trod the soil of Virginia, well-nigh 300 years ago. Until this day the country near the headwaters of the Potomac and the northern portion of Chesapeake bay is a happy hunting ground. In the pristine conditions of 300 years ago, this must have been a favorite hunting ground for the tribes of that confederacy. The Virginia Historical society has preserved maps of well-known trails which were used by the Indians in their annual trips to the Blue Ridge mountains in summer, and back again to the warm coasts in the autumn and winter, where they felt the warmth of the gulf stream without knowing what produced that effect. Their winter dwelling places are marked by miles of deep beds of oyster shells, which, philosophers say, plainly show that in winter the Indians lived upon those scavengers of the ocean.

The capable, active, energetic and enthusiastic workers of the geological survey have given systematic study and research to this entire region for a number of years; just as they have given to other portions of the country, as was notably manifested in their recent issuance at Buffalo of bulletins giving history, modern and pre-historic, of the formation of Niagara falls and the glacial erosions which formed the chain of great lakes. These diligent workers have contributed to this Potomac region lore the most valuable portions of the collections now on exhibition. In their officially published reports they give graphic illustrations of conditions which lead them to the conclusion that the Powhatan confederated tribes subsisted in winter on oysters and fish, while they hunted in the mountains during the milder months of each year.

"WHITE MAN HE KILL INDIANS."

These gentlemen offer proof that the Indians had reached the pottery stage of their existence, by showing numerous relics of earthen ware for domestic use. They had bowls, urns, rude plates and some large tubs. But that they were still barbarians, and had produced no Tubal-Cain, is manifested by the relics of knives, spears, arrow heads, mortars, pestles, drills, scrapers and war implements, all made of stone. They were learning to make implements of bone, when the white men came with their iron and steel weapons and implements. They were beginning to decorate their pottery, but all of their developments were cast aside and they ceased to grope towards civilization of their own volition, when the superior race appeared, with Bible in one hand and blunderbuss in the other.

Those ancestors of ours were freebooters who blazed their way across the continent with the blood of the original owners of every foot of soil. In the capitol rotunda are four pieces of statuary representing white men landing and being received by Indians offering them corn, Penn's treaty, Indians giving tobacco and pipes to white men, and a white man killing an Indian. When the Sacs and Foxes were in Washington a number of years ago and Gen. Balknap was showing them about the big building, one old chief pointed to those groups and said: "White man get corn from Indian; white man get land from Indian; white man get tobacco from Indian;" and then, pointing to the fourth group: "White man he kill Indian." Thus were condensed the salient features of three centuries of history of this continent.

In these collections concerning the early inhabitants of this region one of the most important is the historically indexed 12,000 arrow heads and spear heads, all of stone. These implements increase in size, so that there seems to be no distinct line of demarkation between the arrow and the spear.

The students of relics show similarities between the implements found here and in other portions of Atlantic tide-water. By them they offer proof that these Powhatan tribes were of Algonquin stock, and that they had dealings and commercial relations with the great body of ancient peoples whose domain extended from Nova Scotia to Florida. Their domestic and art relics, when compared with those found in the far northern and southern regions, are strikingly similar. But the deduction is by no means positive that they held commercial relations. However, there is where science and philosophy again strike a dividing line.

Two and one-half miles north of the white house there is a very large bowlder quarry and in it are evidences of having been the workshop of ancient implement makers. Two miles northwest of the white house there is a large and even now valuable soapstone quarry which the Indians worked. One mile and a half southeast of the capitol building is a thoroughly excavated and exposed Indian village which must have contained a population of not less than 5,000 people. All along the Potomac river, from Georgetown to Cabin John's bridge, and near the great falls of the Potomac, are disclosed fishing sites which are inhabited for months at a time by the Powhatan tribes.

These people left no mounds nor monuments other than the rude implements of industry and crude art which have been found, but careful explorations have shown to our professional students of the geological survey that the vanished people were intelligent, industrious and enterprising. They knew the locations of all valuable mineral and stone deposits in their area, and worked them to the best of their benighted ability. SMITH D. FRY.

SHE ADMIRES JIMMY.

Mysterious Girl Pursues Well-Known Yankee Bicyclist.

Her Maid Calls Her "Princess," and It Is Surmised She May Be Daughter of Alexis, One of the Czar's Uncles.

"Jimmy" Michael, the bicyclist crack-a-jack, has had a mysterious romance since he began riding at Paris, and is the greatest favorite among the women.

"I don't object to their sending me notes and portraits," he says. "My manager spares me the trouble of reading their foolish messages. But receiving flowers kills me. Everybody sends me bouquets, which are carried to my dressing-room, and I cannot refuse them without rudeness, yet they make me feel like a chorus girl."

"Jimmy" was compelled to make an exception in his disregard of femininity two weeks ago, says the New York World. While he was training on the Parc des Princes track a beautiful girl suddenly dashed from the riders' quarters, to everybody's surprise, for in the mornings only racers are admitted.

The girl took a few leisurely turns, then "tacked on to" Michael's wheel, keeping up a tremendous gait at his pace easily for two miles.

The boy was unconscious that he was followed until his trainer, growing impatient, cried:

"Spurt twice around and drop the lady, 'Jimmy.'"

"Jimmy" turned, saw the girl and increased his pace, smilingly confident that she would be unable to follow. But he was mistaken. Try as he might he could not leave the girl behind.

Finally the trainer, fearing that Michael would be unfit for his afternoon ride, ordered him to desist.

The girl immediately dismounted and extended her hand to "Jimmy," saying, in English:

"I admire your riding immensely."

"By Jove! I admire yours," exclaimed "Jimmy."

"Oh, I am good for short spurts," she responded, "but I couldn't have

JIMMY MICHAEL.
(American Crack-a-Jack Who Is the Sensation of Paris.)

followed much longer. Will you be friends?"

"With pleasure," cried "Jimmy." "May I inquire who does me such honor?"

"Never mind my name. I will meet you here every morning."

Thereupon the strange girl handed her wheel to an attendant and entered a luxurious closed carriage, which had a coachman and footman in full livery, and drove off.

The manager of the Velodrome was questioned, but could give no information as to the identity of the young woman, as a servant had arranged for the lady's riding daily, paying handsomely for the privilege.

Since that day the girl has been attending faithfully, rain or shine, and is fast growing chummy with "Jimmy," though when he questions her or tries in any way to discover who she is she grows sullen and leaves abruptly.

Naturally this has caused considerable gossip among the habitues of the track, and some have offered to follow the carriage and find where the girl lives, but "Jimmy" has threatened to break the head of anybody who tries to spy on her.

She seems to be about 24 years old, is of medium stature, refined, athletic and of surpassing beauty. According to experts she rides the wheel as no other woman ever did.

From the fact that her maid inadvertently twice called her "princess" and occasionally addresses her in Russian, the Parisians incline to think that she may be the natural daughter of Grand Duke Alexis, one of the czar's uncles, the same young princess about whom so much was printed three years ago, who lives in Paris in great splendor and proud isolation.

Women in Oil Business.

In the paradise of the petroleum industry, Texas, the young ladies of Beaumont are organizing an oil company, in which every officer and director must be an unmarried woman. The desire of the promoters to confine their undertaking exclusively to women has one limit; they regret that they will have to let the drilling contract to a man, as there is not a single drilling outfit in the field owned by a woman.

Official Ban on Chickens.

In Los Angeles, Cal., there is an ordinance imposing a fine of five dollars for allowing chickens to run on the streets and other people's property. The success of the ordinance is such that the city of Oakland will adopt one similar to it.

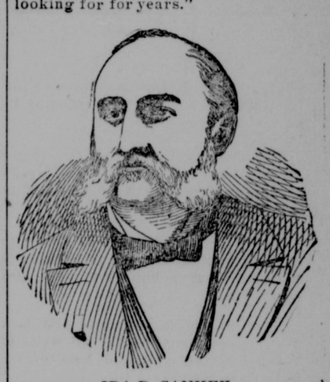
GENESIS OF A HYMN.

How Ira D. Sankey, the Singing Evangelist, Composed "The Ninety and Nine."

In the Ladies' Home Journal Cleveland Moffett tells how the greatest of all singing evangelists, Ira D. Sankey, came to give the world a hymn that will live long after his voice is stilled. It was during Moody and Sankey's first visit to Great Britain. As they were entering the train in Glasgow, Mr. Sankey bought a copy of a penny religious paper called The Christian Age. Looking over it, his eye fell on some verses, the first two of which read thus:

"There were ninety and nine that safely lay
In the shelter of the fold."

"Mr. Moody," exclaimed Mr. Sankey, "I have found the hymn that I've been looking for for years."



IRA D. SANKEY.
(Singing Evangelist and Composer of Many Famous Hymns.)

"What is it?" asked Mr. Moody.

"It is about a lost sheep."

Two days later, in Edinburgh, they held a great meeting in the Free Assembly hall. As Dr. Bonar finished, Mr. Moody leaned over the pulpit and asked the singer if he had not a solo for the occasion. The thought of the verses he had read in the penny paper came to Mr. Sankey's mind, and, opening his scrapbook, in which he had pasted the clipping, he placed it before him on the organ, and, after a moment of silent supplication, struck a full chord and began to sing. And note by note came the now famous song. He composed it as he went along. What he sang was the joy that swelled in his own soul, hope that was born, the love for those who needed help. Thus he finished the first stanza.

Then, as he paused and played a few chords, waiting to begin again, the thought came to him: "Can I sing the second stanza as I did the first? Can I remember the notes?" And concentrating his mind once more for the effort, he began to sing. So he went on through for five stanzas and after the services he put the melody in music.

OLDEST POSTMASTER.

His Name Is Roswell Beardsley and His Appointment Dates Back to 1828.

Roswell Beardsley, of North Lansing, N. Y., is unquestionably the oldest postmaster in the United States, if not in the world. He was born in 1809, and in 1828 was appointed by John Quincy Adams at the request of William H. Seward, a rising politician in Auburn, N. Y., and a law partner of the late millionaire, Nelson Beardsley, a brother of Roswell. Mr. Beardsley, now 92 years old, has held the office continuously since that time, and recently celebrated the seventy-third anniversary of his appointment. He has always given entire satisfaction to the public, never having been reprimanded for any lack of duty, and ever commanding the love and respect of all who know him. Until within a few years he has always made out his quarterly reports himself, and though now unable to perform actual labor he visits the office daily and knows what is going on.

ROSWELL BEARDSLEY.
(Appointed Postmaster by John Quincy Adams, in 1828.)

The receipts the first year were $19.53; now they are from $200 to $300. It is therefore apparent that though regarded "well to do," if not wealthy, his money has not been made in the post office but by general store, farming and other interests. He was invited to Washington at the last inaugural by the president—his expenses with two attendants to be met—but was then too feeble to undertake the journey. His health is now much improved.

Hat Etiquette in Sweden.

It is the custom of most countries in Europe to hold the hat in the hand while talking to a friend. In Sweden, to avoid the dangers arising from this during the winter, it is no uncommon thing to see announcements in the daily paper informing the friends of Mr. So-and-so that he is unable, through the doctor's orders, to conform to this polite usage.

The potato crop of 1901 is the poorest ever raised in America.

England raises 1,664,500 acres of turnips, most of which crop is eaten by its 26,000,000 sheep.

The Jersey bred male calf is a vealer by predestination, and ten weeks should mark the limit of his earthly existence.

If only boys would take as kindly to bucking wood as they do to bucking in a football game—but they don't and never will.

As wealth producers it is just now nip and tuck between the oil wells of Texas and the corn and hogs of the western states.

No living man can afford to risk his eternal happiness by trying to milk a kicking cow of the three pound of butter a week sort.

A cord of oak wood costing $6 when prepared for the stove is a much more expensive fuel than a ton of Hocking valley coal at the same price.

Enough sugar beets will be harvested this year in the southern part of Michigan to produce the sugar needed to supply all the people in that state.

If persistent layers of large white eggs are wanted, try the Houdans. These fowls are opposed to sitting on general principles. They, further, are very desirable table fowls.

The quality of both the winter and spring wheat raised in this country the past season is exceptionally good. The drought which cut short some of the other crops contributed to this result.

Wherever corn is extensively raised, cows milked and hogs fed there the silo has a place, for a winter ration of succulent food can thus be provided at far less expense than by the growing of any root crop.

Bad roads are popularly supposed to be muddy roads, but in many sections of the country the bad road is a sandy one and is the worst in dry weather. A top dressing of clay is the best cure for this sort of bad road.

Skimmilk is worth 35 cents a hundred pounds to feed the little pigs, which, when six months old, will sell at $7 per hundredweight, or more than half as much as the whole milk will bring to put into eight cent cheese.

France has seventy-five dogs for each thousand of its population. In the locality where the writer lives there must be not less than 250 to each thousand, and the hides of nine-tenths of them were intended by the Lord for glove stock.

It is claimed that concentrated lye placed along the runways of rats will get rid of the pests. The lye sticks to their feet and burns them, and then they go to licking their feet, which is too much for them. This is worth trying.

If country folk would visit with each other more, they would not give the peddler, the politician and the fake agent so warm a welcome. When persons have been left alone for a week, they will welcome most any old codger who comes along.

We are asked what becomes of the pork made from the old stags and 700 pound old hogs disposed of in the packing house markets. The sailors on the high seas get them, thus nicely illustrating one of the practical uses of the American navy.

A cheap tread power, so arranged that the bull will have to mount it and work it in order to reach his food, will almost surely take the devil out of him. If the power is attached to a pump, he will do better and more reliable work than any windmill.

One cow is just as likely to be cheap at $75 as another is at $25. It all depends upon the cow. A cow which will make 400 pounds of butter in a year is cheap at that figure, while another which will only make a calf and a manure pile is dear at a third of the money.

A Missouri landlord who had a number of tenants and whose land was located where the drought did its worst work the past season made out receipts in full for this year's rent and sent one to each of his tenants. This man is thus getting his tombstone engraved before he dies.

This was cruelty: He put two calves on to one cow and turned them out to take drought luck in the pasture, and when these were fit for the butcher he put two fresh calves with the cow. When fall came, she was a mere skeleton. Inhumanity works hand in hand with greed on many a farm

The thousand pound yearling steer fatted for baby beef is a sixty dollar product which should be more common than it is on all farms where blue grass, clover and corn will grow. To produce him nothing is better than a high grade Polled Angus.

There are much pleasure and many good things to be got out of a fall garden. The writer planted string beans, turnips, seed onions, radishes and lettuce the 1st of August, and on Oct. 1, there being no killing frost, had an abundant harvest from the seed sown.

One-third of the western dairymen do not obtain from their cows as much as the food eaten by the cows costs. In a test made with 100 patrons of a creamery thirty kept their cows at a loss, one farmer received $2.35 for each dollar's worth of food fed and the poorest stick in the lot only 60 cents.

If you want to keep your hired man, do not give him the kicking cow to milk. Milk her yourself if you are fool enough to keep her and commence singing "My soul, be on thy guard," when you grab the pail and the milking stool if you ever hope to shake hands with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Where there are two or more men engaged in the work of the farm it is an excellent way to assign the doing of the Sunday chore work to each in turn, leaving those off duty to have the day to themselves. This is better than a division of labor, because chore work and Sunday cleanliness and clothing do not work well together.

When the public ideal of an agricultural fair centers around the sensational in the amusement line, such as midway fakes, dropping live dogs attached to a parachute from a balloon, locomotive collisions and bullfights, it were better that the people stayed at home and kept right on milking cows, feeding hogs and doing the fall plowing.

Of all the small fruits we find the blackberry the most difficult to raise. A friend tells us that we take too good care of it and that if we would set out a patch on the north side of some grove and just let it entirely alone we would have all the blackberries we want. He says the blackberry is just like an Indian—can't stand civilization.

The grade of certificate held by the pretty country schoolma'am has nothing whatever to do as affecting her chances for exchanging it for a marriage certificate after she has taught about a year and a half. In fact, as we have noted it, those with a third grade certificate are likely to go off first, for beauty and brains are often strangers.

The Virginia creeper as a decorative house and porch climber is just now (Oct. 1) in all its beauty. No tree or shrub will give for a brief season a more rich or bizarre display of color, shading all the way up from a blood red to maroon, scarlet, orange and yellow. A festoon of it on a north side of your house will be a whole flower garden for color and beauty.

If you want some nice currant bushes to set out next spring, cut this year's growth of wood from the old bushes—the new shoots which have sprung from the roots—and stick them in a box of damp sand, which keep in the cellar. When spring comes, they will be rooted and ready to set out. This rule applies to any and all plants which may be propagated from cuttings.

Just as soon as a man gets to regard his cow as a machine instead of a pension bureau the better results he will obtain. Like the ancient Hebrews, who were required to make bricks without straw, so a large per cent of the cows are required to make milk without proper food. Cows can make milk out of straw just as the Israelites could make bricks without it, but it is a hard proposition.

There should be a weekly gathering of a social sort maintained in every country community during the winter months. It may be literary, musical, terpsichorean or just simply social. The more the people of a neighborhood see of each other the more they will think of each other—that is, generally speaking. Then the chance is thus given for the boys to go home with the girls, and that's worth considerable.

One man whom we know has made a great success of hauling cut corn fodder by waiting until early winter and taking a spell of cold, dry weather, hauling the corn to the homestead and running alternate bundles of corn and oat sheaves through an old thrashing machine. This plan entirely prevented the heating of the fodder and the shelled corn, and where the grain is fed out on the farm the plan has much to recommend it.

THE COLUMBIAN RASPBERRY.

We have an inquiry about the Columbian raspberry—what it is like, etc. It is the rankest growing of any of the raspberry family, is propagated from the tips and is a most prolific bearer of a large purple berry which in size, color and appearance is almost identical with the Shaffer. It possesses one excellent trait in that if the bearing wood is cut back, say, to a foot in height in the spring it will throw out a profuse growth of new shoots which will bear a big crop of large and late maturing fruit. We have known a single hill of this berry to produce over one-half bushel of fruit. In the latitude north of central Iowa it is safer to lay the vines down and cover them for the winter, as it is not an ironclad variety.

The Garrett County Bank
OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Subscribed Capital, - $50,000.00
Liability of Stockholders, 100,000.00
Surplus Fund, - - 10,000.00

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
JOHN M. FREELAND,
SCOTT T. JONES.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

THE
SECOND NATIONAL BANK
of CUMBERLAND, MD.

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000
Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
John Sheridan, A. Hunter Boyd,
David W. Sloan.

GEO. FLACK SANSBURY,
ARCHITECT,
Office 7 North Liberty St.
CUMBERLAND, MD.

Paid Up Capital $32,000.

The First National Bank
OF OAKLAND, MD.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound Banking, and which their balances, business and responsibility warrant.

3 per cent. Interest Paid on Time Deposits.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

DIRECTORS.
Ed A. Browning, - Oakland, Md.
C. E. Ellithorp, - Bittinger, Md.
L. E. Friend, - Friendsville, Md.
Wm. Moody, - Bloomington, Md.
U. G. Palmer, - Hutton, Md.
R. A. Ravenscroft, Accident, Md.
E. E. Sollars, - Oakland, Md.
U. M. Stanton, - Grantsville, Md.
F. A. Thayer, - Oakland, Md.
M. N. Wilson, - Wilson, W. Va.

OFFICERS.
F. A. THAYER, - President.
M. N. WILSON, - Vice-President.
R. E. SLIGER, - Cashier.
M. R. HAMILL, Assistant Cashier.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
OFFICE UPSTAIRS IN RAVENSCROFT BUILD'G.

Loans negotiated and Collections promptly made.
Practices in Courts of Maryland, West Virginia and Court of Appeals of Maryland.

NORMAN S. HEINDEL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—REPUBLICAN Building.
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

PERCY H. VEITCH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

General practice in all the Courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Money loaned on Mortgage.
Special attention given to sale of real estate, investigation of titles, conveyancing and preparation of legal papers.
Agent for the Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.
☞ Offices in McComas Building, opposite Garrett County Bank.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
OAKLAND, MD
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in McComas's Building, Main St.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benjamin A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

GILMOR S. HAMILL
ATTORNEY AT LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY
OFFICE ON ALDER STREET,
Particular attention given to Conveyancing investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated. 1e14-1y

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
Office opposite Bank, OAKLAND, MD.
Will practice in the courts of Maryland and West Virginia.
Real estate and mercantile law given special attention. Collections and investments made for clients. 45—1yr

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
OAKLAND, MARYLAND,
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia. '88 10 6

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas building, Second Street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work. 18-98-tf.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
Felty Building, Opposite Postoffice,
OAKLAND, MD
GAS ADMINISTERED. 50-97

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
OAKLAND, MD.
Office and residence, Alder St., west of post office.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North 3rd Street.
Office in Shartzer's Block, Second Street.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Prompt attention paid to day or night calls.
Office at McComas' Sanitarium. 16-'99

H. W. McCOMAS M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.
OAKLAND, MD.
Office opposite Garrett County Bank.
Residence on Main Street, opposite Brown's Hotel.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to p. m., from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENNA.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa. 6 22 6m

E. J. FRANTZ,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
Residence and P. O. Address,
SELBYSPORT, MD.

ANDREW J. HARNE,
AUCTIONEER.
Will sell real or personal property.
Residence Oakland, Garrett county, Md
Oakland, Md., Feb. 21st, 1887.

W. McCULLOH BROWN,
SURVEYOR AND ENGINEER,
LAND SURVEYS PROMPTLY MADE.
Particular attention given to TOWN surveying, and the use of the LEVEL in laying out new roads, streets, water works, drains, and GRADE LINES generally, including tram ways and railroad work. Comparative elevations taken quickly by aneroid barometer. Address, box 41, Oakland, Md. 48 26tf

JONAS C. BEACHY,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER.
Will sell Real or Personal Estate
Residence and post office address, BITTINGER, MD. 51-1yr.

ALEX'R C. MASON,
PRACTICAL SURVEYOR,
OAKLAND, MD.
Long experience enables me to locate tracts and military lots promptly and accurately. Being thoroughly familiar with the beginning corners of the most important surveys both in Allegany and Garrett counties. Plats, descriptions and estimates furnished. 49-1yr.

ARE YOU DEAF? ANY HEAD NOISES?

ALL CASES OF
DEAFNESS OR HARD HEARING ARE NOW CURABLE
by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.
HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.
F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most prominent specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even then temporarily, that the head noises would likely cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

W. F. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

Our treatment does not interfere with your usual occupation.
Examination and advice free. YOU CAN CURE YOURSELF AT HOME at a nominal cost.
INTERNATIONAL AURAL [illegible], CHICAGO, ILL.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT NOV. 17, 1901.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, Nov. 17, 1901. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily.....12.52 A. M
No. 3—Daily.....7.32 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday.....10.01 A. M
No. 55—Daily.....4.32 P. M
No. 1—Daily.....10.07 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—Daily.....12.37 A. M
No. *4—Daily.....5.54 A. M
No. 2—Daily.....6.18 A. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun.....2.47 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily.....4.46 P. M
No. 12—Daily.....8.35 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager of Passenger Traffic.
D. M. MASON, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT SEPT. 29, 1901.

SOUTHWARD No. 3 P. M.	No. 1 A. M.	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2 NOON	No. 4 P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 07	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June.	10 51	6 01
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 15	9 00	Harrison	†10 06	5 15
6 00*	9 50* ar	Elk Garden	*8 10	*4 25
5 45†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 38	10 27	Thomas	8 58	3 53
7 10	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 15
6 48	10 35 lv	Coketon	8 35	3 50
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 15
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 50	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 10†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 15
	NOON
8 46*	12 52† ar	Beverly	lv	†1 44
9 10*	1 15† ar	Huttonsville	lv	†1 20
M. P.				P. M.
	3 15* ar	Bealington	lv	*11 45
	P. M.			A. M.

†Daily. *Daily except Sunday.

C. L. BRETZ, Gen. Manager. G. W. HARRISON, Gen. Pas. Agent

I HAVE PURCHASED
THE OAKLAND COAL YARD
of Mr. D. L. Conneway and will continue the business. I will keep constantly on hand a large supply of
HARD AND SOFT
COAL,
KINDLING WOOD, Etc.
All orders will receive prompt attention. Leave orders with the weighmaster or at my residence, the Giessman Hotel.
35-2 GEO. GIESSMAN

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

133½ acres coal land on Youghiogheny river, 7 miles north of Oakland.

The Andrews property in Oakland for sale.

House on 5th street, opposite the jail for sale.

A farm one mile from Oakland, containing 187⅝ acres; about 50 or 60 acres cleared and under cultivation; has been thoroughly limed. Balance of land well timbered. On this farm is one of the best dwelling houses in the county; also stables, wagon sheds, spring house and all necessary outbuildings; water within five feet of kitchen door. This property will be sold cheap.

New house containing eight rooms, cellar, etc., and 2⅝ acres of ground; barn, stable, and all other outbuildings, adjoining the town of Grantsville, Garrett county. This property is known as the Samuel J. Beachy property, and will be sold cheap.

A farm five miles from Oakland on the Aurora road, containing 200 acres, well watered, fenced, etc.; a good dwelling house, a new barn built last year cost $1,000, and all other necessary outbuildings. This property will be sold on easy terms.

A farm 2½ miles southwest of Oakland, containing ninety acres of ground, well watered and fenced; has been thoroughly limed, and is under a high state of cultivation. First-class dwelling house; new bank barn put up this year; stone spring house and all other necessary outbuildings. One hundred and twenty-five bearing fruit trees of choicest variety. This farm can be bought on easy terms.

A farm five and two-third miles north of Swanton, containing one hundred and ten acres of land, comparatively level, well watered and under fence; eighty acres cleared and under a high state of cultivation; twenty-five acres of good timber; an orchard which never fails to produce fruit, consisting of peaches, pears, plums and apple trees. The buildings on this farm consist of an elegant dwelling house, containing six rooms and a cellar; a bank barn 40x60 feet; a spring house and all necessary outbuildings. This farm can be bought for part cash and balance on time to suit purchaser.

A farm known as the "Swanger Mill Property," containing eighty-six acres of land, partly cleared and balance in hemlock timber. The buildings consist of a dwelling house, small storehouse, a water-power grist mill, stable and all other necessary outbuildings. Besides being well watered by a stream running from one end of the place to the other it has on it a lake, covering about seven acres, which has been stocked with 40,000 brook and rain bow trout. This property can be bought at a low figure, part cash and balance on time, to suit purchaser, at five per cent. interest.

I have also houses to rent and sell in the town of Oakland.

For further particulars apply to
JOHN T. SINCELL,
Real Estate and Insurance Agent,
OAKLAND, MD

E. W. Grove
This signature is on every box of the genuine Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets the remedy that cures a cold in one day

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE

CALIFORNIA
Via New Orleans & the Sunset Route.
THE ONLY TRUE WINTER ROUTE.
No Snow Blockades or Blizzards.

The only line operating double daily service between Cincinnati and New Orleans, carrying Pullman Palace Drawing Room Sleepers, free Reclining Chair Cars and Buffet, Library, Smoking Cars, Cafe Dining Cars (meals a la carte).

FASTEST and FINEST TRAINS in the SOUTH.

Pullman Excursion Sleeping Cars through to San Francisco from Chicago, via Omaha and the scenic line of the world.

Pullman Excursion Sleeping Cars through to San Francisco from Cincinnati and Chicago, via New Orleans and the Sunset route. These cars are personally conducted by competent agents to look after the welfare of patrons. Quickest and best line to

OKLAHOMA AND INDIAN TERRITORY.
Fastest train service to the famous
BEAUMONT, TEXAS, OIL FIELDS.

Through Sleeping Car from Chicago without change and through Sleeping Car reservations from Cincinnati via Memphis, Tenn., to

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

SPECIAL HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS TO ALL POINTS SOUTH, WEST AND NORTH WEST.
For FREE descriptive matter and full particulars regarding above, address

E. A. RICHTER,
Traveling Passenger Agent.
812 Park Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

WANTED—Several persons of character and good reputation in each state (one in this county required) to represent and advertise old established wealthy business house of solid financial standing. Salary $18.00 weekly with expenses additional, all payable in cash each Wednesday direct from head offices. Horse and carriage furnished, when necessary. References. Enclose self-addressed stamped envelope. Manager, 316 Caxton Building, Chicago. 28 13t

Cure That Cold
And it can be done for 25 cents—a dose or two and relief is instant—a few doses more and the cure is complete.
Pine and Terpin Cough Syrup
Is a new remedy—contains new drugs and new chemicals—a trial will convince anyone of its merit—it cures where all else fails.
LOGAN DRUG COMPANY,
At all Druggists. WHEELING, W. VA.

CONSTIPATION CURED!
Nearly everyone suffers in a greater or less degree from this dreadful disease. It is dangerous to neglect the bowels, and often by doing so a foundation is laid for serious ailments.
Those suffering from Constipation suffer from slow Poison.
OUR NATIVE HERBS cures Constipation quietly and permanently.
No Pain, No Griping, No Binding effect afterwards. Its action is pleasant and sure.
200 DAYS' TREATMENT $1.00.
A CURE GUARANTEED OR THE MONEY BACK.

"When a girl I had Small Pox succeded by Typhoid Fever and Measels. I was left with Constipation and Sinking Spells. Sometimes I felt that I could not live. After having various physicians treat me with no benefit I bought a box of Our Native Herbs, which seems to be the only medicine that suits my case. I believe it saved my life." Mrs. M. MILLER, Crellin, Md.

No Case Too Stubborn for Our Native Herbs To Conquer.
THE ALONZO O. BLISS CO.,
SOLE PROPRIETORS,
WASHINGTON, D. C.
A. C. BROOKE,
Local Agent. Mountain Lake Park, Md.
A box of Tablets or Powder mailed to any address upon receipt of $1.00.

Notice to Delinquent Tax-Payers.

Notice is hereby given to all delinquent tax-payers that if taxes now due and in arrears are not paid before January 1, 1902, I will proceed by law to collect. For full information to all parties interested, I refer to Sec 50 of Chapter 563 of Acts of General Assembly of Maryland, a copy of which is hereto annexed.

W. M. LOFLIN,
Treasurer of Garrett County.

SECTION 50. The said Treasurer shall, during the first week in December in each and every year, give notice to all the delinquent tax-payers of said county, by advertisement inserted in two newspapers published in said county, and by hand-bills posted in five of the most public places in each election district of said county, and at the court house door, warning them that the payment of all taxes then due and in arrear will be enforced by by advertisement and sale unless the same be paid before the 1st day of January next following.

N. B. The above law will be strictly enforced after January 1, 1902.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

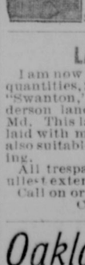
This is to give notice, that the subscriber, of Garrett county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

MICHAEL MARONEY,

late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of May next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 21st day of November, 1901.

FRED A. THAYER, Administrator,
Oakland, Md.



J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.
Cheapest place to buy
MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING
Send for prices

LAND FOR SALE!
I am now offering for sale in large or small quantities, 20,000 acres of a tract known as "Swanton," and better known as the "Anderson lands," situated in Garrett County, Md. This land is well timbered and underlaid with many valuable veins of mineral; also suitable for farming purposes and grazing.
All trespassing will be prosecuted to the ullest extent of the law.
Call on or address:
C. A. WILT, Agent, Elk Lick, Pa.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1901. NUMBER 39.

MR. GORMAN MENACED.

Trouble Ahead In the Legislature For His Senatorial Candidacy At the Next Election.

PARTY COUNCILS ARE HELD IN SECRET.

Republican Legislative Seats to be Contested as an Offset, Thus Completing the Steal and Thwarting the Voice of the People of Boss-Ridden Maryland.

Senator Gorman has another fight to win before he can go back to the Senate.

Should four of the fifty-one Democrats in the House of Delegates refuse to join their party in organizing the House, Arthur P. Gorman can never be a United States Senator, as it requires forty-eight to organize. Two of this number is known to have declared already that they will bolt. In this the Gorman clique sees trouble.

For two weeks the various Democratic members of the Legislature have been before the would-be Senator and pledges demanded. All of this is behind closed doors, of course, but the announcement made Monday at headquarters that the seats of several representatives would be contested shows that Gorman is a very much frightened man and proposes making his success absolutely certain if it lies in the power of his tools to do it.

Cecil and Somerset counties will be the storm-centre, with a possible attack on Senator Putzel, Republican Senator-elect in the second Baltimore city district. The question of a contest in the last named district is still in the air, but will be definitely decided this week. It is agreed that a Democratic gain of three votes to a precinct would be enough to defeat Senator Putzel and pull through all the Democratic candidates in the district.

The proposed contest in Cecil county, it is thought, will result in the seating of Austin L. Crothers, who was defeated by a small majority by McCullough, the Republican candidate for the Senate. With contests in Somerset and Cecil, and the probabilities of one in the second district, the Democrats count on increasing their majority nine votes. This would put a quietus on all talk of electing anyone except Gorman to the Senate and would, at the same time, increase the working majority in the House materially.

SONG OF HAPPINESS.

(W. A. M'KANNA, "DAVID.")

I have a song in my heart—
To sing to thee.
It's a song from which I will never part—
'Tis of thee.
Oh, the lullaby in my soul
Makes my heart's music unfold
Of the song of happiness untold—
'Tis for thee.

CHORUS.

And when you hear my heart a singing,
The glad tidings I'm a bringing—
Of joy divine.
And when my song influences your heart,
My soul from you will never part—
You'll be mine.

Oh, give me thine ear for awhile—
List to me.
I will your senses try and beguile—
Come to me.
With winged arrows from Cupid's darts,
Trained in line with my angel's heart,
To pierce it with love at the start—
For me.
It will awake the music in your soul—
'Tis to me.
It will expose happiness yet untold—
'Tis for me.
And unite our hearts as one,
When in music it is spun
Around our minds and hearts yet so young—
'Tis for you and for me.

Died.

PYSELL.—On Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 3, after an illness of several days of typhoid fever, Edward Pysell, aged about 27 years. The deceased young man was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Pysell, of near McHenry. He was engaged at the time he was taken ill at one of the lumber camps at Elder Hill, this county, and went to his home about a week ago. He was an upright, noble, generous man and very highly respected. His funeral will take place to-day.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Reciprocity and the Isthmian Canal Are Strongly Urged.

THE WORK OF A GREAT STATESMAN.

President Roosevelt's First State Paper Contains Many Suggestions to Fifty-Seventh Congress—Eulogizes Late Chief Executive and Condemns Anarchy.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The President's message is unique among such state papers in that it devotes a minimum of space to the foreign relations of the government, mentioning only the Chinese situation at length, and that at the close of the paper. The custom heretofore has been for the message to be mainly devoted to foreign relations, those matters occupying the first portions. Naturally the message treats primarily of the assassination of Mr. McKinley, and this leads directly to the discussion of anarchy and the best methods of governmental cure. In logical sequence comes a discussion of the prosperous condition of the country in emphasis of the declaration that the anarchists have no ground for operating here. Then follows a discussion of the trusts with the recommendation that Congress enact laws giving the federal government supervision over all corporations doing an interstate business. The President next recommends the organization of a new cabinet office, to conserve the interests of the commerce and industries of the country, and in this connection urges the immediate re-enactment of the Chinese exclusion law to prevent the influx of cheap labor from the far east. After a few words on the state of American labor, in which the President reveals his sympathy with intelligent organization, he urges a remodeling of the immigration laws to further protect the home worker and to elevate the standard of citizenship.

Passing to the consideration of the tariff the President declares that reciprocity is essential to the furthering of the American export trade. He says that "reciprocity is the handmaiden of protection" and specially calls the attention of the Senate to the treaties laid before it by President McKinley. He next recommends some measure for the rehabilitation of the American merchant marine as a further essential in the substantial growth of the export trade. He bespeaks the maintenance of the gold standard and suggests that changes be made in the currency and banking laws still further to guard against the deranging influences of crisis and panics. He warns against too radical a reduction of the revenues and urges economy in expenditures. The interstate commerce act should be amended, he says, to give the commission more power to insure justice to both shippers and railways.

One of the most striking features of the message is the President's urgent recommendation that steps be taken at once toward the further preservation of the forests of the country and that the government undertake the establishment of irrigation systems on a large scale to open up the arid lands of the West to settlement. He speaks encouragingly of affairs in the insular possessions, and as to Cuba declares that "we are bound by every consideration of honor and expediency to pass commercial measures in the interest of her material well being." As to the Philippines he holds that our work there is being well done, toward the end of giving the Filipinos not only good government in the present, but toward educating them in the ways of future self-government. The President recommends that laws be passed for the development of the resources of the islands through the grant of franchises.

Mr. Roosevelt declares in positive terms in favor of the immediate construction of the isthmian canal, and points to the newly negotiated Hay-Pauncefote treaty as opening the way to this consummation of the long deferred American plans. He urges the construction of a Pacific cable. He reiterates the Monroe doctrine as the governing principle in all American dealings with European powers in western affairs, and proceeds to urge the upbuilding of the navy as one of the surest steps toward the preservation of the peace. He bespeaks the construction of additional battle ships and the maintenance afloat of large squadrons comprising all classes of vessels to give the personnel of the navy the fullest possible drill in the actual handling of war engines. On the same line are his remarks concerning the army, for which he asks facilities for frequent drills on a large scale to perfect the discipline and to prevent dry-rot in the various departments. He asks for a closer co-operation between the army and the militia.

The concluding points of the message are of less consequence, but all are treated in the same spirit of urgent recommendation. The President suggests that henceforth the Indian be regarded as an individual rather than as a member of a tribe. He naturally expresses his desire to extend the merit system in the government service in all practicable directions and expresses the hope of a change in the laws regarding the consular service to insure the employment of the ablest public servants for this increasing important work.

A word of praise for the St. Louis, Charleston and Buffalo expositions, for the Smithsonian Institution, and for the Library of Congress is followed by a recommendation that a permanent census bureau be established. The President points to the success of the rural free delivery, and in this connection asks for additional laws to correct the second class mail matter abuses.

In conclusion the President reviews the situation in China and declares for the continuance of our policy of demanding equal treatment in China with all other nations, to insure our national trade advantages in that field. A reference to the Pan-American and a reference to certain claims affecting the relations of this government and Mexico is followed by a statement as to foreign expressions of sympathy for the national loss, apropos of the death of Queen Victoria and the German empress dowager, which affords opportunity for an expression of the President's intention that "our policy shall be such as to continue unbroken these international relations of mutual respect and good will."

The expressions as to the message are generally commendatory. Some follow:

Representative Hitt, of Illinois, chairman of the foreign affairs committee, said: "It is the message of a statesman. It contains more than mere words. It breathes an original force, both striking and delightful. A part to which I particularly refer is to one on trusts and combinations. It is full of meaning."

Representative Sibley, of Pennsylvania: "It is a strong message. Nowhere have I seen so forcible discussion of anarchy. It positively delighted me."

Representative Bingham of Pennsylvania: "It is an admirable state paper. I was especially pleased with his recommendation for the exclusion of the Chinese coolie labor from this country. All the way through, however, the message is in every way commendable."

Representative Allen of Maine: "The message will please New England first rate. His position on the tariff and reciprocity will be entirely satisfactory to our people. I also think that his remarks on immigration and Chinese exclusion represent the feeling of the people of this country."

Representative Cooper, of Wisconsin: "His ideas were more cogently and forcibly put than any message I have ever read. It is a great state paper."

Representative Bartholdt of Missouri: "I think it is one of the greatest documents I have ever read. It is different from the usual presidential message in its philosophy. I was pleased with the tender regard he manifests for the interests of the wage-earner and the small dealer."

Representative Sulzer (Dem.), of New York: "It is one of the strongest state papers ever presented, and is characteristic of its author."

Representative Landis, of Indiana: "The message reads like the utterances of a vigorous American in the prime of manhood and in thorough touch with the spirit of the times."

Senator McComas, of Maryland, when asked to give his views in regard to the message, to the reading of which in the Senate to-day he was an attentive listener, said:

"The message is exceedingly well written. It is a spirited document, and much of the catalogue of transactions with foreign states was omitted. Indeed, the only references of this nature are to the treaty with Great Britain in relation to the Isthmian canal, and a reference to our good work in China, which could scarcely be omitted.

"The statement of the life and death of President McKinley and the lessons drawn from the assasination will meet the approval of all our people. The specific recommendations are conservative and necessary measures to repress this hideous cult of crime. The reference to the tariff and reciprocity will be much read."

COMMISSIONERS MEET.

New Board Organized With the Election of Mr. Peter J. Stephens as President.

MR. A. G. ROSS RETAINED AS CLERK.

No Other Applicant for the Position Which Has for a Number of Years Been Acceptably Filled by the Present Clerk. Routine Business Transacted.

Tuesday morning the new Board of County Commissioners qualified and entered upon the discharge of the duties of their office. Messrs. Peter J. Stephens, the hold-over member of the Board, and Taylor Friend, one of the recently elected members, arrived in Oakland Monday afternoon, whilst Mr. Jacob Stump, the other new member, came up to Oakland from his home in Bloomington on the accommodation train, arriving here at 10 o'clock.

After having been sworn into office the Board organized by electing Mr. Stephens president. In point of service and his eminent qualifications for the position as presiding officer of the board, the honor bestowed upon Mr. Stephens by his colleagues is a deserving recognition.

Messrs. Friend and Stump, although their duties as public servants are something entirely new to them, have taken hold quite readily and the acumen already exhibited by them in handling the business of our tax payers shows that no mistake was made by their nomination and election by the Republican party.

Mr. A. G. Ross, who for some years past has been the clerk to the Board, was elected unanimously for the position for the ensuing year. Mr. Ross has been a faithful and efficient official. He has the business of the office well in hand and at all times is courteous and obliging. There was no other applicant for the place so far as we can learn.

The Board considered a number of road petitions, appointing viewers for the same, and after transacting other routine business of minor importance, adjourned to meet in January next when road supervisors and constables will be appointed for the following year.

UNTANGLE THE YARN.

(W. A. M'KANNA, "DAVID.")

I will do what I can to serve my God;
I will do His will and remove from the rod,
All those who need my aid and are willing to be Placed on the way to happiness in life's tree.
So give me strength in my heart and mind,
And make me physically able to wind
Up the ball of life's yarn strewn here and there,
That tangles up the feet of people everywhere.
So if the end of life's yarn I have found,
Help me to wind it up till it is big and round;
Each yard of yarn being a year of someone's life,
Covering many miles of friction and strife.
And every time I wind it around and around,
I think of the years that are spent, and abound
In the pains and misery of want and woe
That are observed everywhere you may go.
So as I wind and wind on my ball of yarn,
I will try and remember—it will do no harm—
The mistake's I've made in my journey through life,
And correct my errors before I withdraw from the strife.

Severe Goose Bone Winter Predicted.

Elias Hoartz Reading's famous goose bone prophet, gave a preliminary prophecy as to the weather. He says he has not yet found a satisfactory goose bone, but he believes from indications gleaned from trial bones that it would be a severe winter, beginning with Christmas. Mr. Hartz has announced his intention of staying in the city. With each winter, he says he can interpret more exactly the mysterious prognostications of the goose bone. He declared that he would give no perdiction by which he will stand until after Thanksgiving. He is nearly 90 years old, and has foretold the weather for Eastern Pennsylvania people for over seventy years.

We Are After You

With prices that will put you after us for goods.

Our line at present consists of Pianos, Organs, small Musical Goods, Sewing Machines, Notions, Novelties and a nice line of DOLLS, TOYS, BOOKS and assorted articles suitable for holiday trade, all of which will be sold at CUT PRICES, much lower than you have been buying them.

What about the Piano or Organ

you have been promising your family for years? "Procrastination is the thief of time." Soon your children will have grown up and gone and left the old home desolate. Then you will begin to wonder whether you have done all you could to make their childhood happy. What will the few paltry dollars you have saved by not buying an instrument weigh when put in the balance against the many happy hours you have deprived them of? ("Stick a pin here.") Music is too important a part of an education to be neglected. Read what the great men have said about its ennobling, refining influence.

JUST THINK OF IT!

An Organ six feet five inches high, solid oak or walnut case, strictly up to date in style and finish, splendid action and tone, warranted by the manufacturers and by us at the small sum of $49.00. We are sole agents for the "ORLEON," and organ with five octaves, 122 reeds, with exceptional pipe-like tone. No dresser or sideboard top, but a neat low organ, finishad in hardwood—an ornament to the music room. We sell it at the unheard of price of $28.50.

Mandolins, Violins and other small instruments at about half the price usually charged for them.

IN SEWING MACHINES

we are fixed to suit any trade. Without doubt the Standard Rotary high speed is the best machine made today at any price. If you want a good machine for little money buy our $16.75 Norwood, made by the old reliable Standard Sewing Machine Co., whose guarantee is as good as gold; and then it costs you no freight or other extra charges and has all the attachments. NOW LISTEN! What does a guarantee amount to when you do not even know what company makes the machine? What are you going to do when in a few years you send to the city store for repairs for your crippled orphan and receive the reply that it has quit the sewing machine business or that the factory who made the machine has failed? Will you sue for damages, employ attorney in Chicago to recover $20.00? No! It will be far better to pocket your loss and charge it up to experience. The same reasoning applies to musical instruments of inferior grade.

FREE CONCERTS!

Beginning with Wednesday, the 18th concerts at 10 a. m., 2 p. m. and 7 p. m. and continuing up to December 24th, inclusive. We will give our friends and patrons the opportunity of hearing the famous Angelus Orchestral piano player in a mixed program, showing the adaptation of this wonderful instrument to all grades and styles of music, from the heaviest overtures to the ragedest ragtime. You don't have many opportunities of hearing such music outside the large cities. A special invitation is extended to our host of country friends to come and see us.

Respectfully,

S. C. SMITH,

Of the CUT PRICE STORE,

Ravenscroft Building,

A Well Furnished House

Is said to be a woman's pride and the joy of her household. To furnish a house well requires considerable money—unless you make your purchases at

D. E. Bolden & Co.'s

when the rule is reversed. For a small sum we can give you furniture that will last a life time and always be presentable.

OUR HOLIDAY STOCK

is full and complete, consisting of bric-a-brac, leather and silk upholstered Rockers, Dining Room Furniture, Glass Medallions, Willow Rockers, Settees, Work Tables, Moquette, Smyrna and Goat Skin Rugs, Ladies' Desks, Parlor Cabinets, Hand, Mantle and Toilet Mirrors, Pictures in endldss variety, Albums, Fancy Foot Stools, Jardinieres, Table Screens. The famous will make a most acceptable Christmas present to the wife or daughter who has the household duties devolving upon her.

Bissell's Carpet Sweeper

All these goods are plainly marked and are on exhibition in our show window.

We have no Shoddy Goods.

Every article we sell has our guarantee behind it. Buy your goods early and have them laid away and then we can deliver them when convenient to you.

D. E. BOLDEN & CO.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 25. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1901. NUMBER 39.

MR. GORMAN MENACED.

Trouble Ahead In the Legislature For His Senatorial Candidacy At the Next Election.

PARTY COUNCILS ARE HELD IN SECRET.

Republican Legislative Seats to be Contested as an Offset, Thus Completing the Steal and Thwarting the Voice of the People of Boss-Ridden Maryland.

Senator Gorman has another fight to win before he can go back to the Senate.

Should four of the fifty-one Democrats in the House of Delegates refuse to join their party in organizing the House, Arthur P. Gorman can never be a United States Senator, as it requires forty-eight to organize. Two of this number is known to have declared already that they will bolt. In this the Gorman clique sees trouble.

For two weeks the various Democratic members of the Legislature have been before the would-be Senator and pledges demanded. All of this is behind closed doors, of course, but the announcement made Monday at headquarters that the seats of several representatives would be contested shows that Gorman is a very much frightened man and proposes making his success absolutely certain if it lies in the power of his tools to do it.

Cecil and Somerset counties will be the storm-centre, with a possible attack on Senator Putzel, Republican Senator-elect in the second Baltimore city district. The question of a contest in the last named district is still in the air, but will be definitely decided this week. It is agreed that a Democratic gain of three votes to a precinct would be enough to defeat Senator Putzel and pull through all the Democratic candidates in the district.

The proposed contest in Cecil county, it is thought, will result in the seating of Austin L. Crothers, who was defeated by a small majority by McCullough, the Republican candidate for the Senate. With contests in Somerset and Cecil, and the probabilities of one in the second district, the Democrats count on increasing their majority nine votes. This would put a quietus on all talk of electing anyone except Gorman to the Senate and would, at the same time, increase the working majority in the House materially.

SONG OF HAPPINESS.

(W. A. M'KANNA, "DAVID.")

I have a song in my heart—
To sing to thee.
'Tis a song from which I will never part—
'Tis of thee.
Oh, the lullaby in my soul
Makes my heart's music unfold
Of the song of happiness untold—
'Tis for thee.

CHORUS.

And when you hear my heart a singing,
The glad tidings I'm a bringing—
Of joy divine.
And when my song influences your heart,
My soul from you will never part—
You'll be mine.

Oh, give me thine ear for awhile—
List to me.
I will your senses try and beguile—
Come to me.
With winged arrows from Cupid's darts,
Trained in line with my angel's heart,
To pierce it with love at the start—
For me.

It will awake the music in your soul—
'Tis to me.
It will expose happiness yet untold—
'Tis for me.
And unite our hearts as one,
When in music it is spun
Around our minds and hearts yet so young—
'Tis for you and for me.

Died.

PYSELL.—On Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 3, after an illness of several days of typhoid fever, Edward Pysell, aged about 27 years. The deceased young man was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Pysell, of near McHenry. He was engaged at the time he was taken ill at one of the lumber camps at Elder Hill, this county, and went to his home about a week ago. He was an upright, noble, generous man and very highly respected. His funeral will take place to-day.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Reciprocity and the Isthmian Canal Are Strongly Urged.

THE WORK OF A GREAT STATESMAN.

President Roosevelt's First State Paper Contains Many Suggestions to Fifty-Seventh Congress—Eulogizes Late Chief Executive and Condemns Anarchy.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The President's message is unique among such state papers in that it devotes a minimum of space to the foreign relations of the government, mentioning only the Chinese situation at length, and that at the close of the paper. The custom heretofore has been for the message to be mainly devoted to foreign relations, those matters occupying the first portions. Naturally the message treats primarily of the assassination of Mr. McKinley, and this leads directly to the discussion of anarchy and the best methods of governmental cure. In logical sequence comes a discussion of the prosperous condition of the country in emphasis of the declaration that the anarchists have no ground for operating here. Then follows a discussion of the trusts with the recommendation that Congress enact laws giving the federal government supervision over all corporations doing an interstate business. The President next recommends the organization of a new cabinet office, to conserve the interests of the commerce and industries of the country, and in this connection urges the immediate re-enactment of the Chinese exclusion law to prevent the influx of cheap labor from the far east. After a few words on the state of American labor, in which the President reveals his sympathy with intelligent organization, he urges a remodeling of the immigration laws to further protect the home worker and to elevate the standard of citizenship.

Passing to the consideration of the tariff the President declares that reciprocity is essential to the furthering of the American export trade. He says that "reciprocity is the handmaiden of protection" and specially calls the attention of the Senate to the treaties laid before it by President McKinley. He next recommends some measure for the rehabilitation of the American merchant marine as a further essential in the substantial growth of the export trade. He bespeaks the maintenance of the gold standard and suggests that changes be made in the currency and banking laws still further to guard against the deranging influences of crisis and panics. He warns against too radical a reduction of the revenues and urges economy in expenditures. The interstate commerce act should be amended, he says, to give the commission more power to insure justice to both shippers and railways.

One of the most striking features of the message is the President's urgent recommendation that steps be taken at once toward the further preservation of the forests of the country and that the government undertake the establishment of irrigation systems on a large scale to open up the arid lands of the West to settlement. He speaks encouragingly of affairs in the insular possessions, and as to Cuba declares that "we are bound by every consideration of honor and expediency to pass commercial measures in the interest of her material well being." As to the Philippines he holds that our work there is being well done, toward the end of giving the Filipinos not only good government in the present, but toward educating them in the ways of future self-government. The President recommends that laws be passed for the development of the resources of the islands through the grant of franchises.

Mr. Roosevelt declares in positive terms in favor of the immediate construction of the isthmian canal, and points to the newly negotiated Hay-Pauncefote treaty as opening the way to this consummation of the long deferred American plans. He urges the construction of a Pacific cable. He reiterates the Monroe doctrine as the governing principle in all American dealings with European powers in western affairs, and proceeds to urge the upbuilding of the navy as one of the surest steps toward the preservation of the peace. He bespeaks the construction of additional battle ships and the maintenance afloat of large squadrons comprising all classes of vessels to give the personnel of the navy the fullest possible drill in the actual handling of war engines. On the same line are his remarks concerning the army, for which he asks facilities for frequent drills on a large scale to perfect the discipline and to prevent dry-rot in the various departments. He asks for a closer co-operation between the army and the militia.

The concluding points of the message are of less consequence, but all are treated in the same spirit of urgent recommendation. The President suggests that henceforth the Indian be regarded as an individual rather than as a member of a tribe. He naturally expresses his desire to extend the merit system in the government service in all practicable directions and expresses the hope of a change in the laws regarding the consular service to insure the employment of the ablest public servants for this increasing important work.

A word of praise for the St. Louis, Charleston and Buffalo expositions, for the Smithsonian Institution, and for the Library of Congress is followed by a recommendation that a permanent census bureau be established. The President points to the success of the rural free delivery, and in this connection asks for additional laws to correct the second class mail matter abuses.

In conclusion the President reviews the situation in China and declares for the continuance of our policy of demanding equal treatment in China with all other nations, to insure our national trade advantages in that field. A reference to the Pan-American and a reference to certain claims affecting the relations of this government and Mexico is followed by a statement as to foreign expressions of sympathy for the national loss, apropos of the death of Queen Victoria and the German empress dowager, which affords opportunity for an expression of the President's intention that "our policy shall be such as to continue unbroken these international relations of mutual respect and good will."

The expressions as to the message are generally commendatory. Some follow:

Representative Hitt, of Illinois, chairman of the foreign affairs committee, said: "It is the message of a statesman. It contains more than mere words. It breathes an original force, both striking and delightful. A part to which I particularly refer is to one on trusts and combinations. It is full of meaning."

Representative Sibley, of Pennsylvania: "It is a strong message. Nowhere have I seen so forcible discussion of anarchy. It positively delighted me."

Representative Bingham of Pennsylvania: "It is an admirable state paper. I was especially pleased with his recommendation for the exclusion of the Chinese coolie labor from this country. All the way through, however, the message is in every way commendable."

Representative Allen of Maine: "The message will please New England first rate. His position on the tariff and reciprocity will be entirely satisfactory to our people. I also think that his remarks on immigration and Chinese exclusion represent the feeling of the people of this country."

Representative Cooper, of Wisconsin: "His ideas were more cogently and forcibly put than any message I have ever read. It is a great state paper."

Representative Bartholdt of Missouri: "I think it is one of the greatest documents I have ever read. It is different from the usual presidential message in its philosophy. I was pleased with the tender regard he manifests for the interests of the wage-earner and the small dealer."

Representative Sulzer (Dem.), of New York: "It is one of the strongest state papers ever presented, and is characteristic of its author."

Representative Landis, of Indiana: "The message reads like the utterances of a vigorous American in the prime of manhood and in thorough touch with the spirit of the times."

Senator McComas, of Maryland, when asked to give his views in regard to the message, to the reading of which in the Senate to-day he was an attentive listener, said:

"The message is exceedingly well written. It is a spirited document, and much of the catalogue of transactions with foreign states was omitted. Indeed, the only references of this nature are to the treaty with Great Britain in relation to the Isthmian canal, and a reference to our good work in China, which could scarcely be omitted.

"The statement of the life and death of President McKinley and the lessons drawn from the assasination will meet the approval of all our people. The specific recommendations are conservative and necessary measures to repress this hideous cult of crime. The reference to the tariff and reciprocity will be much read."

COMMISSIONERS MEET.

New Board Organized With the Election of Mr. Peter J. Stephens as President.

MR. A. G. ROSS RETAINED AS CLERK.

No Other Applicant for the Position Which Has for a Number of Years Been Acceptably Filled by the Present Clerk. Routine Business Transacted.

Tuesday morning the new Board of County Commissioners qualified and entered upon the discharge of the duties of their office. Messrs. Peter J. Stephens, the hold-over member of the Board, and Taylor Friend, one of the recently elected members, arrived in Oakland Monday afternoon, whilst Mr. Jacob Stump, the other new member, came up to Oakland from his home in Bloomington on the accommodation train, arriving here at 10 o'clock.

After having been sworn into office the Board organized by electing Mr. Stephens president. In point of service and his eminent qualifications for the position as presiding officer of the board, the honor bestowed upon Mr. Stephens by his colleagues is a deserving recognition.

Messrs. Friend and Stump, although their duties as public servants are something entirely new to them, have taken hold quite readily and the acumen already exhibited by them in handling the business of our tax payers shows that no mistake was made by their nomination and election by the Republican party.

Mr. A. G. Ross, who for some years past has been the clerk to the Board, was elected unanimously for the position for the ensuing year. Mr. Ross has been a faithful and efficient official. He has the business of the office well in hand and at all times is courteous and obliging. There was no other applicant for the place so far as we can learn.

The Board considered a number of road petitions, appointing viewers for the same, and after transacting other routine business of minor importance, adjourned to meet in January next when road supervisors and constables will be appointed for the following year.

UNTANGLE THE YARN.

(W. A. M'KANNA, "DAVID.")

I will do what I can to serve my God;
I will do His will and remove from the rod,
All those who need my aid and are willing to be Placed on the way to happiness in life's tree.
So give me strength in my heart and mind,
And make me physically able to wind
Up the ball of life's yarn strewn here and there,
That tangles up the feet of people everywhere.
So if the end of life's yarn I have found,
Help me to wind it up till it is big and round;
Each yard of yarn being a year of someone's life,
Covering many miles of friction and strife.
And every time I wind it around and around,
I think of the years that are spent, and abound
In the pains and misery of want and woe
That are observed everywhere you may go.
So as I wind and wind on my ball of yarn,
I will try and remember—it will do no harm—
The mistake's I've made in my journey through life,
And correct my errors before I withdraw from the strife.

Severe Goose Bone Winter Predicted.

Elias Hoartz Reading's famous goose bone prophet, gave a preliminary prophecy as to the weather. He says he has not yet found a satisfactory goose bone, but he believes from indications gleaned from trial bones that it would be a severe winter, beginning with Christmas. Mr. Hartz has announced his intention of staying in the city. With each winter, he says he can interpret more exactly the mysterious prognostications of the goose bone. He declared that he would give no perdiction by which he will stand until after Thanksgiving. He is nearly 90 years old, and has foretold the weather for Eastern Pennsylvania people for over seventy years.

We Are After You

With prices that will put you after us for goods.

Our line at present consists of Pianos, Organs, small Musical Goods, Sewing Machines, Notions, Novelties and a nice line of DOLLS, TOYS, BOOKS and assorted articles suitable for holiday trade, all of which will be sold at CUT PRICES, much lower than you have been buying them.

What about the Piano or Organ

you have been promising your family for years? "Procrastination is the thief of time." Soon your children will have grown up and gone and left the old home desolate. Then you will begin to wonder whether you have done all you could to make their childhood happy. What will the few paltry dollars you have saved by not buying an instrument weigh when put in the balance against the many happy hours you have deprived them of? ("Stick a pin here.") Music is too important a part of an education to be neglected. Read what the great men have said about its ennobling, refining influence.

JUST THINK OF IT!

An Organ six feet five inches high, solid oak or walnut case, strictly up to date in style and finish, splendid action and tone, warranted by the manufacturers and by us at the small sum of $49.00. We are sole agents for the "ORLEON," and organ with five octaves, 122 reeds, with exceptional pipe-like tone. No dresser or sideboard top, but a neat low organ, finishad in hardwood—an ornament to the music room. We sell it at the unheard of price of $28.50.

Mandolins, Violins and other small instruments at about half the price usually charged for them.

IN SEWING MACHINES

we are fixed to suit any trade. Without doubt the Standard Rotary high speed is the best machine made today at any price. If you want a good machine for little money buy our $16.75 Norwood, made by the old reliable Standard Sewing Machine Co., whose guarantee is as good as gold; and then it costs you no freight or other extra charges and has all the attachments. NOW LISTEN! What does a guarantee amount to when you do not even know what company makes the machine? What are you going to do when in a few years you send to the city store for repairs for your crippled orphan and receive the reply that it has quit the sewing machine business or that the factory who made the machine has failed? Will you sue for damages, employ attorney in Chicago to recover $20.00? No! It will be far better to pocket your loss and charge it up to experience. The same reasoning applies to musical instruments of inferior grade.

FREE CONCERTS!

Beginning with Wednesday, the 18th concerts at 10 a. m., 2 p. m. and 7 p. m. and continuing up to December 24th, inclusive. We will give our friends and patrons the opportunity of hearing the famous Angelus Orchestral piano player in a mixed program, showing the adaptation of this wonderful instrument to all grades and styles of music, from the heaviest overtures to the ragedest ragtime. You don't have many opportunities of hearing such music outside the large cities. A special invitation is extended to our host of country friends to come and see us.

Respectfully,

S. C. SMITH,
Of the CUT PRICE STORE,
Ravenscroft Building,

A Well Furnished House

Is said to be a woman's pride and the joy of her household. To furnish a house well requires considerable money—unless you make your purchases at

D. E. Bolden & Co.'s

when the rule is reversed. For a small sum we can give you furniture that will last a life time and always be presentable.

OUR HOLIDAY STOCK

is full and complete, consisting of bric-a-brac, leather and silk upholstered Rockers, Dining Room Furniture, Glass Medallions, Willow Rockers, Settees, Work Tables, Moquette, Smyrna and Goat Skin Rugs, Ladies' Desks, Parlor Cabinets, Hand, Mantle and Toilet Mirrors, Pictures in endldss variety, Albums, Fancy Foot Stools, Jardinieres, Table Screens. The famous will make a most acceptable Christmas present to the wife or daughter who has the household duties devolving upon her.

Bissell's Carpet Sweeper

All these goods are plainly marked and are on exhibition in our show window.

We have no Shoddy Goods.

Every article we sell has our guarantee behind it. Buy your goods early and have them laid away and then we can deliver them when convenient to you.

D. E. BOLDEN & CO.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL. Publisher.

OAKLAND, : GARRETT CO., MD

The Scar on His Conscience

By ELIZABETH CHERRY WALTZ.

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

NO ONE would have thought, to see the president of the Otranto bank on a late summer morning, that his conscience had ever troubled him in any way. He was as fair and splendid at 40 as any high-bred woman. He was noted for prompt decisions and an amazing foresight. Commercially and socially, he was a power. For three years he had been a widower and next season would be reckoned upon by the mothers of debutantes as worthy of the profoundest consideration.

People said that his domestic history was sad. He had made an unfortunate first marriage, of which no one knew the details. His second wife, once a brilliant eastern society woman, had been insane for several years before her death, and of the three children that had been born to them, two died in infancy and the crippled son shortly after his mother. The colonel had come out of his troubles, calm and uncomplaining. No one knew of any scar on his conscience. Business men are not supposed to have such appurtenances. Often it is called indigestion, but Col. Everard Newsome did not mistake it and dose it. He faced it and kept silent.

"I Want to See the Bank President."

This morning several friends had been in, talking of their summer outings and business at one and the same time. One went east because his wife must have sea-bathing, and one went north because his old father had hay fever in August. Country houses were open and everyone preparing for a flitting. Invitations here and there were plentiful. He could have gone to a dozen house parties, camping out, to the Canadian lakes and the Adirondack camps. But the scar on the colonel's conscience was more in evidence than usual. It was almost an open wound of late, for he could not forget the past.

While he idly figured on a scrap of paper, alone in his office, the screen door of the bank was pushed open and a young girl walked in. She had the air of never having been in such a place before, but of lacking no courage. Her dress was plain enough, a spotless white muslin, such as a young girl would wear in a small town on a festive occasion. A mass of light curls were tied by a white ribbon under a broad leghorn hat. The face that it half disclosed was both childlike and noble, and the cashier, whose window she looked into with large, calm eyes, was startled at its instantly-to-be-recognized expression.

"I wish to see the president of the bank," she said.

"Col. Newsome, miss? O yes—here, Aleck, see if the colonel is in his room."

The mulatto was used to this. He departed to see if the "colonel" wanted to be bothered.

"Who did you say it was?" repeated the colonel, absently.

"A young girl, sah," began Aleck, but he got no further. A calm young voice came over his shoulder.

"I didn't give him my name, papa. I just came in."

The mulatto stepped obsequiously aside. The colonel stared into a face that was the counterpart of his own, quite as blond and calm.

He rose and came around the corner of the desk. He actually stammered:

"You—you here?"

She smiled inscrutably, fearlessly. It was his own smile.

"How did you come? I thought you were at school."

"I have finished that school. I came to talk to you about what is to come next. I never knew just who you were until the other day."

"Who told you then?"

"A lawyer from here who came to see his niece graduate. He knew me from my resemblance to you."

"I Thought You Were at School."

"And he told you—what?"

"That you were alone—that you were rich—that I ought to let you see me and to talk to you about the future."

"Who was it?"

"His name was Oberding."

The colonel at once recognized the blow at himself and understood its reason and possibilities.

"Come here and sit down," he said, not unkindly, "and we will talk it over. Oberding is an enemy of mine."

She amazed him by replying:

"So I thought, papa, but he heard nothing from me of mamma. He only knows that I am really your daughter. Of course I had to tell him that."

"Of course," echoed the colonel, miserably.

"But when he told me how rich you were—and that you were alone—I thought I would come."

"What would you like to have me do for you?"

"I want to be something or somebody," she said, promptly. "I want a chance to see and learn—to be more than those about me."

His own old ambitions. How she stung him!

"You should have been a boy—"

"O, no, papa."

"Why?"

She flashed on him a glance he did not like.

"I would never have forgiven you for all of it."

He gasped.

"Can you forgive me now?"

"I can better understand mamma now. She has always forgiven you."

The colonel put his head down in his hands.

"Eva, you are only 16, I was only 20, your mother not much older than are you. Can you understand? Your grandfather goaded me, taunted me, insulted me at every turn after the elopement, and just because I was poor. Now things are different, you see. Do you know that he got that divorce for her partly on the grounds of non-support? That maddened me. But I have educated you and taken care of you ever since I had a dollar, and voluntarily."

Eva rose and placed her hands on his shoulder.

"You know grandpa and you know mamma. She gives up to every one she loves. And I understand you, because I am like you. I always fought grandpa—but he's gone—he's dead."

The colonel drew the hand on his shoulder around his neck.

"So you understand—and do not blame me so much—not all."

She pressed his head against her shoulder, trembling.

"And you are so alone."

He was trembling also.

"I cannot ask you to leave your mother. She has never married."

"She would not—she does not change."

"What would you have me do for you?" he asked, after a silence.

"For me?—I came to ask you to let me go abroad—to let me get about among other people until I knew what I wanted to do myself."

"You cannot go alone."

"I can never leave mamma—and now—I do not want to go very far from you, either."

He pressed her hand.

"Fate has been been very hard upon me—I have suffered a thousand deaths. How is your mother?"

"Always delicate and gentle and unchanged. She is still beautiful and not very old yet. I am always proud of her."

The two were silent a long time. He was holding her about the waist on the arm of the great leather chair when one of the bank officials came in and stopped abruptly.

She Grasped His Arm.

"O—don't go—this is my oldest child, Eva, Mr. Allen. She's been away at school—and could not wait any longer to see me."

Mr. Allen smothered his curiosity and proceeded to business. Eva retreated to the window, but a sentence caught her ear.

"Not to-morrow—I am going out of the city with my daughter here—on Thursday, perhaps."

She grasped his arm with shining eyes a moment later.

"O, papa—are you?"

He smiled back at her, sadly.

"Yes, I will go down with you, if you think she will see me. Can we repair the past?"

Eva's hat fell away and her beautiful head was on her father's shoulder in tears.

"O—O—to think it! For she's here, papa, waiting—at the hotel—praying, waiting—but I was not to ask you to come to her—only for myself. Are you waiting to go? Shall I see you two happy together?"

The colonel kissed her solemnly. She must never know what a scar and shadow would ever lie across his conscience for not having gone back before.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

The train goes roaring up the track,
The sun is in the west;
The smoke rolls eastward, dense and black,
And I complacently lean back—
To-day I've done my best.

I think of one who waits out there
To greet me with a shout,
And I will kiss him and we'll fare
Across the open fields to where
The lights are peeping out.

Contentment fills my heart to-night,
The fates and God are kind;
I've worked to-day with all my might
And I can feel, with strong delight,
The miles recede behind.

Ah, but the years will pass away,
And I am doomed to see
A change that parents only may—
The child will be a man some day,
Who waits to-night for me.

—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Animals in the United States.

The department of agriculture has recently published an estimate of the animal population of the country on January 1, 1900. It comprised 13,537,524 horses, about 2,000,000 mules, about 28,600,000 cattle, 16,292,360 milch cows, 81,883,065 sheep. As automobile traction is introduced the number of horses and mules will gradually diminish, and the effect is already evident.—Washington Star.

Fractured.

"Isn't Styles looking seedy? He used to be a glass of fashion."

"Yes; but glasses of fashion are sometimes 'broke.'"—Brooklyn Life.

CITY WOOD GLEANERS.

Women and Children Clear Away Wreckage of Buildings in Short Order.

One of the picturesque sights of certain sections of the city is that of a woman bearing bundles or baskets of wood on their heads. Sometimes the dimensions of the bundles exceed the stature of their purveyors. In that case it may be concluded that the journey is toward home, where the material will be worked up, perhaps, into kindlings. After certain days it may appear again in the street, carefully bestowed in a basket and heaped high over the edges—two sticks being run up from the inside of the basket to support the pile—and the whole balanced on the head of an Italian woman, says the Chicago Tribune. The women who collect and peddle wood—often helped by their children—are sometimes an annoyance to wreckers, since it does not always "come natural" for them to limit their pickings according to the prescribed restrictions. They make short shrift, however, of clearing away such wreckage as is left to their mercies, and when there is a considerable "find" it vanishes before the assault of many rival hands almost like mist. The carriage of such heavy burdens on the person is not an ideal method of transportation for this day and generation, but the erect posture, bold step and free movement of the wood peddlers as they pace off under their towering burdens is one of the most interesting and artistic sights which the streets afford, and the grace and strength of the figure thus attained may well be admired and coveted. The sight itself is one which will largely disappear with the wooden pavements and frame cottages which now survive from an earlier day and are gradually being sacrificed.

A Queer Trade Drawer.

By very simple means a Philadelphia merchant attracted more attention to his store than any amount of placard advertising would have gained for it. A great Maltese cat was tied to eight yards of rope and was fastened in the marble doorway. It was a rare instance of a cat having its liberty thus restricted, and throughout each afternoon crowds of persons flocked about the door. The braver among them did puss the homage of a pat on the head, while more timid souls felt sure the animal was fierce and kept at a safe distance.

Nutrition in Mushrooms.

Recent investigations made by the department of agriculture show that mushrooms are about equal to potatoes in the element of nutrition that goes to make flesh and blood, but that, on the other hand, they do not hold much of the fuel stuff required to keep the body machine running.

SYMBOLS IN A CARPET.

Interpretation of Figures in an Ancient Persian Product by by an Expert.

During the shah's last stay in Paris he paid a visit to the Gobelins, where he showed a most appreciative interest in all that he saw. Before a remarkably fine Persian carpet, given to the museum by M. Goupil, he remained for some time, intepreting for himself the symbolical allusions thickly embroidered upon it, which, however, he declined to translate into French. A few days since the mystery was cleared up. There arrived in Paris the manager of the imperial carpet weaving factory in Teheran, who stated that he had been commissioned by the shah to study the methods of manufacture in use at the Gobelins. To him the director applied for a solution of the legends which had so captivated the shah. Thereupon the Persian began to read out a running translation: "A carpet for the ruler of the earth; superiority for his feet; how beautiful it is; it is in his cabinet and knows his secrets. It is pleasant as Paradise, and brighter than the Academy of Mari (Persian painter), for it contains all the colors of China. The nightingale coming to perch upon it cannot tear itself away from its loveliness. Neither winter nor autumn can ever change the tints of this carpet." This is a good deal for one carpet to signify, says the London Pall Mall Gazette, but critics say that it is justified in holding a high opinion of itself. It is about three centuries old.

Science and Sport.

We would like to take some of these mosquito fearing gentlemen with us on some of our squirrel hunting expeditions along the Pamunky river and let them see and feel what every huntsman endures while engaged in this sport, says the Southern Clinic. It is a fact that at times in these river bottoms the mosquitoes are so thick that they are unendurable, and when a fellow goes to aim at a squirrel he has to fight them off with his gun barrel before he can see the squirrel. We are not joking as to the number of bites that the huntsman suffers from, and we are serious when we say that the idea of malaria being dependent solely upon the bites of these insects sounds foolish to men who have observed what we have in thousands of cases.

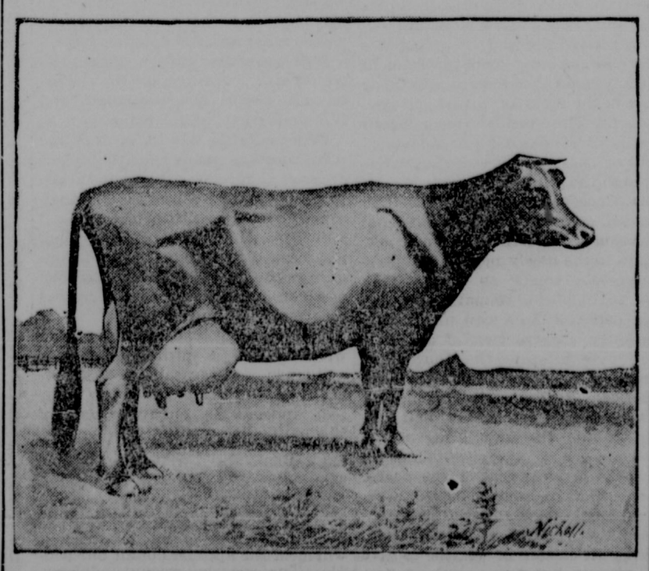
Cover the Mule's Eyes.

The mule drivers who take their animals across the South American Andes always cover the eyes of the mules with a poncho while they put on the heavy loads. If they could see they would be unmanageable, but blindfolded they meekly accept their burdens and start on their journey without protest.

THE PRINCESS HENRY OF PLESS.

"The most beautiful woman in the world" is as numerous as the sands by the seashore, but European courtiers profess to be unanimous in bestowing the coveted title on the lady whose picture graces this page. The princess is a daughter of Mrs. Cornwallis-West, the most famous beauty of a decade ago, and a sister of Miss Shelagh West, who was recently married to the rich duke of Westminster. The princess is a blonde, of medium height, slender and graceful, has an exquisite complexion and a charming wit. She was married nine years ago. King Edward and Emperor William are godfathers to her baby son.

THE PRIZE-WINNING JERSEY AT BUFFALO.



All lovers of fine stock will be interested in this fine picture of Pride's Olga IV. (96807), the Jersey cow which took highest honors at the Pan-American exposition. She is a large and solid animal, of a dark fawn color with an enormous, well-formed and perfectly balanced udder. As a two-year-old she gave 24½ pounds of milk and made 15 pounds 2 ounces of butter in seven days. Experts will see at a glance that she embodies most of the good points required for a typical cow of her class. She comes from a family noted for enormous milk production.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

Gatling's gun is computed to have killed 250,000 men since 1862.

The live stock of the country represents a value of nearly $250,000,000 over last year.

One out of every 49 deaths in Minnesota is due to accident or negligence, according to the report of vital statistics for 1894 to 1897, inclusive.

Of the surviving ex-mayors of New York—there are now seven—William R. Grace was born in Ireland in 1832, Smith Ely, Jr., in New Jersey, in 1822; Edward Cooper in New York, in 1823, and Abram S. Hewitt in Haverstraw, in 1822.

One of the newest things in the way of foods is fish powder, which, it is claimed, is a highly nutritive article, easy of digestion, and, therefore, particularly suitable for invalids. It is intended, however, for ordinary household use.

Miss Alice De Rothschild is one of the richest women in England. She owns a villa at Grasse and a London house in Piccadilly. At Grasse 70 gardeners are required to keep this southern paradise in a state of perfection. On the estate she has a collection of zebras, llamas and Hindoo bulls.

An arrangement has just been made whereby the Berlin gas lamps in the streets will be lighted automatically and simultaneously by means of an electric attachment. The current will be switched on from the central station and a spark will ignite the gas, which will be turned on by a special apparatus.

Seven American presidents were born in Virginia. The Adamses, John and John Quincy, were born in Massachusetts; Andrew Jackson, Andrew Johnson and James K. Polk were born in North Carolina. Pierce was a native of New Hampshire; Buchanan, of Pennsylvania; Cleveland, of New Jersey, and Arthur, of Vermont. Abraham Lincoln was born in Kentucky.

A POLICEMAN'S DIPLOMACY.

He Was Mild Mannered and His Beautiful Brogue Made an Impression.

Most policemen would have come up and slapped the three roysterers on the back and said gruffly:

"Here, no smoking allowed in this depot."

But the officer who was on duty before the ticket window of the Exchange street station was a diplomat and worthy of a wider sphere than he will ever have, even as a depot policeman, says the Buffalo Courier.

There were really four in the party, but there were three of them who were seeing the other man off. All of them are exhibit attaches at the Pan-American exposition, and the fourth man was leaving for his home in a far western state. With his three companions they had started for the train several hours before train time, and they had spent most of the intervening time in drinking his health. Naturally, they were in a mood to be a little careless of the depot regulations.

About half an hour before train time one of them discovered that there was a later train which their friend could take and arrive at his destination just as soon, while the new arrangement would lengthen the time they would have to express their regard for him at sundry bars. They repaired to the depot to have his ticket changed.

While he was going through this formality at the ticket office, they stood a little way back in the waiting room, puffing vigorously on strong cigars. A policeman approached, but he wasn't gruff at all. With a pleasant smile and a strong Hibernian brogue he remarked:

"It's ividently none of ye gintlemin believe in soigns."

"Why not?" asked one of them.

"Because," replied the diplomatic policeman, "there be wan over there which rades: 'No smoking allowed in this waitin'-room.'"

Three cigars came out of three mouths with a chorus movement, and there was no moré smoking.

Negro Extravagance.

In some of these negro cabins of the plantation districts I often found sewing machines which had been bought or were being bought, on installments, frequently at a cost of as much as $60; or showy frocks for which the occupants of the cabin had paid from $12 to $14. On one occasion I went into one of these cabins for dinner. When I sat down to the table I noticed that while there were five of us at the table, there was but one fork for all of us to use. Naturally there was an awkward pause on my part. In the opposite corner of the same cabin was an organ for which these people were paying $60 in monthly install ments. One fork and a $60-organ! In most cases the sewing machine was not used, the clocks were so worthless that they did not keep correct time—and if they had, in nine cases out of ten there would have been no one in the family who could have told the time of day—while the organ, of course, was rarely used for want of a person to play upon it.—Booker T. Washington's "Up From Slavery."

Peeled and Curried Tomatoes.

Cut four large tomatoes into rather thick slices. Saute them in one and one-half tablespoons of butter. When nearly cooked sprinkle with one teaspoon of curry powder, one tablespoon of flour, one teaspoon of finely chopped onion, a dash of salt and pepper. At the last minute add one cup of cream, let it boil up and then strain over the tomatoes served on buttered rounds of toast.—Good Housekeeping.

MRS. H. F. ROBERTS

Says to All Sick Women: "Give Mrs. Pinkham a Chance, I Know She Can Help You as She Did Me."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: The world praises great reformers; their names and fames are in the ears of everybody, and the public press helps spread the good tidings. Among them all Lydia E. Pinkham's name goes to posterity

MRS. H. F. ROBERTS,
County President of W. C. T. U., Kansas City, Mo.

with a softly breathed blessing from the lips of thousands upon thousands of women who have been restored to their families when life hung by a thread, and by thousands of others whose weary, aching limbs you have quickened and whose pains you have taken away.

"I know whereof I speak, for I have received much valuable benefit myself through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and for years I have known dozens of women who have suffered with displacement, ovarian troubles, ulcerations and inflammation who are strong and well to-day, simply through the use of your Compound."—MRS. H. F. ROBERTS, 1404 McGee St., Kansas City, Mo. — $5000 forfeit if above testimonial is not genuine.

Don't hesitate to write to Mrs. Pinkham. She will understand your case perfectly, and will treat you with kindness. Her advice is free, and the address is Lynn, Mass.

Is Ten Years on an Errand.

Ten years ago John White, a substantial farmer near Mattoon, Ill., sold his farm and with his wife removed to Janesville, ten miles south of Mattoon, to lead a retired life. One day his wife sent him to the grocery store to purchase a package of soda and he disappeared. By many he was regarded as dead. It transpires that he went to Texas and purchased a cotton plantation and later went to North Dakota. The other day he stepped off the train in Janesville, went to the grocery store, purchased a package of soda and entering his home said to his wife: "There's the soda." She was overjoyed to see him and they are living together again. White offered no explanation for his ten years' absence.

Girl Studies Architecture.

When the Ecole des Beaux Arts at Paris was thrown open to girl pupils four years ago it was little suspected that the fair sex would invade the section of architecture. San Francisco has the honor of providing a solitary exception in the person of Miss Julia Morgan. She refused to enter the painting and sculpture section like the rest of her sister pupils and determined to solve the mystery of building palaces. Miss Morgan has brilliantly succeeded and will soon take her flight, with honors, to rival the exploits of Inigo Jones.

Make 85 Miles an Hour.

The trials of the experiment electric military railway from Berlin to Zossen are reported to be perfectly successful. The speed of the trains has been gradually increased until now 85 miles are comfortably covered in the hour. The cars run smoothly, and the engineers express confidence that they will attain a speed of 125 miles per hour. The wires have been tested to a capacity of 14,000 volts, but hitherto only 8,000 volts have been necessary. It is expected that a current of 10,000 volts will suffice to give a speed per hour of 125 miles.

Courage is a plant that cannot be destroyed by plucking it up.—Chicago Daily News.

ABSOLUTE SECURITY.

Genuine

Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Must Bear Signature of

Brent Good

See Fac-Simile Wrapper Below.

Very small and as easy to take as sugar.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

FOR HEADACHE.
FOR DIZZINESS.
FOR BILIOUSNESS.
FOR TORPID LIVER.
FOR CONSTIPATION.
FOR SALLOW SKIN.
FOR THE COMPLEXION

GENUINE MUST HAVE SIGNATURE.

Price 25 Cents | Purely Vegetable. Brent Good

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

OPIUM WHISKY and other drug habits cured. We want the worst cases. Book and references FREE. Dr. B. M. WOOLLEY, Box 3, Atlanta, Ga.

25CT PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

SAVED BY A TOY.

A Little Tin Watch That Proved as Efficacious as a Temperance Pledge.

It was a hot, sultry day in August, so hot that most of the children were kept indoors; but in some way Babe Sweet and James Holton managed to be out. It is probable that they had slipped out of the large hotel unobserved by their nurses. At any rate, they were having a glorious time playing in the sand on the shore.

James remarked that the sand was lots finer in front of the hotel.

Babe peeped out from behind the boat house and answered: "I rather play here."

"Yes, so would I," answered the boy.

Whether it was because the boat house afforded shade, or because they didn't want the other children to join them, it is hard to tell, but probably the true reason was that the boat house sheltered them from the hotel, and so from the mother's and nurse's eyes.

James Holton and Bertha Sweet (for that was Babe's real name), were strangers only three weeks before. In the middle of July little ten-year-old James had come to the Thousand Islands with his parents to spend the warm summer months. At first he thought it rather dry. He did not get along with the children. It was too hot to have any fun, and he wished he was back home.

One day about two weeks after his arrival, he was sitting on the steps

I PULLED IT OUT.

wishing for something to do, when a carriage drove up. An elderly gentleman alighted and assisted a very stylish lady. She looked like an invalid, for she leaned heavily on the gentleman's arm. Besides these two, there was a very attractive little girl of about six.

"Oh, papa," she exclaimed, "can you carry this fruit? I have these flowers and Dolly."

"Not now," replied the gentleman, kindly. "Wait until I see mamma in, and then if nurse is not here I will come back and help you."

"All right," replied the girl.

Just then James arose, walked down toward the carriage and offered to help the maiden. Babe (for it was she) gladly accepted his help, and thus began their friendship. These two seemed to enjoy each other's society better than that of the other children. Wherever you would see one you were sure to see the other.

On the day that our story opens arose their first dispute. After they had played together for several hours beside the boathouse they wandered down nearer the water. They were busy playing and did not notice the rising tide until Babe jumped up and said: "Why, my dress is wet." She dove her hand into her pocket for her handkerchief; and she pulled it out a string of beads fell into the water. They were immediately washed about two yards from shore, where they caught on some seaweed.

"Oh, my beads!" exclaimed Babe; "get them for me, James."

"What are they good for?" asked the boy.

"Oh, they are dolly's necklace," answered Babe.

"Well, it won't hurt her to lose them," replied the boy.

"Oh, James, won't you get them?" begged Babe. "I will give you anything you want if you will only get them."

"The only thing I want is a watch and chain, and you won't get that," he answered.

For an instant Babe's face clouded; then it brightened, and she said: "I will give you a watch and chain if you will only get the beads."

"Honest?" he demanded.

"Yes, honest, truly," she said.

The beads were soon restored to their owner, Babe's tears dried and she was happy again.

In a few minutes Mr. Holton came after the children. He said: "They have been hunting everywhere for you."

James did not even seem to mind the scolding he received on account of his wet shoes, for the thought of the watch and chain was uppermost in his mind.

"Now, don't forget, Babe," were his parting words.

"I will give it to you at tea," she replied.

When James went down to tea he found a little box under his plate. Well he knew what it was. He didn't want his people to see it, so he put it in his pocket. After supper he hurried off by himself to have a peep at his new treasure. When he opened the box he found a little tin watch and chain. His eager face clouded, for he had expected a real watch and chain. He said he would take it right back to Babe; but something made him change his mind, and instead he put it in his pocket and said: "It is just like a girl."

The icicles have formed their crystals and the buttercups have bloomed a score of times since then.

Two men in uniform were standing on the porch of the hospital. The taller and darker one asked his companion how Capt. Holton was.

"Well," replied the companion, "the doctor says he will live, but it was a narrow escape. The bullet caught in a little tin watch he had in his vest pocket."

Two weeks after a merry crowd of soldiers were gathered around the bedside of Capt. Holton to hear the story of the little tin watch, which the reader already knows.

James replied to the soldiers' eager questions: "Yes, at first I thought the watch worthless, but I didn't want to hurt the girl's feelings, so I kept it. As I grew older it grew dearer to me. I have that little watch to thank for making me what I am.

"Boys, when I was about 25 the wine cup was dearer to me than respect, mothers or sisters; yes, dearer than all else, except that little toy.

"Let me tell of three different times that it saved me from ruin. Once I was so drunk that my comrades were making sport of me. They asked me the time. I pulled out the little tin watch, at which they guyed me and made fun of it. I didn't care what they said to me, but I wouldn't let them make fun of the watch; so I got up and left, vowing never to go back to a place where the inmates would make fun of my watch. For several months I kept my vow; but at last temptation got the best of me. I went to an unknown saloon and ordered a good big drink. I went to pay for it, but as I was hunting in my pocket for change my fingers touched the watch. It burned like fire. I turned and left the saloon, leaving the drink unpaid for and untouched.

"The last time it saved me was shortly after I joined the army. This time it not only saved me, but ten good, worthy soldiers. We had been in camp several weeks, and such cold, damp ones that we were almost dead. So ten of us decided to get permission to visit the neighboring town and have a good old time. We gained permission and made for a saloon. We were all having our first round, when one of the boys asked if the others had seen my little tin watch. They hadn't, but were anxious to. As I pulled it out to show to the boys it was like an angel's face warning me. I pushed the glass from me and related the story I have just told to you. When I was through there were tears in every eye. One of the boys said: 'Amen;' we all rose as one body, leaving the glasses half empty, and left the saloon. The ten of us then made vows never to let liquor overcome our better selves.

"So you see, boys, that little watch is dear to me. It has not only saved my life, but my character."

"Now tell us about the girl," demanded one of the boys.

The captain blushed and replied: "Some day she will be my bride."—Florence Tilden, in Banner of Gold.

TALKS TEMPERANCE.

Chamberlain Declares That Drunkenness Cannot Be Put Down by Coercive Legislation.

Mr. Chamberlain, says the New York Tribune's London representative, devoted himself in a recent address to a Birmingham (England) temperance society to showing that it is not by coercive legislation that drunkenness can be put down, but by gradual improvement of the physical and moral condition of the people. If the figures which he read are to be relied upon, there are 3,000,000 total abstainers in Great Britain at this moment, which is proof that the leaven of moral suasion is working rapidly. He referred to his old doctrine of municipal control of public houses, and suggested that the sale of intoxicants by grocers and clubs should be subject to the approval of the licensing authorities. No scheme of reform which assumed the possibility of confiscating the interests of the publicans would, he asserted, with the emphasis of conviction, ever be tolerated by public opinion.

ITEMS.

The Topeka, Kan., correspondent of the New York Tribune says there are no drunkards in the state. The blear-eyed, reeling specimen is a thing of the past.

The state of New York had the largest number of retail liquor dealers last year. Illinois came second and Ohio third. The total number in the United States was 296,000.

The New York Sun testifies to the steady increase of sobriety of the American people, resulting from a "better understanding of the evil physical effects of intemperate alcoholic indulgence."

Mrs. Ballington Booth says there is a steady increase in the places expressly licensed for the sale of intoxicating drinks. The city saloon swells the annual expenditure for liquor to $1,220,000,000.

The Pernicious Treating Habit.

The treating habit, certainly responsible for much of the intemperance that obtains in American cities, is again having hurled upon it the anathemas of pulpit and press. Surely, save that it is a courteous and kindly practice, there is nothing in the treating habit to recommend its continuance. If it ever had a day of usefulness it has vanished and the practice ought to follow it into oblivion.—Savannah News.

THE COMPASS NEEDLE.

It Points to the Magnetic Pole, Not to the North Pole, as Most People Believe.

The compass-needle points north because practically the earth is a magnet, not differing essentially in its magnetic properties from a bar of magnetized steel, says American Notes and Queries.

It has two poles of greatest intensity, and, like most large steel magnets, there are several supplemental poles of lesser intensity. Just as the pole of one bar magnet attracts the end of another, so the magnet poles of the earth behave toward poles of the compass-needle, unlike poles attracting, and like poles repelling each other.

But it is not correct to say that the needle always points north; as a matter of fact there are but few localities on the earth where it does so, and even those are constantly changing.

An irregular line drawn from the mouth of the Orinoco river through the east coast of Hayti, Charleston, S. C., and Detroit, Mich., represents very nearly the line in which there is no variation at the present time.

In all places east of this line the north end of the needle swings slightly to the westward; in all places west of it to the eastward. At the mouth of the Columbia river the variation of the compass is about 22 degrees east; in Alaska it is from 40 to 60 degrees east; midway between New York and Liverpool it is about 35 degrees.

Of course there is a reason for this variation, and the explanation is that the needle does not point to the north pole, as so many people suppose, but to the magnetic pole, which is something entirely different.

The magnetic north pole is at present on or near the northwestern shore of Boothia peninsula, in the northern part of North America. Its position is constantly changing, and in the last 600 years it has moved about half the distance round the geographical pole.

During a period of 300 years, in which observations have been carefully made at the magnetic observatory in Paris, the variations have changed from 11 degrees, 20 minutes east of north to 22 degrees, ten minutes west.

In the United States the rate of the change in variation differs much in different parts of the country. In Washington state it changes at the rate of about seven minutes a year; in Arizona and New Mexico it is stationary; in the New England states it is from one to three minutes per year.

TREE PRODUCES RAIN.

Sometimes It Sheds Water Only Twice a Week, at Other Times Twice a Day.

A tree which produces rain is found in Mayobamba, a wild country of central Africa. The natives call it Tampazara - bomba - andaba - ponda, which means a tree which the good Lord has placed at the disposal of those nations whom He loves.

THE RAIN-MAKING TREE.

This strange tree at first sight has nothing remarkable which distinguishes it from other trees, but a close examination made by the French explorer Daillsux reveals that the trunk and the branches of this tree are covered with an infinite number of pores, which open at a certain moment to let the liquid which has been absorbed by the roots fall down in the shape of rain. Its roots penetrate vertically and very deeply in the soil in search of water to supply the tree.

The rain produced by this tree is very irregular as to its amount of moisture. Sometimes it rains only twice a week, while at other times it rains three times a day.

An Automobile Bakery.

Consul Hughes thus describes a novel automobile invented in Germany for military use: "It will follow the regiments on the march and make fresh bread from the wheat obtained on the spot. There is mounted on an automobile car a mill with bolters and kneading troughs, all run by the same motor which runs the automobile. The oven is drawn along in the rear. The bran obtained serves as food for the cavalry horses. By this method 5,000 men can be fed daily."

New Lime-Burning Process.

Lime burners at Rockland, Me., claim to have a new process by which a cask of lime is produced with 30 pounds of a cheap grade of coal. Wood has hitherto been used to get the best lime.

A WOMAN'S INVENTION.

Folding Umbrella Designed for the Especial Benefit of Cyclers and Automobolists.

Elma Etta Morrison, residing at Anthony, Fla., has been granted a patent on the folding umbrella shown in the illustration, the invention being intended principally for cyclers' use. When an ordinary umbrella is attached to the head of a wheel it is either too far forward to afford much protection or else lies in a slanting position. In the new umbrella this fault is overcome by the double angle formed in the handle, the elbows being strengthened by jointed braces to support the frame as rigidly as a straight stick. The lower portion of the handle is in three telescoping sections, and at the lower end is a steel clamping band by which the umbrella is attached to the handle-bar of the bicycle. The telescoping sections of the handle are securely fastened in an extended position by means of pins running through eyelets, the pins being secured by small chains to prevent loss. The ribs are jointed near the center, the inner ends being attached to the stick in the usual manner, while the outer section of each rib overlaps past the joint far enough to allow a sliding clip to secure it to the inner section. The clips are all connected by cords which join together near the stick and form a single rope extending down within reach of the rider, which enables him to release the ribs and fold the umbrella by a pull on the cord, the braces having been previously lowered on the stick to allow the ribs to drop, when the cover and ribs fold through the center. With the telescoping handle and jointed ribs the umbrella can be folded into small compass and suspended below the bar by loosening the clamping band.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

UMBRELLA FOR CYCLISTS.

A TALK ABOUT ICE.

Some Facts and Comparisons Which Will Surprise Scores of Well-Informed Readers.

The college professor asked the rest of us whether ice was colder in winter than it was in summer. Now, to the rest of us, ice was ice, and therefore we could not see how it could remain ice and be either colder or warmer. Then the professor explained the thing in this fashion:

"If a thermometer is buried in ice in summer it will indicate 32 degrees. If you throw a piece of ice into boiling water, and leave it there until it is almost gone, what is left will be still at 32 degrees. Ice can never be gotten above that temperature.

"But while ice can never be warmed above 32 degrees, it will go as much below that as the weather does. An iceman delivering ice one zero day in January was asked whether his ice was any colder than in July. He thought not. But, as a matter of fact, a piece of summer ice, if he had had it, would have been something of a foot warmer for him, as it would have been 30 degrees warmer than the air of the bottom of his wagon.

"Mixing salt with ice makes it much cooler. The ice in a wine cooler goes down to about zero. This is why the point zero on our common thermometers was fixed where it is. It was supposed to be the lowest point which could be reached by artificial means. Since then we have reached about 383 degrees below zero by chemical processes.

"Ice will cool down with everything else on a cold night to zero or below. What should prevent it? On a day when it is just freezing a block of iron, a block of ice, outdoors will stay at 32 degrees. If the weather grows warmer the iron will warm up with the weather, but the ice will stay at 32 degrees and melt away. But if the weather grows colder the iron and the ice will cool off, and one just as much as the other.

"As the ice grows colder it gets harder and more brittle. There can be no hickory bend on a skating pond on a zero day, for ice is then too brittle. Slivers of ice dipped in liquid air become so hard that they will cut glass. Water thrown on ice in the arctic regions will shiver it like pouring boiling water upon cold glass. This is because the ice is so much colder than the water."—Beverages.

A Happy Idea from France.

"White coal" is the striking name given by a French paper to the force generating electricity by harnessed mountain streams. In California, at Niagara and the Soo the power of cataracts and rapids is already utilized. The white coal produces no smoke or ashes, and, after transforming water power into electrical energy, continues its journey to the rivers, lakes and sea. Even if black coal should be exhausted the white coal will last as long as clouds form and water runs from elevations. White coal broadens the field of manufacturing far beyond the limits of towns and cities, and there are writers who look to it for a happy revolution in the conditions of labor.

SHAPELY FINGER NAILS.

Manicuring Is a Simple Art, Requiring Very Little Talent But Lots of Patience.

Where is the woman who does not like to have pretty nails and nicely kept hands? But how many women know how to care for their hands in the proper way? Not one out of ten knows how to manicure the nails, and in consequence we have ragged selvages, uneven nails and little white spots at the base of the nails. It takes a great deal of patience for these to grow out as they must, declares an authority.

To scrape the nails, as some do, thinking to remove the rough appearance the enamel sometimes has, is almost fatal. The enamel once removed takes a long time to grow on again—indeed, it must grow out with the nail, and the new nail is never as nice as before the scraping.

The instruments needed to properly manicure the nails are not many and are inexpensive. Get a good buffer, nail file and clippers, orange stick and cuticle knife. This is all that is really necessary for the proper care of the hands.

When manicuring the hands first place the tips of the fingers in a bowl of water, in which a few drops of lemon juice has been squeezed. Let them remain there a few minutes and then wipe.

Take one of the pieces of orange stick and carefully push the selvage back all around the nail. Be careful not to bear on the nail heavily, for this will cause little white spots to appear.

When you have pushed the selvage back if there happens to be a hangnail or a little ragged piece clip it with the cuticle knife very carefully; then put that instrument, with which so much harm is done to the nails, out of sight and out of mind.

Many persons keep the selvage entirely cut around the nails. This gives them a raw, sore look and increases the tendency of the flesh to grow up around the nails. The selvage should never be cut unless little ragged pieces appear.

Clean the nails with the orange stick and then clip them if necessary. File the nails to remove any little rough corners that may have been left by the clipping. Touch with rosline dust, with nail powder and use the buffer lightly. Remember that a very highly-polished nail is not considered good taste.—Detroit Free Press.

PRETTY PLANT BASKET.

How Boys and Girls Can Become the Possessors of a Pretty Little Plantation.

A great many of the girls and boys who live in towns have no garden at all, and, perhaps, not even a window box in which to grow a few pretty flowers.

Many of them would enjoy growing flowers of their own. If they will follow these directions, they may cultivate a very pretty hanging basket.

PRETTY PLANT BASKET.

Let them ask the greengrocer for a carrot from which the top foliage has not been cut away. Cut away the carrot, leaving only about a couple of inches at the end where it joins the fern. Scoop out the inside of this short piece of carrot and pour a little water into it. Then hang up this little bowl, still leaving the foliage upon it. At first the fern will appear to be growing upside down, but after a time it will grow upward in the right direction.

Fill the hollow part with water from time to time as the water dries up, and occasionally place the carrot end in a different position, for the side nearest the window will grow thicker and quicker than that which has less light.

Most Powerful Snuff Known.

On the Amazon river several Indian tribes use snuff, called pareca, which is made of the seeds of a species of plant. When a bout of snuff-taking is determined on the people become highly intoxicated and then use the snuff. The effect of pareca is so violent that the taker drops as if shot and lies insensible for some time; those more accustomed to it are highly excited, dancing and singing as if mad. The effect soon subsides. Other tribes use it to repel ague during the wet season.

To Brighten Cut Glass.

When cut glass is old it takes on a dull gray tinge. It is not dirt, and may be brightened and the film removed by washing with diluted hydrochloric acid and water.

THE PRESIDENT'S WIFE.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Devoted to Her Husband and Children and Fond of a Simple Life.

Though Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, from early childhood, has never been publicly before the world, hers is one of those rare personalities which are bound to assert themselves under any and all circumstances.

And those friends who have known her from childhood are waiting to see how well every duty will be fulfilled, for they know her perfectly balanced character, her reserve force and her calm, cool judgment of people and things.

There is no gossip or scandal allowed in the Roosevelt household, and there is no guest who does not feel irresistibly compelled to stand up for what is best and right, so high is the keynote that is sounded. This is not saying there is not plenty of life and jollity, for merriment reigns supreme with young and old, and never has it been allowed that the cares of office or the anxieties of politics should intrude upon the fun and merriment that go on unceasingly.

MRS. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The Roosevelt household has always been democratic in its simplicity. There have never been any attempts made at elaborate entertaining. There have been no gorgeous banquets to be chronicled among social events, and when the news columns gave the information that Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt entertained at dinner, there have never been any wonderful table decorations to chronicle.

All about the management of the household has been charmingly simple. A true spirit of hospitality welcomed every guest, who was made to feel that his or her presence was to be desired. Wine was always served, but neither Mr. Roosevelt nor his wife cared for it.

The menu was always simple and never comprised many courses, for Mr. Roosevelt disliked a long dinner. Everything was well served, but on most simple lines. This, however, with an appearance of absolute comfort everywhere—comfort, not show, being apparently the watchword.

Mrs. Roosevelt, says the Kansas City Star, is not a very great talker, but is a brilliant conversationalist—an apparent inconsistency explainable by her being a remarkably good listener, and possessing that rare charm of drawing out the very best in anyone she talks to. She has a keen sense of humor.

Not a beauty, Mrs. Roosevelt is nevertheless an unusually pretty woman, rather above middle height, with a slight, girlish figure. She is a brunette in coloring, with brown eyes and hair, but fair skin.

She rarely, if ever, wears a large hat, and is generally seen in a small bonnet, and she does not change the style of her hat as the fashions change. Her brown hair curls in soft ringlets around her face, but is brushed smoothly back from her temples and arranged in a soft coil at the back of her head.

She wears it in the same style, whether for day or evening, but with evening dress she wears an aigrette, which adds height and emphasizes the long line of her shoulders, one of her chief beauties. She is a woman who looks much better in evening dress than in street dress, and her evening gowns are always rather elaborate.

The Art of Skipping.

The Living Age remarks that some of the fundamental principles of the useful art of skipping are suggested by Mr. Anthony Deane, in the following passage in the London Pilot:

When I meet a paragraph which begins: "It is now necessary to retrace our steps somewhat to explain;" or, "The crimson sun by this time neared the horizon. Far over the hills stretched a vault of heavy cloud, its strange, purple tints fading and dissolving into"—or, "But the contents of this room, his sanctum sanctorum, deserve more detailed description;" or, "O strange, unfathomable mystery of existence, compelling our purblind race"—when, I say, I meet a passage in a novel which begins thus, I skip like anything.

This Sounds Appetizing.

Soft, mild cheese is used in making a Welsh sandwich, which is an appetizing accompaniment to a green salad. Two parts of the cheese are rubbed together with one part of butter, the former having first been flavored with mustard and a herb vinegar. The mixture is spread between thin slices of bread.

How Tom Defined Arsenal.

A teacher had told the children they could look up the definition of words in the dictionary, but must use their own words in writing out the lesson. She was surprised to have "arsenal" defined as a "book of war stories." The definition in the dictionary was: "Arsenal—a magazine of war supplies."

SAVED BY A TOY.

A Little Tin Watch That Proved as Efficacious as a Temperance Pledge.

It was a hot, sultry day in August, so hot that most of the children were kept indoors; but in some way Babe Sweet and James Holton managed to be out. It is probable that they had slipped out of the large hotel unobserved by their nurses. At any rate, they were having a glorious time playing in the sand on the shore.

James remarked that the sand was lots finer in front of the hotel.

Babe peeped out from behind the boat house and answered: "I rather play here."

"Yes, so would I," answered the boy.

Whether it was because the boat house afforded shade, or because they didn't want the other children to join them, it is hard to tell, but probably the true reason was that the boat house sheltered them from the hotel, and so from the mother's and nurse's eyes.

James Holton and Bertha Sweet (for that was Babe's real name), were strangers only three weeks before. In the middle of July little ten-year-old James had come to the Thousand Islands with his parents to spend the warm summer months. At first he thought it rather dry. He did not get along with the children. It was too hot to have any fun, and he wished he was back home.

One day about two weeks after his arrival, he was sitting on the steps

I PULLED IT OUT.

wishing for something to do, when a carriage drove up. An elderly gentleman alighted and assisted a very stylish lady. She looked like an invalid, for she leaned heavily on the gentleman's arm. Besides these two, there was a very attractive little girl of about six.

"Oh, papa," she exclaimed, "can you carry this fruit? I have these flowers and Dolly."

"Not now," replied the gentleman, kindly. "Wait until I see mamma in, and then if nurse is not here I will come back and help you."

"All right," replied the girl.

Just then James arose, walked down toward the carriage and offered to help the maiden. Babe (for it was she) gladly accepted his help, and thus began their friendship. These two seemed to enjoy each other's society better than that of the other children. Wherever you would see one you were sure to see the other.

On the day that our story opens arose their first dispute. After they had played together for several hours beside the boathouse they wandered down nearer the water. They were busy playing and did not notice the rising tide until Babe jumped up and said: "Why, my dress is wet." She dove her hand into her pocket for her handkerchief; and she pulled it out a string of beads fell into the water. They were immediately washed about two yards from shore, where they caught on some seaweed.

"Oh, my beads!" exclaimed Babe; "get them for me, James."

"What are they good for?" asked the boy.

"Oh, they are dolly's necklace," answered Babe.

"Well, it won't hurt her to lose them," replied the boy.

"Oh, James, won't you get them?" begged Babe. "I will give you anything you want if you will only get them."

"The only thing I want is a watch and chain, and you won't get that," he answered.

For an instant Babe's face clouded; then it brightened, and she said: "I will give you a watch and chain if you will only get the beads."

"Honest?" he demanded.

"Yes, honest, truly," she said.

The beads were soon restored to their owner, Babe's tears dried and she was happy again.

In a few minutes Mr. Holton came after the children. He said: "They have been hunting everywhere for you."

James did not even seem to mind the scolding he received on account of his wet shoes, for the thought of the watch and chain was uppermost in his mind.

"Now, don't forget, Babe," were his parting words.

"I will give it to you at tea," she replied.

When James went down to tea he found a little box under his plate. Well he knew what it was. He didn't want his people to see it, so he put it in his pocket. After supper he hurried off by himself to have a peep at his new treasure. When he opened the box he found a little tin watch and chain. His eager face clouded, for he had expected a real watch and chain. He said he would take it right back to Babe; but something made him change his mind, and instead he put it in his pocket and said: "It is just like a girl."

The icicles have formed their crystals and the buttercups have bloomed a score of times since then.

Two men in uniform were standing on the porch of the hospital. The taller and darker one asked his companion how Capt. Holton was.

"Well," replied the companion, "the doctor says he will live, but it was a narrow escape. The bullet caught in a little tin watch he had in his vest pocket."

Two weeks after a merry crowd of soldiers were gathered around the bedside of Capt. Holton to hear the story of the little tin watch, which the reader already knows.

James replied to the soldiers' eager questions: "Yes, at first I thought the watch worthless, but I didn't want to hurt the girl's feelings, so I kept it. As I grew older it grew dearer to me. I have that little watch to thank for making me what I am.

"Boys, when I was about 25 the wine cup was dearer to me than respect, mothers or sisters; yes, dearer than all else, except that little toy.

"Let me tell of three different times that it saved me from ruin. Once I was so drunk that my comrades were making sport of me. They asked me the time. I pulled out the little tin watch, at which they guyed me and made fun of it. I didn't care what they said to me, but I wouldn't let them make fun of the watch; so I got up and left, vowing never to go back to a place where the inmates would make fun of my watch. For several months I kept my vow; but at last temptation got the best of me. I went to an unknown saloon and ordered a good big drink. I went to pay for it, but as I was hunting in my pocket for change my fingers touched the watch. It burned like fire. I turned and left the saloon, leaving the drink unpaid for and untouched.

"The last time it saved me was shortly after I joined the army. This time it not only saved me, but ten good, worthy soldiers. We had been in camp several weeks, and such cold, damp ones that we were almost dead. So ten of us decided to get permission to visit the neighboring town and have a good old time. We gained permission and made for a saloon. We were all having our first round, when one of the boys asked if the others had seen my little tin watch. They hadn't, but were anxious to. As I pulled it out to show to the boys it was like an angel's face warning me. I pushed the glass from me and related the story I have just told to you. When I was through there were tears in every eye. One of the boys said: 'Amen;' we all rose as one body, leaving the glasses half empty, and left the saloon. The ten of us then made vows never to let liquor overcome our better selves.

"So you see, boys, that little watch is dear to me. It has not only saved my life, but my character."

"Now tell us about the girl," demanded one of the boys.

The captain blushed and replied: "Some day she will be my bride."—Florence Tilden, in Banner of Gold.

TALKS TEMPERANCE.

Chamberlain Declares That Drunkenness Cannot Be Put Down by Coercive Legislation.

Mr. Chamberlain, says the New York Tribune's London representative, devoted himself in a recent address to a Birmingham (England) temperance society to showing that it is not by coercive legislation that drunkenness can be put down, but by gradual improvement of the physical and moral condition of the people. If the figures which he read are to be relied upon, there are 3,000,000 total abstainers in Great Britain at this moment, which is proof that the leaven of moral suasion is working rapidly. He referred to his old doctrine of municipal control of public houses, and suggested that the sale of intoxicants by grocers and clubs should be subject to the approval of the licensing authorities. No scheme of reform which assumed the possibility of confiscating the interests of the publicans would, he asserted, with the emphasis of conviction, ever be tolerated by public opinion.

ITEMS.

The Topeka, Kan., correspondent of the New York Tribune says there are no drunkards in the state. The blear-eyed, reeling specimen is a thing of the past.

The state of New York had the largest number of retail liquor dealers last year. Illinois came second and Ohio third. The total number in the United States was 296,000.

The New York Sun testifies to the steady increase of sobriety of the American people, resulting from a "better understanding of the evil physical effects of intemperate alcoholic indulgence."

Mrs. Ballington Booth says there is a steady increase in the places expressly licensed for the sale of intoxicating drinks. The city saloon swells the annual expenditure for liquor to $1,220,000,000.

The Pernicious Treating Habit.

The treating habit, certainly responsible for much of the intemperance that obtains in American cities, is again having hurled upon it the anathemas of pulpit and press. Surely, save that it is a courteous and kindly practice, there is nothing in the treating habit to recommend its continuance. If it ever had a day of usefulness it has vanished and the practice ought to follow it into oblivion.—Savannah News.

THE COMPASS NEEDLE.

It Points to the Magnetic Pole, Not to the North Pole, as Most People Believe.

The compass-needle points north because practically the earth is a magnet, not differing essentially in its magnetic properties from a bar of magnetized steel, says American Notes and Queries.

It has two poles of greatest intensity, and, like most large steel magnets, there are several supplemental poles of lesser intensity. Just as the pole of one bar magnet attracts the end of another, so the magnet poles of the earth behave toward poles of the compass-needle, unlike poles attracting, and like poles repelling each other.

But it is not correct to say that the needle always points north; as a matter of fact there are but few localities on the earth where it does so, and even those are constantly changing.

An irregular line drawn from the mouth of the Orinoco river through the east coast of Hayti, Charleston, S. C., and Detroit, Mich., represents very nearly the line in which there is no variation at the present time.

In all places east of this line the north end of the needle swings slightly to the westward; in all places west of it to the eastward. At the mouth of the Columbia river the variation of the compass is about 22 degrees east; in Alaska it is from 40 to 60 degrees east; midway between New York and Liverpool it is about 35 degrees.

Of course there is a reason for this variation, and the explanation is that the needle does not point to the north pole, as so many people suppose, but to the magnetic pole, which is something entirely different.

The magnetic north pole is at present on or near the northwestern shore of Boothia peninsula, in the northern part of North America. Its position is constantly changing, and in the last 600 years it has moved about half the distance round the geographical pole.

During a period of 300 years, in which observations have been carefully made at the magnetic observatory in Paris, the variations have changed from 11 degrees, 20 minutes east of north to 22 degrees, ten minutes west.

In the United States the rate of the change in variation differs much in different parts of the country. In Washington state it changes at the rate of about seven minutes a year; in Arizona and New Mexico it is stationary; in the New England states it is from one to three minutes per year.

TREE PRODUCES RAIN.

Sometimes It Sheds Water Only Twice a Week, at Other Times Twice a Day.

A tree which produces rain is found in Mayobamba, a wild country of central Africa. The natives call it Tampazara - bomba - andaba - ponda, which means a tree which the good Lord has placed at the disposal of those nations whom He loves.

THE RAIN-MAKING TREE.

This strange tree at first sight has nothing remarkable which distinguishes it from other trees, but a close examination made by the French explorer Daillsux reveals that the trunk and the branches of this tree are covered with an infinite number of pores, which open at a certain moment to let the liquid which has been absorbed by the roots fall down in the shape of rain. Its roots penetrate vertically and very deeply in the soil in search of water to supply the tree.

The rain produced by this tree is very irregular as to its amount of moisture. Sometimes it rains only twice a week, while at other times it rains three times a day.

An Automobile Bakery.

Consul Hughes thus describes a novel automobile invented in Germany for military use: "It will follow the regiments on the march and make fresh bread from the wheat obtained on the spot. There is mounted on an automobile car a mill with bolters and kneading troughs, all run by the same motor which runs the automobile. The oven is drawn along in the rear. The bran obtained serves as food for the cavalry horses. By this method 5,000 men can be fed daily."

New Lime-Burning Process.

Lime burners at Rockland, Me., claim to have a new process by which a cask of lime is produced with 30 pounds of a cheap grade of coal. Wood has hitherto been used to get the best lime.

A WOMAN'S INVENTION.

Folding Umbrella Designed for the Especial Benefit of Cyclers and Automobolists.

Elma Etta Morrison, residing at Anthony, Fla., has been granted a patent on the folding umbrella shown in the illustration, the invention being intended principally for cyclers' use. When an ordinary umbrella is attached to the head of a wheel it is either too far forward to afford much protection or else lies in a slanting position. In the new umbrella this fault is overcome by the double angle formed in the handle, the elbows being strengthened by jointed braces to support the frame as rigidly as a straight stick. The lower portion of the handle is in three telescoping sections, and at the lower end is a steel clamping band by which the umbrella is attached to the handle-bar of the bicycle. The telescoping sections of the handle are securely fastened in an extended position by means of pins running through eyelets, the pins being secured by small chains to prevent loss. The ribs are jointed near the center, the inner ends being attached to the stick in the usual manner, while the outer section of each rib overlaps past the joint far enough to allow a sliding clip to secure it to the inner section. The clips are all connected by cords which join together near the stick and form a single rope extending down within reach of the rider, which enables him to release the ribs and fold the umbrella by a pull on the cord, the braces having been previously lowered on the stick to allow the ribs to drop, when the cover and ribs fold through the center. With the telescoping handle and jointed ribs the umbrella can be folded into small compass and suspended below the bar by loosening the clamping band.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

UMBRELLA FOR CYCLISTS.

A TALK ABOUT ICE.

Some Facts and Comparisons Which Will Surprise Scores of Well-Informed Readers.

The college professor asked the rest of us whether ice was colder in winter than it was in summer. Now, to the rest of us, ice was ice, and therefore we could not see how it could remain ice and be either colder or warmer. Then the professor explained the thing in this fashion:

"If a thermometer is buried in ice in summer it will indicate 32 degrees. If you throw a piece of ice into boiling water, and leave it there until it is almost gone, what is left will be still at 32 degrees. Ice can never be gotten above that temperature.

"But while ice can never be warmed above 32 degrees, it will go as much below that as the weather does. An iceman delivering ice one zero day in January was asked whether his ice was any colder than in July. He thought not. But, as a matter of fact, a piece of summer ice, if he had had it, would have been something of a foot warmer for him, as it would have been 30 degrees warmer than the air of the bottom of his wagon.

"Mixing salt with ice makes it much cooler. The ice in a wine cooler goes down to about zero. This is why the point zero on our common thermometers was fixed where it is. It was supposed to be the lowest point which could be reached by artificial means. Since then we have reached about 383 degrees below zero by chemical processes.

"Ice will cool down with everything else on a cold night to zero or below. What should prevent it? On a day when it is just freezing a block of iron, a block of ice, outdoors will stay at 32 degrees. If the weather grows warmer the iron will warm up with the weather, but the ice will stay at 32 degrees and melt away. But if the weather grows colder the iron and the ice will cool off, and one just as much as the other.

"As the ice grows colder it gets harder and more brittle. There can be no hickory bend on a skating pond on a zero day, for ice is then too brittle. Slivers of ice dipped in liquid air become so hard that they will cut glass. Water thrown on ice in the arctic regions will shiver it like pouring boiling water upon cold glass. This is because the ice is so much colder than the water."—Beverages.

A Happy Idea from France.

"White coal" is the striking name given by a French paper to the force generating electricity by harnessed mountain streams. In California, at Niagara and the Soo the power of cataracts and rapids is already utilized. The white coal produces no smoke or ashes, and, after transforming water power into electrical energy, continues its journey to the rivers, lakes and sea. Even if black coal should be exhausted the white coal will last as long as clouds form and water runs from elevations. White coal broadens the field of manufacturing far beyond the limits of towns and cities, and there are writers who look to it for a happy revolution in the conditions of labor.

SHAPELY FINGER NAILS.

Manicuring Is a Simple Art, Requiring Very Little Talent But Lots of Patience.

Where is the woman who does not like to have pretty nails and nicely kept hands? But how many women know how to care for their hands in the proper way? Not one out of ten knows how to manicure the nails, and in consequence we have ragged selvages, uneven nails and little white spots at the base of the nails. It takes a great deal of patience for these to grow out as they must, declares an authority.

To scrape the nails, as some do, thinking to remove the rough appearance the enamel sometimes has, is almost fatal. The enamel once removed takes a long time to grow on again—indeed, it must grow out with the nail, and the new nail is never as nice as before the scraping.

The instruments needed to properly manicure the nails are not many and are inexpensive. Get a good buffer, nail file and clippers, orange stick and cuticle knife. This is all that is really necessary for the proper care of the hands.

When manicuring the hands first place the tips of the fingers in a bowl of water, in which a few drops of lemon juice has been squeezed. Let them remain there a few minutes and then wipe.

Take one of the pieces of orange stick and carefully push the selvage back all around the nail. Be careful not to bear on the nail heavily, for this will cause little white spots to appear.

When you have pushed the selvage back if there happens to be a hangnail or a little ragged piece clip it with the cuticle knife very carefully; then put that instrument, with which so much harm is done to the nails, out of sight and out of mind.

Many persons keep the selvage entirely cut around the nails. This gives them a raw, sore look and increases the tendency of the flesh to grow up around the nails. The selvage should never be cut unless little ragged pieces appear.

Clean the nails with the orange stick and then clip them if necessary. File the nails to remove any little rough corners that may have been left by the clipping. Touch with rosline dust, with nail powder and use the buffer lightly. Remember that a very highly-polished nail is not considered good taste.—Detroit Free Press.

PRETTY PLANT BASKET.

How Boys and Girls Can Become the Possessors of a Pretty Little Plantation.

A great many of the girls and boys who live in towns have no garden at all, and, perhaps, not even a window box in which to grow a few pretty flowers.

Many of them would enjoy growing flowers of their own. If they will follow these directions, they may cultivate a very pretty hanging basket.

PRETTY PLANT BASKET.

Let them ask the greengrocer for a carrot from which the top foliage has not been cut away. Cut away the carrot, leaving only about a couple of inches at the end where it joins the fern. Scoop out the inside of this short piece of carrot and pour a little water into it. Then hang up this little bowl, still leaving the foliage upon it. At first the fern will appear to be growing upside down, but after a time it will grow upward in the right direction.

Fill the hollow part with water from time to time as the water dries up, and occasionally place the carrot end in a different position, for the side nearest the window will grow thicker and quicker than that which has less light.

Most Powerful Snuff Known.

On the Amazon river several Indian tribes use snuff, called pareca, which is made of the seeds of a species of plant. When a bout of snuff-taking is determined on the people become highly intoxicated and then use the snuff. The effect of pareca is so violent that the taker drops as if shot and lies insensible for some time; those more accustomed to it are highly excited, dancing and singing as if mad. The effect soon subsides. Other tribes use it to repel ague during the wet season.

To Brighten Cut Glass.

When cut glass is old it takes on a dull gray tinge. It is not dirt, and may be brightened and the film removed by washing with diluted hydrochloric acid and water.

THE PRESIDENT'S WIFE.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Devoted to Her Husband and Children and Fond of a Simple Life.

Though Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, from early childhood, has never been publicly before the world, hers is one of those rare personalities which are bound to assert themselves under any and all circumstances.

And those friends who have known her from childhood are waiting to see how well every duty will be fulfilled, for they know her perfectly balanced character, her reserve force and her calm, cool judgment of people and things.

There is no gossip or scandal allowed in the Roosevelt household, and there is no guest who does not feel irresistibly compelled to stand up for what is best and right, so high is the keynote that is sounded. This is not saying there is not plenty of life and jollity, for merriment reigns supreme with young and old, and never has it been allowed that the cares of office or the anxieties of politics should intrude upon the fun and merriment that go on unceasingly.

MRS. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The Roosevelt household has always been democratic in its simplicity. There have never been any attempts made at elaborate entertaining. There have been no gorgeous banquets to be chronicled among social events, and when the news columns gave the information that Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt entertained at dinner, there have never been any wonderful table decorations to chronicle.

All about the management of the household has been charmingly simple. A true spirit of hospitality welcomed every guest, who was made to feel that his or her presence was to be desired. Wine was always served, but neither Mr. Roosevelt nor his wife cared for it.

The menu was always simple and never comprised many courses, for Mr. Roosevelt disliked a long dinner. Everything was well served, but on most simple lines. This, however, with an appearance of absolute comfort everywhere—comfort, not show, being apparently the watchword.

Mrs. Roosevelt, says the Kansas City Star, is not a very great talker, but is a brilliant conversationalist—an apparent inconsistency explainable by her being a remarkably good listener, and possessing that rare charm of drawing out the very best in anyone she talks to. She has a keen sense of humor.

Not a beauty, Mrs. Roosevelt is nevertheless an unusually pretty woman, rather above middle height, with a slight, girlish figure. She is a brunette in coloring, with brown eyes and hair, but fair skin.

She rarely, if ever, wears a large hat, and is generally seen in a small bonnet, and she does not change the style of her hat as the fashions change. Her brown hair curls in soft ringlets around her face, but is brushed smoothly back from her temples and arranged in a soft coil at the back of her head.

She wears it in the same style, whether for day or evening, but with evening dress she wears an aigrette, which adds height and emphasizes the long line of her shoulders, one of her chief beauties. She is a woman who looks much better in evening dress than in street dress, and her evening gowns are always rather elaborate.

The Art of Skipping.

The Living Age remarks that some of the fundamental principles of the useful art of skipping are suggested by Mr. Anthony Deane, in the following passage in the London Pilot:

When I meet a paragraph which begins: "It is now necessary to retrace our steps somewhat to explain;" or, "The crimson sun by this time neared the horizon. Far over the hills stretched a vault of heavy cloud, its strange, purple tints fading and dissolving into"—or, "But the contents of this room, his sanctum sanctorum, deserve more detailed description;" or, "O strange, unfathomable mystery of existence, compelling our purblind race"—when, I say, I meet a passage in a novel which begins thus, I skip like anything.

This Sounds Appetizing.

Soft, mild cheese is used in making a Welsh sandwich, which is an appetizing accompaniment to a green salad. Two parts of the cheese are rubbed together with one part of butter, the former having first been flavored with mustard and a herb vinegar. The mixture is spread between thin slices of bread.

How Tom Defined Arsenal.

A teacher had told the children they could look up the definition of words in the dictionary, but must use their own words in writing out the lesson. She was surprised to have "arsenal" defined as a "book of war stories." The definition in the dictionary was: "Arsenal—a magazine of war supplies."

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1901.

MR. EDWIN WARFIELD, president of a trust company, of Baltimore, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1903. When Col. Vic Baughman, Hon. Isador Rayner, Admiral Schley, Mayor Hayes, Farmer Brown and all the other aspirants get into the game there is likely to be a genuine kilkenny cat fight.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Briefly summarized the recommendations in President Theodore Roosevelt's able message to Congress Monday are these:

That alien anarchists be deported and those remaining here be punished for seditious utterances.

That the Federal courts be given jurisdiction over assailants of the President or those in line of succession for the Presidency.

That treaties among all civilized powers declare anarchy an offence against the law of nations.

That the Federal government be given the power to inspect and regulate the workings of corporations doing an interstate business.

That there be created a cabinet officer to be known as the secretary of commerce and industries; he is to deal with commerce, labor, business corporations and our merchant marine.

That the Chinese exclusion law be reenacted and strengthened.

That Congress by enactment aid the states to do away with the competition of convict contract labor in the open labor market.

That all immigrants of a low moral tendency, or of unsavory reputation, be excluded.

That it be made advantageous to carry American goods in American built ships.

That our currency be made responsive to the demands of our domestic trade and commerce.

That the inter-state commerce act be amended to make its operations more just and effective.

That additions be made to our forest reserves, and their management be made more business-like.

That the federal government build irrigation works, that arid lands may be reclaimed and settled.

That legislation be enacted in the interest of the home-maker in Hawaii and Porto Rico.

That Congress provide for a substantial reduction of the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States.

That systematic aid be given the Macabebes who are crippled and the families of those killed in the service of the United States in the Philppines.

That the industrial development of the Philippines be encouraged.

That a cable to Hawaii, the Philippines and points in Asia be laid.

That the new treaty with Great Britain with regard to the Isthmian canal be ratified and

That steps be taken for immediately beginning the construction of the canal.

That the navy be enlarged and made more effective as to ships, officers and men in accordance with the recommendations of the secretary of the navy.

That a national naval reserve be organized.

That a general army staff be created.

That the organization and armament of the national guard be made identical with those provided for the regular army.

That the civil service law be extended to apply to the District of Columbia; to clerks temporarily employed, and especially to our insular possessions.

That the consular service be reorganized and improved as suggested by many commercial bodies throughout the country.

That the Indian be recognized as an individual, and not as a member of a tribe.

That the federal government be represented by a complete set of exhibits at the St. Louis exposition.

That the census office be made a permanent government bureau.

That rural free delivery of mails be extended.

ON ADVERTISING.

The Merchants' Protective Association, of Dunkirk, N. Y., a thriving commercial town, has determined to refrain from advertising in any medium other than newspapers. This is a conclusion arrived after a long and costly experience. The merchants there have found that money spent in the many hundreds of methods and schemes offered for advertising does not bring one cent of return, but is just simply money thrown away. The Merchants' Association there calls all other advertising except the newspapers "fake" advertising, and realize that the only way to secure a return for their money is to use exclusively the home newspapers. They go to the homes and are read by all members of the family. Special mediums must necessarily, from their very nature, reach only a limited number of persons and in a manner that does not direct their attention to the offerings made by the advertisers. Specials generally serve to boom some entertainment, attraction, etc., in which the people are more interested than in the advertising matter, though they may be beautifully displayed and splendidly printed. Advertisements read in specials, if they are ever read, are forgotten, and the special is lying in the gutter or in some vacant seat, or on the floor out of reach, so that it is impossible to refer to it even should a reader remember that bargains were mentioned. With a newspaper it is different. It reaches a home early in the morning and remains there in the most prominent part of the house until the next issue comes to take its place. The merchants of Dunkirk, enumerated as some of the schemes they found as worthless, hotel registers, racing meet programs, dance and theatre programs, business directories, local time tables, advertising clocks, desk blotters, fair flyers, special sheets filled with ads and innocent of news matter and others. The merchants of Oakland will doubless remember the many dollars they have spent in advertising in schemes similar to the above, and on reflection will doubless see that the money thus spent has been wasted. A point about special advertising merchants should consider is that the prices charged for it are exhorbitant in comparison with what is paid the newspapers. The special ads, no matter what their size, can only reach a limited number of people; they can only be before that limited number a moment and then they are thrown away. If advertisers would follow in the footsteps of John Wannamaker and stick to the newspapers exclusively they would prosper. Mr. Wannamaker refuses to have anything to do with special advertising. He is a liberal user of the newspaper: he pays hundreds of thousands of dollars for the space thus used, and he has millions of dollars as a return for the money thus expended. The merchants should use the money they devote to specials and "fakes" to paying the newspapers for changing their advertisements or towards increasing their space in the newspapers and they will find it money well spent.

Mr. Wanamaker is a millionaire because he stands by the newspapers, and eschews specials and fakes. The merchants of Dunkirk are following in his footsteps after bitter and costly experience. It would be a wise thing for the merchants of this city to do the same thing.

Odd Fellowship at Friendsville.

Recently a lodge of Odd Fellows was organized at Friendsville, this county, by officers of the Grand Lodge of Maryland. The local lodge has a goodly number of charter members and is officered as follows:

N. G.—Marshal Fike.
V. G.—John H. Cuppett.
Sec'y—Charles Frazee.
Treas.—Leslie E. Friend.
F. Sec'y—Walter Riley.
Warden—Washington Taylor.
I. G.—Hiram Humbertson.
O. G.—Fred. G. Fox.
N. G. Sup.—A. W. Allen, G. Humbertson.
V. G. Sup.—E. J. Frantz, F. Humbertson.
Conductor—Frank Lowdermilk.

The members of the new organization have a well fitted up lodge room and as the community is made up of many good people the lodge is expected to grow and exert an influence for good.

Men, Dogs and Other Critters.

If a man should stand out in the street and talk in a loud voice all night, the police would arrest him as a disturber of the peace. Yet a dog is permitted to bark all night, and the police do not seem to care. There is nothing so worthless as a dog, and no other animal has so little to do or has an equally good time. A horse is compelled to work, a cow is butchered but a dog does nothing but loaf and bark at night and disturb the tired people who want to sleep. If a dog kills a sheep people say: "Oh, it is a dog's nature to kill sheep, the owner should have kept them up," but if a hard-working man kills a sheep there is a howl about it that can be heard from one end of town to the other.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

NOW HE SAYS HE DIDN'T

The "Journal," After Being Called Down, Resorts to His Usual Tactics of VILLIFICATION AND MUD SLINGING.

The Account of the Bittinger Explosion Published in the "Journal" of Nov. 14th Identical With That of This Paper of Nov. 7th, the Day After the Mishap.

We do not intend to be drawn into a controversy with the Garrett Journal, neither do we intend to allow to go unchallenged the broad assertions made in that paper of last week with reference to an account of an explosion which took place near the village of Bittinger on Nov. 6th, and which was published exclusively in THE REPUBLICAN the day following (Thursday). This item of news was taken bodily from the columns of this paper and published as original matter in the Journal the week following. The attention of the Journal was directed to this piece of newspaper vandalism, and that paper utterly unable to confine itself to the limits of decency in any discussion, or to contain itself within the bounds of truth in words or deeds, it seeks filthy and disgusting words and ideas to express its meaning, and glories in everything "slimy," replying to our strictures in language which befits no one claiming the first principles of being a gentleman or editing a newspaper (save the work) which is calculated to elevate mankind in any degree whatever.

Whether or not the Journal pirated the article referred to we leave our readers and the public generally to decide by publishing herewith in parallel columns the articles as they appeared in THE REPUBLICAN of Nov. 7th and in the Journal of Nov. 14th:

From THE REPUBLICAN, Nov. 7:

Michel Legeer and Alfred Groves, residing near Bittinger, where the former owns and operates a coal mine, were both badly burned last night by an explosion of powder, which took place in the room in which they, with Mrs Legeer, her two children and W. A. Olcher, were sitting. Mr. Legeer and Mr. Groves were engaged in filling squibs with which to blast out coal. Seven of these had been finished and were lying on the floor near them. Nearby was a box containing a hundred fuses and a can with five pounds of powder enclosed. Mr. Legeer was explaining how the blasts were placed and set off, and to make the matter plain he took from the box one of the fuses and touched it off. The whole box took fire and in an instant the squibs on the floor and the can containing the powder exploded, blowing out the windows in the room and springing the walls and ceiling some two inches. The clothes of both Legeer and Groves were set on fire. Prof. Olcher retained presence of mind enough to throw the two children out of the window and then ran into the room adjoining where he got two buckets of water with which he extinguished the flames, thus probably saving not only the lives of the two imperilled men, but also Mrs. Legeer and the children. Mrs. Legeer sustained a number of burns, but none very serious. The men were badly burned about the face and hands. Prof. Olcher escaped with no injuries.

From The Journal, Nov. 14:

Michael Legeer and Alfred Groves, residing near Bittinger, this county, where the former owns and operates a coal mine, were both badly burned last Thursday night by an explosion of powder which took place in the room in which they, with Mrs. Legeer, her two children and W. A. Olcher, were sitting. Mr. Legeer and Mr. Groves were engaged in filling squibs with which to blast out coal. Seven of these had been finished and were lying on the floor near them. Near by was a box containing a hundred fuses and a can with five pounds of powder enclosed. Mr. Legeer was explaining how the blasts were placed and set off, and to make the matter plain he took from the box one of the fuses and touched it off. The whole box took fire and in an instant the squibs on the floor and the can containing the powder, exploded, blowing out the windows in the room and springing the walls and ceiling some two inches. The clothes of both Legeer and Groves were set on fire. Prof. Olcher retained presence of mind enough to throw the two children out of the window and then ran into the room adjoining, where he got two buckets of water with which he extinguished the flames, thus probably saving not only the lives of the two imperilled men, but also Mrs. Legeer and the children. Mrs. Legeer sustained a number of burns, but none very serious. The men were badly burned about the face and hands. Prof. Olcher escaped with no injuries.

The Journal claims to have been informed of the explosion the day following (Thursday), but according to the account published in its columns the accident took place on Thursday night. The Journal is usually printed on Thursday morning, and this being the case, how could the Journal have been in possession of the facts before the occurrence took place?

This paper has never taken any article of news from the Journal and republished it, the matter appearing in the Journal's columns being of such an unreliable nature as to preclude us from palming off on our readers something in which there is little or no truth.

A Great Opportunity.

The burned district of Jacksonville, Fla., is to be rebuilt at once, offering an opportunity of employment to workmen, and excellent prospect to contractors and capitalists. Jacksonville is reached from all directions by the Seaboard Air Line Railway System, which offers unexcelled facilities in the way of schedules and through car service to that point. nov 14tf

Winter Tourist Tickets, Season 1901-2. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has placed on sale at all principal offices East of the Ohio River, Winter Tourist Tickets to points in Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Carolina and Texas; also Havana, Cuba, and Nassau, N.P., at reduced rates. For additional information call on Agent Baltimore & Ohio R.R.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

LETTER FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

James Jarboe, One of Uncle Sam's Soldiers, Writes of the Islands.

To the Editor of The Republican.

LIGAO ALBAY, P. I., Sept. 26, 1901.—As you allowed me space in your paper for my last letter, I will intrude on you again.

Flags are at half mast all over the islands in respect to President McKinley. Mrs. McKinley has the sympathy of every American soldier in the Philippines.

We have an ice plant within nine miles of us and have ice water every other day. It is something that a soldier appreciates after drinking sterilized water.

One of your readers has asked me to give a better description of the islands, which I will try to do. The Philippine islands are a bunch of trouble on the western horizon. They are bounded on the west by hoodooism and smuggling, on the north by rocks and destruction, on the east by typhoons and monsoons, and on the south by canibalism and earthquakes. The climate is a combination of electric charges especially adapted to raising cain. The soil is extraordinarily fertile in producing large crops of insurrection and trickery. The inhabitants are very industrious, the chief occupation being the making of boloo and knives and the unloading of Remington rifles and cartridges. Their amusements are cock-fighting, monte, theft and cheating. Their diet consists of boiled rice, stewed rice, fried rice and rice. The Philippine marriage service is very impressive, especially the clause wherein the wife can obtain the privilege of working as much as her husband desires. Manila, the largest city, is situated on beautiful Manila bay, a large land-locked body of water, full of disease, sharks and submarine boats of Spanish make. The principal exports of the islands are rice, hemp and sick soldiers. The most important imports are American soldiers, arms and ammunition, beer and tobacco. Malaria is so prevalent that on numerous occasions the islands have been taken with a chill. Communication has been established between the numerous islands by substituting mosquitoes for carrier pigeons; the mosquitoes being much larger and better able for the journey. The native costume consists of a flour-sack tied around the waist, and anything under twelve has to wait till next year for its clothing.

Well, as I do not want to take up too much of your valuable space I will close for the present, with best wishes for the success of THE REPUBLICAN and Garrett county, I remain, respectfully,

JAMES JARBOE.
Co. H, 26th Infantry.

LAWMAKERS OF THE REPUBLIC.

Have Begun a Six-Months Session in the "Cave of the Winds.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—With the begining of the Fifty-seventh Congress at noon today the national legislative body entered upon an era of action which promises to be one of great importance to the country. Other Congresses of recent years have passed upon questions of war and strife. This one will deal with issues, the fruits of war, on less important, and envolving the everyday, material interests of the citizens of the United States and the welfare of other people whose destinies war has placed in their hands.

It is in part a new Congress. A goodly proportion of fresh blood was infused in recent elections. Representatives coming direct from the people will be present to voice the wishes of their constituents. At the same time, there remain in both Senate and House practically the same number of old leaders, men of wide experience in legislation, of thorough familiarity with the needs of the country, the policies of the dominant party and parliamentary practice. It would seem to be a commingling of conservatism and enterprise.

The House has a membership of 357, of which 197 are Republicans, 151 are Democrats and 9 are fusionists, silverites or populists. With this division the Republicans would have a clear majority over all of thirty-seven in case the populists voted with the Democrats on party questions. The Senate has 87 members, there being at present three vacancies. The Republicans will have a majority in the Senate varying from 20 to 24, according to the way certain former populists and fusionists vote, and taking into consideration the possibility or at least one Democrat voting with the administration on national policies.

The new members of the House number 92, of whom fifty are Republicans, 38 are Democaats and 4 are fusionists, but who will probably vote with the Democrats. Thus not only is there a preponderance in numbers of old members of the House in the present bady, but it happens that most of the influential and experienced men in both parties were re-elected.

Wanted.

One hundred men for general woods work and grading railroad.

PRESTON LUMBER & COAL CO.,
2 tf Oakland, Md

OUR INTERNAL AFFAIRS

A Correspondent Discusses Politics, Forestry, Roads and Schools.

OUR FORESTS FAST DISAPPEARING.

Something Should Be Done to Protect Our Native Timber—Roads Given Attention and Our Public School System Hauled Over the Coals.

To the Editor of The REPUBLICAN.

Your recent invitation requesting correspondence strikes me as the proper plan to instruct and interest your many readers.

The stalwart Republicans of Garrett county are to be congratulated upon their last and greatest victory, as it was won under local leadership. THE REPUBLICAN can justly claim much credit for the zeal, energy and intelligence displayed in pushing the press to the front, educating and enlightening our people upon the devious devices of Democracy in trying to defraud the voters of their rights; and now with victory the duties, dangers and difficulties of leadership and government of our county affairs will largely devolve upon the press. All Republicans are leaders and should offer advice and suggestions for, "in many councils is much wisdom."

The protection of our forests, the improvements of our schools and the betterment of our roads are most important matters and demand the immediate attention of our people. If legislation is required to protect these interests action should be taken to secure it.

Garrett county, once famous for her fine and extensive forests, producing every kind of the most valuable timbers will soon be importing lumber. A number of large corporations are now operating in this county and it is believed in five years our mountains will be stripped of their virgin forests. Many of the states are taking action to preserve and protect their forests. The government has reserved large tracts of timber in the territories. It is predicted by a late Secretary of Agriculture at the present rate of consumption and destruction of our forests in less than one hundred years the United States will be barren, sterile and waterless, not producing enough to sustain present population. Certainly our local streams and springs are drying up, our rivers so small and shallow that even the fish are dying or deserting them.

Something should and could be done at least to protect our splendid maple sugar groves. If properly developed the sugar crop of our county would be worth at least $50,000 annually. Many of our farmers are selling their trees and lumbermen are manufacturing them. This wanton wastage of our most valuable and beautiful tree is greatly to be deplored—the growth and glory of centuries destroyed for a paltry pittance.

Garrett county, covering an area half as large as some states, sparcely settled, with large areas of rough mountain lands, with a comparatively small tax basis, has resources hardly known or developed, requires skillful and careful road building, but the wisdom and intelligence of our people demand some immediate improvement. Agitation and discussion will suggest some better system of making and working our roads. The value of our lands will be greatly increased, desirable imigration secured, the cost of transporting our products to market largely decreased by securing better highways. Our roads, originally laid out without system or science, can hardly be repaired without great wastage. If they were properly located or graded the money expended upon them would place them in mach better condition.

Our public schools are a disgrace to the State, a reflection upon the intelligence of our people, a wrong and an outrage upon the innocent and unprotected children, who are growing up in ignorance in this enlightened and progressive age. The last Democratic State Convention suggested a commission to investigate the condition of our schools and report to the next Legislature. This is adding insult to injury. What is wanted and demanded is intelligence and integrity in their management. The money is wasted, inefficiency and demoralization rapidly destroying the system. No other community would be so patient and long suffering. The petty positions of trustees are peddled out by these political hucksters. For pure and simple, stupid insolence commend me to the Maryland State school authorities. No wonder Democracy died. Its leprous and putrid remains are now ripe for interment.

It is asserted that the people have no remedy for for such a shameful state of affairs. Well, if such is the fact the county commissioners should refuse to levy the funds. The people should not be taxed to support schools so utterly useless. Then those who desired a higher grade of education could select their teachers, control and support their schools. This shameful state of affairs must be remedied. We are losing some of our best citizens. Intelligent people refuse to locate in a community so far behind the age. The genuine moss-backed bourbon Democracy knows but little and is determined, if possible, to keep others in the same condition of ignorance. He learns slowly and forgets rapidly.

OCCASIONAL.

Grantsville, Nov. 25, 1901.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Rev. Harvey went to Swanton last Saturday to hold the quarterly meeting services that circuit.

Rev. Fisher, of the U. B. church, conducted last week a very successful revival meeting at Bethlehem. He was assisted by Rev. Hardesty.

Presiding Elder Roberts preached at the Park last Sabbath morning and evening two excellent sermons.

James Jarboe, Esq., went to Keyser, W. Va., Monday. A number of our mechanics have been offered work at Keyser.

J. A. Enlow and family went to Cumberland Monday and carried with them the good wishes of their friends.

C. W. Hopkins is visiting his son Coldwell and the family of William Hocking at Fairmont, W. Va. He will return home in a few days.

Richard Moore and family have moved to Oakland from Loch Lynn. He expects to winter in Oakland.

Within the past ten years we have not had as wintry weather during November as we passed through last month. The warm weather and rain will make high water.

Dr. Davidson spent last Monday in Wheeling, in consultation with the management of the Moundsville Chautauqua, of which Rev. Graham is the president.

Capt. Cochran and wife spent last Monday at Loch Lynn, returning to Cumberland on the afternoon train.

Smouse Bros. & Echels is the title of a new firm in business at Fairmont. Mr. Echels visited Fairmont Tuesday. He and his family expect to move to that city January 1. Messrs. Reed and Howard Smouse are good business men and J. H. Echels is a "rustler."

Frank Arnold went to Keyser Monday to work for Wm. Liller.

Wm. Clair has gone to Hendricks, W. Va., to work as a carpenter's apprentice.

Lem. Dawson and family are much pleased with their Fairmont home. Lem. has plenty to do at good wages and intends to grow up with the growing city.

Ort Flowers rode the goat kept by the K. of G. E. last Monday evening.

Rev. Dr. Graham has been elected president of the Moundsville Chautauqua.

A. W. Dennett's recent failure for $93,000 caught one or two of our citizens.

Call for Your Letters.

Week ending Dec. 7, 1901: Mrs. Nellie Asbron, Theo. T. Kagley, E. Thrayer, Samuel Wakefield, Leopold Frenkel, Henry Euell & Son.

HOME AND CHILD

Does your horse "feel his oats"? What a difference between the grain-fed and the grass-fed horse! The first strong and full of ginger, the second flabby, weak and tired out before he begins. The feeding makes the difference.

Children are not alike either. One is rosy, bright-eyed, full of life and laughter, another is pale, weak and dull. The feeding again is responsible.

Sickly children need special feeding. They don't "feel their oats". Scott's Emulsion adds just the right richness to their diet. It is like grain to the horse. The child gets new appetite and strong digestion.

Scott's Emulsion is more than food. It is a strong medicine. It rouses up dull children, puts new flesh on thin ones and red blood into pale ones. It makes children grow. Scott's Emulsion makes ordinary food do its duty.

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle.

Send for free sample.

SCOTT & BOWNE,
409 Pearl St., New York.
50c and $1. all druggists.

The U. S. Government Tests Show the Absolute Superiority of Royal Baking Powder.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

Senator Ravenscroft was here a day or two this week looking after his property.

Miss Bush, of Eglon, was here Saturday as the guest of her cousins, the Misses Fringer.

Dr. S. M. Hardman, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Grafton, W. Va. Spectacles and artificial eyes fitted.

Mr. W. B. Miller, of Deer Park, was in Oakland Sunday afternoon, going from here to Fairmont where he is engaged at work.

Miss Marie O'Malley, for a year or more one of the nurses at the McComas Sanitarium, has gone to her home in Chicago for a short visit.

Mr. P. E. Kimmell, of this office, who took a two weeks' holiday which he spent at Grafton, has returned to work.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thompson, of Easton, Pa., are here on a visit to their daughter, Mrs. George I. Uhler, having arrived on Friday last.

Messrs. Browning Bros. have removed their meat store from its old location to a room in the Central Hotel building.

Mr. George W. Kitzmiller, who recently sold his coal holdings over at Blaine, was in town Tuesday on business.

Mr. Harry A. Rasche entertained last night at his home on Water street the members of the Oakland band, the occasion being his 21st anniversary.

Rev. Dr. Scott was taken quite ill on Friday night and for several hours he suffered greatly. He is still confined to his bed as a result of this last illness.

Mrs. R. R. Sanner is in Oakland superintending the removal of her household goods to Friendsville, where she and her family will reside this winter.

Rev. D. Harrison Friend, of Sang Run, was in Oakland Monday on business. Mr. Friend, notwithstanding his nearly eighty years, is still hale and hearty, full of vigor and bright of mind.

A broken water gate in the main at the B. & O. station here on Saturday gave the railroad people quite a lot of work and resulted in putting the electric plant out of commission for a few hours Monday morning and evening.

The rain of Tuesday had the effect of raising the waters all over this section and cleansing things generally. The water problem had begun to be a serious one with housewives and farmers, but now the wells and springs are again full.

A. W. Dennet, who made an assignment a few days ago for the benefit of his creditors, was deeply involved, his liabilities over his assets being $93,000. Mr. Dennet built Hotel Dennet at Mountain Lake Park several years ago. The investment was never a paying one.

Prof. S. C. Smith, who has conducted a piano and organ salesroom in the Ravenscroft building for some months, has put in a line of novelties, toys, etc., which he will carry in conjunction with the musical business. His announcement will be found elsewhere in to-day's REPUBLICAN.

Ed Helbig, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Helbig, of Oakland, who went to Elkins, W. Va., early in the fall, where he was engaged in painting and paper-hanging, came home on Friday night suffering with an attack of typhoid fever which he had contracted at Elkins. His condition is somewhat improved, but is still seriously ill.

Ernest Shartzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Shartzer, of Oakland, who went to Alaska upwards of three years ago, arrived home on Sunday morning from San Francisco, Cal., in which city he was employed for some weeks after his return from Skagway, Alaska, at which latter place he held a government position. He will be employed here with his father who is conducting an auction business this winter, and may return north in the spring.

Already the local merchants are getting ready for the holiday trade. More goods than ever will probably be sold this year, and as a general thing gifts this season will be along the line of useful articles. Of course, the ornamentals will have sale, and the young man and the young woman will be as much on the lookout for pretty things as ever they were. No better directory to consult than our columns to find just what you want. Our advertisers are up-to-date and will be ready to serve you.

Miss Lizzie Weber went down to Cumberland, Sunday afternoon to remain for a week or two as the guest of Miss Robb and other friends.

Attorney Wm. R. Offutt has returned to Oakland after two weeks' absence, which he spent in Alabama and other Southern states.

Don't forget to attend Shartzer's auction in Oakland, Saturday, Dec. 7th, and Friendsville, Thursday, Dec. 12th.

A cheap excursion from Oakland and points adjacent will be run by the Baltimore and Ohio to New York during the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hoffman, of Cumberland, were here Thanksgiving day as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Taggart.

Attorney Norval Speelman and Edward Nicklow, of District No. 2, were in Oakland Tuesday on business before the county commissioners.

Services will be held in St. Paul's Ev. Lutherian church, Oakland, Sunday morning and evening at the usual hours.

The war is over and high prices must go. John Shartzer has returned from Alaska and will have auction at Oakland Saturday, Dec. 7th, and at Friendsville, Thursday, Dec. 12.

County Examiner Ed A. Browning went down to Baltimore Tuesday night to attend a meeting of the School Commissioners of the State. Mr. Hamill, president of the Board, left for the same point this morning.

Mrs. Geo. Fulmer went to McHenry one day last week to see her father, the aged Samuel Specht, who has been quite ill for several weeks. Mrs. Fulmer returned home Monday, her father being somewhat improved.

Mr. John W. Miller, of Accident, was in Oakland Monday of this week and had his name entered upon our books as a paid-in-advance subscriber of the large and ever increasing number of REPUBLICAN readers.

A meeting of the stockholders of the First National Bank will be held on Tuesday, December 14, at the banking house in Oakland, at which time a board of directors of the bank will be elected for the ensuing year.

Reports from Thomas, W. Va., which town was devastated by fire some weeks ago, are to the effect that the people up there are getting along fairly comfortable, and that the wants of all those who were in need are being met.

C. Edward Presho, president of the Central Commercial College, of Cumberland, made a deed of trust to Finley C. Hendrickson and William H. Shepherd, and the institution, which has seventy-five students, is closed, pending a settlement.

It is estimated that the value of land along rural delivery routes has increased near $2 an acre. Then too there is an educational value in the free delivery, in that thousands more magazines and periodicals are finding their way to people's homes.

Mr. W. H. Chadderton, of near Deer Park, was in Oaklaud yesterday looking after some business affairs. He will leave Monday for Baltimore, where he will receive treatment in Johns Hopkins Hospital for a stomache disease with which he is suffering.

C. J. Lee, of Garrett county, went to Brushy Run, Pendleton county, W. Va., on the pretense of buying timber. When Henry B. Alt, a farmer of Brushy Run, who was absent, returned, he found that his wife was missing. Ii is supposed that they eloped.—Cumberland Courier.

Rev. Miller, of Nebraska, who preached in the Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church in Oakland Sunday morning and evening to large congregations, made a very favorable impression upon his hearers. He will preach again on next Sunday morning and evening at the usual hours—11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Sheriff-elect W. A. Maffett and family will arrive in Oakland some time next week when Mr. Maffett will assume the duties of his office. The retiring sheriff, Mr. Andrew J. Oester, will remove from here to his farm down near Bittinger. While the people of Oakland regret exceedingly to lose Mr. Oester, they extend to Mr. Maffett and his estimable wife a hearty welcome.

The Christmas rush is beginning to be felt here. It is noticeable on the railroad and by the express company. These occasions always mean extra work to the employes, but pleasure to a great many others. Merchants also must work extra. Evidence of the approaching holidays are to be seen everywhere. The windows are beginning to show a great variety of merchandise and much of it is different from that of previous seasons. We hope every line will enjoy the glad season when it comes.

Howard Hoffman Hurt.

Howard Hoffman, formerly of Oakland, but now residing in Cumberland, and engaged as a passenger fireman on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was quite painfully injured a few days ago by the bursting of a glass water tube on the boiler which he was firing, particles of the glass flying into his face and badly cutting him above the eye and in both cheeks. As a result of the mishap he is confined to his home. We trust that no serious consequences will follow.

Burned to Death.

Pearl, the fourteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brumbaugh, of Wallman, Garrett county, four miles north of Gorman, was burned to death while playing in a room with her brother. In some way she got hold of a bottle of oil, and it is supposed she spilled the contents on her clothing, and getting too near the fire, the oil ignited and enveloped her in flames, and before any assistance could be given her flesh was burned from the bones causing her death. Her remains were taken to Woodstock, Va., for burial.

DIXON & KELSO can supply your wants in the feed line. Have large lots corn, oats, hay, feed, flour, bran, barley chop and corn and oats chop to sell below the market price. Just received TON candy to sell as low as 4½c lb. Will want 5 tons dry picked turkeys, delivered Dec. 16 to 20. Will pay top market price in either cash or trade. Can also handle good potatoes, 75c bushel; good, sound apples at 65c to 75c bushel. All other good produce bought at highest possible price. 39 2

Boys and Girls Fought Fire.

A serious conflagration was averted at Elk Garden by the prompt work of the High school boys and girls. The blaze, which was in the residence of F. C. Patton, in the center of the town, was discovered by the pupils in the High school. The principal, D. C. Arnold, dismissed the pupils, who rushed to the residence formed a bucket brigade, and checked the flames.

Fairmont Theater Burned.

Fire Saturday morning destroyed the Madison Street Theater, owned by Fairmont capitalists and leased by by R. L. Blair. The theater with four adjoining stables were burned to the ground. The Dilger-Cornell Repertoire Company holding the boards at the theater, lost all its property. The entire loss is estimated at $10,000. No insurance.

Meeting of Dorcas Society.

The Dorcas Society will meet at the residence of Mrs. Dr. Hinebaugh on Friday, Dec. 6, at 3 o'clock p. m. It affords the members of the society a great deal of pleasure to be able to state that the finances are in good condition, owing to the liberal response of the business men of Oakland who were called upon for their contributions. Owing to the bad weather, the ladies were unable to call upon all the business men, but they will receive a call in the near future.

Christmas at Davis & Sons

The grand display of fine chinaware and glassware to be seen at J. M. Davis & Sons' store in Oakland, gives to the public a distinct line of goods, from which beautiful, acceptable and useful Christmas presents may be selected, and at the same time be inexpensive to the buyer. Their goods consists of almost everything in the chinaware and glassware line. Hand-painted placques, ornamental and handsome, 15c to $1.50. Toilet sets, decorated, from $3.50 to $5. Special attention is directed to their 10-cent counter containing many rare values in chinaware.

Badly Hurt By a Fall.

Miss Margaret Crystal, a well known lady of Oakland, fell on the icy pavement at the corner of Second and Alder streets last Wednesday afternoon and sustained very painful and serious injuries. The ligaments of the hip joint were somewhat ruptured and her wrist very badly injured as a result of the fall. Her condition, although improved, is such that her attending physician has as yet made no minute examination of the injuries sustained to the hip, but is hopeful that no bones were broken. Miss Crystal, after the accident, was taken home in a conveyance.

Chicken Thieves.

Some person unknown entered the hen house of John Flaherty Monday night and with a dexterous hand manipulated the fowls and succeeded in bagging several before Mr. Flaherty and his family was aware of the presence of the bold thief, although they heard a commotion among the hens. Mr. F. made a a hasty trip to the chicken roost, but too late. The maurauder was just disappearing over the back fence laden pretty heavily with seven of the choicest fowls.

E W Grove

This signature is on every box of the genuine Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets the remedy that cures a cold in one day

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

A Three Days' Session to Be Held In Oakland on Jan. 6, 7 and 8.

Department Farmers' Institutes,
Maryland Agricultural College,
November 27, 1901.

To the Editor of The Republican:

At the state fairs, agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and on many farms in the north and northwest, including Canada, the Pan-American and its Live Stock Exposition, I have met many men and women who are recognized authorities and leaders in their lines as educators, importers, exhibitors, expert judges, breeders and feeders, whose acquaintance will be an enduring resource I shall always cherish. That my friends, the Institute patrons, may share the privilege with me, I have thought it possible, where the work of our department is appreciated, and we are sufficiently encouraged and supported, to give a special institute before the regular institute season, where two or three of these well known men or women could be invited to meet our farmers. With this thought in mind I have asked several of those I have met, if we arrange such a meeting as mentioned, where a visit can be made pleasant and profitable, in a better understanding of Maryland, would they accept an invitation to it? Without an exception we received favorable replies, with a complimentary expression showing an interest in our state and the hospitable habits of its people.

Though the thought came late to offer this treat at this time we now have the promise of four, (who, when our patrons meet them, they will long remember) to attend a special institute; one on the eastern shore, at Easton, Talbot county, Dec. 17th; one, accessible to all patrons, at Towson, Baltimore county, Dec. 19th; and one for Western Maryland, at Westminster, Dec. 20th. The first and last will have an evening session.

Our invited guests will be Col. Jos. H. Brigham, assistant secretary of agriculture at Washington; subject: "The United States Department of Agriculture and Our Foreign Markets."

Mr. L. H. Kerrick, Bloomington, Ill., the champion baby beef feeder, who in 1899 and also in 1900 took the first prize on a car-load of cattle at the Chicago International Live Stock Expositions, selling the last for the highest price ever paid for a car-load of cattle. This year, Dec. 2nd, he will again show a load selected from 60 yearlings I saw in one of his feed lots in October 1900. Cattle I then thought more beautiful and picturesque in their pasture than any I had ever seen. His subject will be "Why and How I Grow Baby Beef."

Hon. O. C. Gregg, Superintendent of Farmers' Institutes of Minnesota. I met Mr. Gregg first in 1896 in Chicago at a meeting of International Institute Workers. Speaking of his experience he said "My father was an itinerant; I was ordained a minister, but not feeling called to the work, accompanied by my good wife, we moved far out, by wagon, into the open country, where we carved a good farm out of the plains, fought Sioux indians, taught school, helped my neighbors when I could, and have conducted farmers' institutes for fifteen years." Mr. Gregg is every inch a man; one of those noble characters and frontiersmen to whom we Americans owe so much, for this our great and prosperous country. I have asked him to speak of "The Dairy Cow" and "The Farmer of the Past, Present and Future."

Miss Erma Sutor Jacobs, Director of the Cooking Schools of Washington, a tireless worker and constant student, having begun her work under adverse conditions, understands the needs of housekeepers and how to make their work light and pleasant. Her subject will be "The Staff of Life"—demonstrated.

If this first effort, to bring men and women whom we read of and have learned to admire, and whose writings and speeches we accept as a text on which to base our life-work, succeeds, it shall grow under our management into a prominent feature of institute work; but we should have a large audience of our representative people to meet them, or it will injure rather than improve the work, as such visitors will exercise great influence over others we invite in the future. As an advertising feature for our state we know of nothing better, as their impression obtained when among us will be accepted as facts by thousands of hearers they annually meet or who read their writings from the press. We hope that everyone, men and women, will come to meet them. It is quite probable that another opportunity will not be offered in this state to hear them.

Though I shall send a private letter to every patron who has shown enough interest in our work, to give us his name and address (about five thousand), if you will make mention of the above facts through your press, I shall be very grateful, and, I have no doubt, your patrons will be also, who have not accepted repeated warnings, that there is in agriculture, as in all other callings, an everlasting need to hustle, and to keep informed what others are doing and how they do it, that they may continue to have a Thanksgiving turkey every year, grown by themselves.

Our regular series of institutes will begin in Garrett county, January 7th. We will then do continuous work to, and including March 8th. The regular institute will be held in Talbot county, Easton, February 7th and 8th; Baltimore county, 22d and 23d at Monkton; and Carroll county, Middleburg, January 20th and 21st, for which other institute workers have been engaged. Yours truly,

WM. D. AMOS, Director.

Case is With the Court.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., 4—The case against Election Supervisors Charles B. South and Thomas A. Nock, indicted for nonfeasance, growing out of the misprinted ballots, was tried yesterday before Judges Boyd and Stake. The evidence was concluded, and in the evening Judge Boyd left for Cumberland without announcing the decision, but the court said judgment will be rendered on Saturday. The case against James T. Brisco for criminal negligence is abandoned.

Angora Goats as an Experiment.

Several months ago Messrs. Joseph H. Smithman and Joseph T. Glotfelty ordered from a firm of breeders in Ohio eleven head of Angora goats, which are expected to arrive here at an early date. The animals will be placed on the farms of the owners as an experiment and not for the purpose of raising herds for the market, as stated in one of our local contemporaries last week.

Braethorn Cottage Sold.

The splendidly located Braethorn cottage, at Mountain Lake Park, was sold last Tuesday for $2,250.00 to Mrs. G. B. Campbell, of Woodstock, Va. Mrs. Campbell successfully conducted a boarding house at the Park last summer. While at the Park this week Mrs. Campbell was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Rudicill.

HOYES.

Our good sledding is leaving us and the roads are almost impassable on account of the large drifts melting away.

Our protracted meeting, which has been in progress for the past two weeks, still continues. The pastor, Rev. D. A. Friend, has delivered many excellent and effective sermons during this series of meetings and we believe much good has been accomplished.

Mr. Griffith, who has been seriously ill for some time past, is slightly improved at this writing.

Miss Hallie Savage, of Sang Run, is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. W. A. Smith.

Our efficient teacher, Miss Budd, is giving entire satisfaction and the pupils of this school speak highly in her favor.

We are sorry to note the serious illness of Edward Pysell. We were informed this afternoon (Tuesday) that he was dying. He has only been dangerously ill for about one week with typhoid fever.

Sheriff W. A. Maffett and family will move to Oakland next week. They leave many friends here and will be greatly missed from this neighborhood. Mr. Lloyd Wilburn, who was recently married to Miss Mary Glotfelty, will occupy Mr. Maffett's house.

Mr. W. R. Mealy, the genial traveling salesman for Gilbert Bros., was calling on Merchant Smith Monday evening of this week.

Miss Della Savage, who has been employed in the store and postoffice at Gortner for the past few months, came down to Hoyes Monday evening and will take charge of the Castel school this winter.

Mr. John DeWitt purchased of Mr. Milton Lowdermilk a very fine monument and is having it erected at the grave of his wife.

Mr. Wm. Callis has purchased a new cornsheller and will attach it to his aermotor. He also has a grain crusher and is doing considerable work by the power of the aermotor.

Mr. and Mr D. O. DeWitt are very happy over the arrival of a new son at their home.

Stops the Cough and Works off the Cold.

Laxative Bromo-Quinine Tablets cure a cold in one day. No Cure, no Pay. Price 5 cents.

S. L. Townshend & SON.

Anything you want in our

Xmas Goods ?

Fancy China
Fancy Baskets
Stand Mirrors
InitialHandkerchiefs
Silk and Linen
Handkerchiefs
Neckties
Pictures
Medallions
Brass Picture Frames
Box Writing Paper
Children's Leggings
Slippers

S. L. Townshend & SON.

Get Ready
FOR A
Cheap Excursion
TO NEW YORK CITY
and return via
BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD
DURING THE HOLIDAYS.

Dates, rates and all particulars will be furnished later by Baltimore & Ohio Ticket Agents.

C. B. CROPP
has Toys enough for
Oakland, Crellin, Hutton Switch and Corinth.
Candy, 5c pound.
Mixed Nuts, 12½c.
Nice line
...JEWELRY...

ATTENTION!
Christmas Goods!

Assorted Cakes
Fancy Cakes
Ornamented Cakes

FRUIT (Light and Dark.)
CANDIES
NUTS (Plain and Mixed.)

BREAD, PIES, ETC.

A full line of SPICES, RAISINS, CITRON, FIGS, DATES, etc.....

Oranges, Bananas, Grapes.

Watch Our Windows to see a Grand Display.

Call and Give Us a Trial.

OAKLAND MODEL BAKERY.